Opposed to Prohibition?

Opposed to prohibition? Sure we are!
The thing we're for—the old-time bar:
We want to rest our feet on smooth brass rails
And drink our fill of fresh cocktails.

Opposed to prohibition? We're not fools:
For we've been taught in life's high schools;
We've learned our lesson and needn't be told
To hate new ways and love the old.

Opposed to prohibition? We're real men!
We want no laws to hamper and pen:
To do just what we please we claim the right,
And that's just why we're in this fight.

The Motive and Method of the Anti-Liquor Fight

It is unfortunate that pro-liquor men have misconceived the motive of anti-liquor men. Pro-liquor men have imagined that they are being persecuted, not quite for righteousness' sake, but for conduct they regard as innocent. They know that drink brings exhilaration. Why should anybody object to that? But anti-liquor men know that drink brings something besides exhilaration: it brings a great train of ill feelings and harmful deeds. It makes a man an enemy to society, to his best friends, to his wife and children. Drink is not the innocent thing drinking men imagine it to be: it may exhilarate for a time, but "at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." Centuries of experience have taught mankind that alcoholic drink is an evil of dreadful power. The individual can find safety from it only in total abstinence. And can he find safety there? No, indeed. Those who drink around him are a menace to his safety. On the highway, on the street, in the store or mill, even in the home, there is danger from men who drink. Alcohol converts sane men into madmen. When not a menace to life, it is an intolerable nuisance. Why should the sober and the sane be made to endure the danger and the positive injuries of great magnitude which alcoholic drink imposes? No apology is due for the effort of men to remove the cause of so much needless trouble. Society has a justifiable motive for the movement to make the world sane and sober. This high motive can not be degraded by calling it fanaticism or other ugly names. The anti-drink men are philanthropists. They are actuated by a lofty regard, not simply for society in general, but especially for the families of drinkers and for the drinkers themselves. They know that drinking men are or will be destroyers of their own happiness as well as that of their friends and dependents. To save a man from drink would be a favor of the first magnitude. Anti-liquor men are the greatest friends of the deluded men who drink. The temperance movement of our time is humanitarian in spirit and purpose.

But pro-liquor men object to the methods employed. They would not care if the fanatics would confine themselves to temperance lectures and sermons, they say, but they don't stop with moral suasion and temperance instruction: they have come to the point of employing coercion. Hundreds of men are now languishing in prison or working on the public roads whose only offense was that they made, transported, or sold liquor. By this method of coercion the fanatics have brought it to pass that it is dangerous to be a liquor man of any type or order. He is not safe anywhere.

The method of coercion is used by anti-liquor men only because milder methods have been tried and have failed; failed not because of their unreasonableness, but because men of drink in their mad delusion refused to hear reason. They ought not to object to rough means since they have resisted all other means. Force is employed to save the liquor men because it seems to be the only thing that will save them. Force would not be necessary and would not be used if drinking men and dealers in strong drink were amenable to reason.

Judge Clark's Decision

A Federal judge in New Jersey, notable as the youngest judge in the Federal service, a man named Clark, has rendered the opinion that our Eighteenth Amendment is invalid because it was not adopted by state conventions instead of legislatures. There does not seem to be much ground for this opinion and it is confidently expected that the Supreme Court of the United States will very soon reverse it. The Constitution seems clearly to make it optional with Congress which method shall be employed and Congress deliberately chose the method of referring to state legislatures.

—We thank those who have contributed to the discussion of the liquor question and our duty growing out of the present situation. It is a time requiring clear thinking and courageous action. The enemies of prohibition are determined and many of them are by no means fair-minded. Misrepresentation is being employed in the interest of the liquor traffic. Large sums of money are contributed to deceive the people. The situation demands that every lover of truth and righteousness assert himself against error. It devolves upon the common man to defeat the evil forces of rum. It is not enough to ignore the liquor traffic: it is not enough to deplore it; it is demanded that every honest man oppose it with all his power and influence.

IS THE VOLSTEAD LAW ENFORCED?

This is a question frequently asked. The enemies of the Eighteenth Amendment claim it is not and it can not be enforced. I claim it is enforced and can be enforced as well as any law on our statute books. I claim that intoxicating liquors are the greatest outlaw and crime breeders in the world. Its path has always been strewn with crime, murder, immorality, degradation, poverty, and ruin since its wicked conception entered into the heart of man. These wicked ungodly devisers have eternally cried out as the devils in the demoniac cried out to Christ. "Let us alone." They do not wish to be disturbed in their nefarious and damnable business. If the church of God tries to curb and put down this evil and outlaw of our land, they call us church bigots and cry out, you are dabbling in politics, when they themselves, seek to control politics and did it under the old saloon system. They shall never come back. The church and good sober honest-to-goodness business men have always had to take care of and to clean up its wreckage of crime and poverty. If we do as these slimy crime-debauchers say we should, we are to close our lips and drop our hands and let these wicked diabolical outlaws ride over us rough shod, invade our homes and strew our beautiful highways and factories with its wreckage of suffering and death.

Prohibition is enforced as well as other laws. There is no law that stops in toto the acts they were made to curb. Take, for instance, the law of murder. Murders increase from year to year, yet, what man would be fool enough to say abolish the law, "Thou shalt not kill," and legalize every man that wishes to kill.

There is a great rich and powerful organization that is gripping this nation with deadly claws. It's intent is to ride a political horse. Beware of this devil fire-eating monster; it is foreign, and wishes to fatten on the life blood of our pure American citizenship. The one-half of one per cent. is just what they, themselves, wrote into the law as an interpretation of what was called an intoxicating drink when we were trying state control.

I have lived through the days of the saloon; the days of state control, and now in the days of prohibition, and I declare that national prohibition gives, by far, the greater freedom from alcoholic drink. The bootlegger has always been with us and will until the buyers of bootleg liquor are all dead and its sympathizers are put in jail. I declare to you that any organization against the Eighteenth Amendment or any other amendment of the Constitution of the United States should be seized by Federal authority, tried and imprisoned.

We did it during war times—why not now? Why submit prohibition back to the states? Did not 46 of the 48 states ratify before National Prohibition was declared? The very fact that our jails and penitentiaries are being filled is evidence that our laws are being enforced. The man that says, "It is worse than in the days of the saloon," is either ignorant, a paid propagandist or he is presuming that you are ignorant. These liquor popagandists who tell you that there is more liquor and easier to get knows that he is lying. If liquor is what they want, and it is, why do they want to do away with prohibition if prohibition makes liquor more plentiful?

There is a real fight ahead of us. It is no time for party alignments. Vote as you pray and turn the rascals out. I would rather be a church bigot than a booze sympathizer.

There is much said now about unfaithful officers. I have come to believe that our officers are as good as the citizenship. Let the citizens regard their oath and line up with the officers and let them know that unless they do their duty they can not stay in office. I've heard good churchmen and called good citizens on witness stand give noted bootleggers good characters.

The Eighteenth Amendment can be enforced if the church and decent citizenship will stand true to the oath of citizenship and righteousness.

H. L. POWELL.

THE TEMPERANCE BATTLE

When national prohibition was adopted, many people were surprised, and thought it had come suddenly. Actually, it was the fruit of 135 years of increasing knowledge of the harm that alcohol does to the individual, and that the liquor traffic does to the community, and of effort to prevent it. Even the early colonies tried to reduce drunkenness, but from 1785 efforts became more constant and organized.

Prohibition seemed sudden to some because their histories had taught them little of the movement against alcohol, or they lived in sections where prohibition met with little favor; and the great city newspapers had not given sufficient knowledge of the actual progress being made in many other parts of the country toward total abstinence and banishment of the saloon.

There were several stages in this movement which finally brought national prohibition.

The first efforts mainly sought to prevent drunkenness by persuading people to drink moderately. Then came movements for total abstinence from distilled liquors; later, for total abstinence from all alcoholic drinks; for reduction or restriction of the liquor traffic; for prohibition of some part of the liquor traffic; for local prohibition of the sale of liquor by votes of towns or counties; for prohibition of the whole liquor traffic in many states; and finally, for national prohibition. All this required many years. The different kinds of work were often going on at the same time, except that prohibition of the entire traffic was not undertaken until many methods of control had been tried and found ineffectual for preventing the evils resulting from alcoholic liquors. Hence, the liquor traffic was not abolished hastily, but was given a long trial.

The early colonists brought the drinking customs of their home countries—England, Holland, Sweden, France, etc.—of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. But drunkenness, was an especially serious matter in a new country where everybody must work, where dangers from the Indians must be met by men ready for instant action. Hence, the colonies soon began to make laws punishing drunkenness. They also tried to limit the amount of liquor used by prohibiting any except licensed persons from selling it. Yet drunkenness increased. After the Revolution it was extremely common. As yet, however, few saw dangers in moderate drinking, even of spirits.

In 1785, Dr. Benjamin Rush, of Philadelphia, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, published articles on the effects of distilled liquor on mind and body. As a physician, he begged his countrymen to avoid the habitual use of spirits if the young nation were to be saved. His words went far and wide, and up to about 1825 increasing efforts were made to check the alcohol evil by urging moderation in the use of distilled liquors. But new hard drinkers were constantly made from moderate drinkers. Intemperance and the consumption of liquor continued to increase.

In 1825, Dr. Lyman Beecher preached six famous sermons on intemperance which stirred the nation. He called for the abolition of the legal trade in distilled liquors as one means of checking the evils of intemperance. This suggestion of partial "prohibition" was made 95 years before national prohibition was gained.

In 1826 a new plan was started—abstinence from spirits. The thought was that if all temperate people would abstain from distilled liquors, the drunkards in time would die off, and the land would be free from intemperance. This did bring some results. By 1830, over 1,000 temperance societies had 100,000 members abstaining from spirits. There was a gain in sobriety. Many distilleries and liquor dealers had to go out of business.

Within ten years, it became evident that the battle against drink must also include wine, beer, and other fermented liquors. They contained the same alcohol as distilled liquors, and often caused drunkenness and its evils. Influential, well-known men tried total abstinence, and testified that it was both possible and safe to get along without any kind of liquor. Why, then, use drinks that caused so many to fall? A movement for total abstinence followed. By 1835 there were over 8,000 temperance societies, and some 200,000 known abstainers from all liquors; 2,000,000 had ceased using spirits. The business fell into disrepute.

Between 1830 and 1840 the belief also developed that the "manufacture, sale, and use of all intoxicating liquors are morally wrong, and ought to be abandoned throughout the world." Through the forties, steady work for total abstinence went on; efforts to limit and restrict the liquor traffic increased. Maine adopted State prohibition. Several other states followed with more or less imperfect prohibition laws, some of which lasted but a short time, or never went into effect at all because they were declared unconstitutional; some were repealed after the Civil War, for while the nation was absorbed in the anti-slavery agitation and the Civil War, temperance and prohibition work slackened. As a result, a new generation grew up which did not know why its fathers had prohibited the traffic, and so repealed much of the remaining state prohibition. Besides, during the war the liquor traffic became an important source of revenue, grew powerful, and had vast sums of money to spend in protecting itself against laws that would restrict or end it.

So the struggle against drink had to begin again. Efforts were made to reform drunkards; the doctors of the world began to report new facts as to the effects of alcohol, and these were taught young people in public schools, Sabbath schools, and young people's organizations. As the years went by, other new facts showed that even the moderate use of alcohol was injurious to working ability and health. Physicians used much less alcohol in medicine, or ceased using it altogether in treatment of the sick. Railroads and many other employers, to promote safety, efficiency, and reliability, began to require sober or abstaining workmen, and gave preference in promotion to total abstainers. Many workmen's organizations adopted rules which prohibited paying sickness or accident benefits to members whose ill health or injury was caused by intemperance. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers strictly prohibited its members the use of liquor at any time. As machinery requiring clear brains released workers more and more from hard muscle labor, it became increasingly evident that the use of alcohol is dangerous and out of place with a person operating delicate or high-power machinery, and in fast steam and motor transportation. Insurance companies were discovering that even the moderate use of any kind of alcoholic liquor tends to shorten life.

While all these forces—science, business, industry, labor, transportation, medicine, health, the school and the church—were encouraging sobriety and often demanding total abstinence from the use of alcoholic liquors, the people were also wrestling with the liquor traffic. For whatever liquor was openly sold, it became a temptation to drink, and broke down the sobriety which the other forces were trying to build up. Very many plans were tried to keep the traffic under control by restrictions. But it violated the restrictive laws, and was ever making new drinkers. The resulting evils caused fathers and mothers to rebel against a traffic that spoiled their sons. Little by little, small communities, towns, and cities began to vote to prohibit the sale of liquors within their borders. By the late eighties this movement was well under way. This was called local option. In some states the vote was taken by counties so that whole counties were voted "dry." By 1893, three states had state prohibition—Maine, Kansas, and North Dakota.

But there was always trouble with "bootlegging" from the wet borders. Breweries, distilleries, or saloons sent liquor into dry sections, and thus violated the freedom of the dry territory to banish, by vote of its citizens, the liquor evil. In some of the Southern states, the sale of liquor by government agents was tried. The plan not only failed to stop the evils of drink, but caused so much political corruption that it was given up, and the states adopted prohibition. From 1893 to 1913 there were twenty years of hard fighting, especially in Southern states and west of the Alleghanies. State after state cleared its area of the saloon by town or county votes. By 1913 nine whole states had state prohibition, and millions of people were living in towns, cities, or counties where they had voted for local prohibition of the sale of liquor.

The United States Congress passed many laws prohibiting the sale of intoxicants at army posts, in soldiers' homes, naval stations and ships, in the national capital, at immigration stations; it barred liquor from the mail and protected dry states by a law relating to shipments of liquor.

Meanwhile, the idea of national prohibition of the liquor trade was spreading. It was not new. It was strongly advocated even before the Civil War. In 1876, and again in 1885, resolutions for national prohibition were introduced into the Congress. After 1890 the demand for it was heard more and more frequently, for it became evident that as long as liquor was made and sold legally anywhere it would be difficult to protect the home and youth from alcohol temptation either by trying to limit the traffic or even by local prohibition, since the liquor came into dry sections from those that were legally wet.

Finally, the time seemed to have come to work for national prohibition. Late in 1913, a bill for it was introduced into the Congress. For the next four years the nation from one end to the other was fighting the prohibition battle. It was a part of each election to Congress and the State legislatures, for the men elected would vote for or against prohibition.

It was not merely a few temperance people who were asking for prohibition. United in requesting it were doctors, teachers, ministers, business men, judges, lawyers, men and women who in their work saw the misery caused by drink, fathers and mothers, young people just entering manhood and womanhood. Indeed, it was a young people's national organization which, in 1912, before the movement for national prohibition was definitely organized, adopted a resolution that became a slogan—"A saloonless nation by 1920."

The Eighteenth Amendment, prohibiting the entire legal liquor traffic throughout the United States, was submitted to the states for ratification by the United States Congress in 1917 by a vote of the Senate of 65 to 20; in the House of Representatives of 282 to 128. On January 16, 1919, the necessary 36 states had ratified. Later, ten more ratified. Only two failed to do so. Thus the Eighteenth Amendment was ratified by a larger proportion of the states than any other amendment to the Constitution.

While the amendment resolution was before the Congress and being ratified by the states, the people were also busy outlawing the liquor traffic from their home territories, not waiting for national prohibition. Between 1913, when the bill for national prohibition was introduced into the Congress, and 1920, when the amendment went into effect, the nine prohibition states of 1913 had increased to 33 which had adopted state prohibition, nearly two-thirds of them by a direct vote of the people. And now that we have gained this precious boon of freedom from this tyrant and slave master, booze, shall we sit supinely by and allow its return? Never! Let us be up and doing today in the temperance cause.—Cora Frances Stoddard, in the Wellspring.

WE ARE THE GOVERNMENT

With us, the people are the government. Our chosen representatives make and execute the laws.

Enforcing the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act is, at this time, one of the major concerns of both government and people. In choosing our representatives, we must have this matter—rather than loyalty to our old party—uppermost in mind; and we must back up our officers.

Our laws, and a very large proportion of our people, are thoroughly committed to Prohibition. Enforcement is improving. Intelligence, resourcefulness, conscience, patience, and persistent effort will win.

LUTHER K. LONG.

PROHIBITION

Prohibition's come to our land to permanently stay,
To radiate prosperity and drive disease away;
To raise the pay of workmen and give the children shoes,
To furnish us with useful things instead of wasteful booze;
To elevate the masses and to build a better race,
To banish crime and sorrow and to brighten every face.
It is dangerous to break the law, quite vain for Wets to shout,
And the Dry Chief will get you

If you don't watch
out!

Once there was a foolish man who set his heart on drink;
His brain became so fuddled he couldn't clearly think.
He drank away a fortune, he lost all self-control,
He sacrificed his honor, he hazarded his soul.
He became a social outcast, he proved strong drink a curse,
He sank to lowest level, he went from bad to worse.
You can't fool long with alcohol, 'twill put your wits to rout,
And the Dry Chief will get you

If you
watch
out!

That alcohol is poison our best doctors all agree,
It destroys one's moral fibre and the heart's efficiency.
The habit-drinking boozing man is now held in disgrace,
An enemy of home and thrift, a menace to the race.
Nothing worse upon the earth than a drunkard's early doom,
The alcoholic addict staggers quickly to the tomb.
Booze and business will not mix is clear beyond a doubt,
And the Dry Chief will get you

If you
watch
out!

ON THE LAYING OF A CORNERSTONE

May the whole structure be one of the treasures opened by wise men for the incarnate Christ. May every passer-by hear echoing from its walls the angelic song: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy." May this temple have for its corner-stone Christ in theology, Christ in worship, Christ in work, Christ in character—four-sided, square, and perfect. May there not be one square foot of standing-room for the preacher who takes one verse from the Bible or one star from the brow of Christ.—Cortlandt Myers.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Nineteen Thirty One

By the time this reaches our readers, the old year will be history, and we will be living in a new allotment of time. For all of our readers we earnestly hope that the new year may begin well, continue well, and end well. Many new resolves will be made, no doubt. Some will be kept; many, perhaps, will be broken. But whether kept or broken, such vows represent good impulses, and it is comforting to know that when they are broken, they may be made again, until we possess purpose and strength sufficient to keep them. What the year holds in store for us, none can see or know. There, however, is this assurance to which we may cling with comforting confidence:

"But we do know that God causes all things to work together for the good of those who love Him."—(Twentieth Century New Testament). There is for God's own an unfailing providence here, and then the better things that await beyond. In this confidence, let us begin the New Year joyously and full of purpose to "press toward the prize."

Thank God for 1931, and "Happy New Year" to all our readers!

Brother Lowdermilk Has Our Sympathy

In the passing of Mrs. Sherman Allred, Brother E. G. Lowdermilk has been called upon to give up a half sister. Interment was at Cedar Falls, December 20. We extend sympathy to him and those close to him by the ties of this relationship. May there be for them a day of reunion where death and separation have no place.

Week of Prayer

The call is made jointly by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and the Evangelical Alliance of Great Britain. The date is January 4-11. Those who have read the Methodist-Protestant of this week have observed on the cover page the call of Dr. Broomfield to our own church to participate in this week of prayer. I wish to unite with him in calling upon our own conference to have a part in this week of world-wide intercession for God's blessings upon his church. Let us pray that a great spiritual awakening may come to God's people everywhere.

Surely this is His will. "Everything else thrives when the spiritual thrives." We trust that our pastors will lay this matter upon the hearts of their people, and urge that they join the united Christian world in prayer for the visitations of God's mercy and power upon his people.

We trust that Dr. McCulloch may have space in the HERALD for the program of this week of prayer.

Officials and Quarterly Conferences

The quarterly conference is an important body of a charge. It is the legislative body, and is to the charge what the annual conference is to all the churches within its bounds.

To be a member of the quarterly conference is therefore a privilege and an honor; but there is likewise a responsibility that goes with this privilege and this honor. Members of quarterly conferences should not forget this, and when the conference is held, they should attend, unless some obviously good reason keeps them away. Let's make this year noted for its well attended quarterly conferences. And let's make the quarterly conferences full of interest and enthusiasm.

Assigned

Brother Clay Madison has been assigned as supply pastor for Lebanon charge. Our faith is that this will prove a happy relationship for both pastor and church. Brother Madison is a Junior of High Point College, and is one of the three promising Madison boys that have come out of Union Grove church,—two preachers and one teacher. Brother Taft White comes from this church, also. A church that can send out young men like these is not living in vain.

To Count On Allotment

Last year, "Dollar a Member" received credit for payments on college pledges made in 1929. Inquiry has been made as to whether or not that plan is to be followed this year. I have conferred with the college authorities in regard to the matter, and their opinion is that the plan should be continued. I believe that this will have the indorsement of the conference, and I am therefore, announcing that all payments made on pledges of 1929 may be credited to the allotment this year for college maintenance. Send the money to Dr. Brown, and name of payee. He will receipt for the money, and at the same time notify Brother Harrison of the payment, so proper credit can be given on pledge cards.

I trust that this is clear, but if not, I shall be glad to answer any questions in regard to it.

"Now Concerning the Collection"

Did you take the Christmas Offering for the A. C. B.? I trust that you did; but probably something was in your way just at that time and you did not take it. Won't you please do it yet, and mark it "Christmas Offering" when you send it in? And please do not be deterred from doing this because you fear the amount will be small. Perhaps it will be. And perhaps it may be larger than you think. But let it be small, if it must; many small amounts make one large aggregate—just PLEASE TAKE THE OFFERING. We want to thank you, pastor and people, for the offering.

MONSIGNOR FOLEY ON AMERICAN PROHIBITION

THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Gentlemen:

I am pastor of St. Paul's Catholic Church, Baltimore, Maryland. I am in the fiftieth year of my ministry and the seventy-eighth of my age. I was born and reared in Baltimore.

I should have liked very much to have appeared in person before your Honorable Body, but the state of my health forbids. I am a prohibitionist. I beg your kind indulgence while I give, as briefly as I can, the reasons of the faith that is in me.

My ministry began in 1880 in Baltimore. After a few years of service there, my broken health sent me to Florida and South Carolina. I have always stood against the Liquor Traffic, I fought it in Baltimore in the old days of Low License, I helped to drive it out of Deland, my home town in Florida, and out of Volusia county of that state. I was in South Carolina in the days of the "State Dispensary" loyally backed by the late Senator Tillman and the rural districts; but opposed, as such restrictions always are, by the cities. Charleston especially stood against the Dispensary.

When I returned to active work in Baltimore, we were under "High License." I was not long in finding out how cleverly the "beer barons" and some state officials were working to nullify the law. I then learned how to "fight the devil with fire," and became a frequent and successful protestant before the Liquor License Board, so that long before prohibition came to us, no new saloon licenses were granted within the limits of my extensive parish. There were some honorable exceptions, but it may be boldly and truthfully said that the old saloon, even where it was legal, was lawless and a menace to order, decency and morality. The shouters for "personal liberty," unable to deny that the old saloon was a blot on civilization and a menace to good government, tell us that they do not want to bring back the old saloon but a heavenly resort where angels might gather and men may drink their fill of what they will and not get drunk, beat their wives, starve their children or commit murder. We hear a lot of rot about bringing back of light wines and beer as the panacea for the evils laid at the door of prohibition and as the great European promoter of temperance. Nonsense! The "wets" today, some consciously, some unconsciously, are preparing the way for the return of the "good old saloon" with all its horrible satellites. He who wills the means, wills the end.

We are now having on a larger and more dangerous basis, the revival of the "whisky insurrection of 1794." Local politicians entered into the mimic war, even the fine French hand of Citizen Genet was in evidence. When President Washington had exhausted his patience, he ordered the Governors of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia and Maryland to send militia to the "scene of war." The "embattled farmers" wisely concluded that "discretion in practice. Many defenders of "personal liberty" were arrested; two were convicted of treason but were pardoned by the President. "The real significance of the disturbances," says a writer, "which never rose to the dignity of an insurrection, was that it was the first instance in which the strength of the new Federal government to maintain domestic tranquility and enforce laws was put to test. The promptness with which the resistance was put down won respect for the government and established valuable precedents with regard to its power and duty on similar occasions in the future."

Is prohibition a moral question, or is it a political one? In my judgment it is both. We are told by the "wets" that you cannot legislate them into morality; perhaps law may not legislate people into morality, but it seems that the experience of ages shows that law can make many men conclude that order and decency and cleanliness and some other virtues are at least mighty good things to observe. Long ago the Decalogue was given us by the Divine Lawgiver. Was it not both moral and political? Did not, and do not, its defenders deem it such? Throughout the ages have not human lawgivers sought to enforce by human sanction the observance of certain Divine laws?

Is prohibition binding in conscience? I believe it to be so. I believe that the Eighteenth Amendment is what President Hoover declared it, A NOBLE EXPERIMENT, the most noble a great nation ever tried, to save its people from frightful evils. I believe the Eighteenth Amendment to be a more noble experiment even than that which began at Concord and ended at Yorktown.

To my mind, President Washington in suppressing the "whisky insurrection" taught the Americans that this Union was no mass of disorganized units, but had become a NATION.

God guide our President, our Congress, and may God save the State!

(Signed) (Right Reverend) M. F. FOLEY.

A NEW HEART

A certain village church possessed a fine-toned bell, of which the villagers were very proud. By some accident it became cracked. A blacksmith was engaged to repair it. He riveted it so skillfully as to render the crack invisible. The bell was rung, but oh! the appalling discord when it was rung! It was taken down and recast. The result was a new bell of sweeter tone than the old one. Man has devised many apparently clever schemes for the restoration of sin-diseased hearts. They are all fables. A new heart molded by God himself is the only remedy.—Selected.

MARIAN'S CHRISTMAS GIFT

They were all sitting around the fire in the cheery living room, and on the mantel hung a row of stockings, for it was Christmas Eve. Dad was in his big chair puffing at his pipe with little Betty on his knee, blinging her eyes to keep them open.

"You'd better write a note right quick to Santa and put it in your stocking, Marian," advised Dad. "Maybe he'll find it and it won't be too late yet."

"All right, Daddy, dear," said Marian.

She jumped up, got a sheet of paper and curled up near the fire and wrote. Pretty soon, Jimmy and Betty were led off half-asleep to bed, and Tom recited a long piece about "What shall I do on Christmas Day," and Mumsy read over the story of the shepherds and they sang "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem." Then they all went to bed.

Well, Santa Claus did not find Marian's note, because Marian had not put it in her stocking.

She told herself, "he couldn't give me my wish. How could anybody find a Perfect Friend for me by tomorrow?"

That was the One Thing Marian wished for. She had Tom and Jimmy and Betty and her dear parents and they were all darlings, but they did not fill that one particular little spot in her heart which was meant for a chum to fill. She wanted a girl of her age who would like what she liked and see things the same way she saw them and laugh at the same jokes.

"I don't expect to get my wish, I'm going to be just as happy as can be anyway," she told herself as she drifted softly away into Dreamland.

Tom had been waiting patiently for his sister to begin her journey to that strange land, and soon after she had started on it, the door of her room opened cautious and her brother tipped in carrying his flashlight. He had noticed that she had not put her note into her stocking and he hoped he could find it and discover what her One Wish was. He flashed his light here and there, and before long he found a bit of paper on her bureau. Just as he reached for it, she sighed and moved, he flashed off the light and after waiting a moment, he slipped from the room.

Safe in his own room, he read the paper. It was a list. It said: Half doz. oranges, two doz. eggs, three lbs. butter, and a lot more.

Tom scratched his head. Well, this was very queer he thought. But then girls had queer notions anyhow besides maybe all these groceries put together made a good cake or pie or something Marian was craving. He heard a sound downstairs and saw his father in the hall. He ran down and asked if he might go out.

"It's only half past nine and the stores will be open until ten," he urged. "I have some more shopping to do."

His father said all right and insisted on going along, and when he saw his son buying groceries, he was too astonished to speak. Poor Tom meant well, you see, but he had got hold of the wrong paper. The right one lay under his sister's pillow. The one he had was a list his mother had given Marian to get at the grocer's.

The grocers was a small store trimmed with holly and red paper and looking every way. While Tom was waiting for his package a loud thump was heard behind the counter, and a little scream.

"Don't be alarmed," said the kindly grocer, Mr. Moon. "That's my little niece. You see I'm a bachelor, and my sister's husband died so she sent me one of her young ones to keep and send to school this winter. I don't know much about caring for children, but I like to please 'em. Hilda, that's my niece, begged me to let her stay in the store tonight but she's so sleepy she's fallen out of her chair back there twice!"

"Poor Hilda" said Tom's father. "Maybe you ought to let me take her home with me. We'll put her to bed and my wife will be a mother to her."

After awhile Mr. Moon agreed, for he was afraid he might not do right by the child in spite of willingness to oblige. Then Tom and his father led a sleepy girl out of the store. Crunch, crunch, went the snow under her little feet, and the cold brought the roses into her cheeks and made her blue eyes dance. She looked like a little fairy.

"Why, I know!" cried Tom. "One of my sister Marian's wishes is to have a live doll. Tomorrow can't we put Hilda near the tree and have her pretend to be a doll for Marian?"

They all liked the idea, but Dad thought of putting Hilda in the stocking. They would put her up on the mantelpiece and have one leg in the stocking. Of course, this would be hard to do without Marian finding it out!

Bright and early on Christmas morning, up sprang the children and rushed to the parents' room to cry Merry Christmas and sing the Christmas carol. Then down they swooped to the living-room, but when they reached it the door was locked.

"I'll go around the back way and open it," said Tom.

He was quite a while doing it! But at last he opened the door and in rushed the children, only to stop short and cry, "Oh!" Marian's eyes were like saucers and she seemed to be stuck to the floor as she stared at the big beautiful doll with one foot in the stocking.

Hilda dimpled with smiles, held out her arms and said:

"Isn't it wonderful, and I'm just your own age!"

"Why—why—" stammered Marian, "Santa Claus must be true after all. But how did he get my letter!"

"Oh, fairies can see everything," said Tom. "Look what's in this big poke marked 'For Marian.' It looks like groceries, I believe."

Marian gave a look of surprise and wonder, then she flew to her new friend. Then Mumsy opened the dining-room door and there in the corner glowed the tree. Oh, it was the most beautiful tree they had ever had, glistening like frost on a moonlight night and simply laden with lovely presents for everybody.

Marian never lost faith in Santa any more after that!—Selected.

(Conservation Meeting)

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Striving. Matt. 7:7-14.
Tuesday—Seck First the Kingdom. Matt. 6:33-34.
Wednesday—Fight the Flesh. 1 Cor. 9:24-27.
Thursday—Follow the Faithful. Heb. 13:7,8.
Friday—Look to Jesus. Heb. 12:1,2.
Saturday—Watch and Pray. Matt. 26:41.

To the Leader

If our Saviour has a definite plan for each one of us, we ought to keep closer to Him that we may constantly help in the working out of that plan. He said before His departure, "Lo, I am with you alway." He seemed to have promised to be near when His friends might have need of Him. During the coming year as in all years past we most certainly will have need of such a friend. . . If we make high resolutions we shall need Him to keep us true to our resolves; and if we blunder on and seek no higher good we shall need Him all the more to keep us from going astray. Let us examine ourselves and see what we need most as individuals and then as a society.

Suggested songs: "True Hearted, Whole Hearted, Faithful and Loyal," "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," "Work, For the Night Is Coming," and "Purer In Heart, O God."

Discuss These

1. Do you or do you not believe in resolutions?
2. Do we as individuals need to make resolutions for the coming year? As a society?
3. How may we keep on the upgrade?
4. What happens to young men and women when the conclusion is reached that they are good enough—that no further vigilance need be exercised in matters of conduct?
5. What effect does it have on us when the one who gives counsel professes to be above doing wrong himself?
6. Would the Phillippian Christian think less of Paul because he confessed the growth and improvement in himself?
7. What particular prize do you hope to obtain or attain before the end of this year?
8. In what sense is ours a high calling? To what does Jesus beckon us upward?

Poetry

"The sweet persuasion of His voice,
Respects the sanctity of will;
He giveth light—thou hast thy choice,
To walk in darkness still.

"A tenderer light than moon or sun,
Than song of earth, a sweeter hymn.
May shine and sound forever on,
And thou be deaf and dim.

"Forever round the mercy seat
The gilding lights of love shall burn,
But what, if habit bound thy feet
Shall lack the power to turn?"

Songs that can be used as a solo: "Tell Mother I'll Be There," "The Old Rugged Cross," and "I Would Be True."

Suggestions to the Leader

Select some one to tell the story "The Vision of Sir Launfal." If a story is not told make a short talk. You might tell of the "Prayer of Valley Forge." Isaac Potts, at whose home Washington was quartered, relates that one day, while the Americans were encamped at Valley Forge, he strolled up the creek, when not far from his den he heard a solemn voice. He walked quietly in the direction of it and saw Washington's horse tied to a sapling. In a thicket nearby was the beloved chief upon his knees in prayer, his cheeks suffused with tears. Like Moses at the bush, Isaac felt that he was upon Holy ground and withdrew unobserved. He was much agitated and, on entering the room where his wife was, burst into tears. On her inquiring the cause, he informed her of what he had seen, and added, "If there is any one on earth whom the Lord will listen to, it is George Washington; and I feel a presentiment that under such a commander there can be no doubt of our eventually establishing our independence and that God in His providence has willed it so."

For Discussion

What do we mean by conscience?

How may we know God?

Is there any standard that we require of our young women that is unjust or unfair for young men?

What determines the kind of conscience a person has?

Quotable Poetry

Wanted a boy that is manly,

A boy that is kind and polite,

A boy you can always depend on

To do what he knows to be right.

A boy that is truthful and honest

And faithful and willing to work.

But we have no place that we care to disgrace

With a boy that is ready to shirk.

These are the boys who are wanted

In the workshop, the home and the store;

The world needs such boys in its business.

For them there are places galore;

These are the boys we depend on,

Our hope for the future, and then

The problems of state and the world's work await

Such boys when they grow to be men.

Since there was no Herald last week, the above report covers our financial receipts for the two weeks covering the Christmas season, and makes a splendid showing. We are greatly indebted to our many friends and to the Dear Lord for this financial help. May our Father bless and prosper every individual who has in any way helped this institution at this glad season. And may He just as richly bless those who would liked to have helped but were not able.

Mrs. Margaret Turkelson Harrisville, W. Va. and Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro, N. C., both sent money with which to purchase fruit. This we are saving until after what we have is used up. It was very thoughtful of these good ladies to send the money, for this will cause our fruit to last longer.

Mr. W. H. English, High Point, N. C., six rocking chairs for six little girls. These are strongly built and beautifully upholstered chairs. A most beautiful and a most useful gift for these little girls. These chairs, with care, will last for many years.

Thus ends our report following a most delightful Christmas in the Home. The people have been exceedingly good to us. The Lord has abundantly blessed us. And in every way this has been the best Christmas of the three we have been in the Home. We have received many very fine letters in connection with the gifts of money, clothing, produce and Christmas presents. These have cheered our hearts. The children have been happy, and good considering the fact that the big snow storm shut them in for most of the time during the entire holidays.

We should like to quote from some of the letters, and tell of many of the happy things, but our report is already so long that we must close for this time. If space permits we may later tell a bit of our Christmas joys.

This of course will be our last report for 1930, because when you read this it will be 1931. This has been a good year for us, and regardless of the financial depression throughout the country we think we are in just as good condition financially as at this time last year. A summing up of our books during the next few days will tell.

Wishing all of you a very bright, happy and prosperous new year, I am, Yours in the Master's service.

A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

LINEBERRY LADIES' AID

The Ladies' Aid society of the Lineberry church was very delightfully entertained on December 13, by Mrs. W. A. Frank and daughter, Miss Kate. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. M. T. Skeen. A pleasing and inspiring program was rendered.

The roll was called and minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Miss Kate Frank. Eighteen responded to the call with one new member, Mrs. E. A. Bingham. The visitors were: Mrs. Charlie Thompson, Mrs. Lee Thompson, Mrs. Baine, Mrs. Alexander Lax, Misses Carrie and Bettie Holton, Miss Ruth Cranford, Mrs. Irving Cranford, of Siloam Ladies' Aid; Mrs. Robert Short, of Denton; Mrs. Brice Reid, High Point, and a number of children.

At the last meeting it was decided to give a prize to the one who read the most chapters in the Bible, it was given to Mrs. Claud Elliott. Each committee was called on to give a report on what they had done for the past month. After the devotional and business session, a most enjoyable social hour was entered into, with Mrs. Whit Wood and Miss Kate Frank as directors of games and contests.

At the conclusion of the social hour, "Blest Be the Tie," was sung, after which all the guests assembled in the dining room. Talk of serving, but Mrs. Frank, and Miss Kate certainly know how to serve and make all enjoy themselves. Sandwiches, cakes, candy, and hot coffee were served.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. A. H. Reid.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

LET'S GET BUSY FOR MR. MINNIS

The following letters are being sent out, the first to the Sunday school superintendents and Christian Endeavor presidents; the second to the presidents of the Woman's auxiliaries. Do not wait to get your letter, if you are one of these officers, but get busy. If you are not an officer, won't you interest yourself in the project, and see that your church has a share in it?

MRS. C. W. BATES.

"The Pine Ridge Booster" carries this interesting item: A gas well has been drilled on the Pine Ridge property. This will afford natural gas for heating and cooking, and represents a great saving in the cost of fuel, as well as great convenience. (Mr. Woodford is great at finding things and folks. Much credit is due the friends of the school who did the drilling for them.)

Dear Friend:

In the new Sunday school quarterlies you will see the pictures of North Carolina's missionaries to India.

The young people who attended the summer conference last July had the opportunity of knowing Mr. Minnis personally; and heard the appeal that we make Mr. Minnis our missionary by assuming his entire salary, which amounts to $1,800 a year.

In order to do this we are asking for a FREE WILL OFFERING from each Sunday school, Christian Endeavor society and Woman's auxiliary—in other words, we want his support to come from the entire North Carolina Conference.

This is not a part of the assessment for the Board of Young People's work, but is an opportunity for our young people to go beyond Jerusalem and Judea unto the uttermost parts of the earth. And whatever is given for this purpose will be credited on the assessment for General Conference budget for your church. The Maryland Conference sees that Paul Warner it taken care of; the Ohio Conference looks well to the care of Mildred Miskimmin; may we not also take care of our own? How can we do it?

1. Take your offering. In January if possible, or as early after that as you can.

2. Send the amount as soon as you receive it to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, 909 West College Drive, High Point, N. C. And be sure to tell her from what church it comes, and that it is for Mr. Minnis' salary. If you do this the amount will be credited to the General Conference budget from your church. A few churches have already taken the offering, and we are hoping to have a nice long list to be published in the Herald within the next week or two. Will yours be in it?

Yours in the Master's work,

MRS. C. W. BATES.

Chairman of Districts.

Dear Co-Worker:

The members of the North Carolina Branch have been given the privilege of claiming Mr. and Mrs. Minnis as their own missionaries; of providing for their salary and upholding them by their prayers and sympathy, and sending them from time to time, such thoughtful expressions of their love, as they would send to members of their own beloved families.

I once heard a medical missionary from India say that her greatest privation while there was never having ice. The Ohio Branch has determined that its missionary, Miss Mildred Miskimmin, shall no longer suffer that privation and have sent her an ice machine.

Maryland Branch always treated Paul Warner, now home on furlough, as a dear absent son. Shall not North Carolina Branch be as loving and thoughtful of its own Mr. and Mrs. Minnis and children, and do all it can for their welfare?

Our Budget committee could not apportion all the budget sent us by the Mission Board. The salary of the Minnises—$1,800—will take care of the amount we could not apportion. And at the same time count on your church budget. So we are confident that each auxiliary in the Branch will be anxious to make an extra contribution for this purpose.

We are asking you, first, to see that your auxiliary makes an extra contribution toward Mr. Minnis' salary. And, second, that you urge the Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies in your own and neighboring churches to make a free-will offering for his salary. Letters have been sent to the Sunday school superintendents and Christian Endeavor presidents, but a personal word from you may be the spark that starts the dynamo; so don't refuse to give the spark.

Yours in the Master's work,

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN,

Corresponding Secretary.

BURLINGTON FIRST CHURCH AUXILIARY

The Woman's auxiliary of First Church, held its December meeting with 33 members and three visitors present.

The Business Girls' Circle had charge. Elizabeth Rogers played Christmas selections. The meeting opened with song, "Silent Night, Holy Night." Scripture was read by Tula Paul, followed with prayer by Rev. F. W. Paschall. Elizabeth Rogers sang a solo, "Star of the East," accompanied at the piano by Tula Riddle. Arthula Cheek then gave two readings, "God's Great Gift," and "God's Gift to Us."

The business hour was turned over to the president, Mrs. J. M. Crawford, at which time all important business matters were transacted, after which the auxiliary adjourned.

Refreshments were served in a very unusual style, but very beautiful. All lights were cut off, and four big candles were left burning. Everybody circled around the fire forming a "C" for Christmas. The hostesses, The Business Girls' Circle, served congealed fruit with whipped cream and nabiscoes; and on each plate was a tiny lighted candle which added beauty to the scene.

MISS TULA PAUL,

—Otto Wood, escaped convict, was killed in Salisbury yesterday while resisting arrest.

—Our deep snow still lingers in spots. It is now in its third week.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Gibsonville.—It seemed when Fountain Place got through pounding us that we were well fixed along that line and we were. But that did not mean the end.

We went to the Auxiliary meeting at Gibsonville on Monday night before Christmas, and there was a skirmish there, for they gave us that which keeps the body warm as well as that which is pleasant to the taste. So many insisted that we be in the Christmas exercise—and we had no other thought, for that is just as much a part of us as if we lived here.

The Young Men's class together with the Primary department had an interesting service, enjoyable and helpful. Then Santa Claus appeared to the special delight of the children as well as the older ones. A nice tree and a liberal treat for the children.

While Santa was calling out the gifts for the children, he announced that there was a truck load under the tree for the preacher. At once I answered that I would move it as soon as he got out of the way. Such a nice variety of good eats! Well, so many things that had no names that I will not attempt to call any. But we will be eating ham and good bread for many days yet, for the Madam of the parsonage is a good cook when she has something to practice on, and these two poundings are giving her that just now.

Several of the brethren helped us load up, and we drove home happy in the thought of the fine spirit back of all the material good we had received. Many individual gifts have come in since and we highly appreciate all that has come, and we pray God's richest blessings upon each giver and upon any who may have wished to give and did not feel financially able.

A substantial check from the Minneola Mills of which our good Brother Davidson is General Manager brought good cheer also among other Christmas presents.

Praying that the spirit that prompted these gifts may lead on to higher usefulness for us all into a year of greater activity and consecration that will mean a rich fruitage in the Lord's vineyard here.

Sincerely,

N. G. BETHEA.

Cedar Falls.—We are sorry indeed to announce the death of Mrs. Maud Alfred, a member of the church for many years. She is not only missed in her home, but also in her community. She leaves her husband, two daughters and four sons. She was born in 1873, and died December 19, 1930.

The funeral was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Joel Trogdon.

MRS. ALICE LAUGHLIN, Reporter.

Pleasant Grove.—Tuesday night, December 23rd, the Annual Christmas program was given under the leadership of Mrs. J. R. Meredith and Mrs. R. J. Kennedy. The children had very little practice, due to the heavy snow, but in spite of this, the program was rendered in a most attractive and effective manner. A unusually large audience was present to enjoy the program. The young ladies of the church beautifully pantomimed "Silent Night." The Christmas tree with the lovely decorations and Santa Claus made the occasion a complete success. All the members of the Sunday school were given a treat, after which the gifts were taken from the tree.

We are very grateful to all who took part in the program, and especially grateful to Mrs. Meredith and Mrs. Kennedy, as it was by their capable leadership the children received their training.

We are glad to be back with Pleasant Grove people and are looking forward to a prosperous year in our church work.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Haw River Church, Glen Raven Charge.—First Quarterly Conference was held at this church. Very sorry that more of the officers were not present to hear the splendid talk of our new pastor, Rev. A. D. Shelton. I am sure all will rally to the splendid call for co-operation and so, with renewed hope and faith we courageously face the new year.

Second Quarterly Conference will be held at Fairview.

REPORTER.

Cedar Falls.—We are glad indeed to get our former pastor, Rev. Joel Trogdon, back.

We pledged our cooperation to our pastor at the eleven o'clock service.

Our community was plunged in sorrow at the deaths of two of its oldest members, Mr. Arrington Gray Laughlin, who died November 5. Mr. Laughlin was 80 years old. Mr. Monroe Julian, who died November 6, he was 86 years old. They were friends and neighbors for many years. Together they helped to build the church here and were members of the same as long as they lived.

Just thirty hours was their friendship broken, to be renewed in the City of Joys untold, where it will never cease or be broken again.

MRS. ALICE LAUGHLIN, Reporter.

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.—There was some excitement in the village last Friday, caused by fire at the home of the late J. H. Vinson. The parsonage being just across the road, Mr. Fegelman was first to reach the scene in answer to the call. He began throwing water vigorously, and with the assistance of the women present managed to get the fire under control till others arrived to help finish the job.

One room was badly burned inside, where the fire started, but a tin roof prevented its breaking out sooner. Mr. Fegelman thinks that three minutes later they could not have saved the house.

REPORTER.

Albemarle.—We have been interested in the inspiring messages delivered to us by our pastor, Rev. Mr. Curry. So many beautiful thoughts have been brought to us through his sermons. One among the many was the comparison of the rose and a human being. He proved to us that the most beautiful and perfect rose hid beneath its tiny leaflets a thorn. Is not a human soul identically the same? There clothed in all its glory and beauty! However, a man can not be satisfied until he lifts this veil and peers into the mysteries of life. There he finds within the soul those piercing thorns. God made man and he made the rose. We take for granted that the rose has thorns, but because of its beauty we admire it and forget the thorns. Can we not deal with man the same? Always looking for the good, but overlooking the bad.

At the close of this service we were greatly pleased to have Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Taylor, their daughters, Agnes and Maggie, and son, Burton, join our church.

We are indeed glad to note that our pastor has moved to the beautiful home of Ex-Sheriff Green. Mr. Curry would have moved several weeks ago had it not been for the illness of Mrs. Curry. However, she is now improving rapidly, and is able to be out again.

Mr. C. S. Moton and his class consisting of thirty-five or forty young boys and girls were entertained at an elaborate dinner in the church dining hall last Thursday evening. After the dinner a special program was given which was thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Curry who was a specially invited guest seemed to enjoy the evening immensely. And entered into the young people's pleasure with great interest. By the reports from the boys and girls I am sure Mr. Curry made a great hit with them.

The Choir gave a Christmas cantata Sunday evening to a well-filled auditorium. A pageant, "Follow the Star," was also beautifully rendered by the intermediate boys and girls. A pantomime, "Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne," given by Irene Hatley proved to be the greatest success of the evening.

A program will be given Wednesday night by the Beginners and Primary department. At this time we will have a Christmas tree.

MRS. A. R. WAGNER, Reporter.

Ashboro.—The Christmas season has been a busy one with our people. Although the ground was covered with snow Sunday before Christmas, there were 265 present for S. S., and a good attendance at church. An interesting Santa Claus story was told to the children and a Christmas sermon, "Where Is Christ Today," by our pastor.

The auditorium was filled at the evening hour to hear the choir give the cantata, "His Natal Day."

The following Monday evening members of the church joined in a "pounding" for Mr. and Mrs. Stubbins, which was a great surprise to them at this time.

Tuesday evening the Sunday school gave a beautiful pageant in the church. On Christmas Eve the singers of the town sang Christmas carols at the jail, hospital, county home and to several shut-ins.

On Saturday, December 20, Miss Louise Brooks, a teacher in our Sunday school, and Mr. Tilton, Lowdermilk, the son of Mrs. Emma Allen Lowdermilk, were married in Greensboro by the bridegroom's uncle, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk. After a bridal trip to Washington, D. C., they are at home to their many friends in Ashboro.

We were glad to receive Mr. and Mrs. Lowdermilk into our church as members last Sunday morning. Mrs. Lowdermilk coming by later from the First Christian church in Greensboro and Mr. Lowdermilk by profession of faith.

Our pastor delivered a good message on "The Ideal Life," taken from Luke 9:23.

The First Quarterly Conference was announced for Wednesday evening, January 7.

Leaders of the organizations of the church are asked to have reports.

Mr. L. F. Ross and family spent last Sunday with friends in Danville, Va.

Miss Exie Calicott, our church treasurer, who with some friends spent the Christmas holidays in Miami, Florida, returned Sunday afternoon.

A number of our young people are home from college and from various places as teachers, but space will not permit me to name all of them. REPORTER.

Siler City.—Dr. Williams on the third Sunday in December preached a Christmas sermon. The subject was "The Meaning of Christmas." I am sure all present enjoyed this good sermon. We were also delighted to have Dr. Williams' son, J. D. Jr., and his wife in our congregation.

The evening service was called off for a union Christmas cantata, "King of Kings and Lord of All," given at the Baptist church by all the local churches.

Owing to the deep snow and inclement weather we did not have our Christmas tree and entertainment as we had planned, since we could not get together to practice. The smaller classes were given a treat at the close of Sunday school, Sunday morning, and some of the larger classes exchanged gifts. The teachers gave gifts to each pupil in their classes. The Christmas spirit was in every phase of the work in Sunday school.

Now as we close this old year, may each church enter into the new with more zeal and enthusiasm, determined to live a more consecrated life and do more for the upbuilding of God's kingdom here on earth. Then, we feel sure this will be the best year in the history of our church.

A Happy and most Prosperous New Year to all the Herald readers.

MRS. J. A. COOPER, Reporter.

Friendship and Porter to Roberta.—This finds us in Roberta, real busy trying to get things shaped up for the New Year. We spent four pleasant years with the Friendship and Porter people. We have a warm place in our hearts that can never be erased for the way they stood by us. We are thankful that we have been placed among more good people, and that they are so thoughtful of us. You know how cold it was on the night of the 20th, too rough for any one to be out, but to our surprise our people gave us a real pounding. They have been giving us good things to eat all along, they have been thoughtful of our cow too. For all they have done we try to be thankful. We haven't the words to tell the people how much we appreciate all they have done. So we just take them to our Heavenly Father in prayer, we know He understands when we ask His richest blessings upon each one, and to help us to prove ourselves worthy of serving this people. We sure have a live Sunday school, and that helps to make a live church. The pageant, and also the little folks' exercise for Christmas, was real nice. It had been so cold and snowy all along they could hardly get to the church to practice, but they all did their parts fine. I think Mrs. Penninger, Miss Gertrude Furr and Miss Maie Blackwelder, all deserve much credit for the effort they put forth in training them and all that took part. I was impressed to see the grown girls and boys take so much interest in the exercises. There are many more nice things I would like to say, but will take up so much space. Trust this will be a wonderful year with all of us, that much good may be done for the upbuilding of the Kingdom here on earth. C. H. HILL, Pastor.

West Forsyth.—The writer and family appreciate very much the kind remembrances with Christmas greeting cards and letters and also the many gifts received during the also the many gifts received during the Christmas season. We appreciate the greeting and gifts from members of our present charge and from members of former charges.

Christmas programs were rendered at four of the churches on the charge. Pleasant Hill had theirs on Sunday night preceding Christmas. Union Hill rendered their program on Tuesday night before Christmas. Tabernacle and Harmony Grove had their programs on Friday night. We attended the nearest one, Tabernacle's program. Owing to the extremely cold weather and bad roads we did not attend the Union Hill service.

Our preaching services for the past two Sundays have been attended by the usual size congregations. We were at Pleasant Hill the third Sunday. After the service we were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Long, where we enjoyed a good dinner and a short visit. Their daughter, Miss Ruth Long, is secretary of the Sunday school at Pleasant Hill and also reporter for the Herald. Last Sunday we were at Harmony Grove for the regular appointment there. The pastor and family declined invitations to dinner and hurried to the Tabernacle church community to visit in the homes where there is sickness. We regret to report the illness of Mrs. C. R. Watts and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Speas, but are glad that each of them is improving. "Jimmy" Whitman, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Whitman, of Pleasant Hill church, has been ill with chickenpox but is much better.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be with Baltimore church at 11 a. m. and Stony Knoll church at 2:30 p. m. We will observe the Lord's Supper at each service. We expect to begin our campaign for subscriptions to the Herald with the services next Sunday.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Burlington, First Church.—The program for this conference year in this church has begun with great zeal and real enthusiasm. The attendance is splendid; the people are optimistic, hopeful and interested; and the year promises to be a good one in Kingdom service. It is the hope of the pastor that this zeal and enthusiasm will not wane, but will increase so that the church may become even a greater power for God and righteousness.

The first Quarterly Conference was well attended and that group unanimously adopted the following goals for this year: (1) The Methodist Protestant Herald, or the Methodist Protestant Recorder, or both in each home in the membership. (2) All financial obligations paid in full quarterly. (3) Daily Bible reading and praying in each home. (4) As many attending Sunday school as there are members in the local church. (5) Faithfully supporting High Point College and the Children's Home. (6) Each member feeling his or her responsibility in the work and meeting the responsibility well and faithfully. (7) Vacation Church school next summer. (8) Each member constantly growing in the grace and in the knowledge of Christ Jesus. (9) A conscientious effort to put the church on the honor roll of the 100 per cent churches. (10) An honest effort on the part of each member to win some one for Christ. These goals are not impossible, for what ought to be done can be done and Jesus said, "According to your faith be it unto you."

The Christmas season was a busy one, yet happiness prevailed and great rejoicing filled our hearts as we again celebrated Christ's birthday. During the morning worship the pastor used as a sermon theme, "Our Gifts to the King." Special Christmas music by the choir contributed much to the worship. During the evening hour a program of recitations and song was given by the boys and girls and a pageant was given by the young people. The entire program was helpful and inspiring. A special offering was taken for the Annual Conference budget.

The pastor and his wife are very grateful to the people for their kindness and thoughtfulness. The people paid our moving expenses. The Philathea class gave my wife fifteen dollars for a Christmas present and the Baraca class (and some who were not members of the class) gave me a suit of clothes. We have also received hosiery. There are other things, but these are a few of the outstanding things these good people are doing for us. We appreciate each kindness.

We still remember the good people of the Asheville church and are still interested in the work there. We are just praying that God will bless them and meet all of their needs through the riches of Christ Jesus. We are also grateful to them for their kindness to us during our stay there.

May the New Year bring abundant blessings to each one of our former parishioners; to each member of the church we are now serving; and to all people everywhere.

FRED W. PASCHALL.

Fairfield, Guilford Circuit.—The attendance at Sunday school has fallen off somewhat since this snow has been on the ground and the thermometer has refused to go hardly above freezing. Mr. Peeler was unable to fill his last appointment at our church due to minor ailments such as flu and cold. However, he sent Mr. Grant, a student from High Point college, as a substitute, and he did a good job of it. He spoke from the subject: "The Climax of the Golden Thread." He traced this thread from the beginning of the human race down to the present time, and pointed out that the birth of the Savior was the climax of this thread.

Due to the adverse weather conditions, the Christmas program was discontinued; but Mr. and Mrs. Peeler met with the school at the church Wednesday afternoon and made a short Christmas talk. After Mr. Peeler's discourse the whole Sunday school was treated; following this feast, other presents were presented, among which were several Bibles given to the students in the lower classes. These Bibles were presented by Mrs. Peeler who is president of the Woman's Auxiliary, in behalf of this organization who bought the books. The smaller classes were given presents, which were bought with the money that F. B. Homer gave the school. Following the presentation of gifts. Mr. Peeler was told to take hold of a rope and follow it into a nearby Sunday school room and that there was a wild animal tied to it. The pastor with Daniel-like courage took hold the rope and walked into the room. Lo! out he came with the animal under perfect control and not a scratch was to be seen. He must have had some experience in handling such animals, for if he had not gotten hold of his hind legs Mr. Rabbitt would have used his skill of his toe nails on his hands and arms. He was told that the bedding went with the animal. Yes, the Rev. got pounded and pretty near scratched.

A rather small crowd was present last Sunday for the election of new teachers for the ensuing year. The same teachers were re-elected with the exception of a few classes. Mrs. Homer Weant succeeded Mrs. Joe Strader Sr., as teacher in one of the primary classes.

Lexington, State Street.—The Christmas season was celebrated in an especial and pleasing way on the night of December 24.

A short devotional service was led by the pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, appropriate songs and readings were rendered, after which a period of gayety and quiet joy was held in the basement of the church. There was a beautiful tree, elaborately decorated and lighted with many gifts and a bountiful treat. Santa Claus came at the proper moment and after a short address to the children concerning their behavior in the past and their faithfulness to promises for the future. He distributed the gifts with some very willing help from the audience.

Mr. Hendry delivered two splendid and challenging addresses Sunday. The morning address was especially impressive and many expressed themselves by being deeply touched. A solo beautifully rendered by Mrs. Driver, was a pleasing feature of the worship.

We all deeply regret the removal from our midst of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Blanton and their attractive young son, Francis, who have lately gone to High Point to live. Mr. Blanton is in the insurance business and his transfer to High Point is in line of promotion and while we regret very much to lose them we are glad of their prosperity. Both Mr. and Mrs. Blanton are faithful church workers and will be a valuable addition to any church.

All branches of the Woman's auxiliary will meet at the church Wednesday night.

Best wishes for the new year to all the readers of the Herald and to every one.

South Lexington Charge.—The coming of holidays finds the work on the South Lexington charge in good condition. The good interest in the Sunday schools at both churches continues, and the prospect for success this year is still bright.

Good Christmas programs were rendered at both South Lexington and Mount Carmel. At the conclusion of the program at South Lexington, Mr. C. L. Hedrick on behalf of the Sunday school presented the writer a nice sum of money. For this and for a nice present from Mr. A. C. Koontz, as well as for fresh meat from Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Everidge, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Rowe and Mr. and Mrs. Koonts, we are very grateful. I wish also to thank every one who has been giving donations from time to time.

Sunday, December 28, the writer had the honor to be an invited guest at a dinner given by the relatives of Mr. David Brooks, at his home on Main street. A most pleasant occasion to all who were present.

The contract for our new church building at Mt. Carmel has been let to Sink and Williams; and we are hoping to have the new building completed at an early date.

C. G. ISLEY, Pastor.

English Street Church.—Tuesday night, December 23, we had our Christmas entertainment. The children's program consisted of recitations, dialogues, and Christmas songs. The young people furnished the carols, some old, some new. Miss Ruth Bonkemeyer rendered a solo, "Christmas Bells."

The Christian Endeavor society aided Santa Claus and made it possible for him to visit the home of a member of the church. The society will have a business meeting and a watch party at the home of Misses Tressie, Faye, and Iris Caudle on Allred street, Wednesday night.

Much to our regret, our superintendent, Mr. J. A. Robbins, has moved to his farm.

A wedding of interest occurred at Greensboro, Saturday, December 20, when Miss Dallas Lofin of this church became the bride of Mr. Athel Payne. Mrs. Payne has been a teacher in our Sunday school for some time.

Mr. P. M. Caudle is confined at his home as a result of an automobile accident which occurred on Saturday, December 27, in which he sustained a broken shoulder.

REPORTER.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—Our Christmas exercise was held December 23, the Sunday school gave out 340 treats. The young girls and boys had charge of the music. And we owe many thanks to Mrs. Beulah Moore for her faithful work in training the children so well.

Our pastor, Mr. Garner, has moved and is settled down at the parsonage now.

We are very much pleased with progress in our Sunday school and church work although we have been hindered to some extent because of the bad weather.

The Royal Blue class made up money and bought 30 yards of window curtain goods, and some of the ladies of the class made the curtains. They were put up in the living room and the pastor's study room at the parsonage; it was a surprise for the pastor.

The class of young girls met at the Welfare building and made candy to sell for Christmas to make money for their class.

Communion services were held at the 11 o'clock service the first Sunday in December. At the night services our pastor took in three new members. We were glad to have those three ladies join our church; they had been members of our Sunday school for a long time.

There are other things I might say, but the editor has asked reporters to condense our reports so there will be room for all, and we would abide by his request.

Yours in Christ,

MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

(Thank you, Mrs. Wade—Editor.)

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth.—Rev. C. B. Way delivered a very worthy and thought-inspiring sermon Sunday morning, December 21. During this service a duet was rendered by Misses Lena and Juanita Hunter. After the service, the pastor and family enjoyed a dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Long. On this evening at 7:30 a cantata was presented, entitled "Gwen Allen's Christmas." The church was crowded for this occasion.

The next appointment will be the third Sunday morning in January. At this service the ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed.

The Woman's auxiliary met with Mrs. J. F. Hunter on Tuesday night, December 16.

The S. S. attendance has been very good for the past month, considering the weather and roads. We are hoping for a large attendance next Sunday, that we may re-organize for the coming year.

RUTH L., Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.—I hope every person in our Herald field had a very Merry Christmas indeed, including our Editor.

The Christmas exercise was held at our church on the 21st. The children took an active part and we were very proud of them. The program was directed by Mrs. Roy Hilton and the writer.

Our C. E. will meet on next Sunday with Miss Irene Reid as leader. We are doing good work in our C. E. We decided in our last meeting that we would send our collection from C. E. and also S. S. to India in the first Sunday out of every quarter for the benefit of our missionaries.

Last Sunday was preaching day. Brother Powell's text was "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift." The Bible is different from any other book because it is the Father's gift to man, and too when we read it we become more like it. The sermon was very interesting throughout.

We had a good number in S. S. the past year that didn't miss a single Sunday. We actually have a lady in Sunday school in her sixtieth year that never missed but one Sunday. This lady's name is Mrs. C. A. Green. Whenever Mrs. Green is not there be commencing inquiring. We hope she can reach the goal the coming year and not miss a single Sunday. Let's try to go every Sunday. We hope the readers and also the editor will have a very Happy New Year.

RUTH PAYNE, Reporter.

Macedonia.—It is useless to say that we were glad to have our pastor returned to us for another year; the very fact that he is serving his eighth year with us is proof of that. Our pastor, Brother J. M. Morgan, preached his first sermon for us the second Sunday in December, the beginning of his eighth conference year with us. We enjoyed his sermon fine, and will say, "Welcome, Brother Morgan."

MRS. PEARL BARNES.

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—Our new pastor, Brother Russell, filled his appointment the second Sunday in December. The morning sermon subject was the "Bible" the importance of reading and studying it; the evening service, he told how Nehemiah rebuilt the Temple, the people had a mind to work, they all worked, and they worked together. He compared it to old Rehoboth, which could be brought up again if the people had a mind to work, if all worked, and worked together.

It was a splendid sermon, and I do truly hope every one was benefitted.

Wishing all a Happy New Year.

REPORTER.

First Church, High Point.—The members of the Baraca class performed a most gracious act by presenting their teacher, Pastor R. L. Farmer, with a General Electric radio as a Christmas gift, and the reporter was made to rejoice by a similar gift, a Silvertone, from her children. It is hard to tell which is the happier, and their hearts are just overflowing with gratitude and love.

A delightful Christmas entertainment sponsored by the church school was given on last Tuesday evening. The committee, of which Lester B. Tague was chairman, presented a very enjoyable program. The White Gifts for the King were given to the Welfare Board of the city, and the cash offering was donated to the Children's Home.

At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday morning Miss Anne Robbins sang a delightful solo, her voice showing marked improvement after studying at Cincinnati Conservatory. Her many friends were much pleased to hear her again. The minister delivered an able and timely discourse from the text, "This is the day which the Lord hath made: I will be glad and rejoice in it." He said in part, "God never made anything that we can mend or improve; you and I cannot improve the morning. He has made every day, be it fair or foul, happy or miserable. Every lover delights to handle things that were made by the loved one. If we are lovers of God, we will love the day He has made. He makes an infinite variety of things, no two persons, no two blades of grass, no two flowers, no two days are alike. He seems to repent himself. No day is vain because it came from his hand. We ought to sleep well, for like David we can say: 'I will lay me down in peace and sleep, for thou, Lord, wakest me to dwell in safety.' Then when we are beset by many sorrows, temptations, doubts, and cruel suffering, what a supreme comfort is the little verse:

"Every day is a fresh beginning;

Every morn is the world made new;

You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here's a beautiful hope for you.

A hope for me and a hope for you."

On the last evening of the Old Year, Wednesday, December 31, at noon Watch Night service will be held in the church. From 8:30 to 9:30 o'clock the Young People's C. E. society will be in charge of the services, Miss Nellie Martin being leader for the topic, "Things the Past Year Has Taught Us." From 9:30 to 10:30 there will be a Musical Hour, and several numbers will be presented by local talent. From 10:30 to 11:15 the Woman's auxiliary will be in charge of a Social Hour, when light refreshments will be served, and from 11:15 to 12:05 o'clock a Worship Hour will be observed. Any member of the congregation or friends will be welcome to come when he may, stay as long as he can, and leave when he must. This service is new for our church, and many of our members are anticipating much joy from this period, which is to be different from the ordinary.

We are sorry to note the illness of Mr. H. A. Moffitt, who is detained at home by a severe cold.

We are much pleased to know that Dr.

S. W. Taylor, who suffered an attack of illness during the holidays, is improved and went to Charlotte yesterday, returning home today.

Among the college students who spent the Christmas holidays with home folks, are noted the following: Miss Anne Robbins, who is studying voice at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music; Miss Dorothy Rankin, who is a sophomore at Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md.; William Pritchard, who is a student at State College, Raleigh, and Robert Davis, who attended the State university at Chapel Hill.

Mrs. J. A. Cox of Calvary church is an artistic genius with flowers. In the summer season she grows the most beautiful varieties. In the winter season she can make artificial flowers of rare beauty. Recently she sent to the church a pleasing creation of hers: a pot of flowers, the pot made of pine leaves bound together with rubber bands at top and bottom, and the petals of the flowers made of the leaves of pine cones painted in several colors, with variegated vine intermingled. The pastor remarked expressing his admiration that we will have fresh flowers all winter.

From self-seeking make me free,
Build my life alone in Thee.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Coley

Mrs. Leanna Causey Coley, wife of the late Michael Coley, passed from this life Sunday, November 16, having reached the ripe age of 77 years. She had been quite feeble for several months. Mrs. Coley was a member of Tabernacle church from young girlhood. It was her desire to live the sincere Christian life. We believe she was saved by the grace of God and has now entered into that fuller life.

Three daughters and one son survive: Mrs. Martin Smith, Mrs. Will Clapp, Miss Mary Coley and Carl Coley.

The funeral and burial were at Tabernacle church on November 17, 1930. Rev. J. M. Millard assisted the pastor. H. L. ISLEY.

Holmes

Only a few days ago death called to his eternal reward Bro. Joseph Holmes. Bro. Holmes was a brother of our Rev. G. W. Holmes. The latter part of his life he spent with his brother. For several years he had been failing in health. He was a preacher in the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and traveled for a while in the western part of the United States. It has been the privilege of the writer to know him for some 20 years. While he was a member of the other church when he was able he regularly attended our church. He was a fine spirited man and an inspiration to all who knew him. While here he faithfully witnessed for Christ and he has gone to reap the reward of the faithful. His remains were laid to rest in Mount Hermon cemetery. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Mr. Roland, assisted by the writer. J. A. BURGESS.

Bowman

During the last session of our Annual Conference, Mrs. Emily Bowman was released from her sufferings and went to be with God and her friends who had gone before. For a number of years she was unable to walk a step, but she was one of the most patient sufferers the writer has ever known. Her faith was an inspiration. Since the death of her husband some years ago Mrs. Bowman had lived with her nieces and nephews, spending about three months at each place. She was lonely at times and remarked to the writer and others that she could not understand why the Lord did not take her home. One who knew her well said: "It was the end of a perfect day." She had reached the age of 67 years.

She joined Tabernacle church many years ago and remained a consistent member until death. The pastor, being away at Conference, Rev. H. F. Starr, of the M. E. church, was called on to conduct the funeral at Tabernacle church, on November 6. Her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

In Memoriam

Ri hard Lee Ogburn was born December 29, 1904, and departed this life October 28, 1930. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Ogburn of Summerville. His death was tragic and accidental, coming instantaneously while employed in his father's roller mill. Temperamentally, he was warm hearted and friendly, yet reserved and thoughtful, showing a discretion and purpose in life, usually associated with riper years and more mature character. To his natural talents were added that of a true education, being a graduate of Oak Ridge Institute and an alumnus of Western Maryland college of the class of 1924. Since early childhood he had been a member of Flat Rock Methodist Protestant church. In his services to the church he was untiring, and in his consecration to Christ wholehearted. In his passing Flat Rock church loses one of its promising members.

On September 2, 1928, he was married to Miss Dorothy Holland, of Marion, Maryland, settling in their new home in the Flat Rock community the following year.

The funeral services were held in Flat Rock church by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg, assisted by Rev. J. R. Hutton, of Greensboro, and Dr. S. W. Taylor of High Point at 3 p. m., October 30. A great host of sorrowing friends were present at the service, giving a silent token of the high esteem in which the young man was held by all who knew him. He was laid to rest in the cemetery lot under a carpet of flowers.

A large number of ministers were present who are friends of long standing in the Ogburn family. Namely: Rev. W. F. Kennett, Greensboro; Dr. J. D. Williams, Liberty; Rev. T. F. McCulloch, Greensboro; Dr. R. M. Andrews, High Point; Rev. H. L. Powell, Summerville; Dr. George R. Brown, Reidsville.

The deceased is survived by his father and mother, a sister, Mrs. R. R. Blackburn, of High Point, and his wife.

To those that are left behind we extend our deepest sympathy, trusting in God for comforting grace to meet all the trials of life.

J. P. PEGG, Pastor,
M. W. THOMAS.

Page

John D. Page was born August 16, 1875. Departed this life November 29, 1930. He professed faith in Christ about fifteen years ago and joined Mt. Moriah Methodist Protestant church. He leaves a mother, two brothers, two sisters, a large circle of friends and relatives. The funeral was held at Mt. Moriah church November 29, 2 p. m. by the writer, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. J. D. Morris, of Fallston.

The bereaved have our sympathy.

C. E. RIDGE.

Lanier

On November 26 Mr. James R. Lanier was blasting stumps out of his field with dynamite when one unexpectedly went off and so injured him that he died early the following day in the High Point hospital. He was 49 years, 5 months and 8 days of age at the time of his death.

He professed faith in Christ in early life and joined Pine Hill Methodist Protestant church, where he remained a faithful member until death. Mr. Lanier was a good man to stay with his parents and care for them. He was good and kind to all with whom he came in contact. He was loved by all who knew him.

Mr. Lanier and his brother had been in business at Handy for about 16 years. Their business was a success from the standpoint of the service rendered the community as well as the gain to themselves. The deceased had also been postmaster at Handy for the past eight years. He will be greatly missed in his place of business as well as in the home, and church.

He leaves to mourn their loss, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Leuch Lanier, one brother, B. E. Lanier, and one sister, Mrs. Estella Harrison, all of Handy, and a host of relatives and friends.

The funeral service was held at Chapel Hill Methodist Protestant church by the pastor and two former pastors, Rev. C. E. Ridge and Rev. Robert Short. There was an over-flowing congregation present to show their respect and love. The remains were placed in the Chapel Hill cemetery.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Whitaker

John Franklin Whitaker departed this life October 26, 1930, aged 72 years, seven months, and eight days. He was united in marriage to Nancy M. Denny, November 23, 1882, to this union were born seven children of whom five are still living, as follows: J. L. Whitaker, of Pinnacle; Mrs. F. W. Lawson, of Mt. Airy; Mrs. L. B. Moser, of Pinnacle; Mrs. F. L. Ashburn, of Pinnacle; and Mrs. S. H. Dozier, of Winston-Salem. The mother and two children had already passed on.

He professed faith in Christ as his personal Saviour early in life and united with Pilot M. P. church where he remained a consistent member until transferred to the Church Triumphant.

He was a loving and affectionate husband, a kind and sacrificing father, a loyal, liberal and generous church member, and his going will leave a vacancy in the church which will be felt for many years. His interest in his church never failed, that unshaken faith in Christ never weakened, but grew stronger as advanced age came on. No one knows as well as the church just what his life has meant. He never grew weary in putting forth every effort in trying to win souls for Christ, but was willing to sacrifice his time, talent, and worldly goods that he might be the means of leading anyone in the right direction, and we trust that his good influence will live on and on for generations to come. I, for one, as his

Wright

We the members of Union Grove Sabbath school, as we gathered last Sunday, November 23, for Sabbath school our hearts were pained and made to feel sad when we learned that one of our number, a member of our Sabbath school had fallen asleep. The good Lord in His great wisdom saw fit to call from time into Eternity Mrs. Henry Wright. Her life passed out and on into the hands of Him who gave it. But our hearts were cheered by believing and trusting that our loss was heaven's gain. Surely there was something between her and her Saviour that prompted her to bring her children to Sabbath school. She proved by word and deed that she loved the Lord and His cause.

Death is a blessing to those who die trusting the Lord. On Monday, November 24, she was laid to rest at Union Grove church beneath a mound of flowers by her pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams.

We would point the sorrowing ones to the Lord, who is able to heal the broken heart and who is able to save.

Resolutions of Love and Respect

We, the members of the Eden Auxiliary, desire to record the passing of one of our most beloved members, Mrs. R. C. Rives.

She was a faithful member of Eden Methodist Protestant church, a zealous and untiring worker in our Auxiliary and a devoted daughter and wife, and whereas the church shall miss her sunny, cheerful life, and our Woman's Auxiliary shall keenly feel the loss of one of its most faithful, loyal and consecrated members, who never shirked a duty to the organization but always rendered her services with a smile;

And whereas, the home is made sad in the loss of this wife and mother, be it resolved:

First, that we bow in humble submission to the will of God and say, not our will but thine be done.

Second, that we shall ever remember the noble service rendered and the sweet influence that radiated from the life of this servant of God.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to the Methodist Protestant Herald, The Missionary Record, and a copy recorded in the minutes of the Woman's Auxiliary.

MRS. R. G. WILLEY,
MRS. L. A. WILLIAMS.
MRS. J. R. DICKENS.

Rives

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Protestant church of Enfield desires to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. Ralph C. Rives, who during her residence in Enfield was a faithful, devoted member of the society, and for several years its efficient and talented president. Whether as leader of the organization, presiding over its meetings, or as individual member, serving on committees and doing varied work, Mrs. Rives proved herself capable, energetic, sweet-spirited, and dependable. Her interest in, and devotion to, the various activities of the church was sincere and unflinching, and her genial presence was a help in any meeting or undertaking of the society.

Her passing has left a vacancy in the ranks of the society which cannot be filled, and has caused deep sorrow to the individual members of the society.

Therefore, be it resolved:

First, that while her sweet spirit and noble example will be missed in our organization, we believe that our loss is her eternal gain;

Second, that as members of this society we extend to her family and loved ones our most sincere sympathy, and the assurance that their sorrow is our sorrow also;

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, to the Enfield Progress, and to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

MRS. CECIL MATTHEWS,
MARY B. COLLINS,
MRS. SAM PIERSON,
MRS. EGBERT BARNHILL.

Causey

We, the members of the Missionary Society of Mt. Pleasant Methodist Protestant church, Guilford County, N. C., record with sorrow the death of one of our most highly esteemed members, Mrs. Rebecca B. Causey.

Therefore, Be it Resolved:

1. That, while we have sustained a great loss, she has received a crown of life.

2. That her splendid Christian life is a worthy example challenging us to measure up to it.

3. That to have known and labored with her is a privilege we shall cherish always, and hope so to live that one day we, too, may receive that welcome from our Heavenly Father: "Well done thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy lord."

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald, the Missionary Record, the family, and that a copy be written into the minutes of our society.

Lanning

Emma Mae Lanning was born May 2, 1916, and died, as the result of serious burns which were followed by pneumonia, on November 29, 1930, having reached the age of 14 years, 6 months and 27 days. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Lanning. Her mother and one brother, James, who three months ago was drowned, preceded her in death. Surviving her are her father and the following brothers and sisters: John, Grady, Odell, Leland, Jennie, Lizzie and Lela, besides a host of relatives and friends.

Two years ago Emma Mae professed faith in Christ and united with the South Lexington Methodist Protestant church, of which she remained a faithful member till the time of her death.

The funeral services were conducted at South Lexington church by the writer, and burial was at Reed's Cemetery.

We extend our sympathy to sorrowing relatives.

"Forgetting the Angels"

(Theme of Sermon by REV. C. W. BATES)

"Forgetting the angels!" Losing their light,
Ignoring their message, sinking in night;
Becoming provincial, narrow and mean,
Reducing horizon, growing soul-lean.

"Forgetting the angels" sent from above,
Each bringing to men a message of love;
Tight closing our ears to truth they declare,
And ever being caught in evil's dread snare.

"Forgetting the angels," messengers true,
Apostles of Heaven coming when due,
With tidings of joy and words of bright hope,
To lengthen our vision and broaden life's scope.

"Forgetting the angels," turning away
From Heaven's grand view to earth's little day,
Our eyes lose their power, our vision its range;
We cling to the earth and think it not strange.

Hope for the Healthless

People who are ill and can recover we believe greatly outnumber those who are irremediably sick. It is natural to become ill under certain conditions but it is not normal to remain ill. There are in our human constitutions forces that make for recovery. The power for us is in most cases greater than the power against us. Our bodies are battlefields where contend the battalions of disease and the battalions of health. We have it in our power to take sides with our friends or our enemies. In most cases we can determine the issue. We can through our own action grow better or grow worse. Our physical ailments in most cases are due to our manner of living. By changing our manner of living we can change our state of health. With nature on our side, and her mighty forces working constantly for our recuperation, we can in most cases find our way back to health if we are in earnest about it. The conditions of health are now pretty well understood by students of the subject. We can find out by diligent search just what we must do to be saved from ill health in the majority of cases. Your doctor may help you by starting you on the right path, but you must be willing to do much more than swallow drug store doses. You must be willing to deny yourself and take up your cross daily. Getting health is like getting religion: you must put your whole soul into the effort. You must turn from intemperance to the simple life. You must appreciate the value of health and be willing to pay the price. You may find encouragement in the examples of others who have risen from the slough of wretched health to the heights of exuberant health.

There is the inspiring example of Louis Cornaro, an Italian. He was born to wealth and high social position, but in youth wasted his health by intemperate living. When he was about forty years old he was told by his physicians that they could do no more for him. They gave him up to die. He was not willing to die and made up his mind to try the virtues of a simple, wholesome life. In the course of a year of temperate living his health was restored. He did not go back to his old way of living, but continued to practice moderation. He paid especial attention to food and drink. He gave himself to a life of usefulness to humanity. He studied and wrote on the conditions of health. He wrote a book on The Moderate Life, beginning it when he was 83 years old and finishing it when he was 95. He taught that as people grow older they should eat less. He also taught that in sickness what the body wants most is rest—not food. When he was 78 years old his physicians and friends persuaded him to leave off the temperate life and take more food. At the end of 12 days he had a severe fever. He at once resumed his simple habits and the illness passed away. At the age of 83 he had good sight and hearing. At the age of 95 he was still strong and healthy and had a strong voice.

He concludes a book written at the age of 95 with this paragraph: "In conclusion, I wish to say that since old age is—as, in truth, it is—filled and overflowing with so many graces and blessings, and since I am one of the number who enjoy them, I cannot fail—not wishing to be wanting in charity—to give testimony to the fact, and to fully certify to all men that my enjoyment is much greater than I can now express in writing. I declare that I have no other motive for writing but my hope that the knowledge of so great a blessing as my old age has proved to be, will induce every human being to determine to adopt this praiseworthy, orderly and temperate life, in favor of which I ceaselessly keep repeating, Live, live, that you may become better servants of God!"

After writing this he lived seven years, dying at the age of 102. If he had not been intemperate in youth, he might have lived years longer.

His experience gives ground for hope to many living under the lash of daily bodily afflictions.

—The year 1930 will long be memorable. In it God has taught men that they are not nearly so independent as they thought they were.

—The new year, 1931, will doubtless have its lessons. God still has much to teach the world. The sooner we learn God's lessons, the better for us.

DENOMINATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLES' DAY*Sunday, January 25, 1931

We are glad to announce that materials for the observance of the Third Annual Denominational Young Peoples' Day are ready. In the two preceding days, 1929 and 1930, we used the themes "Youth in Christian Service" and "Youth Sharing." In our desire to continue to emphasize the importance of the Young People of the denomination being challenged to have a large part in the Kingdom, we are using "Youth Adventuring in the Christian Quest" as a theme for January 25.

No attempt has been made to prepare an elaborate program which would involve much preparation, due to the fact that we have just passed through the Christmas Season, in which a large number of the churches have had programs which have required much time and preparation on the part of the church leaders. The materials have been prepared with the idea of having them fit into a natural situation in both the large and small churches and, at the same time, have forceful suggestions for challenging both the adults and young people to work with Christ in bringing about the Christian World.

Materials Available—By the time you read this over 3,000 letters containing samples of the programs will be sent to pastors, Sunday School superintendents, and Christian Endeavor leaders that we have on our mailing list. A reply card is enclosed with the materials for your convenience in ordering your necessary supplies. The materials are furnished free. Just fill in the card and mail it to us. Our department and Uncle Sam's post office department will do the rest!

Two leaflets have been carefully prepared. A Preparation Leaflet containing detailed suggestions and materials for those preparing and participating in the program, and a Four-Page Folder containing an outline for the morning service on the theme "The Opportunity and Responsibility of Adults in the Program of Religious Education," and an outline for the evening service for the Young People on the theme "Youth Adventuring in the Christian Quest." We will appreciate very much your notifying us if you fail to receive copies of these materials.

Plan to observe this program Sunday, January 25 or on some other convenient date. Where a pastor has more than one church, plan to observe it in each church until the round is made. Should it be impossible to observe this program in both the morning and evening services, please plan to observe at least one service in which you take an offering for "New Century Service."

New Century Service, the General Conference Budget—In addition to the emphasis given to "The Opportunity and Responsibility of Adults in the Program of Religious Education" and "Youth Adventuring in the Christian Quest," it is our hope that every local church will take a good offering on this day for New Century Service—General Conference Budget. It is through the General Conference Budget that the Missionary, Educational, and Benevolent work of the church is promoted. The offering taken on this day in your church will "count on the Budget of the local church!"

May God richly bless and direct us as we prepare to observe this special day. May we work and pray to the extent that youth and adults alike will be prompted to answer the challenge that Christ through His church gives. May we answer the challenge with both our talents and material resources.

Upon request, any further information regarding this special day may be had from the Department of Religious Education, Seminary Building, Westminster, Maryland.

F. L. GIBBS, Associate Secretary.

The Golden Jubilee of Christian Endeavor

Following the observance of the Denominational Day (see article above "Denominational Young Peoples' Day"), and continuing throughout the following week, the International Society of Christian Endeavor has prepared suggestions for observing the Golden Jubilee of Christian Endeavor, covering each day. The following are the themes for each day:

Sunday, January 25—Denominational Day.

Monday, January 26—Society Day.

Tuesday, January 27—Long-timers' Day.

Wednesday, January 28; Thursday, January 29—Devotional Days.

Friday, January 30—Fellowship Day.

Saturday, January 31—Junior Day.

Sunday, February 1—Christian Endeavor Day.

Monday, February 2—Golden Jubilee Day—(Birthday of Christian Endeavor).

The detailed programs and materials covering the entire week may be ordered from the International Society of Christian Endeavor, 41 Mount Vernon Street, Boston, Mass. An outline of these suggestions and reference to source materials is found in the Christian Endeavor World of December 18, 1930. It is our hope that every Methodist Protestant church, which has a Christian Endeavor Society, will take advantage of this splendid opportunity to observe the Fiftieth Anniversary of Christian Endeavor.

F. L. GIBBS, Associate Secretary.

THE NECESSITIES OF JESUS

By REV. W. A. LEDFORD

Theoretically speaking, since Jesus is "Lord of the Sabbath," "King of kings and Lord of lords": possessing all power in heaven and on earth, and child of Eternity, one would assume that He had no limitations and necessities. But experience has often proved that theory and supposition were not facts. As one reads the Gospel he finds many statements implying necessity, inevitableness, and unavoidableness, falling from the lips of our Lord. So numerous are these expressions that one feels that the Lord knew nothing except necessities. All His limitations, privations, necessities were self-imposed for mankind.

The first recorded word we have of our Lord contains a "Must," which is indicative of His entire life: "Knew ye not that I must be in my Father's house." John wrote, "He must needs go through Samaria." He called to Zacchaeus, "Make haste and come down, for today I must abide in thy house." Again He urged, "We must work the works of him that sent me." True to the mission of the Good Shepherd He exclaimed, "Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring (lead), and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one flock and one shepherd." The following quotation from Matthew's Gospel seems to climax all our Saviour's necessities: "From that time (just after Peter's great confession) began Jesus to show unto his disciples, that he must go up to Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed and the third day raised up." "Even so must the Son of man be lifted up," both on the Cross and out of the grave.

All the necessities of Jesus led Him into places of usefulness and of sacrificial service for humanity. There is no field of usefulness equal to the Father's house. The test can be put in most any gathering of Christians and show that the large majority of them were saved in the church. All the benevolent organizations that our age is blessed with are children of the church, which still supports and influences them. Jesus went through Samaria not as a matter of physical convenience, but that He might wash a sin stained and blasted life with the waters of eternal life. Jesus went to abide in the home of Zacchaeus, not as a personal convenience, but that He might while in the home bring salvation to a descendant of Abraham. He went to the Cross that He might heal a world bitten by the serpent of sin, and was raised that He might become the Resurrection and the Life for all mankind.

Jesus had His necessities, and the world has its. The commandments came between the rich young ruler and eternal life: Repentance and Conversion come between every man and the Kingdom of God. The only way to get into this physical world in which we live is to be born into it, and the only way to get into the spiritual world and to heaven is to be born into it. Jesus said to the gossipers, "Except ye repent, ye shall likewise perish," and to the Master in Israel, "Ye must be born again." Jesus had a life filled with necessities, and the world fares no better than its Lord.

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No, there's a cross for every one,
And there's a cross for me."

"The consecrated cross I'll bear,
Till death shall set me free;
And then go home my crown to wear,
For there's a crown for me."

LETTER FROM THE MINNIS FAMILY

OUR DEAR NORTH CAROLINA FRIENDS:

Our stay with you was so pleasant that it was by no means easy to pull up stakes and move so far away. But now the moving is over, and we are "over here." Though we seldom have time to become lonely, yet we miss you very much. But because we cannot visit you in person we shall tell you something of what has happened since we left the excellent people of Graham. Leaving the friends in Graham was even harder than we had imagined it would be. We had planned to leave early in the morning of the 2nd of September but it was almost noon before we had pulled ourselves away and said the last farewell. From Graham we drove to Blowing Rock where we spent the first night. The next day we spent seeing the beauties of Western North Carolina. Leaving Asheville we next stopped at Bethel Home. We gave Brother Casto a surprise and in turn were very pleasantly surprised to find Bethel Home far better than we had dreamed. We almost wished that we could live there. We felt prouder than ever that we are Tar Heels. Bidding Brother Casto farewell we turned our faces toward the north and for the next three days drove through a part of Tennessee, West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and at last found ourselves at Bush Docks in New York City. The big box which we had prepared in Graham and sent on to New York in which we were to ship the car, had beaten us there and soon we had it delivered to the docks and the car was soon fixed and ready to be loaded on the steamer for Bombay.

The car left New York on the 8th of September while we were booked to sail on the Leviathan on the 27th. We stayed with Mrs. Minnis' relatives while waiting for the steamer to sail. There were many things to be done and quite a few speeches to be made. When we had again packed the last suitcase and said farewell in Baltimore we had yet quite a lot to be done in New York. There were the visas to be secured, the various agencies to be visited and only one day in which to do it. Then on the 27th of September we went aboard the steamer and before we realized it we were off. The great steamer was like a palace even in the tourist class. The voyage across the Atlantic was pleasant and quickly done. In less than six days from the time we started we were across the Atlantic, 3,131 miles, landed in France, passed through customs, booked all our baggage and were on the train for Paris. We had no time to lose as our boat was due to sail from Southern France the very next day and we had to cross the whole of France. So we only had time to change trains in Paris and proceed to Marseilles where we were to catch the next steamer. We arrived in Marseilles next day with fear lest the boat had gone without us, as our train was about an hour late. Thos. Cook, the traveling agency, with whom we were traveling had sent an interpreter to the station to meet us and needless to say that we felt greatly relieved when he informed us that the steamer would be a day late and that we had lots of time to make all our sailing arrangements. We spent a pleasant day in Marseilles and at 10 o'clock next day we went aboard the steamer, City of Nagpur. There were several missionaries sailing to India on the boat so we had a very pleasant time. There were many families with children for ours to play with so they had a good time from morning till night. The seas were for the most part very calm, at times like glass with not even a ripple.

On Monday, October 20th, we came into Bombay. Thus we finished our voyage with record-making speed. Had we not missed one day waiting at Marseilles we would have made the voyage in twenty-one days. As it was we beat the mails four days. As a whole the voyage was all that one could have desired.

Much of the novelty has worn out as this was our second trip. Yet we have seen much that is new and the children call our attention to everything which seems strange to them. We did not realize that we had changed so much until we were taking our evening meal in the station at Bombay, when a new missionary asked several new questions to the waiter.

We had planned to drive the car from Bombay to Dhulia, but due to the fact that we arrived on a big Hindu holiday, the customs were closed and we had to go out on the train and return later for the car. About 10 o'clock the same day we arrived we took the train and arrived at Dhulia the next morning about 9 o'clock. We were met at the station by some of the working men from the Mission, some Hindu friends, who garlanded us, and Miss Miskimen with a couple from the Swedish Mission. Then we were driven to the Mission compound where the whole community met us with songs, flowers and a royal welcome as only the East can give one was extended to us. Then more Hindu friends garlanded us. In the afternoon there was a meeting in our honor. Again we received flowers and everyone received something to chew or eat I don't know which for I seldom take it and then only keep it in my mouth but a few moments before I throw it away. On the second night there was a play given by the teachers and boys of the Boys' School in our honor. The next night the people at the farm had a little meeting and a supper for us. In appreciation for all which we had received and because we had been privileged to return safely to India we gave a supper to all the people. It would seem to you back home that we could take a couple of sheep and a few pounds of wheat and rice and feed three hundred people. But when I tell you that we had more than three hundred cared to eat with both bread and rice left over and then to know that the whole meal cost less than twenty dollars you wonder what it could have been or it must have been very cheap. Rice swells very much in cooking and the meat had lots of water added with more red pepper than most of us would have dared go near. It was a pleasure to see some of the poor people eat all they desired as times are hard indeed in India.

Some of you have read the papers and are doubtless wondering if we are safe. I am happy to say that we would not know nearly so much about it if we did not read the Times of India, a daily printed in Bombay. It is true that the people are beginning to bestir themselves and are seeking home-rule but we feel no anxiety at all.

Two weeks ago those whom we were to relieve sailed for home. They were tired out and were much in need of a rest. We are very happy that we could come out and allow them to come home.

Now we are back on the job as if we had never been away. We are living in the new bungalow. The old one was removed and the new one built in the same place. It is a very nice home and we are quite comfortable here. We have received the car and find that we have the only closed car in the whole district.

We have gone over the work and find that there is a plenty to keep us busy for the next three years. But the time is fast passing and before we realize it the time will be up and we shall be coming back to visit with you.

We are anxiously awaiting the paper to give us all the news of the last conference. Be assured that we shall follow your every movement with keenest interest.

Assuring you that we shall long remember the many courtesies which you have extended to us and hoping that in some way we may express our appreciation, we are,

Sincerely,

THE MINNIS FAMILY.

THE LORD'S SUPPER, SPREAD UPON A TABLE NOT AN ALTAR

There was a time when Christianity had no altar. This, of course, is to beg the whole question, for there are the devout and scholarly, who believe that the last thing Jesus did before He was crucified was to set up an altar and then in His own death to provide the sacrifice. This may be so, but there are many things to make it unlikely. Jesus was the least ceremonial, the least liturgical person in the world; nothing in the Sermon on the Mount, nothing in the parables, nothing in what He said about worship, demands an altar, implies an altar, or even looks altarward. He was, on that side at least, in the line of the prophets who could never see God through the smoke of sacrifice, but found the smoke of sacrifice, on the contrary, a cloud between them and God.

Worship, Jesus said, is in spirit and truth. The sacrifices, purities and poverties of the Beatitudes. The religion of Jesus, the Jew, was the synagogue religion. He may, or may not, have accepted the ritual side of Judaism, but if He did, His contact was loose, and is hinted at only through occasional visits to Jerusalem at the time of the great feasts. The temple was not for Him the seat of a splendid ritual worship. It was His Father's house, which had unfortunately fallen into the hands of those who were sadly abusing it.

I think if one were to seek a religion anywhere, utterly opposed, in all the spirit of it, to religious formalism, none would more perfectly fulfil those conditions than the religion of the synoptic gospels. That religion is severely ethical but spiritually free. The religion of the Fourth Gospel is essentially mystical, but also spiritually free.

Of course, the Last Supper remains—a strategic exception; for the Christian Sacramentarian that is where it all began. It is too late to agree about the Lord's Supper now; any man's position has already determined the argument, which he advances to maintain it. A non-liturgical Protestant is bound to explain Jesus' institution of the Supper in one way; an Anglo-Catholic or a Roman Catholic is bound to explain it in another way; while deeper still are temperaments and profoundly dissimilar understandings of spiritual reality. There is no region in which our differences of opinion are more natural or more unfortunate. There is no region in which there is less justification for growing bitter over them.

But if an essential consistency is the hall-mark of a great nature; if the life and ministry of Jesus is a seamless robe, woven throughout by the same texture of teaching, coloured by the same spiritual insight and assurance of God, then the entire force of Him outside and inside is against the sacramentarian interpretation of the Last Supper.

The practices of the Apostolic Church support this free interpretation of the one ceremony He left His followers. . . . The Apostolic Church continues a simple tradition of the broken bread and wine, spread upon a table and not an altar, to show forth the Lord's death "till He come."—G. G. Atkins in the Making of the Christian Mind.

—If we would substitute earnest prayers for many of our new year's resolutions, we would reach the end of the year in better condition.

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Pastor's Federation—Western District

The first meeting of this Federation for the new conference year was held in our Charlotte church, Monday, December 29. The following brethren were present: President Hendry, Andrews, Curry, Milloway, Joyner, Henderson, Taylor. Owing to the small number present, the program, as previously arranged, was not followed. However, we had an interesting and helpful meeting. Each pastor spoke briefly and concisely of conditions on his charge, and without an exception, there was hope and encouragement in these reports. It is eminently worthwhile for pastors to get together in these Federation meetings and talk over with each other their respective problems and the problems and programs of the conference, to fellowship with each other, and to catch anew the hope and enthusiasm that comes from such contact, and that is so necessary to the work that each must do. President Hendry will arrange for the next meeting, and make announcements in due time.

Lebanon Church

On the last night of the old year—December 31—the first quarterly conference of this charge was held. It was my privilege to be present, and to share in the business with the fourteen officials who attended. There was a spirit of pleasing earnestness and progressiveness in the meeting. The church has elected a treasurer who will handle all funds except the building fund. The stewards who were present reported that $768 had been pledged toward the budget for this year. It was thought that the pledges secured by the stewards who were not present would bring the amount up to $1,000. The total budget for the year, including pastor's salary and conference allotments, is only $1,460, or $4.90 per member. In 1929 the church raised $13 per member. It is the hope of the congregation not only to pay this budget in full this year, but a large part of the church indebtedness of $1,000, if not all of it. Pastor Madison has entered hopefully and earnestly upon the work, the organizations of the church are functioning well, and all indications point to a good year's work.

Randolph Charge

The first quarterly conference of this charge was held at Bethel church, January 2, at 1 p. m., with fourteen officials present. All churches were represented except Bethany. Salary and budgets were apportioned on practically the same basis as last year. The total budget for the charge does not seem to be large. Everything told, the amount is only $1,620. This is a membership allotment of only $2.00. Randolph charge lies in a fertile farming section, and the churches are made up of good people. They have not, however, discovered their ability to handle the finances of their charge. They could easily make this, it seems to us, an honor roll work. The spirit of the conference was very fine, and there is in evidence a spirit of progress on the charge. Bethel church will build Sunday School rooms in the immediate future. Our understanding is that this has been talked at Shiloh, though nothing definite has been done. This is a hopeful sign; there is always life when churches provide better housing facilities for their work. The conference ordered all budgets apportioned on basis of pastor's salary, and the stewards to be provided with itemized statements. The itemized allotment is to be read, also, from the pulpit of each church. We urge that the stewards of each church get together promptly and apportion this allotment to the individual member. The pastor reported $66.25 paid to date on salary, and $14.68 on A. C. B. We urge that a Woman's Auxiliary be organized on the charge. There is now an Aid Society, and two C. E. Societies, on the work, and a Sunday School at each church. Pastor Suits has been cordially received by the charge, and he is gradually becoming acquainted with the people, and expects a pleasant and prosperous year with them.

Thomasville

I was in the Sunday School of the West Thomasville church in the morning, and found 151 present. This lacked only ten of their full enrollment. The school seemed full of earnestness and enthusiasm. It was my privilege to discuss the lesson with a class of young men. There were nineteen present in this class. At the close of the Sunday School I conformed to their pre-arranged program, and met with them in a business meeting of the congregation. They are under the necessity of refinancing their church debt, which amounts to $2,700. The prospects for doing this seem good. If there are no interruptions in their plans, they will soon have building and loan stock, that will cost them only a small amount annually, and their term of payment will run for ten or twelve years. This will make it possible for them to clear their church of debt, and at the same time meet their other financial obligations. They would like to be an honor roll church. I believe they will have that distinction this year. I was with them in the night service, and preached at that time. The attendance was good, and the attention very pleasing. Brother Maier, of the Community church, worshiped with us in this service. West End church has a rich field for development, being the only church in that section of West Thomasville. The very fact that this church can gather into the Sunday School 151, as on this day, is an indication of its possibilities. In due time it should become a church full of strength and service. Brother Bell is faithful, as the pastor, and has the full confidence of his people.

In the evening it was my privilege to speak in the 5 o'clock vesper service at the Community Church. This was the first of the vesper services for this winter, and the congregation had not gotten adjusted to the change in hour of meeting. The attendance was not large, but that is not always essential to a helpful service. We enjoyed worshipping with them. Brother and Sister Maier are maintaining their high order of work here, and are pleased with the way the new year is starting. From the standpoint of finances it is better than usual, strange to say. All but $100 of the budget of the church was pledged already, and the pastor felt sure that the business meeting to be held Tuesday night would find that this hundred had been pledged, also. That is certainly a good beginning, and especially so when money is so tight. But God can make grace abound in times of money stringency, that the needs of his church may be supplied. It is well for us to remember that, and to press our work in that confidence. We were glad to hear the pastor announce union prayer services for the week, in keeping with the world-wide week of prayer. I enjoyed the day in Thomasville, and my visit to the other charges included in this report, as well. I am grateful, too, for kindnesses shown me by pastors and people while working on these fields.

A Suggestion

Take your pledges for church budgets in Sunday School classes. You will have, perhaps, more of the membership of the church together there in groups than at any other time or place, and for that reason it would seem a convenient time for doing this.

This suggestion comes from Rev. H. W. Maier. He has tried it at the Community Church, and finds that it works well there. I am simply passing it on for whatever it may be worth to other churches. He says that there were persons in these classes who were not members of any church, but who became subscribers to the budget. That, I think, may happen in many cases where this plan is used.

OUR DUTY IN THE MATTER

We need not and do not fear the truth about the Bible. We welcome all sincere and honest study of its origin, purpose and meaning. But is it too much to ask and hope that more of those who have been appointed by the Church to teach its history and its doctrines should devote their time and energies to the defense of its great and fundamental, unique and outstanding facts and implications, rather than to be picking of flaws in the garments of the prophets and to the punching of holes in the robes of Christ's perfection? It may not be ours to remove all the difficulties, to harmonize all the apparent inconsistencies, to explain all the mysteries, and to solve all the problems of the Old Testament; but we can show at least that we believe that Christ and the Apostles are more likely to be right than we, that the age-old judgment of the Church with respect to the Bible may after all be right, and that our business is to defend with all lawful means the citadel of faith rather than to join the hosts of the infidel in the assaults upon its walls.—Selected.

"THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS"

By IDA S. AMBROSE

One thousand years ago marks the epoch in history when the first Christmas spirit occurred. Down through the ages as times and customs alter only for a period thus to associate back to the same methods in life, humanity boasts of one apparition that has and evermore will haunt the civilized world. This is the Spirit of Christmas.

One of the most tragic things of life is the fact that vast throngs of people see annually the Spirit of Christmas, but on behalf of this their sensational feeling is lodged in a conservative manner from the outside world.

Christmas is the best time of the year to teach others appreciation. However, personal achievement is necessary to a certain extent, but not the expenditure for tremendous gifts. Home is the cradle of appreciation and through and by our Christian organizations appreciation can be moulded in every individual's heart.

Are you planning to give wisely or unwisely at Christmas time? Thousands of dollars are invested carelessly and wasted each year because the majority of people buy carelessly: thus the outcome is one-half of the Christmas—gifts are of a minor use to mankind.

We must think soberly and consider deeply about the first and greatest gift we're planning to bestow on our intimate friends.

One of the best gifts to donate to humanity is the character building gifts, which are frequently neglected today. Can we buy the Spirit of Christmas, yes, it can be bought at the purchase of a reasonable price: even the waifs of the streets may buy it easily. Somewhere, someone near you is in need of this rare gift; whether they be rambling-rangers, or hermit souls; all are God's children and must have a representative for this great force. Therefore humanity will better appreciate their own blessings.

To make one nook of God's garden wherein we live we must be more worthy of God, to help enlighten other's burdens; to make some one more blessed, and less accursed. By doing this we're enjoying and laying up a treasure and living a life of sacrifice. The first is moral, the second Divine. Corresponding with this God gave to humanity the greatest and priceless gift of life and love, therefore this is the foundation of a real Christmas Spirit.

—We are in receipt of the second number of The Liberal Arts College Bulletin. We are glad to see High Point College listed with nearly three hundred other colleges in the movement for adequate endowment. We are also glad to remember that this movement was initiated by our good brother, Dr. A. Norman Ward, President of Western Maryland College. This new bulletin gives evidence of earnestness and shows progress with the great problem in hand. We hope for the movement large success. However, the only way to reach success is through the efforts of the friends of each college in behalf of that college. The movement will help only those who help themselves. The great advantage of concerted movement is in the greater enthusiasm generated, reaching the help of many who otherwise would not have been moved to take part.

THE NEW YEAR GIFT

"Hist! Hist!" such a funny noise! Weenty sat up in bed and rubbed her eyes, for she had been very sound asleep. The light was dim in her room, but there was a sort of gleam from the snow outside, and the ice-covered twigs of the apple tree that always tap-tapped on her window-pane.

"Well, well—I thought I'd never get you awake;" said a voice by her bed. Weenty looked over the side, and there was Mr. Rabbit, all dressed up in his best suit, lightly powdered with snow.

"O, I will be right up!" cried Weenty, suiting her actions to her words. "Are we going somewhere tonight? I wasn't allowed to stay up for Mother's New Year party, but I can always go to yours!"

"I have a very special invitation," Mr. Rabbit explained, as he combed the snow out of his whiskers. "Put on your warm suit. This is quite a different affair, but I'm sure you will like it."

"Anywhere you take me is always nice," Weenty declared, slipping into her white fur rabbit suit. "Now I'm ready!"

Mr. Rabbit jumped off the bed and put on his hat.

"Take my hand," he said. "For we must run across the snow to my burrow."

Out of the window the two friends popped, and skipped over the snowy lawn, till they came to the little green door. Here Mr. Rabbit had to dig away the drifted snow a little, before he could push open the door.

"We don't go all the way in my street," he said, "but turn off at Mole Corners. Follow me closely."

Weenty obeyed, keeping close as she could to his bobbing form. Suddenly he stopped—

"Dear, dear! I can't get my glow-worm flashlight to work, the battery must be weak!" he exclaimed in an annoyed tone.

"I'm afraid you can't see the way."

"Perhaps its cold," suggested Weenty, looking into Mr. Rabbit's paw, where the glow-worm gave off a very feeble light. "I'll put it in my fur pocket awhile, and we can go on slowly."

"An excellent idea!" agreed Mr. Rabbit, handing over the glow-worm. "Hold onto my coat-tail. Here is the corner and and it may be quite damp and slippery. I hope you are not afraid."

"O no, I'm not a bit afraid," said Weenty though her voice trembled a little, for it was very dark, and sometimes there were earthworms under her feet.

"It won't be much farther. How is the light now?" asked Mr. Rabbit, stopping, after quite a long stretch. "I want to be sure we find the right street."

"O! O! he is as bright as ever!" Weenty cried in glee, as she took the glow-worm from her warm pocket and his rays lit up the low tunnel.

"Fine! Now we can see. Come this way," Mr. Rabbit said, leading on again, around a narrow winding way. "Ah, here is a door, let me see the number. Yes, yes! this is right," and he lifted the fine gold knocker and rapped loudly on the door.

It opened very silently, and they popped into high, wide hall. Weenty looked about, amazed, for it was so big and her great pillars at the sides, formed of tree-roots. From the roof lovely crystals hung, like lamps, giving a beautiful, clear light. The floor was covered with shining pebbles, that flashed like precious stones.

"Oh! what place is this?" she whispered to Mr. Rabbit.

He whispered back in her ear, as he helped her out of her fur suit.

"This is the palace of our Queen. You call her Mother Nature. Tonight she is sending out the New Year wishes, and we always have a party at her house. I thought you ought to know about her. Come with me."

Weenty held her breath and walked close to Mr. Rabbit, holding his paw tightly. They went through a high-arched doorway and along another hall. In a side room Weenty saw lots of little creatures of the woods and fields, all in their best clothes, chattering together. At another big door Mr. Rabbit paused—

"Here is her work-room, and she gave me permission to bring you in and show you her flowers," he said, and when he touched the doors they flew open.

"Oh! Oh!" Weenty almost screamed, the place was so bright and beautiful.

"Come here," said Mr. Rabbit, leading Weenty to a shelf, on which stood jars covered with great glass domes. "There are the seasons that she is getting ready for you." Weenty gazed at some strange crystal trees, under the glass. "Here is spring, almost ready." There were bursting buds on the tree, and delicate leaves.

"But how about the New Year one?" asked Weenty.

"Over there, under that glass in the center," replied Mr. Rabbit. "Don't touch it. It's ready, and the Queen sends it off at midnight."

Just then the big door opened again and in came a wonderful lady. Weenty didn't know whether she was a fairy or not, but she looked like dreams. Tall and strong, dressed in a long, dark blue robe, like the sky at night. She smiled at them, and Mr. Rabbit bowed low—

"Here is Weenty come to see the New Year Tree," he said.

"Ah, Weenty, I am glad to see you," said the lady, in a voice like silver bells. "I know you well, and know, too, that you love all my children."

Weenty was too excited to speak, but made her best courtesy.

The lady went to the center tree, and raised it in her hands.

"Ah, it is quite ready now," she cried with pleasure. "See Weenty." Weenty came close and saw that what she thought were flowers, were really shining globes, and in each one there was a golden bird.

A chime rang then and suddenly the room was filled with all the little guests. Weenty saw many fairies among them.

"Is everyone here?" asked the Queen.

"Yes! Yes!" cried all the little folks.

Then she lifted the glass dome from the plant and carried it to an open window. All at once the thousands of globes flew off, and drifted away, like bubbles.

"There they go to carry a Happy New Year to the Earth!" cried the Queen. Weenty stared, but did not understand.

"You see," the Queen explained, "I send out these globes every New Year. They go to every home on Earth. Each carries a golden bird, who sings all the year long, of love and kindness and happiness—but not everyone hears it!"

"Oh, will there be one at my house?" cried Weenty, in delight.

"Yes, surely—you must look for him, and he will sing in your heart all the New Year."

"Oh, I will find him and take care of him!" Weenty promised.

"A Happy New Year to you all!" cried the Queen. Music began to play and as the guests all started dancing, they chorused—

"Happy New Year!"

The Queen stooped and kissed Weenty's cheek, and as Weenty turned to kiss her she saw—not the Nature Queen—but her Mother's face, bending over her in the darkened bedroom.

"Good-night, sweet! The New Year has come!" murmured Mother in her ear.

"Oh, is he here? Keep him for me, till morning—I'm so happy!" said Weenty, and shut her eyes again.—Selected.

THE STOP ALIEN REPRESENTATION AMENDMENT

The apportionment of Congressional districts, under the 1930 census, goes into effect March 4, 1931. Because of the great increase in city population, some large wet cities will be given more Congressmen and some dry agricultural states, and the dry sections of wet states, will lose one or two Congressmen, a shift of about 30.

The only way to prevent this calamity is to amend the U. S. Constitution so to count only Citizens in the new apportionment for new Congressional districts. Congressman Sparks and Senator Capper have introduced such an Amendment.

If this Amendment is submitted by the present Congress we believe it will be quickly ratified by three-fourths of the states, before the re-apportionment become seffective, and thus about 30 Congressmen will be cut out of the larget wet cities, while most of the dry agricultural states will lose none of their Congressmen, as they otherwise will before the election of Congressmen in November, 1932. This proposed Amendment is referred to the House Judiciary Committee.

If your Congressman is not on the above Committee write and urge him to vote for this Amendment when it comes up for passage and also to use his personal influence with members of the Committee to report it out quickly. It will not pass Congress unless its friends in large numbers write their Congressmen for it. Here is a good letter form:

Hon. ...., Care of House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:—The undersigned earnestly urges that you vote for the proposed Sparks-Capper Amendment to the United States Constitution to cut out the approximately 7,500,000 unnaturalized aliens and count only Citizens when making the new apportionment for Congressional Districts. — The Civic Forum.

THE NEW THEOLOGY DEFINED

The Lutheran thus sums up the "new theology and the religious situation which it has created: "A pantheistic God, instead of a personal God; a human Savior, instead of a divine Savior; infallible scholarship, instead of an infallible Bible; 'modern thought,' instead of a 'thus saith the Lord;' a development of religious ideas from the human mind, instead of a revelation from God; the natural in all things, the supernatural in nothing; reformation, instead of regeneration; culture, instead of conversion; a change of environment, instead of a change of heart; the energy of flesh, instead of prayer and faith; interest in the secular, instead of zeal for religion; nobody afraid of hell, and nobody caring much about heaven; everybody coming out right anyhow, and nobody on the wrong track except those who cling to the myth once delivered to the saints."—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

January 18: MY IDEA OF WHAT A YOUNG MAN OUGHT TO BE

Saturday—A Real "Find." Prov. 18:20.

To the Leader

It would be quite interesting for a young man to direct this meeting. It matters what men think of women and what they want women to be. There are numerous reasons why so much is expected of women. The mothers are the chief factors in rearing and molding the children. Then we might say, "Like mother, like child." Ordinarily the mother molds the child far more than the father does.

The young woman is the forecast of what the mature and older woman will be. It is therefore, very important that the ideals be right from the first. It has been said that strength for the young man and true beauty for the young woman are the ideals of youth. We should be very careful what we mean by true beauty. May the life of every young woman be brightened by Christian influences and blossom forth as the full-blown rose.

For Discussion

1. Should young women be educated? Why?
2. Do boys think that the "church type" of young women is preferable to the kind that has no use for religion?
3. Do young men want a girl to be intelligent?
4. Wherein do Old Testament ideals differ from those of the New?
5. What opportunities for service does the young woman in her home have on her after life?
7. Why should young women who work be Christian in their ideals and conduct?

Poetry

Wouldst thou be beautiful? Oh, let Thy every thought be pure;
Think only of the good and true,
The things which shall endure.
Seek ever the companionship
Of One beyond compare,
Whose beauty far surpasses
That of the lily fair.

Throw open wide the windows
Of your soul, and let the rays
Of the Sun of righteousness shine in
To brighten all your days.
He will satisfy your longings
And transform you by His grace,
Till the beauty of His image
Shall glorify your face.

N. C. COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Your attention has already been called to the apportionment for the Sunday schools and C. E. societies in the November 27th issue of the Herald. The purpose of this letter is to encourage you to take this suggestion and get visible results from it and send same to the Treasurer of the Council (Board of Young People's work). The treasurer of the council needs money, and it appears to me that the month of January is the suitable time to supply him with the funds. Burlington, First Church, has already set the pace by sending in $6.00 for her Sunday school. Who will be the next to follow her example?

Let's not forget that Rev. N. M. Harrison is in the field this year giving part time to the council and that we are responsible for part of his salary. He will feel like serving us more wholeheartedly if we can get his salary to him monthly.

Yours to acknowledge and record every cent you will hurry up and send.

J. CLDYE AUMAN, Treasurer.

—Miss Margaret Osborne of West End church is teaching in Rockingham city schools.

—The 25 farmers' mutual exchanges now operating in this state did a combined business of over a million and a half dollars in 1930.

—Morrison and Fisher, farmers of Rowan county, sold $3,200 worth of Korean lespedeza seed from an 18 acre field this past year in addition to obtaining an excellent supply of roughage for winter feeding.

—Money sent away each year to purchase farm seeds could be used profitably in farm operations at home but aside from this there are two other good reasons why every land owner should grow and save his own seed. First, they can be grown at little expense, and second, the grower can tell whether they are free of disease.

—Rev. R. J. and Mrs. Tamblyn spent their holidays vacation with her parents in Maryland.

HERE AND THERE

CURING A DOG OF CAR CHASING

My dog "Toby," a fox terrier, is a splendid little fellow, but he has developed one extremely bad habit, that of chasing cars and motorcycles. More than once he has not only nearly brought disaster upon himself, but, as well, gravely imperiled the people in the cars and on the cycles. After an exceptionally narrow escape, I decided that I would cure Toby of the practice and the little plan I evolved was entirely successful.

I enlisted the services of a friend with a car. In the back of the car I concealed myself with a bucket of water. It was planned to drive the car slowly past my house, and arrangements were made that Toby should have full liberty to dash out and run after the car. As was expected, the car had barely passed the gate before out came the dog, barking for all he was worth. Up I shot and threw the pail of icy cold water full in the dog's face. Toby was much taken aback and made a hasty retreat to the garden.

On three separate days the plan was repeated and now the dog gives a wide berth to all cars. No longer does he regard a motor as something which provides him with a good sport. In his mind he thinks of a car as a most unpleasant kind of thing that, right in the middle of his enjoyment, will shoot out a deluge of cold water. There are few things a dog dislikes more than to have a lot of water thrown at him and he will take no risks over a matter of this kind.

Probably any dog could be cured of the bad habit of car chasing by following this plan. The great thing is for the one who throws the water to conceal himself as much as possible. Let the dog get the idea in his mind that it is the car which suddenly shoots water over dogs, and there will be an end of the nuisance of car chasing. In fact Toby now is wary even of a standing motor. Recently when I wanted to take him for a ride he hung back, looking with great suspicion at the nasty thing which had a habit of deluging him with water. Only when he had been lifted into the car did he seem at his ease once more.—Our Dumb Animals.

THE NEW YEAR

Begin the new year with clear purpose, strong resolve, and supreme faith. Concentrate upon essentials. Put your high ideals into actual deeds and live your largest and noblest life today. Do your work well. The best reward for work well done will be greater work and a larger sphere of usefulness.

Rid yourself of everything which in the slightest degree retards your best progress. Closely scrutinize your thought habits and be alert to every opportunity for self-improvement. Keep your mind upon a high level of constructive thought, realize the priceless value of time and opportunity, and determine to make this year count toward real and permanent achievement. Success is your birth-right.

To be strong and true; to be generous in praise and appreciation of others; to impute worthy motives even to enemies; to give without expectation of return; to practice humility, tolerance, and self-restraint; to make the best use of time and opportunity; to keep the mind pure and the judgment charitable; to extend intelligent sympathy to those in distress; to cultivate quietness and non-resistance; to speak little and listen much; to adhere always to a high standard of thought, purpose, and conduct; to grow in grace, goodness, and gratitude; to seek truth and righteousness; to work, serve, love, and pray daily; to aspire greatly, labor cheerfully, and take God at His word—that is to travel heavenward.

—Grenville Kleiser.

A PEACE GARDEN

The gardeners of the United States and Canada are prepared to do their bit for the cause of sweet peace. Their stunt will be a $5,000,000 International Peace Garden on the boundary line between Canada and the United States "as a constant reminder of the amity that exists between these two great nations." It is to be laid out with thousands of acres of flowers and shrubs, with conservatories for the delicate plants which could not stand the climate of the border.

The plan of the peace garden was formulated at a Washington meeting of the National Association of Gardeners at which 50 organizations of the United States and Canada were represented. An international committee of prominent men and women was formed to sponsor and direct the peace garden plan. Selection of the site will be the first big problem. Many places have been proposed. In choosing the location of the garden, which is to be made "one of the show places of the Western Hemisphere," consideration will be given to its accessibility to visitors from both countries. Donald J. Creighton, of Convent, N. J., who was elected president of the association, was one of the prime movers in the garden plan.—Pathfinder.

GIFT FOR CALENDAR REFORM

The League of Nations secretariat announced that an American whose name was not made known donated $10,000 to help pay the expenses of the preparatory work of the conference on calendar reform. Cesar Zumeta of Venezuela, president of the League Council, authorized acceptance of the gift. Calendar reform is on the agenda of the next league conference on communication and transit, which will be held toward the end of 1931, and several national committees are making preliminary investigations. These studies involve expenditures outside the regular budget for the conference and the gift by the American was intended to cover such expenses.—

CANINE COLLEGE IN CALIFORNIA

The first dog college in the United States has been established in California, five miles north of Hollywood. This institution has campus, an athletic field, dormitory, mess hall and a swimming pool—for students only. There is also a hospital where any dog is quickly removed if injured or when showing any sign of sickness. The prospective "scholars" are enrolled by name, age, breed, size, and then assigned to one of the various departments, which include courses for those desiring to acquire the highest society manners, training for hunting, Red Cross work or coaching for a career in the movies! They have a regular schedule, strictly followed, for study, exercise, meals and sleep.

The president of this seat of learning for man's best friend is Carl Spitz, who previously had spent more than eighteen years training dogs for the German government. Fred Bache, who also put in many years at the same work, is headmaster, and specializes in training dogs to lead the blind.—C. E. Howard in "Our Dumb Animals."

WOMAN'S CHANGING VOICE

Within the last 20 years there has been a surprising change in women's voices. The average female voice has become several degrees deeper than it was earlier in the century—or in the last century for that matter. Doctors attest to this.

At first glance some unkind person might say that cigarette smoking is responsible. Another unthinking individual may say it's women's advent in politics. But the real truth of the matter, as the medical profession sees it, is that the doing away with corsets has freed the abdominal muscles to permit women to talk as deeply as they are now able to breathe. When they were all "laced in" they had to use mouse tones.

—There are 7,310 hospitals in this country, representing investments totaling about $3,125,123,000, according to Dr. C. Rufus Borem, economist. He places annual value of operation at $900,000,000—nearly one-third the government's total yearly expenditures.

—People in the little Idaho town of Nezperce are burning wheat for fuel, according to reports, and they find that it produces an even heat and holds the fire about as long as coal. Coal here is said to cost $16.50 a ton; wood $10 dollars a cord, while wheat delivered is only $9 a ton.

—Pandemonium reigned in Guadalupe, Mexico, after the explosion of a gasoline car set fire to a circus train, killing or injuring dozens of the circus crew and turning many wild animals loose in the neighborhood. Farmers and hacienda owners immediately organized armed parties to hunt down and kill or capture lions, tigers, bears and other wild animals which took refuge in the mountains and countryside.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Haw River Circuit.—The editor has asked us to be brief in our letters, but I can't help but take a little space to thank the people here for the many nice things they have given us during the last few months. The Midway folks gave us a car-load pounding just before the conference, and for some reason, we have lost the names, but the contents of the car did their part in making us remember the occasion. Since conference, we were made happy when Brother J. W. Fogleman gave us enough wood to last all the winter, and into the spring, and it was cut and housed before the snow came. The following people have remembered us at their hog-killing times with fresh meat, W. H. Chilleut, Mrs. J. W. Fogleman, E. A. Spencer, Mrs. J. W. Pugh, Mrs. C. R. Gordon, Miss Jennie Gordon, Mrs. Sally Troxler, J. T. Richardson, R. F. Troxler, A. G. Wyrick, Horace Jones, Mrs. J. E. Combie, F. E. Jones, gave us pumpkins, and Brother A. O. Rudd of the Christian church gave us fresh meat and Mrs. Rudd gave us several gallons of whole milk. Friendship came en masse last week, on the eve of New Year's Day, and gave us another pounding, and when the smoke of battle had cleared we had found finger prints of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Maxwell, R. E. Pritchett, Miss Ruby Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rudd, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Cable, H. C. Pritchett, T. H. R. Pritchett, A. B. Pritchett, Geo. Maxwell, A. G. Wyrick, C. R. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Lambeth. In addition to finger prints we found $2.00 in cash, canned fruits, Irish potatoes, and sweet potatoes, 15 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of flour in addition to 48 pounds given recently by Brother Maxwell, fresh sausage, three lbs. of butter, apples, soda, and coffee.

These dear folks will never know the extent of our appreciation for these things. They are always doing something to make the life of their pastor happy, and it is his earnest prayer, that he may be a better pastor in 1931 than he was in 1930.

I am happy as we begin this new year, and am praying that the spirit of co-operation so plainly seen throughout the charge shall grow as we go on into the new year.

J. L. TROLLINGER.

Mizpah, Haw River Circuit.—Pastor Trollinger brought us a good message the first Sunday from the subject, "St. Paul's New Year Advice." The three main points in the sermon were in Paul's very own words, (1) Mortify, (2) Put Away, and (3) Put On. The sermon was especially appropriate for the beginning of the new year.

It seems each sermon is a little better than the last. The third Sunday in December he preached a beautiful sermon, from the text, "There was no room for him in the inn."

Our pastor sent each of his members a Christmas card. He also sent each member a postal card message inviting them to attend services at one or more of the churches on the work the first Sunday. The card was answered by a good many by being present Sunday morning. Also some from Friendship and Brown Summit.

We had a very pleasant surprise when some one said, "Mr. Ashburn is here." He is one of our "father preachers," having served us a good many years ago when we middle-aged folks were babies. We are always glad to have our former ministers worship with us.

Temple Harrison, one of our members, who had his leg broken some time during the fall, is home from the hospital.

Mrs. George Harrison has made a beautiful spot in our church—a basket of artificial flowers.

Our Sunday school gave no Christmas program. Some of the classes exchanged gifts.

A happy New Year to all,

REPORTER

Lexington.—We started off the new year with good attendance. There were 214 present in Sunday school.

The pastor filled his regular appointment at Mt. Carmel this morning and preached here at 7 o'clock in the evening. He preached a very forceful sermon to a large congregation.

Our Christmas program was rendered on December 24th, the church being filled and every one was well pleased with the entire program, some expressing the opinion that it was the best program we had had in years. Several of our young people were at home for the holidays and came out to the church for the services.

We were glad to have as visitors Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Bright and daughter of Burlington, who were visiting Rev. C. G. Isley and his mother. Mr. and Mrs. Phouse Bean and two sons, Bobbie and Bennie, spent the Christmas holidays with Mrs. Bean's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Harris of Kanapolis, N. C.

REPORTER.

Concord.—There has been no report from this church for some time, partly from neglect and partly because of illness in the home of the reporter which has caused her absence from church for a good many weeks, but the regular services have been held with very good attendance.

Last Sunday the S. S. attendance was 400. The board showed an enrollment of 423. The Baraca class, with Mr. W. J. Widenhouse teacher and Mr. P. H. Scarborough, president, is a live wire in our school. Their attendance was 90 without an special effort. This class can boast of two male quartettes, which have furnished music for the preaching services a number of times.

The Lord's Supper was observed Sunday morning and the largest number in several months communed.

At the evening hour Mr. Millaway preached a touching sermon from the text, "Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest, not what a day may bring forth." At this service there were two reclamations.

Our folks deeply regret to lose Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Polk and family, who last week moved to Monroe, N. C.

Mrs. Lottie Brown Litaker and daughter, Miss Agnes, of Burlington and Snow Camp, respectively, spent the holidays with relatives here; and worshipped with us.

Funeral services for Maxine Litaker, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Litaker, were held in our church on Thursday, December 18. Maxine had been ill for several months and her death was not unexpected, yet it cast a pall of gloom over the entire church. An obituary will appear. REPORTER.

Roberta Station.—Our Sunday school increased some, Sunday, January 4. There were 204 present.

We like our preacher just fine. He and his wife are both fine people. He preaches every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, also Sunday evening at 6:30.

Funeral services for little Winifred Meriam Verble, seven-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garner Verble, were conducted in the church Sunday morning, January 4, at 11 o'clock, by the pastor, Rev. C. H. Hill. She leaves a large host of sorrowing friends and relatives. The bereaved family has our sympathy.

MISS ELMIA MILLER, Reporter.

Elbaville, Mocksville Charge.—Our Christmas program was given Tuesday night, December 23. It consisted of recitations and dialogues by the children and a play by the C. E. society, "Who Gave the Christmas Party." A large audience was present to enjoy the program and to see Santa Claus.

Our attendance at S. S. was unusually good for the first Sunday of the new calendar year. Several others came for church services.

Mr. Ferree delivered a fine sermon after which the Lord's Supper was administered. It was a very impressive service; we were pleased to see so many partake, especially the young people.

We were glad to have Rev. O. P. Routh, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Zimmerman and children of Lexington worship with us in the morning service.

On December 28 a gloom was cast over our community, when we learned that Mr. L. A. Bailey had been called from our midst; he was one of our oldest members, being 83 years old when he died. The funeral and burial was held December 30. Rev. W. M. Rathburn, pastor of Advance M. E. church, assisted the pastor.

Owing to the absence of the reporter Mr. Ferree asked me to report this time.

Best wishes to the editor and all the Herald readers.

LAURA SHUTT.

Anderson Charge, Fairview Church.—On Sunday morning, January 4, Rev. M. C. Henderson preached a very interesting sermon on the subject, "Keep Them From Sin," using Joshua 3:1-5 and Luke 3:7-17 for scripture reading. He earnestly urged the parents to direct their children in the ways of righteousness.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. The attendance is steadily growing, there being thirty-four more present January 4, than on the previous Sunday. We sincerely hope that it will not be long before we can have Sunday school rooms.

The Sunday school officials for the year are: Supt., T. B. Nalley; Assistant Supt., Miss Montez Henderson; Choir Leader, F. A. Johnson; Secretary-Treasurer, Heyward Foster; Manager, Rex Henderson; Pianist, Miss Anne Henderson. Teachers are: J. W. Smith, Mrs. Nannie Freeman, Miss Montez Henderson, Miss Anne Henderson, Miss Mildred Nalley, Mrs. Heyward Foster, and Mrs. Stella Freeman.

All the girls and boys who have been home for the holidays have returned to their work or college.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Henderson and family were entertained Sunday, January 4, by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Watson.

Kernersville.—In spite of the bad weather we have been enjoying increased congregations and increased expressions of appreciation. The Mmes. Linvilles have remembered us with meats and cats, Mrs. Hepler milk and pie, Mrs. "Jack" Hester gave us the first personal pounding we ever had. She invited us out to take supper with her and when we started home she loaded our "Lizzie" with fruit, meats, etc., that would have made a creditable showing for a whole church.

On the Sunday morning of the big snow we plowed our way into Pine Grove church and to our surprise found a good size congregation. When I started out some one said: "Do you think you can get your car out?" But the trouble was not in getting the car out thru the snow, but getting a place in the car for the driver. When we got home we found they had loaded us with a fine lot of fruits, meats and sweets.

Outside remembrances: Mrs. S. W. Taylor to Mrs. Reed, a fine lot of different kinds of cake. Mrs. J. D. McCollum of Reidsville, a great big fat coconut cake. God bless her, she always does things in a big way. Christmas turkey, cake and a bushel of apples came from Raleigh, cake and meat from Greensboro. So we have much to be thankful for and we thank God for friends who have thus remembered us. May God bless them all.

W. D. REED.

Orange Charge.—The Christmas season is past. We express thanks to all who remembered us with Christmas cards, fresh meat, jellies, etc.

We are especially thankful to Brother A. W. Holmes for presenting us with a nice turkey for Christmas.

Most of the regular appointments and Christmas programs were carried out. Congregations have been small during the rough weather.

Funeral services were conducted for the following: December 20, John Thomas Jones, at Chestnut Ridge; December 22, Mrs. Mary Pattie Tapp, at Chestnut Ridge, and December 25, Mrs. T. R. Fitzpatrick, at Eldand.

May God bless and comfort all the bereaved ones.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

First Church, Charlotte.—Since my first report several things have happened that deserve to be chronicled in the Herald.

The first was the holding of the Thank Offering service on December 14. The service was a success in every way. The offering was good. So were both the program and attendance.

On Sunday, December 21, a White Gift service was held. This was, as the name implies, largely made up of gift giving to the Children's Home by individuals and members of various classes in the Sunday school. The altar was beautifully decorated in keeping with the season and Christmas songs were sung, a short reading, "Where Love Is, There God Is Also," was given by Mrs. A. F. Love, and the pastor delivered a brief talk. Nice gifts were presented, and several dollars in money besides.

Christmas brought gifts from many friends. Mrs. and Mrs. B. W. Little, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Garmon, and Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Millaway remembered us to send many of those things without which Christmas could not seem to be here. We thank them.

On December 28, the choir gave a musical program of merit which was appreciated by a good congregation.

On December 29, several ministers, members of the Pastor's Federation of the Western part of our church, met with us and had a most helpful discussion of the work of the churches represented in this area.

Thursday night, January 1, we experienced the best attended pounding it has been our joy to experience since we have been in the ministry. And besides the large number attending, several sent gifts which were gladly received, although we regretted the inability of the sender to be present. We are deeply grateful for every expression of appreciation of our service here.

We are making some plans for the future, and hope that these may bring about the desired results both in increased attendance, and in larger service by the church.

The attendance at the regular church services has increased, and other signs of interest are gratifying since we first came. The following percentage has been recorded:

November 16, a. m. 25%, p. m. 24% present.

November 23, a. m. 34%, p. m. 33% present.

November 30, a. m. 31%, p. m. 20% present.

December 7, a. m. 38%, p. m. 35% present.

December 14, a. m. 38%, p. m. 35% present.

December 21, a. m. 40%, p. m. 35% present.

December 28, a. m. 38%, p. m. 51% present.

Our goal for attendance is every member present at worship service before the close of the conference year. In our next report, we hope to give the number of members contributing to the church budget.

R. M. ANDREWS Pastor.

Lincolnton Charge, Lincolnton.—Our church work is starting off fine. We have set for our goal for the year, in Sunday school 177, and 57 new church members. The attendance at preaching continues to increase. Our new pastor, Brother Cranford, is doing good preaching, and he and his good wife are both winning a warm place in the hearts of the people.

The future of our church is bright. We have a pulpit committee, and a nominating committee, and the welcome committee seems to be very busy at all church services. Our preaching dates are as follows: First and third Sunday mornings; second and fourth Sunday nights.

D. B. JOHNSON, Reporter.

Why Not.—Three Christmas services on the charge were attended by the writer. Each one was good, and well attended. Among the numerous gifts coming our way we mention the three most valuable: Seagrove S. S., one 20 lb. ham; one scarf for Mrs. Neese, given by Mrs. D. J. Johnson; one shirt for the writer, given by the C. E. Stuart family. For these and other gifts not itemized we are exceedingly grateful.

The writer has prepared a chart for each one of the eight churches on the charge. The entire budget for each church is represented by a square for each dollar assessed. Any one at a glance can see what the local church is expected to pay on the various items of the budget, they can readily see also how much has been paid, and how much remains to be paid.

The preparation of these charts required considerable time and patience, but we are confident the results will justify the effort.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Bellmont Church, Mt. Hermon Charge.

The new year begins well in our Sunday school work. The following officers have been elected: Superintendent, Mrs. Roy L. Sharpe; Secretary, Mrs. Wayne Curtis; Assistant Secretary, Miss Helen Capps; Treasurer, Miss Alma Mae Hargis; Pianist, Miss Marie Hargis, and Assistant Pianist, Miss Nannie Coble.

Christian Endeavor has good attendance. The officers are as follows: President, Miss Vido Clapp; Vice-President, Mr. Homer Hargis; Secretary, Miss Lucile Sharpe; Treasurer, Miss Novia Stinson, and Corresponding Secretary, Miss Helen Capps.

Miss Margaret and Mr. Howard Pickett and Mr. Lee Moser, students of High Point college, spent the Christmas holidays at their homes here.

We regret the illness of some of our members.

Mr. O. E. York and family, formerly of here who have been living in Burlington, have moved back into our community. We are pleased to have them back with us.

We regret the moving away of two of our members, Mr. and Mrs. V. T. Fogleman. They have been faithful church workers, both have been Sunday school teachers the past year. We hope that they may be with us again.

Miss Elsie Baker, a member of our Sunday school, is leaving with her sister, Mrs. O. C. Loy, for Baltimore, Md.

REPORTER.

First Church, Winston.—Well:—1931 is here, a bright new year with a glorious new outlook on the vast future. Every day brings with it something new, some days bring gladness, some sorrow, there are usually more pleasant and beautiful things than there are unpleasant ones.

The first Sunday of the new year, communion service was observed. Rev. C. H. Whitaker assisted our pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, in this service.

Mr. and Mrs. Pritchard are feeling better, they have both been very ill with colds. They looked happy as ever at the services Sunday morning.

Dr. Andrews sent a challenge from his congregation in Charlotte to our congregation, a challenge from January first to Easter, which is April 5th. This challenge pertains to attendance, the details were not given however, but the Sunday school voted to accept this challenge and the details to be worked out between Rev. J. E. Pritchard and Dr. Andrews. A very good attendance began the new year in both Sunday school and church worship. This was promising, too, in the proposed contest.

The Philathea class meets Monday evening at 7:30. The Philatheas are working hard on a pageant, which will be most effective when presented.

On Tuesday evening the board of stewards will have their meeting.

Last Wednesday evening Rev. L. W. Geringer of the Forsyth charge conducted the prayer services, due to illness of the pastor. It was a pleasure to have Mr. Geringer with us; sorry of course that Mr. Pritchard was sick. He's O. K. now. This Wednesday evening there will be prayer service and choir rehearsal following.

Thursday evening at 7:30 the Worker's council will hold a meeting at the church. Many things of vital importance in the life of Sunday school work will be discussed and it is hoped that all members will attend.

The calendar committee will meet at the parsonage on Friday evening. This committee consists of Mrs. H. G. Paschall, president of the Woman's auxiliary; Mrs. C. H. Smith, chairman of the Board of Stewards; Mrs. A. W. Davis, director of music; Rev. J. E. Pritchard, pastor, and Mr. I. D. Voss, Sunday school superintendent.

Miss Katherine Holder, on Braxton street, will entertain the mission club, Friday evening. This club consists of the boys and girls of the church, ranging in age from about 13 to 18 years. They are enthusiastic workers.

Mr. M. D. Braswell, a member of our local church, is in the hospital, suffering from a broken limb. It is hoped that he will grow better all the while and that he will never let discouragement enter his mind. The church extends to him sympathy and aid.

The Woman's auxiliary will meet Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 at the church. This phase of church work is indispensable, it seems. Hospitals are visited and magazines, words of cheer and many other things are carried to those who do not have them from other sources; the money made and turned in as the budget of each circle helps the local church, and goes to other places to aid in the advancement of the Kingdom. To Pine Ridge, Kentucky, and other places where food, clothing, the very essentials of life itself are lacking. Is that not a great work?

PAULINE L. BRANSON, Reporter

Welch Memorial, High Point.—The people of Welch Memorial started the new year nicely. There was a goodly number at both Sunday school and preaching. The communion was taken at the preaching hour and the spirit of this service was good. We are to have the communion quarterly this year instead of each first Sunday as before.

The night service was better attended than usual. Brother Anderson is making the night service evangelistic. At the call for unsaved three persons of mature age asked for prayer. We need these people and hope they will soon decide for God and line up with His work. The auxiliary is doing splendid work.

We have some sickness in our number, among these is Mr. W. W. Frye our assistant superintendent, who has diphtheria. We hope he will soon be with us again.

We ask the prayers of the friends of Welch that we may have a successful year.

REPORTER.

Mebane.—Our Christmas program was given on Sunday night before Christmas; white Christmas was observed throughout the town, all the churches and other organizations taking part. All the needy families were helped, receiving groceries, clothing, fruits and toys.

We enjoyed having Rev. O. C. Loy preach for us at the 11 o'clock church service. Our pastor brought us an interesting and timely message Sunday evening using as his subject, "Buried Possibilities."

The circles of the Woman's auxiliary met on Monday night of last week.

The Ladies' Aid was entertained at the home of Mrs. A. C. Allen Monday afternoon. This meeting was well attended. Mrs. George Wyatt conducted the devotional. The amount realized from our pageant and supper together with our usual collection was around $27.00 after all expenses were paid.

Mr. George McAuley was injured a few days before Christmas but is improving.

The following young people spent the holidays at their respective homes: Misses Grace and Katie Lee Barnette, Alta Allen, Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson and Bessie Barnette, who is a student at High Point college.

Yarborough Chapel.—We are standing face to face with the New Year, 1931. It will bring with it new responsibilities. Let us trust and pray that it will, also, bring with it a prosperous year for Christ and His Kingdom.

Mrs. Broome and I are entering upon our third year with the good people of Yarborough Charge. Our aim is to make this the best year of the three.

Our first quarterly conference is to be held at Harmony church January 25, 1931. We are expecting a good attendance.

We are very sorry that our Sunday school superintendent of Yarborough Chapel, Brother E. M. Hipp, has been unable to attend the Sunday school since the N. C. Annual Conference. He is improving very slowly. B. H. Stone is also recovering very slowly. Sister Stone has had a great deal of sickness in her family for the last two years. Recently the death angel came into her home and took away her husband, leaving five fatherless children. We wish for these a speedy recovery. Brother and Sister Gilmore Watson have practically regained their health. Brother Clarence Killingsworth, Sister W. H. Balentine and Sister C. T. Hughs are improving and are able to come back to worship.

The community lost one of its best members when it lost Brother H. B. Stone. He has been unable to do any work for about one year. Our heart-felt sympathy is for Sister Stone and her family.

The pastor and family have been remembered by the Harmony members and friends with many appropriate gifts during the Christmas season. These gifts were presented to us at the home of Mrs. Carnelia Taylor and Miss Kate Medlock. I was asked to follow a certain string to the end. This I did and found there a table that groaned under its weight. Santa Claus did not pass us after all without smiling upon us. Santa Claus, we thank you. Come Again.

D. D. BROOME, Pastor.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Rev. P. E. Bingham yesterday brought us a very inspiring message. He and Mrs. Bingham are entering this work very enthusiastically and hopefully.

We were glad to have Mrs. Pittman and daughter from Whitakers worship with us yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bingham returned yesterday from Blacksburg, S. C., where they spent the Christmas holidays with their parents.

Miss Virginia Insko who is a student at N. C. C. W., spent the Holidays with her mother.

Miss Daisie Lee Carter, who is in training at King Daughters hospital at Portsmouth, spent the holidays with her mother.

The first quarterly conference will meet Saturday, January 10, at 11 o'clock at the Littleton church. All official members are requested to be present.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Albemarle Tidings.—The church has secured the splendid seven room residence of Ex-Sheriff Green for the pastor and family. This means that we are well housed and that we have our share of the out-of-doors in the way of two fine gardens, a good barn for a cow, a large poultry house and yard and plenty of space for flowers. The gardens have been plowed and the poultry are furnishing plenty of eggs. It looks like a little prosperity is coming our way.

Christmas was fine with us. There were two nice Christmas services rendered. One on Sunday night December 21, and the other on the night of December 24. At the Sunday night service we were edified by the very impressive service and fine music. An offering was taken for the supernumeraries of the conference. The Christmas Eve service consisted of a tree, a treat and a fine program by the children.

During the holiday season the pastor and family were very kindly remembered by many of the people here and elsewhere with nice and valuable gifts which brought good cheer and happiness. Many cards and greetings were received not only from the people from the present pastorate but the great number that came from former pastorates, gave us to understand that we were not entirely forgotten where we had labored in other days. These were all greatly appreciated. Not so much in a card, but much in the fact that somebody sent it.

The services have been well attended and the people have responded with the finest attention which has on many occasions burst forth in hearty old-fashioned amens that do not fail to encourage the preacher. The attendance and work of the Sunday school is very encouraging. A church that has the fine Sunday school that is to be found here certainly has a great future. This church is largely composed of young families that have been brought up in the church. This means that they respond with a fine spirit of loyalty. The communion services are of the most beautiful and impressive I have ever seen. We have had two communion services since conference and on each occasion they were beautiful. Nearly all of the entire audience both grown people and children kneel at the altar which makes the service very impressive. After each communion service the doors of the church are opened, and ten persons have been received since conference.

On Sunday night, December 28, we were greatly favored by the Stanley Sacred Singers who brought us a great treat in the way of a feast of music. This is a male chorus which renders very fine music and we greatly appreciate the visit to our church.

Kindnesses have continually come our way since we have been in the midst of these good people. Names and articles are not mentioned here but every thing has been appreciated and it has all been fine.

While we are too new upon the grounds to know everything about the church or the people and we are old enough to know that the newness of both pastor and people many times cause favorable responses and impressions. Allowing for all these things we are yet very favorably impressed and we have long since concluded that we are among a good loyal people and that the church is doing a great work which is to mean much in the Kingdom. Brother Anderson as well as other pastors has evidently done a fine work here. It is fine to follow a good man who had builded well and who is held in high esteem by those with whom he has labored. Thank you, Brother Anderson, and may success be yours in your new field.

In His name,

GEO. L. CURRY.

West Forsyth.—It is not the purpose of the writer to send a report to the Herald every week during 1931, as we want to leave some space for others, and we did not intend to send a report this week. However, circumstances cause a change of plans. Since our last report the pastor and family have been remembered in a very substantial manner by some of the people on this charge. In our last report we failed to mention a very suitable gift from Mrs. C. G. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church. It was a Christmas cake and was deeply appreciated. Others who have brought suitable gifts for our dining table include Mrs. J. F. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sprinkle, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Long, all of Pleasant Hill church; Mrs. S. M. Spens, of Stony Knoll church, and Mrs. Winfield Doub, a neighbor. For all these gifts we are very appreciative.

Last Sunday we met our appointments with Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches. There was a large congregation at Baltimore, considering the muddy condition of the roads. After the service we were invited to the splendid home of Brother Evan Doub, where we enjoyed a good dinner and brief visit. From there we hurried to Stony Knoll for the service there at 2:30 o'clock. The usual size congregation was present for this service. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered at each church. The Methodist Protestant Herald subscription campaign was launched at each church, and we are trusting that each church will secure their quota of subscriptions during the month of January.

We regret to report the illness of Brother Ellis Long, of Pleasant Hill church. He has been confined to his home since Christmas Day, and most of the time he has remained in bed. He has been slowly improving for the past few days.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be at Tabernacle at 11 a. m., and Union Hill at 2 p. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Henderson.—Our reporter is so faithful that it hasn't been necessary for me to say much through the Herald about the work in Henderson. But this week there is something that I must say for myself. It is this: Not in a number of years have we, pastor and family, been remembered so generously and lovingly at Christmas time as has been true this season. The Men's Sunday school class, of which Brother S. R. Harris is teacher, started the good work the week before Christmas by showering us with a supply of good things to eat and wear. Other members seemed to catch the spirit and good things kept pouring into the parsonage all through the holidays until we are "well fixed" for groceries, fruit, meat, etc., for many days to come. The gifts ranged all the way from a ham and turkey to a cake of soap. We cannot give a list of all the names of the givers as we do not have them all, so we will not give any of them. We will say here as we have said elsewhere, "Thank you."

We are starting the new year hopefully. The congregation last Sunday morning was above the average. The stewards are working faithfully on the financial program of the church and the Woman's auxiliary is planning to make the year a success so far as their work is concerned. In addition to their missionary activities, the good women of this organization recently installed a large heater in the parsonage, which was greatly needed and which adds considerably to our comfort. We are now prepared to give all callers a "warm reception."

Mrs. Henry Powell and Mrs. C. N. Kalstrom who have been hospital patients are back home. Dr. F. R. Harris who has also been a patient at the hospital at Durham for several weeks is rapidly regaining his strength and is expected home in a few days. Brother A. S. Renn remains quite ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Grisson.

Rev. N. M. Harrison will be with us next Sunday and will speak at the 11 o'clock service Sunday and will speak at the eleven o'clock service.

R. A. HUNTER, Pastor.

New Hope.—We are glad to have I. L. Joyner with us. The second service he preached at New Hope Sunday. Our Sunday school is doing fine. We have prayer meeting every Sunday night.

We are glad to have Rev. Earle Cook and family with us in our Sunday school and prayer meeting. We miss one of our people in our Sunday school, it is Miss Mildred Richardson. She is now married to Mr. Sammy Lathern and their home is in another community.

FAYE AYCOTH, Reporter.

Union Grove.—Our first sermon for the year 1931 was delivered January 4. Mr. Powell is a splendid minister, he believes in the real Holy Spirit. We wish to thank the conference for sending him. He can only give us one sermon a month until weather conditions change.

We are beginning with a small roll again this year, but are hoping that it will increase considerably. We ask for the prayers of all Christian people.

LILLIE MAE BERRIER, Reporter.

English Street Church.—An inspiring sermon was brought to us at the evening service by our pastor, Rev. Geo. Reynolds, his text being, "Therefore leaving the principles of the Doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection." He stated that if there be progress we must go forward, and we must go forward if we reach attainment. He emphasized the fact that we strive for perfection in 1931, profiting by our mistakes in 1930.

The Senior C. E. society plans to meet with the children Sunday evening for the purpose of reorganizing their intermediate and junior C. E. societies. They are also planning to meet with the young people of Midway on the fourth Sunday for the purpose of organizing a society. The society held a program at the home of a convalescent Sunday evening. Following a watch party New Year's Eve, they met at the church and held a short devotional service at the midnight hour.

We are glad indeed that our superintendent, Mr. J. A. Robbins, has decided to continue his work in the Sunday school, for we feel that the recent improvement is due largely to his efficient leadership.

REPORTER.

Baltimore, West Forsyth.—Sunday being very favorable, a large attendance was at church to hear our pastor deliver a very worthy and inspiring sermon. The Lord's Supper was administered.

After the services the pastor and one of his daughters were invited to the home of Mr. L. E. Doub for dinner.

The holidays were quietly spent in and around Baltimore. Very glad indeed to see two of our former Sunday school boys, Messrs. James Nicholson and Marvin Long, back in this community, once more visiting their parents.

Miss Jessie Worth was absent from school several days on account of illness.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

INEZ DOUB, Reporter.

Chase City Charge.—Rev. C. W. Saunders filled his appointment at Friendship Sunday at 11 o'clock. All enjoyed his sermon very much.

We organized a Bible class with a large crowd present. Rev. Mr. Saunders opened the class, with reading the first chapter of Genesis, and followed by the Lord's Prayer. We wish to continue the Bible class through the year.

Hoping it will help all who attend.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Hill, Spring Church Charge.—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk was assigned to this work the first week in December. We are glad to have a pastor, as we were left without one at conference.

Brother Lowdermilk delivered two good sermons Sunday. The sermon in the morning was followed by communion.

Our Sunday school and C. E. society are progressing nicely. The attendance is small, but those who do attend are interested. Our Sunday school hour has been changed from the afternoon, to 10:30 in the morning.

We had our Christmas program and tree the night of December 25. Rev. A. D. Shelton and his children were greatly missed in the program.

Rev. W. F. Ashburn, Rev. A. D. Shelton, and J. D. Shelton visited friends here last Wednesday afternoon and night. We are always glad to have them visit us.

REPORTER.

Gibsonville Church.—A very interesting program was rendered by the Young Men's Bible class on Christmas Eve night. A large tree loaded with gifts which Santa Claus took charge of, distributing the gifts to various members of the audience was a very important part of the program.

On last Sunday morning Mr. Edd Summers was elected assistant Sunday school superintendent. (The superintendent was elected before the conference.)

Rev. N. G. Bethea was present at the preaching hour and delivered an interesting and inspiring sermon, using as a subject, "A Swarm of Bees." Some of the bees included in the swarm were be regular at church, be a subscriber, be punctual, be friendly, be generous and just, be inspiring, be sociable, be optimistic, and be worshipful. The text was taken from 2 Timothy 4:2, "Be Urgent In Season, Out of Season."

The Senior Christian Endeavor will hold a business meeting in the hut on Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock of this week. This is the time for the election of officers for the new year. Full attendance of members is requested.

The Young Ladies' class and the Junior auxiliary will hold a union meeting on Friday of this week at 7:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Lois Faucett. The members of the Young Ladies' class will elect the officers for the ensuing year. All members are urged to be present.

Spring Church Charge.—The first quarterly conference met at Pleasant Hill church on the night of January 20.

Each of the three churches was officially represented. All recommendations made by the pastor were endorsed without a dissenting voice.

Appointments on this charge are as follows: Lebanon, 11 a. m., the first and third Sundays morning. Spring Church, 11 a. m. the second and fourth Sundays. Pleasant Hill 7 a. m., the first and third Sunday nights.

Sunday school at Lebanon and Spring church 10 a. m. Sunday school at Pleasant Hill 10:30 a. m. each Sunday. We are hoping to accomplish much and lasting good with these good people and who have so kindly received of Israel crossed the Red Sea, but not without me, but not without difficulties. The children difficulties and discouragements. The walls of Jerusalem were rebuilt, but not without opposition, for we are told that they had a Sanballat, a Tobiah, and the warring nations around about them, to contend with while they did it. The great secret in it all was in the fact that they were following a praying leader, and in addition to that, the people had a mind to work.

Some of the banks down here are closed up, but we are thankful that the banks of heaven are not closed against those who trust in the Lord and do good.

We are hoping that these earthly banks will soon open again, and give back all, or at least, a large per cent of the deposits of the good people down here, so that they can and will make investments in the Kingdom of our God which will be safe and secure forever.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Macedonia, Fallston Charge.—We are not quite snowed under yet; we have had the largest snow some of us have ever seen, but we are still doing what we can. We have had Sunday school every Sunday except one and some of the children went that Sunday. Our Sunday school is getting along nicely, with the same superintendent, W. L. Huss. We are all glad to welcome Brother Morgan and family back with us for another year; he has been with us for eight years. We hope we can keep him eight more. He has done some good work. May God bless us all together that we may do more than we have ever done.

Sunday evening, December 14, Mr. Morgan preached his first sermon for the conference year at our church; it was a wonderful sermon. Every one present enjoyed it.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hoyle, December 23. They also visited Mr. Ferman Hull who has his back broken, he is getting along very well, we hope and pray that he will soon be well again.

RODIE DAVIS, Reporter.

Moriah.—Our pastor brought us another of his good sermons, his subject being, "Stewardship." Jesus loves a cheerful giver.

Thursday night, December 25th, some of the members gave Pastor Chambliss a shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Sharpe, useful and practical gifts were given of which he expressed his appreciation. Mrs. E. P. Sharpe invited the members of the Missionary society to meet with her for an all day service Thursday, New Year's day.

First Church, Burlington.—The Baraca class held its annual banquet last night in the hut at 7 o'clock, with a large number present. A splendid supper was served by ladies' circle no. 1, of the Woman's auxiliary. During the business session officers were elected for the coming six months: W. E. Smith, president; T. E. Anthony, secretary, and U. S. McAdams, Reporter.

Dublin's, Mocksville Charge.—Attendance at Sunday school has been good throughout the winter months. Our Sunday school is doing fine under the leadership of our new superintendent.

We are glad Rev. G. B. Ferree is with us again. He has filled his appointments with inspiring sermons. We are always glad to have his family worship with us.

We are also glad to have Elbaville back with us.

Wedding bells rang in our community during the holidays, Miss Hazel McDaniel became the bride of Mr. Harvey Gobble of near Fork church. Miss McDaniel was one of our active members, she will be greatly missed at church.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—After an extremely busy day, Pastor Hendry brought us a remarkably strong and inspiring message Sunday night.

One of the largest Sunday night audiences we have ever had enjoyed this fine address. The Sunday night services for the past several weeks have been along evangelistic lines with delightful surprises in special music.

All the circles of the missionary society met at the church last Wednesday night and enjoyed a splendid devotional, business and social occasion.

We are all anticipating a delightful day next Sunday, which is the fourth anniversary of our opening service in the church building. A most pleasing feature of the day's program will be an address in the afternoon by our former pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea.

All of us are looking forward to his coming with much pleasure and hoping he brings Mrs. Bethea and as many of the others of his family and friends as he can. Lunch will be served in the church dining room as is the custom on these occasions. All who read the Herald may consider this a personal invitation to attend.

REPORTER.

First Church, High Point.—As the initial sermon in a series on The Seven Churches of Asia, on last Sunday, the minister, spoke most enthusiastically on "The Penalty of Indecision—Laodicea," basing his discourse on the text from Rev. 3:15-16; "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would that thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth." He said in part: "A Scandinavian student once wrote, 'In the time of Constantine, Europe was inoculated with a mild form of Christianity in order to escape the real disease.' Laodicea was an ancient city of great wealth, power with woolen factories and various industries, three marble theatres, a city of much culture, and because it was rich the church became saturated with the materialistic spirit. Lukewarmness is not a bad condition, but dangerous when one is on the way to frigidity. Laodicea represents a type of religion, which is a rebuke for shameful indecision and indifference for the things of God. Out of the seven churches this one was condemned. Dr. Francis E. Clarke, after visiting these cities, said that the Laodicea was the most wretched and God-forsaken of all. The irresolute indecisive character is out of keeping with the Christian church. No heart is not pure that is not passionate for Christ; no virtue is not safe that is not enthusiastic. Somebody has said that there is more hope for a positive bad man, than an irresolute good man, who is indifferent. The business of the church is to divert high spirits into Gospel truths. Christ was the greatest rebel in all the world—what was Brutus or Cassius compared to Him? Peace of mind and conscience will not be yours long, if you do not have a positive religion. O young people, and older ones, if you are looking for adventure go to the thrill of Christian conquest! But there is redemption for Laodiceans. The Spirit says, 'As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten; be zealous therefore and repent. When the fire in hearts is kindled by the Holy Ghost, there is no more lukewarmness, but decision and enthusiasm. Victor Hugo said:

"Do thy part

Here in the living day as did the great,

Who made old days immortal;

Defying leagued fraud with the single truth,
Nor fearing loss, and daring to be true."

At this service Mrs. J. H. Alford rendered very beautifully the solo, "Hold Thou My Hand," and the choir sang the anthem, "Just for Today."

At the five o'clock Vesper service the minister used as his subject, "When to Attempt the Impossible."

We were much gratified to receive into our communion a splendid young man, Wm. C. Ferree, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ferree. We can but feel that he will be quite an addition to our membership, and hope that First Church may be a blessing to his young life, so splendidly begun. He transferred his membership from Wesley Memorial M. E. church.

The executive board of the Woman's auxiliary held an interesting meeting Monday afternoon at the parsonage with 18 members

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

Dear Missionary Spirited Women:

I am sure you will all agree with me when I say our department in the Herald is of great value in our works. Now for some time I have been asking our officers to write at definite times for the good of us all. I am making a different sort of request this time. It would do us all good to hear from corresponding secretaries of auxiliaries about their best methods of getting co-operation from all the members in their churches. So I am asking for volunteers to send contributions to the Woman's department from now until the Executive committee meets. I should also be glad for some officer to be so filled with the importance of our "job" that she'd wish to say something to the rest of us at other times than the time set by some one else.

Some of our officers have already done this, and I hope others will.

I was so glad Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Bates used our column last week, and I trust the response to their appeals will make our own Mr. Minn's rejoice. I opened the Herald last week with feet and trembling lest there be no Woman's Missionary department, as I had not ask anybody to write, and these voluntary letters made me glad.

I believe the editor has not had a "say" and I for one would enjoy reading something from her.

Yours for a well-filled column and a year of happiness in work for the Master of us all.

9 towels, 3 dress patterns, 3 pair pillow slips, 2 handkerchiefs 10 cakes soap, 4 pair hose, 5 tablets and 6 pencils and a package of Octagon coupons.

Rev. H. S. Schlinke, for his people at Snow Hill, Md., 10 towels, 1 toothbrush, 1 pocket-book, 1 handkerchief and 1 lb. candy.

Mrs. R. L. Elmore, Nacoga, Texas, 2 quilts, 1 pair pants, 1 dress pattern and 1 pair hose.

Mrs. S. R. Harris, a small bag of orion sets.

We are thankful for the Christmas offerings and boxes which came into this report. And of course we are thankful for the regular ones upon which we must depend now for almost another year.

It is with grateful hearts that we acknowledge the goodness of God and the liberality of His people toward us during this Thanksgiving and Christmas season. Gifts of money and substance have come here for the benefit of our children from many churches, Sunday schools, C. E. societies, Woman's auxiliaries, Aid societies and individuals in almost all the conferences of the entire denomination.

For this we praise the Lord and thank the people.

Our Standing

If things here were as they should be we would have a good balance in the bank at present; but instead we have checked out as closely as we dare in paying up back bills. However, we are thankful for the privilege of paying bills, as any honest man does. If you dear people will just keep standing by us, as we know you will, we will get out from under the burden some time.

Our Immediate Needs

We need a good two-horse wagon. Perhaps some one has a good wagon they would either give us or sell us very reasonably. We are in need of a good farm bell. If you have a good one which is no longer in use, give it, or sell it cheap. We need table linen. We need lots of towels and wash cloths, and toilet soap.

Among the many gifts this Christmas there were not as large a number of towels and wash cloths as usual.

Bed sheets and pillow slips are also always acceptable.

May God bless and prosper all of you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

"In the Beginning God" Genesis 1:1

(Theme of Sermon by Rev. Charles Edward Jefferson)

The grand old book of Genesis
Is wise above the thought of men;
It shows its wisdom deep in this—
It finds true cause for all that's been.

This solid, fluid, changeful world,
Pursuing swift its mighty course,
Was not by hand of Chance outhurled,
But came by choice from supreme Source.

Before the world there was its Cause,
His thought and plan and mighty will,
And all that is, fast bound by laws,
Now bears the marks of His great skill.

In lives of men we see His power,
In prophets, priests, and pioneers:
He calls, He guides, He shows the hour
When men must move despite their fears.

For every soul there is the truth
That God foresees and God foreplans,
To help each life from days of youth
To meet its share of world's demands.

Distinguished Preacher In Greensboro

In response to the call of two Greensboro ministers—one a Presbyterian, the other an Episcopal Methodist — Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, Congregationalist, of New York is in Greensboro this week, preaching twice a day. Those who are hearing him—and many are—are enjoying a rare treat. His discourses are in themselves interesting, but the interest is greatly enhanced by his manner of delivering them. He does not seem to you an orator; he is just a man talking to you, and you gladly give audience to every word. He avoids big words and high-sounding phrases and employs language that a child can understand. One of the best compliments he ever received came from a little girl. She went to church tired out and determined not to listen to the sermon, but she said at the end, "He coaxed me to listen to every word." He is such a preacher as the common people hear gladly and yet he deals in subjects of the most advanced thought. He has been preaching to one congregation in New York for 32 years. Advanced age led to his retirement from this responsible pastorate, but he still has vigor. He was born in Cambridge, Ohio, in 1860. He is of rather stocky build, with rather large and round head and face; his hair is reddish brown, thin to baldness on top of his head, and his face is florid. In repose he has a rather weary look, but in speaking he is animated and smiles play over his face as he touches upon humorous phases of his subject.

He has had a fruitful ministry, and its effectiveness we believe is to be accounted for by his moral qualities, strengthened and vitalized by divine grace. He has made more of the spiritual environment of his own closet than of the spiritual environment of his community. I once heard New England described as a hotbed of heresy (back in the days when heresy was recognized as an offense). New England and New York are not far apart. We have known the religious ardor of young men to be chilled, almost frozen, by the atmosphere of that region. When a man lives there for thirty years and keeps on preaching with fullness of faith Jesus Christ as the world's only and all-sufficient Savior from sin, he is a hero of the Christian faith. Dr. Jefferson has done this, and men believed in him because he believes in Christ. He is exalting Christ in his preaching here, and we believe his preaching will result in a great strengthening of the true faith. May our Father lengthen his ministry for years and give him yet many souls for his hire. Our city will be indebted to Rev. Murphy Williams and Rev. Grady Hardin for the arrangement that brought him to Greensboro.

—There recently came to our table a book entitled "Fifteen Thousand Useful Phrases." It did not seem possible that fifteen thousand useful phrases could be found in all English literature. But one has only to turn the leaves of this book to be convinced. The making of such a book, like the making of a Bible concordance, involved immense labor. But it was a worthwhile undertaking and has been finished in such a way as to make a book of real value. Especially would we recommend it as a useful help to all who are learning to speak or write for the public. This useful book was compiled by Mr. Grenville Kleiser and is published and sold by Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York, for $1.75 the copy.

—We thank Rev. Lawrence Little for his discriminating article on Christian Education. Christian education is as real a thing and as good a thing as Christian evangelism. If there is anything more foolish to say than that Christian evangelism is not needed, it is that Christian education is not needed. Both are needed and God has set in the church men and women to do both kinds of work. Let not the evangelist decry the educator or the educator depreciate the evangelist.

WHEN IS EDUCATION CHRISTIAN?

By REV. LAWRENCE LITTLE

It would be difficult, if indeed not impossible, to draw a sharp line of demarcation between Christian education and the best education that is not distinctively Christian. In many instances the two would inevitably shade over into each other and oftentimes they would be altogether indistinguishable. There are large ranges of human interest and effort to which both types of education would minister. Both types use many of the same methods and much of the same curriculum materials. Both agree upon many of the same character outcomes. But unless there can be found some distinguishing characteristics, there seems to be no good reason for insisting upon Christian education as a special field of effort, no good excuse for maintaining a program of religious education in connection with, or in addition to, our program of general or secular education. It is not my purpose to argue here the question as to whether or not there is a need for "Christian education" nor to defend its claims upon the time and energies of the educator. I have set for myself the task of stating what, in my judgment, are its essentially distinctive features.

Perhaps the most unique feature of Christian education is its underlying philosophy of life. Every system of education must necessarily have an underlying philosophy whether or not its leaders have clearly formulated it. Christian education may be said to rest upon an acceptance of the life and teachings of Jesus as set forth in the Gospels and upon later interpretations of these teachings as evolved in the experience of Christian people since the time of Christ. It is the belief of Christians that the principles embodied in these teachings and these interpretations contain the best formulation of values and the highest standards of living as yet made available to human beings. Most Christians would not insist that current interpretations of Jesus' teachings are necessarily adequate, but would assent to the view that our interpretations must undergo constant revisions in the light of changing conditions and needs. They would not deny the possibility of the discovery of new meanings as human life and contacts become broader and more complex.

Interpretations of the principles underlying Christian experience vary among different groups and individuals, and it would perhaps be impossible to draw up any statement of philosophy that would be satisfactory to all Christians. But it is probable that most of the leaders of Christian education would assent to the following basic assumptions:

1. That the nature of the universe cannot be explained wholly in terms of mechanism, but that in and back of all mechanical causation there is Will, Purpose, and Personality. These attributes the Christian ascribes to God, whom he considers the source of all life and activity.

2. That this Being whom we call God is intimately concerned with human persons, whom He considers of infinite worth and to whom He maintains the relation of Father. It is in and through human beings that He is working out His plans and purposes for the universe. In this process of realization, He makes Himself known whenever man turns to Him in the right spiritual attitude.

3. That His regard for human personality is such that He will not suffer its destruction at bodily death. Human life, therefore, has significance and value not only from the standpoint of actuality but from that of potentiality as well.

4. That the principle of Love as exemplified by Jesus is the prime motivating force by which all human relations are to be guided. This principle must affect life in all its interests: economic, social, moral, and religious. The practical consummation of this principle will be the realization of the "Kingdom of God," as manifested in a universal recognition of the Fatherhood of God and of the brotherhood of all men.

If this statement of the philosophy of Christian education be a proper one, we may find that the application of its principles may make certain differences between Christian and non-Christian education.

In the first place, Christian education would orient itself with reference to the concepts of God as Creator and Father and of human beings as His creatures. It would make such concepts the basis for its system of morality and the motivating force in all human conduct. Jesus' way of life, however this might be interpreted by the individual Christian, would be accepted as the norm of Christian living, and education would seek definitely to lead the individual to an experience of God and to a commitment to this way of living. Non-Christian education would not necessarily have such reference or aims but would probably ground its morality in the accepted standards of human society.

In the second place, Christian education would seek definitely to embody the principles set forth by Jesus in all human relations. It would seek to enlist the active participation of individuals and groups in the progressive reconstruction of these relationships in the direction of Jesus' teachings. Societal organization and processes would be subjected constantly to critical examination in the light of these principles, and every individual and group would be encouraged to make some original and constructive contribution to remedial treatment. As a means toward this end, one of the aims of Christian education would be preparation for and participation in the life and activities of the Christian church. It would not necessarily demand church membership on the part of every individual, but it would certainly weight its program in this direction. Non-Christian education, on the other hand, would have to assume necessarily nothing more than a neutral attitude toward the church and its program.

In the third place, Christian education would select its curriculum materials and activities with reference to religious culture. It would give a central place in the course of studies to the Bible, particularly to the life and teachings of Jesus, in the belief that a proper understanding of Christian principles can be built only upon a knowledge of such materials. It would not restrict its curriculum, however, merely to the Bible, but would use other religious literature such as church history, biography of church leaders, religious poetry, drama, and hymns. It would use any other materials which might seem to have value in producing character growth. A large use would be made of worship; and training in the use of prayer, sacred music, and other forms of religious expression would be regular features. Non-Christian education, while it would use much of the same materials, would select them not with reference to religious culture but with a view to their utility in bringing about effective adaptation to group culture. Its use of religious materials would be incidental rather than essential.

Finally, Christian education would emphasize the necessity of providing an essentially Christian environment for the training of the child. Class management, instruction, and control would be conceived in terms of the Christian purpose and ideal. Teacher and pupil relationships would be maintained on the basis of mutual regard for the worth of personality. The teacher would possess all that modern education demands from the standpoint of training and technique, but he would be in addition a conscious follower of Christ and His standards of living. Not only would he exemplify these standards in his own life, but he would seek to achieve them in the lives of his pupils. Non-Christian education would recognize the importance of a suitable environment and of the teacher's personality, but the standards by which these are judged would be raised as to the teacher's philosophy of life, certainly not as having to do with the principles which have been outlined here as essentially and necessarily Christian. In non-Christian education, the teacher's work would be judged by the extent to which his pupils adapted themselves to the demands of their social group, whereas in Christian education insistence would be placed upon their adaptation to a larger group, the universal fellowship of all human beings as children of a common God and Father.

There are doubtless other differences that might be pointed out, but these are sufficient to show that there are distinctive features in Christian education that ought to be promoted and conserved. We need only point out, in conclusion, that not all education that calls itself Christian is maintained on the high levels outlined in this article. Much that goes by the name of Christian education is utterly unworthy of that name. Moreover, much education that does not claim to be Christian is in spirit essentially so. Wherever the spirit of Jesus and His regard for personality are being manifested, there Christian education is going forward call it by whatever name you will. Where these are absent, it is not Christian education though this label be flaunted to the ends of the earth. Let us seek to make all education Christian!

LIVING DANGEROUSLY AND FLEXIBLY

By REV. LUTHER K. LONG

"What are you reading, Grandfather?" asked the small boy as he came into my study and noticed an open book in my hand. Then, looking closely at the page where I had enclosed a sentence with pencil marks, he read: "If we are to live in any true sense at all, we are"—here I had to help with the last few words—"compelled to live dangerously."

"Yes," I said, "you read that very well. 'If we are to live in any true sense at all, we are compelled to live dangerously'."

It is not difficult for even a small child to get the general idea of this sentence, and many of its implications. Dwelling in a house the little folks find living a dangerous operation. Going up stairs and down, in and out of the basement, finding one's way over polished floors in the midst of rugs and chairs, stools and playthings, one is liable to be tripped up and to suffer many bumps and bruises. Out on the streets, riding in school buses, encountering thick traffic at crossings, having to do with other children at work and play inside and outside the school building—in all these situations living has its dangers.

Those who grow up and do business on the farms, on the streets, in the stores and shops and factories, who travel by auto or train or aeroplane—all of these are compelled to face increasing dangers.

Besides our bodies, we must carry out into the world our minds, our hearts, our principles, our characters, our habits, and the religious and social teachings of our homes and churches. These are all exposed to contact with other minds, characters, and teachings. We believe that these exposures to other influences are not only inevitable, if we are to live in any true sense at all, but, also, that they are, on the whole, to our advantage. However, profit or loss depends on the attitude we take toward these outside influences.

Our minds, principles, and characters are in a state of flux. Our great institutions—the state, the church, the school, the family—are, during much of the time, in a state of unstable equilibrium. Many of us would like to believe that these institutions have reached a satisfactory and final form of organization—or, at least, that they are without doubt on the right road and well on the way to the goal. But the best minds are not willing that we should rest in that comfortable faith. And those of us who have read history to any advantage know that in the direction of change lie sour hope for a better future for ourselves and for our loved institutions.

This brings us to two sentences farther down the pages of this interesting volume:

"It is the rigid institution that is broken; the institution that cannot change is dying. By its flexibility and its adaptation to changing conditions an institution reveals its stability and its power of growth."

For a number of years Kings have been departing. Times and conditions have been changing. Those nations that are the most sensitive to present conditions and needs, and that make the wisest adaptations to meet the rising tide of democracy, are likely to become stable and prosperous. Those that are stiff and set in their ways will be broken.

The industrial systems that will not recognize the rights of laborers to organize—even as capital organizes—must suffer the consequences of their irrational stubbornness. For laboring people, as they become more intelligent and resourceful and learn the lessons of organization and co-operation, will grow in power and are bound to have an increasingly decisive word to say concerning the management of the enterprises into which they put the strength of their minds and muscles. If the old industrial system will not change for the better, it will be broken—even as slavery and the feudal system had to give way to the wages system.

It goes without saying that the churches, at the present time, are not in good condition. They are too much managed, for one thing, by denominational officials. This is true in the case of democratically organized denominations, as well as in the case of those governed from the top down. Leaders are not always leaders—too often they are only obstructionists.

All Things Through Christ

Alamance

January 9-10.—These two days were given to Brother Burgess and the people of his charge, in four meetings at Center church. The quarterly conference on Saturday was preceded by preaching in the morning. Dinner was served in the church, and the conference called to order at 2 o'clock. Seventeen officials were present, representing each of the four churches except Rock Creek. Brother J. W. Whitehead, the efficient secretary of the conference, and father of our Rev. T. J. Whitehead, was elected to succeed himself. This is 37 years in succession he has served this charge in this capacity. The business of the conference was transacted with zeal and unity of spirit and purpose. The salary and all budgets were apportioned to the different churches. The membership allotment, including salary and all budgets, is only $4.54. Last year the charge paid $10 per member. This is nearly $1 more than the per capita payment of the entire conference. If the charge will raise this year as much as it did in 1930, salary and all budgets will be paid in full, and more than $2,500 will be left for local purposes. There are no more substantial people in the conference than those of the Alamance charge. If they only believed as we do about it, they could stand at the head of the conference financially, as they do alphabetically. The people and pastor are justly proud of Sapling Ridge church, which was rebuilt last year at a cost of about $4,000. The finishing touches are now being put on, and Bethel church was greatly improved also by the addition of four Sunday School rooms. The cost was $775. It is difficult to see how they did it at this cost. The Sunday Schools of the charge are all running well, except the one at Sapling Ridge. They had to suspend while rebuilding their church. But they will reopen soon, and with better facilities for work. The Auxiliary at Bethel is functioning well, as is its usual record. Center has a good C. E. Society, with about 50 members. The Stewards report showed that $34 had been paid on salary, and nothing on budgets. An interesting feature of the conference was the sixteen-year-old boy steward,—J. G. Love, representing Center church. His father died last year (regret not to be able to give his initials) and the church elected his son to succeed him in office. It was highly gratifying to find him present and to know his willingness to serve in this capacity. The brethren pronounced him a good steward. We were present at Sunday School Sunday morning and preached at 11 o'clock. The attendance was good, considering the winter roads. Miss Lillie May Braxton is doing efficient work as superintendent of the S. S. Pastor Burgess is beginning his sixth consecutive year with this charge. He has the full confidence of his people, and is hopeful of another year of successful work. He is planning already for the revival program of the charge. We are glad to have had these two days on this field, and the pastor and his people have our thanks for their attention to our needs and their concern for our comfort.

Journals

It is gratifying to have them in hand. The form and workmanship are good. We are sure that in the main the records are correct. If some errors have crept in, we will make due allowance for that. It is exceedingly difficult to publish a conference Journal with absolute accuracy, even with a secretary as efficient as ours. Now that we have the Journal, let us do these two things: first, sell it, and send the money at once to Brother Bates so he can pay the printer. Second, read it from cover to cover. Study the statistics; see what recognition your charge has on the conference honor roll; become familiar with all plans made by the conference for the work of this year; in general, become acquainted with what was done and what is to be done. It's in the Journal. We trust that each pastor may have no difficulty in disposing of his allotment.

Denominational Young People's Day

January 25.—Fourth Sunday, or some other near date that is more convenient,—is the time appointed to be observed as Denominational Young People's Day. An interesting and pleasing program has been arranged, and can be had from Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Westminster, Md. We trust that all of our churches will observe this day. Brother Gibbs will supply the program for the asking, and all the effort required in preparing it will be well repaid. We urge pastors and superintendents to see that this day is observed. The offering goes to New Century Service, and counts on the budget of the local church.

Burned

We learned today, through Brother Cranford, of the burning of our Lincolnton church. The fire occurred last Sunday morning between the heating of the church and the opening of Sunday School. No one was present when the building caught on fire. It is thought, so Brother Cranford stated, that an oil stove, used to heat the Sunday School rooms, exploded, and that the fire originated in this way. The building was a complete loss. Fortunately, it was insured for $3,000. The Lincolnton congregation will have the deep sympathy of the entire conference. It is gratifying to know that plans are already on foot to rebuild. Let us hope and pray that even out of this fire may come larger and better things for the Lincolnton church.

Hopefully

"We are starting the new year hopefully." This statement, in the report of one pastor last week, is characteristic of the entire conference, as indicated by the various HERALD reports, and reflected also in personal interviews. Pastors have entered upon the work of the year with thoughtful earnestness, and the response of the people has been heartening. It is pleasing, too, to learn of the thoughtfulness of the people toward the pastor, as indicated in the numerous poundings that are being reported. One of these pounded pastors says, "One of the best attended poundings it has been our joy to experience since we have been in the ministry." (And that has been some time, too). Of course this is only one

OUR STORY PAGE

HOW WILLIAM WON ONE

Just as the clock struck two, the door opened and William Ratcliff hurried through the hall carrying his violin.

At the age of seven, William had shown such a marked taste for music that his parents sacrificed to give him lessons on his violin. Now, at the age of twelve, he was earning money to pay for them himself.

A few months before this story opens a great violinist, Frederick Van Fossen, had made a wonderful offer to the boys under thirteen. A valuable Stradivarius was to be given to the one who, on the first day of January, played the most skillfully and pleasingly to him.

Knowing the old musician's eccentricity, William was working hard on an especially difficult piece, hoping that he would be the fortunate boy to win the violin.

At last the eventful day arrived. On that memorable Sunday morning of the New Year the bells rang out their greetings from the church steeples thrilling their hearers with their welcome message—"Come-m-m! Come-m-m-m-m!"

William belonged to a Bible School class which had for its motto, "Win One." He had never tried to do this for he himself had not yet been won for King Jesus. But on this New Year's Day, as he listened to the earnest words of his teacher, a new light entered his soul and he resolved that not only would he take Jesus as his Captain but that he would "Win One" for Him.

That afternoon he was to play before Mr. Van Fossen. As he was walking towards the studio, a great conflict was raging in his soul. Knowing the old gentleman to be an infidel, William felt sure that here was his opportunity to "Win One" for Jesus. But what could he do or say? If he asked Mr. Van Fossen to take Jesus as his King, the old man might become very angry and refuse to listen to his playing.

Then, suddenly, as he stood in the presence of the noted musician, a great resolve formed in his mind. Quickly, lest he should become faint-hearted, he drew his bow across the strings. Then softly and tenderly he played the strains of the old familiar hymn—"Jesus, I my cross have taken, All to leave and follow Thee."

As he finished playing, Mr. Van Fossen arose and led him to the door. "My chance to win the violin is gone, mother," said William a little later as he told her the story. "I did not play the piece on which I had practiced, for I wanted to win him for King Jesus, and now I have lost everything."

Just as the sun was touching with golden fingers the peaks of the distant hills and painting the sky with myriads of wonderful colors, a note was delivered to William. The words of the message were: "Come and see me at once. Frederick Van Fossen."

Breathlessly, William entered for the second time the beautiful studio of the noted infidel. Would he be angry with him?

"My boy," said the old gentleman, "why did you play that hymn for me today?" As William told of his resolution to start the New Year by taking Jesus as his Captain and explained his desire to win one for Him, the tears trickled down the man's cheeks.

"That was my mother's favorite hymn," he said. "When you played it this afternoon, I fancied I heard her voice calling me to take Jesus for my King. This New Year's Day begins a new life for me. Here is the violin. You have not only won it, but you have 'Won One' for King Jesus."—Publisher Unknown.

phase of the manifested interest of the people in regard to the welfare of their pastors,—an extra phase. Salaries are being looked after, too. Though in some cases there could, and should be, improvement here. However, the work is starting well, and it is highly encouraging to read the cheering reports that come in from week to week from pastors and reporters. By this spirit we conquer.

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Our Message, 1 Cor. 2:1-5.

Tuesday—Our Missions, Matt. 28:18-20.

Wednesday—Our Great Men, Heb. 11:1-10.

Thursday—Our Service, Matt. 20:27-28.

Friday—Our Healing Ministry, Acts 3:1-11.

Saturday—Our High Aims, Romans 12:1-10.

To the Leader

In the day when Christ and his disciples were here on earth there were no denominations. Something has happened that has brought about this divided state of things. We have problems that were not present in the church of the New Testament.

No doubt Jesus knew that the division would come and He prayed that His disciples might be one. He greatly desired the world to believe on Him, and He realized that a united church could inspire that belief, while a divided one could not. The Apostle Paul saw the beginning of this division in the church at Corinth.

A free and independent church of Christ wherever a church is needed is the remedy for the division. We should let Christ and the revealed word of God hold our loyalty. All Christians can agree on bearing the name of their Lord Jesus Christ.

Consider These

1. What do you regard as the greatest weakness of the church today?
2. What stands in the way of the church going forward in world conquest today?
3. What reason did Jesus give in His prayer in John 17 for desiring that His followers be one?
4. How did our religious denominations of today come to be?

For Closing the Meeting

The closing prayer might be by some older person, an older or the minister, who has been asked to pray earnestly for the unity of God's people.

CORRECTION

A mix-up appeared last week in Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk's report. Here is what he wrote:

"We are hoping to accomplish much and lasting good with these good people who have so kindly received me, but not without difficulties. The children of Israel crossed the Red Sea, but not without difficulties."

We regret the mishap and gladly make correction.

LINEBERRY CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Our last business meeting was held January 3, 1931, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Van B. Wood. We had 22 present, very good considering the weather.

After the business we adjourned for the social hour. The social committee had planned some very interesting games. We then adjourned to meet with Rev. E. A. Bingham on Saturday night before the first Sunday in February.

Rev. E. A. Bingham brought us a very interesting and helpful message January 4. His subject was "Job and his temptations." This should be an inspiration to us. When we are criticized and tempted we should not give up so quickly.

Let's all make our New Year's resolutions not to give up, but press onward.

PRESS COMMITTEE.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE ON THE AIR

Next Monday evening, January 19th, 7:30 to 8 o'clock, the High Point College music department will broadcast over station WBIG (Greensboro). Each every other Monday evening, at the same hour, they will broadcast from the same station. With each program a five-minute address will be delivered with the college as its subject. You will enjoy tuning in at this hour. WBIG operates on a frequency of 1320 kilocycles.

Watch for announcements of broadcasts from other stations.

Address your remarks as to the program, or the idea of broadcasting to the college.

Brother Willis Booth, leader of song in Calvary church, honored the HERALD last Sunday morning by singing "Forgetting the Angels," printed last week. It sounded much better than it reads.

Several of our ministers were in Greensboro on Monday to hear Dr. Jefferson, New York preacher. We noted the presence of Brothers Bethua, Paschall, and Shelton from Burlington, and Brothers Pritchard and Geringer from Winston. There were probably others that we did not see.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

NOTES FROM MEBANE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Our Auxiliary is two and one-half years old and we are wonderfully pleased with the results since the merger. Not that we were not missionary workers before, but we have received such splendid co-operation from the majority of our ladies. We are composed of four ladies' circles, the Ever-Ready circle made up of the younger ladies and girls, and the William Nicholson Mission Band.

Several of our women hold some official position in the Auxiliary, and most of the members of each circle are active and feel an individual responsibility, and this of course contributes very largely to the success of the organization. I can't refrain from saying something about our methods of raising our budget. Perhaps someone else will be benefited also. This year the different circles have secured names for quilt squares, asking that each person give ten cents with their name, and when the quilt is completed it is sold. Sewing has proven quite a satisfactory way to raise funds, as has selling cakes and candy, serving suppers, free-will and special offerings. Some of the circles decided that each hostess to the circle give a dollar instead of serving refreshments; this has been observed insofar as giving the dollar is concerned but the refreshments were rarely left off.

Some have tried dividing their circle in half, each lady on one side giving a penny for every clear day and each lady on the other half giving a penny for every cloudy or rainy day, this money being turned into the circle treasurer every quarter. Some have also served the Kiwanis. And may I add we have made some contributions that will not count on our budget but we are confident we have helped to make glad the hearts of some who have given and are giving their best to the service of God.

MRS. J. E. FOUST, Cor. Sec'y.

NOTICE OF BRANCH EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

In accordance with the action taken by the executive committee at its last meeting, namely, that executive committee meetings be held during the months of January, April, July and October, we are calling a meeting for Tuesday, January 27, at 10:30 a. m.

Mrs. C. W. Bates has invited us to meet in the parsonage of Calvary Church, Greensboro. The parsonage is the last house on the right side of Brown street, turning off from Asheboro street just south of the church.

In order to make the entertainment easy, each member of the executive committee attending is requested to bring a few sandwiches. Coffee will be provided by Mrs. Pates.

We would like a full attendance at this meeting as some matters of importance are to be considered, one of which is the date and place of Branch meeting in April. Invitations

THE TIMES

The times are what you think they are,

Good, bad, or otherwise;

Your mind may grovel in the gloom,

Or soar to sunny skies.

The pessimist is always down,

In luck and business too;

The optimist toils bravely on

To make his dreams come true.

Depression and discouragement,

Are foes to real success;

But confidence and industry,

Bring health and happiness.

The times are what you think they are,

Good, bad, or otherwise;

Your mind may grovel in the gloom,

Or soar to sunny skies.

Grenville Kleiser.

WHEN KINDNESS PAID

It is our habit to feed the birds, especially in the winter. A community meal is served on the back lawn and a few choice morsels placed on the veranda for the convenience of three or four sparrows that have their nests in the eaves at the front of the house.

One morning, after placing the crumbs on the veranda, we watched from the living-room window our little friends partake of the feast. To our surprise, one sparrow arrived with something in his mouth, which he dropped beside the bread and proceeded to eat.

When our guests had departed, we found that the object in question was a one-dollar bill.

On confiding in our next-door neighbor, who did not feed them, that our birds were paying guests, she smiled. That morning a one-dollar bill had disappeared from her milk bottle, where she had left it for the purchase of milk-tickets.

Our neighbor has since become interested in the birds and feeds them. She will tell you that although she has not found them to be paying guests, their friendship and confidence is invaluable.—Willia Hoey.

MARCH OF FREEMEN

Forward, valiant Freeman,
Marching in God's might,
Bearing banners blazoned:
"Liberty and Light."
Men of every nation,
Welded into one,
Brothers marching onward,
Till our work is done.

Chorus:

Forward, valiant Freeman,
Marching in God's might,
Bearing banners blazoned:
"Liberty and Light."

Truth our only weapon,
God our only guide;
We are His crusaders
Marching side by side.
Justice for our helmet,
Honor for our shield,
Clad in God's own armor,
None can make us yield.

We have but one purpose,
God's own Holy will;
With His strength to help us,
We march forward still.
Forward, ever forward,
Rough tho be the road,
Following the footsteps
Trodden by our God.

Onward, valiant Freeman,
Girded with God's might,
We are now enlisted
Warriors for the right.
We will labor daily,
Never will we cease,
Till all men are banded
In universal peace.

MISSIONARY WORK IN M. E. CHURCH

To the Editor of Zion's Herald:

With great amazement I read the article in the Herald of December 24 entitled "The W. F. M. S. Share." I hope that the author will understand and pardon my slang if I ask him, "How did you get that way?"

Of course I realize that all sincere apologists for our beloved church wish to find some "goat" on which to lay the responsibility for the shameful slump in World Service paying; but to pick out for that purpose the ONE organization which has been consistently and successfully disseminating foreign missionary information to at least a small group in almost every local church, and training a band of generous payers to all World Service causes—really, now, is not that a little bit funny?

It may be, however, that some will not see the humorous side. It might even be that the author's advice to the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society to begin to pay their proportionate share to World Service would be resented by, for example, a working woman in our local Auxiliary who, besides paying her $1.20 a year for W. F. M. S. dues, pays into the local World Service treasury $1.60 each week, and in addition has sent a hundred dollars to World Service headquarters in response to the special October calls these last two years. It may not, after all, seem in the least humorous to the tithing women of Methodism, practically all of whom are probably members of one or both of the women's missionary organizations, to be told that besides paying their society dues and contributing generously to World Service they should also make up for the two-thirds of the Methodist membership who pay nothing at all to World Service. Personally, I find that such advice—as Arthur Briggs in his Forum article said of the "wets"—"give me a pain in the neck!"

ILGA E. HERRICK.

Brockton.

Tourist—This seems to be a very dangerous precipice. It's a wonder they don't put up a warning sign.

Native—Yes, it is dangerous, but they kept a warning sign up for two years and no one fell over, so it was taken down.

"As a result of nation-wide observation, I am convinced that there is no part of the United States that has not been improved by the Prohibition laws."—Commander Evangeline Booth.

OBJECTS TO "SERVANT"

Margaret Bonfield, Great Britain's minister of labor, stated in an address at Manchester that she is opposed to the use of the term "domestic servant" because it connotes an inferior status. She suggested that "household worker" be substituted.

TUT'S TOMB FOR TOURISTS

Howard Carter, noted Egyptologist, reported that he is clearing the tomb of Tutankhamen in the Valley of Kings in Egypt and will soon have it ready for the admission of tourists. The precious contents of the tomb are being taken in cases down the Nile to Cairo where they will be placed in the museum.

Mrs. Mary A. Owen and her daughter sends $5.00; Dr. S. Heininger, a superannuated minister, and grand old soldier of the cross, Grand Rapids, Mich., sends $8.00; and that Gibsonville has three items totaling $17.38; and also that the N. C. Branch gives us a good lift.

May God bless His dear people for this hearty response to our needs here in these critical times. We just love you and appreciate you and thank you for your care of us.

We are thankful for these gifts of materials.

Sickness in Our Family

One of our boys was operated on for appendicitis a bit over one week ago, and he has gotten along fine. The promise is that he may come home from the hospital tomorrow, Tuesday.

Another little fellow developed deep cold last Monday, which quickly developed into pneumonia so it seemed best for him to go to the hospital. He is a frail little chap, and had pneumonia last winter, so we were fearful for him. But, though he is not yet out of danger, we rejoice today in a slightly improved condition. Except for colds, some sprains and bruises the rest of us are well. may we have the sustaining influences of your prayers?

Our Needs

1. Money to pay our bills and keep us going.
2. A good two-horse wagon.
3. A good farm bell. Since writing this we have the promise of a bell.
4. Towels, wash cloths, table cloths and bed linen.

Please Remember

You dear people, both of our own conference and of the other conferences were just so fine to come to our help around Thanksgiving and Christmas that we were able to pay up a great many of our outstanding obligations. May we now urge you not to slacken your hand—Just keep up the good work, and help us to get entirely out, and to go through this year without the burden of debt upon us.

We were catching up, but there was such a let down in Sunday School and church offerings to the Home during last year that the sum total of the shortage was about $4,000. Please don't let down this year. Keep up the good work, and we will conserve every penny possible. Keep up the regular monthly offerings in each S. S. in conference, and when the annual conference comes again all of us will be happy about the work here.

We are pleading for the privilege of running on a cash basis here. If we can get to the point of doing this it will save to the Home many, many dollars. We thank you for your prayers, for your interest and for your co-operation.

One pastor recently said, "Our Worker's Council agreed in its last meeting to plan to raise a larger monthly offering for the Home each month." We thank him and his council, and trust that the same spirit will prevail through the conference.

God bless and prosper each of you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

P. S.—We want several young crepe myrtle trees, and maple trees, and shrubbery of various kinds. Send them if you can.

Thank you,

A. G. D.

TODAY

I will start today serenely
With true and noble aim;
I will give unselfish service
To enrich another's name.

I will speak a word of courage
To a soul enslaved by fear;
I will dissipate the drab discord
With the sunshine of good cheer.

I will be sincere and humble
In the work I have to do;
I will praise instead of censure
And see the good in you.

I will keep my mind and body
Sound and flexible and pure;
I will give my time and study
To the things that long endure.

I will do what I am able
To advance a worthy cause;
I will strive to lessen evil
And obey God's righteous laws.

I will pray to Him to guide me
In the straight and narrow way;
I will shun false pride and folly
I will live my best today.
—Grenville Kleiser.

THE KINDLY MAN

We like the friendly, kindly man,
No matter what his race or creed;
His is the one redeeming plan,
Of which this living world has need.
—Bert Morehouse in "Our Dumb Animals."

—The blood transfusion service was asked to make a blood transfusion at a London hospital in order to save the life of a Jewish patient. When the Jew learned that the donor of the blood was not a Jew he refused to submit to the transfusion. He could not, he said, permit Gentile blood to flow in his veins.

A certain Michigan limestone and chemical company is in for a lot of belting. It is the recent owner of what is claimed to be the largest conveyor belt in the world. The dimensions: 700 feet long, 54 inches wide and 3 1/4 inches thick. It weighs 63,000 pounds and is capable of carrying 1,950 tons of limestone an hour.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Winston.—The Philathea class of the First Church, held its monthly meeting Monday evening at the church with eleven members present.

Mrs. W. C. Tise, the president, presided and Miss Nannie Watson conducted devotionals giving the life of John the Baptist, followed by the Lord's Prayer.

Various business matters were discussed and plans were made for getting members for the Sunday school.

Mrs. B. K. Millaway was elected assistant secretary and treasurer, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, vice-president, and Mrs. J. E. Kirk, reporter.

A social hour was enjoyed. Those having birthdays in this month were delightfully showered.

Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Charge.—We were all glad to have Rev. C. E. Ridge back for our pastor.

On Wednesday afternoon, December 24, we had our little Christmas program. The children did fine. Our pastor made a nice talk on the meaning of Christmas. The Sunday school all enjoyed old Santa Claus and their treats which were given by the S. S., and also the presents which were taken from the Christmas tree.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. The young people attend fine and we hope the older ones will go to attending better.

On Sunday afternoon, December 28, our pastor delivered a good message on the "Angel's Message."

MRS. ETHEL HUNT, Reporter.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Charge.—We are indeed glad to have our pastor return to us. We all have learned to love Mr. and Mrs. Peeler.

We had a very impressive service last Sunday. Our pastor asked for all that desired to make a better record of their life this new year to come and give him their hand and quite a goodly number went, and it seemed all were encouraged to do more and better work. Our Sunday school is doing very nicely; we have splendid attendance, also we have a good missionary society; every member seems to be interested. Then our young people are having Christian Endeavor through the cold weather just as they did before it was cold. Then we have our mid-week prayer meeting and that is very helpful.

We had good Christmas program. Much credit is due Mrs. Ida Jones Mitchell for the training of the children. After the children recited their pieces all were made happy by having a treat from the Sunday school. Presents were received also from friend to friend. Some one has asked why we could not keep that glad and good happy spirit all the year like we have at Christmas time. We might be much benefited by so doing. Suppose we all try it this New Year.

MARTHA PARSONS.

Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit.—Bro. Ferree filled his appointment Sunday morning with an inspiring sermon. Communion service was also held. We are very glad to have his family with us at each service.

Our Christmas program December 23, went off very successfully, and all the children of this community were remembered by Santa Claus whether they were members of the Sunday school or not.

Our C. E. society also remembered some unfortunate families of the community, with many things to eat.

Our C. E. society is progressing nicely. During the rough weather we have not missed a single meeting.

The Ladies' Aid is still doing its part.

On December 28, one of our oldest members, Mr. Louis H. Bailey, departed this life after a few days of illness.

Best wishes for another successful year.

STELLA BAILEY, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—Our services at Tabernacle and Union Hill last Sunday were well attended, considering the muddy roads and sickness among some of the members of each church. The Ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered following the sermon at each service, and the usual number participated.

The pastor and family appreciate very much the thoughtfulness of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Petree, in the donation of a set of batteries for the parsonage telephone. The gift is highly appreciated.

Tabernacle Sunday school held their annual election of officers on the first Sunday and the following were elected: Marvin Spears, superintendent; Mrs. J. W. Masoncup, assistant superintendent, and C. R. Watts, secretary. The new superintendent is a young man, and he is expected to enter upon the work with much enthusiasm and make the work of the Sunday school move along nicely. He succeeds Mrs. J. W. Masoncup, who served as superintendent for the past three years.

Our appointment for next Sunday will be with Pleasant Hill church at 11 a. m. The Ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be administered in connection with the service.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Spring Church, Spring Church Charge.—Our Christmas program was given December 26th. Due to the extremely bad weather the attendance and offerings were small.

Our Sunday school is holding its own. We hope that interest and attendance will improve as spring opens. Our new superintendent, Mr. J. W. Crews, Jr., is certainly wide awake. He always has some good plans to present that will be of benefit to the school.

Brother Lowdermilk met with us yesterday. He brought us a most helpful message. The main thought he left with us was the importance of overcoming difficulties. He said that while the people had many difficulties in rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem they worked together and accomplished their task. If we wish to progress in God's work we must willingly give our services, time and money and work together regardless of difficulties.

Mr. James Massey will be teacher in our Christian Endeavor prayer service next Sunday.

REPORTER.

Guilford Circuit.—December 23, several cars from Vickery and Hickory Grove churches came through the snow to the parsonage loaded with many good things to eat.

The people that were in those cars began to carry into our dining room. My wife and I had no words to express our appreciation for those gifts, and we just said, "Thank you, thank you."

The next day we attended the Christmas service at Fairfield and those people there gave us many things for our pantry. Also, a member of this church moved us to the parsonage free of charge.

Some of the other churches on this work pounded us during the summer season with canned fruits, and later in the year with fuel. And all of the churches on this work have helped us in many ways to keep our home supplied with food.

We wish to express our thanks for all the Christmas gifts and Christmas greetings that we received. And also, we wish to thank the people of First Church, Thomasville, for remembering us with Christmas greetings.

May the New Year bring abundant blessings to each of our former parishioners, and to each member of each church we are now serving.

E. O. PEELER.

Asheville.—Would you friends like to hear from us again? Our week-end days here have been so full and so much coming and going that it has kept us on the move.

All our college girls and boys were home to visit their respective parents during the Christmas holidays. Misses Margaret Fawcett, Louise Hanner, Barbara Younginer, Verda McIntire and Mr. Ray Foster. Miss Elma Fawcett did not come home from Philadelphia.

Our young people are all working and happy. The auxiliary met with Mrs. Wilson on Salem Ave., with a good attendance. They sent a Christmas box to their adopted sister at High Point. Officers were elected as follows: President, Miss Nancy Clonise; Chaplain, Miss Mildred Younginer; Secretary, Miss Josie McNeill. Treasurer, Miss Ruth Drake. They will give their play "Miss Molly" soon.

The C. E. business meeting was held Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Pratt with a good attendance. The pledged to raise $100 for the Budget. It is fine to have a society that is humming like this one. Mr. E. H. Pratt conducted the meeting last evening and it was very interesting. A large crowd was present.

The Woman's auxiliary met with Mrs. F. R. McIntire for their monthly meeting. Mrs. H. O. Charuch had charge of the program which was very helpful and instructive. Devotional was conducted by Mrs. G. P. Younginer. A neat sum was realized from our holiday sale. We are wide awake. Our treasurer, Mrs. E. C. Fawcett, gave us a very interesting report of amounts paid in and out.

Our morning services have been most helpful and inspirational; conducted by Mr. E. C. Cashey, Mr. Fred Willis and Rev. Homer Casto.

Last, but by no means least, I will tell you of our great treat. The Christmas Cantata "The Child Jesus," by Cloky, was given by the choir on December 28th, before one of the largest congregations ever assembled in the church ordinarily. The choir was augmented by Miss Willie Belle Cotton, soprano, who has been heard many times over W. W. N. C. Miss Lila McCurry, Mr. Edwin Harris and Mrs. J. A. McIntire also assisted, both possessing rich baritone voices.

The entire program was one of merit; each voice was heard at its best. Regular choir members were: Mrs. A. E. Bolick, Misses Elsie Drake, Nancy Clouse, Janeth Younginer, Mildred Younginer, Alto; Mr. James Bailey, soprano; Misses Verda McIntire, Josie McNeill, tenor, and Mr. E. A. Pratt, bass. During the service Mr. E. C. Fawcett told in a beautiful manner the story by Van Dyke, "The Other Wise Man."

Mr. Ray Foster, who was home for the Christmas holidays from U. N. C., played the violin obligato. Miss Novella McIntire was accompanist.

Do you agree with me that we are a busy people? REPORTER.

Sheals, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Sunday school attendance is as good as we can expect during the winter months. Last Sunday on preaching Sunday, our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, delivered a splendid sermon, which was enjoyed by all present.

We regret the loss of one of our members, Mr. P. B. Owen, who departed this life December 17, but we feel that our loss is heaven's gain. He will not only be missed in his home, but will be missed throughout the entire community. We wish to express our greatest sympathy to the bereaved family.

REPORTER.

Randleman.—New Year wishes to all. We were indeed glad to return to serve this charge for another year. These are fine people. They have been so nice to us. We received not only cards and gifts from the people on this work, but from former pastors, during the Christmas holidays. These were all appreciated. We haven't been pounded all at once as some of our brother pastors, but we are receiving gifts at different times. Pro. Homer Trogdon gave us a turkey for our Christmas dinner. Many thanks to all that have remembered us in any way.

The Sunday schools are holding up fine considering the rough weather. Our preaching services have been well attended and the people have responded with the finest attention. Our prayer meetings are off some. The Mt. Lebanon Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs. Frank Talley Thursday afternoon, January 22. The devotion will be conducted by Mrs. L. V. Vincannon. Our society is progressing nicely under the leadership of our new president, Miss May Parsons.

We ask the prayers of all for a successful year. MRS. T. A. WILLIAMS.

Pleasant Grove.—The Pleasant Grove Ladies' Aid Society met January 7 in the home of Mrs. S. L. Murphy. Fifteen members were present and our collection amounted to $17.65. After the business a social hour was enjoyed. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Murphy and Misses Maud and Mary Kennedy.

Our next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. J. C. Newby with Mrs. Percy Smith as joint hostess. REPORTER.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Our pastor filled his appointments yesterday with inspiring sermons. The attendance was good despite the bad weather and bad roads. We are glad Mr. Henderson is helping us out in Sunday school by bringing his family with him. The bad weather prevented the carrying out of the Christmas program. A young people's program is in view; we hope nothing prevents this.

Miss Annie Pearson and Mr. Douglas Massengale were married Christmas Eve. Miss Mary Sue Massengale and Mr. Wilson Deshields were married under the same ceremony. All four have our best wishes for a long and happy life. REPORTER.

Burlington, First Church.—Our work is going forward. We had 335 in Sunday school today and the offering amounted to $19.92.

Our pastor, Bro. Paschal, brought splendid messages, as usual, at both the morning and the evening services. Large congregations were in attendance upon all the services, and the interest seems to be on the increase. The men's quartette of the church brought a special message in song at the 11 o'clock service. We hope they will sing often for us.

Bro. C. C. Lindley, regular teacher of the Barua class, brought a very helpful message to the class at the regular class meeting today. Reports are given each Sunday morning on our sick members away in hospitals and those at home. We hope that each one of the sick members will soon be well and back home with us. Special quartette was sung in the class this morning and thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

The regular membership business meeting of the church will be held immediately following the midweek prayer meeting this week, and it is hoped that a large number will come out for this important service of the church.

Last reports from the hospital regarding the condition of Miss Elizabeth Rogers, who was operated on today for appendicitis, were that she was doing very well. We hope for her a speedy recovery and we pray God's richest blessings upon her during this ordeal.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Gray's Chapel, Randolph Circuit.—Our pastor, Bro. Suits, filled his appointment the second Sunday afternoon, January 11, preaching a most interesting and helpful sermon from Hebrews 11:8.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely although our attendance is not as large as should be on account of the bad weather.

EDITH LINEBERRY, Reporter.

Asheboro.—On the first Sunday of the New Year our pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbs' subject was "Winning and Holding." He said our church should be made attractive, comfortable and inviting, so the people will have a desire to go there to worship and will say as the Psalmist did, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

We are starting the New Year hopefully. There has been good attendance at all the services of the church. The stewards have distributed the envelopes with a letter explaining the budget for the year and asking the co-operation of each member in giving weekly if possible. A certain amount was specified for each member, with the privilege of increasing or reducing it if they wished. This is a new plan with us, but the stewards are hoping that it will prove to be a better plan than we have had, and that the expenses of the church may be met regularly.

The first quarterly conference of last week was well attended. Our pastor had a splendid report, showing he had been busy and is at work in earnest. He is impressed with the spirituality of the church and with the splendid work carried on in the various organizations and says we have a church of which we should be proud and that each member should try to make it the best possible, and with the prayers and all working together he sees great possibilities for us this year.

Mr. L. F. Ross was re-elected secretary of the quarterly conference. Various committees were appointed and plans made for the year by which the work may be carried on in the best possible manner.

The five circles of the Auxiliary met last week; good programs were carried out and much interest is being manifested and great good accomplished through the work of the circles. The executive committee of the Auxiliary met at the home of the president, Miss Esther Ross, last Thursday evening. Several important matters were discussed and will be presented to the Auxiliary meeting. Committee were appointed to plan for the thank offering service and World Day of Prayer in February.

The subject of the pastor last Sunday morning was "Do You Believe in Signs?" Following this the communion service was observed with a large number communing.

At the morning service next Sunday the parents having little children are asked to bring them for the consecration and baptismal service.

The evening discourses by our pastor are always so good and helpful we would like to urge our people to make a little extra effort to come to these, feeling sure they will be greatly benefited. The Sunday evening sermon, "When a Man Is a Man," based upon the first chapter of Job, was one of the best. Like as Job was sorely tested, but sinned not and blessed God in his afflictions, so we must be tested to know for ourselves, and for others to know just how we stand and only as we are anchored in the Lord will we be able to stand firm and meet the tide as it comes and goes in life. The choir sang a fitting anthem, "This Way But Once."

The church extends sympathy to Mrs. Earl Bulla, who has been called upon to give up a sister, Miss Jessie Millikan, of Archdale, who was claimed by death January 8th.

REPORTER.

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, brought us another splendid message at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday. A very good congregation was present.

Work on the Sunday school building is progressing very nicely. The construction is of brick veneer. There will be six classrooms with an auditorium and a stage. The building will be heated by a furnace and electrically lighted. We would like to urge every member to pay the pledges as early as possible so that the work may continue to go forward to completion.

If there are those who have not been given the opportunity to make a pledge toward this work or who have neglected to make a contribution, please see some member of the building committee at once and add your support to this worthy enterprise.

Several of our boys and girls who are in college were at home for the holidays and others who are employed elsewhere. We are always glad to have these people with us.

Miss Bettie Emma Graves, of Friendship, and Mr. Ralph Braxton, of Snow Camp, were married December 19th at Bennettsville, S. C. Mrs. Braxton is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Graves. Mr. Braxton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Micajah Braxton. We wish for these young people a long and happy life.

Mrs. Frank H. Robinson, of Richmond, Va., who is remembered here as Miss Ruby Patterson, spent a week during the Christmas holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Patterson.

The old year has passed away and the new year is here, bringing with it new responsibilities. Let us endeavor to make this the most successful year in the history of Friendship church.

We want to extend our best wishes to the Herald, its readers, and every church in the Conference for a happy, successful New Year.

REPORTER.

Draper.—It has been quite a long while since Draper was heard from, but we have been working just the same. Our new pastor, Rev. R. L. Vickery, seems to be greatly liked by all who have met him and we have heard some good sermons since he has been with us. They seem to be bearing fruit in an enlarging crowd and we have also had some new additions to the church.

The Billy Sunday team of Winston-Salem was with us a few Sundays before Christmas and a good service was enjoyed by all.

A good crowd was present for the Christmas program in spite of the extremely cold weather and programs of other churches.

We are hoping for a good year for work in 1931 and ask all Christians to join in prayer for many conversions.

MRS. W. T. HOWELL.

Matthews Chapel, Greenville Charge.—Our regular service was held Sunday, December 4. Mr. Hethcox preached a fine sermon. It was planned at this service to meet at Mrs. C. E. Ellis' home Friday, January 9, to organize a Woman's Auxiliary. We are hoping the plan will help a great deal in the growth of the church.

Our Christian Endeavor has missed one meeting this winter. Due to rough weather not very many of the members could get there. Next Sunday night, January 18, Mr. E. L. Edwards will be the leader. The subject is: "My Idea of What a Young Woman ought to be." We are hoping to have a very good program and also a large crowd.

We are hoping to accomplish more in the New Year than we did in the past.

May the New Year bring joy and success, health and happiness to all.

ROSA JANE CLARKE, Reporter.

Kannapolis Church.—A very good crowd was present to see the Christmas program and also Santa and the Christmas tree hanging full of lovely gifts for all present. Then Santa presented a beautiful watch to our pastor from the church members; also a lovely ring was presented Mrs. C. B. McCommons, our pianist.

The Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. N. A. Harris on Monday night, January 5th, with a good crowd present.

On Sunday, January 11th, the Lord's Supper was administered. The Blackwelder quartet gave us two beautiful selections. Our pastor preached a very forceful sermon on Wisdom. Bro. Millaway, from Concord, preached at the night service. We are always glad to have Bro. Millaway.

We are very proud to note that we almost have our church completed on the inside. It will be beautiful when finished.

REPORTER.

South Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—The Christmas season was celebrated in a pleasing way on the night of December 23. We owe many thanks to our faithful superintendent, Mr. H. V. Swiegood, for training the children.

We are very much pleased with the progress in our Sunday school and church work. The past year had the best record of attendance we have ever had. The new teachers were chosen in the Sunday school for the ensuing year, with practically all the classes changing teachers.

Mr. H. L. Swiegood, one of our faithful Sunday school teachers, has been confined to his home for the past month due to a serious case of pneumonia, but is now improved.

Rev. C. G. Isley delivered a very worthy and thought-inspiring sermon at our eleven o'clock service Sunday morning. His subject, "The Trolley Car." Communion services were also held.

ZULA FRITTS, Reporter.

Forsyth Charge.—One more Christmas has come and gone and we are well on the way into another year. The preacher and family of the Maple Springs parsonage enjoyed a real good Christmas. Before Christmas, during the holidays, and since the people have remembered us with many tokens of appreciation and good fellowship. They make us feel that our services are appreciated, and, too, they show the interest of the people in the work of the Kingdom.

The interest is good at all the churches. We had the privilege of attending splendid Christmas programs at Mt. Carmel and Maple Springs. A crippled car prevented our being present at the Union Ridge program, and a cold kept us from the one at Oak Grove, but we hear that those churches also had good programs. It has been a long time, if ever, since I have seen as many people present for a Christmas program as gathered at Mount Carmel on Christmas evening. The programs at Mount Carmel and at Maple Springs were both of a very high order.

Good congregations, in spite of the unfavorable weather, continue to hear the gospel with evident interest at each church. The prospects for a good year's work are encouraging.

To any of our former parishioners and friends who may chance to read these lines who remembered us at Christmas time with cards we want to say "Thank you." It is well nigh impossible for a preacher and his family with an ever-enlarging circle of friends to remember them all with cards of greeting. However, we love you just the same.

The youngest boy of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Baity, who has been quite ill, is up again, and Mrs. T. L. Spears, of Sunset Drive, who has been confined to her bed for some days, is improving.

With good wishes to all Herald readers for a good year in the Master's service, I am

Yours in Christian fellowship and service,
L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

First Church, Albemarle.—At the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning the choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "Master, the Tempest Is Raging." Rev. George Curry delivered a very inspiring sermon, using for his text John 5:9. "The man was made whole, and took up his bed and walked." He said in part: Jesus asked the man if he wanted to be made whole again. This same question Jesus is asking the world today. However, we fail to get hold of the one thing that is sufficient for our needs. To secure this need we must be quick to accept things that are worth while. We must believe in the things which are suggested to us by consecrated men. When we take up our bed and walk, we must take something with us. God has so made it that we cannot live alone, we must have companionship; therefore, we must carry the load of others. And when we fail to carry our load God has no use for us. Then, we must walk toward something, and this one object is Jesus Christ.

In the mid-week prayer service Mr. Curry has been giving some very interesting and helpful studies on the Bible. He says many people fail to read the Bible because they do not know how to study it.

The Ladies' Aid Society met the first Tuesday in this month.

The Lucy Hatley Circle met in the home of Mrs. Jap Hatley. A very successful meeting was reported. The ways and means committee had worked out a good plan for the society. Each member is to make one hundred small flowers out of gingham; these flowers are to be sewn together to make a bedspread. This spread will be sold in early spring. The Cam Snotherly Circle met with Mrs. Dan Helms and reported a good meeting.

Miss Virginia Johnston, from Baltimore, is visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Curry.

Mrs. J. E. Gantt and Mrs. Carl Moton planned a very delightful surprise for Mr. Gantt Sunday. This being Mr. Gantt's birthday, they set a very elegant dinner for him. Mr. Curry and family were invited guests. The hostesses did not know until dinner was being served that they were celebrating Mrs. Curry's birthday also. We are wishing Mr. Gantt and Mrs. Curry many more happy birthdays.

REPORTER.

English Street.—Sunday evening Rev. George Reynolds brought to us a sermon on the life of Samson. He made the comparison of the downfall of Samson to the downfall of Christians. He explained and gave illustrations of the binding, blinding, and grinding effects of sin. Samson fell because he began to compromise with sin. We, too, are liable to fall if we compromise with the devil. After his downfall, Samson again gained favor with God, and his strength was restored once more. God is still willing to receive backsliders, and there is time and opportunity.

The Beginners and Primary Departments of the Sunday school have secured attendance charts to stimulate interest among the pupils. Mrs. J. A. Lee, superintendent of the Home Department, is doing a great work. She is one of the most faithful members of our Sunday school and is always willing to do her part.

Six ladies have volunteered to aid her in her work by visiting two homes twice a month.

The Ladies' Aid Society and the Brotherhood will meet in the home of Mrs. M. J. Embler Tuesday evening for their monthly business meetings.

Gideon Grove, Flat Rock Charge. We are getting along very smoothly if not rapidly. We have good congregations and messages of our pastor inspire us all. Yesterday he brought us an exceptionally good one on Jesus being a wonderful Savior. Bro. Pegg seems to understand his congregations and is doing a good work here. Since he has been here we have done a great deal on our church, getting new seats and inside painting, and he is always ready to help us.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the leadership of Bro. G. A. Middleton and with better weather we are expecting good attendance.

We want all Christians to pray for us.

P. J. L., Reporter.

Graham.—Graham has been silent since Christmas, yet this does not mean that nothing took place here to be reported. In spite of the unfavorable weather the Christmas programs, with but few exceptions, were carried out as planned. The Christmas service was held on Tuesday night before Christmas under the directions of Mrs. John McPherson and Miss Clara Hughes. The program was well rendered and every one, from the little tots up, enjoyed the evening. A great effort was made to reach every child connected with the Sunday school, with a gift.

Recently the Christian Endeavor Society has been reorganized and the prospect for a good society is good. The services have been very well attended, yet probably not as well as we should expect considering our membership. I hardly think that the Graham people can be beat in their desire to cooperate in every new move which the pastor makes for the good of the church.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—We have started off the new year with very good attendance. Our pastor Sunday afternoon preached one of his best sermons. We are well pleased with having him returned to us, and we hope that this will be the best year yet.

Our Christmas program was rendered on the night of the 24th and everyone seemed well pleased, a present and a nice treat was given to each member of our Sunday school.

Food and clothing were also given to a needy family.

Elbert Apple has returned to St. Louis after spending the holidays with his parents.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers for a prosperous New Year.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Fountain Place.—The first Sunday of the New Year was a bright one for us. The Sunday school attendance almost reached the hundred mark and at the evening preaching service an unusually large crowd was present. Also the sermon by our pastor was a very fitting one for the beginning of the new year. Let us hope that this good attendance may not only continue but increase.

Sunday night before Christmas our Sunday school gave an interesting and impressive program, "The Message of the Manger." The program was beautiful and with the competent training of Miss Lena Isley as well as the cooperation of the characters it proved to be one of the best we have had.

Last Sunday morning the Lord's Supper was observed. Mr. Betha gave a few thoughts on the establishment and meaning of this rite, after which he administered the communion.

Fountain Place wishes all fellow workers success in the new year.

MRS. A. V. AMICK, Reporter.

Oak Grove, Cleveland Charge.—Our first quarterly conference met with Kistlers church January 10; preaching in the morning by Bro. J. D. Cranford of Lincolnton.

Several of our members attended the funeral of Mrs. J. G. White's father, Mr. Bud Biggenstaff, on Tuesday of last week at New Bethel. We extend to Mrs. White and family our heartfelt sympathy.

REPORTER.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—An inspiring service was brought to a large crowd Sunday by our Pastor, Rev. P. E. Bingham. He also made a speech in the C. E. meeting Sunday p. m. Very glad to have him and wife; also three visitors from Bear Swamp B. Y. P. U.

We are very glad our Sunday school is moving in the new year and the Bible class had a better attendance Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Bingham were the guests of Mrs. Berna Hawkins Sunday.

Mr. Boss Smith is very ill from pneumonia. Mr. Jimmie Callum and Miss Anna Keeter were married December 25 at Emporia, Va. They are making their home with their parents at present.

Don't forget our preaching service the second Sunday morning and third Sunday night at 7:30. You have a hearty welcome then and at all times. Come!

MRS. C. H. HAWKINS, Reporter.

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—We are very glad to have had Rev. N. M. Harrison with us Sunday afternoon. There were a number of Zeb Vance High School students present to enjoy this splendid message in which he stressed the importance of Christian Education. We also had the privilege of hearing Mr. Harrison speak to the young people at C. E. Sunday night. It was at this meeting that we decided to have a ten-day training school in the spring or summer.

Mrs. J. F. White and Mrs. Mollie Roberts joined with our church the fourth Sunday. We are very glad to welcome them in our midst. They were formerly members of the Christian church.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Auxil. iary was held at the home of Mrs. C. L. Spencer January 1st. Circle No. 1 had charge of the program, which was as follows: Devotional service, Mr. Spencer; "Our Gifts to God," Emily Floyd; "God's Gifts to Us," Mrs. C. L. Spencer; poem, "Others," Miss Lessie Woodlief; "New Year's Day in China," Mrs. W. A. Pardue.

A prize of $5.00 had been offered to the circle having the most tithers by the first of the year. This was won by Circle No. 1, of which Mrs. J. W. Floyd is chairman. Four tithers were reported from this circle.

After the routine of business was transacted the hostess served sandwiches, coffee and fruit.

Electric lights have recently been installed in the parsonage, and this, we are sure, is a great convenience to the pastor's family.

Mr. H. A. Finch has been confined to his room for some time at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. M. Edwards. We hope that he will soon be much improved.

REPORTER.

Porter.—Our work is moving along very well. However we are expecting an increase both in attendance and interest when spring comes.

Our first quarterly conference was held on last Sunday at the close of the regular church service. Every official member was present except one, I believe, and a very harmonious spirit prevailed. A committee was appointed to purchase a piano for the church. We enjoyed the pastor's report; he made some very interesting and encouraging remarks and we appreciate them.

As a rule people like to talk about new things they have, so we must say a little more about our new pastor. We were very much impressed with him at his first appointment, and each time he comes we like him better. We have found him to be a very wide-awake, enthusiastic man, interested in every different work of the church, and last, but not least, an extra good preacher.

MRS. W. T. BRASWELL, Reporter.

Graham.—From the lack of reports from Graham it seems the reporter, at least, has insomnia, but the church is very wide-awake, and, to use a common phrase, "there is something doing" all the while. The services have been well attended and Mr. Auman has been bringing splendid messages.

A Senior C. E. Society has been organized with Miss Clara Hughes president, Mrs. C. E. Core, secretary, and Miss Margaret Clark, treasurer.

On the first Friday afternoon in January the Meryl Minnis Circle met with Elizabeth Dixon with 15 members present. The leader, Mrs. J. S. Cook, had prepared a very interesting program, one of the main features being a short talk on "Giving" by Mr. Auman.

The adult circles met last Monday afternoon and evening and all leaders reported splendid meetings. At the January meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary plans were made and a committee appointed to arrange the thank-offering program to be held in February.

Mr. C. E. Core, S. S. superintendent, states he is well pleased with the S. S. work and with the cooperation of the teaching force and that of the members of the school.

Miss Blanche Fuller, the new Cradle Roll superintendent has her plans well arranged and in the near future the new cradle with the names and pictures of the babies will appear in the church.

MRS. J. H. McPHERSON, Reporter.

Saint Paul's.—Our reporter is keeping the people who read the Herald well informed as to the work here. However, the pastor wishes to say a few things in regard to the work.

I entered upon my duties here the Sunday following Conference; was cordially received by the members. Our work is going just fine. We have received four new members. The Sunday school is increasing in numbers and interest all the time. Also the number that worship with us at the regular preaching services is continually on the increase. The pastor met with the young folks Sunday evening and reorganized the Christian Endeavor Society. There were 44 who gave their names for membership in the society. This is a fine number to begin with and we are expecting great things from this organization of the young people.

The people of the church and community have been very kind and good to the pastor and have remembered him with some substantial gifts. I wish to thank all who have done anything for the comfort and aid of the pastor.

My stay on the Randolph charge was very pleasant. There are some as good people on that charge as there are anywhere, and I wish to say through the Herald that they have my good wishes and prayers for great success in Kingdom work.

D. I. GARNER, Pastor.

State Street, Lexington.—Our anniversary day, last Sunday, was full of good things; we feel it was the best we have ever had, but all of them have been so good it is hard to decide. At the 11 o'clock hour Mr. Hendry brought a splendid message and Mrs. Wade, of Burlington, sang for us in her delightful way. The beautiful and delicious lunch was served in the church dining room, after which the Creseent quartet sang several negro spirituals for us and an hour of fellowship was enjoyed. The afternoon address was given by our loved former pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, and was heartily enjoyed by a large congregation. Mr. Bethea brought with him Mrs. Bethea, Miss Ruth Huffman, Miss Sibyl Glenn and Miss Lena Islev. Miss Huffman is an unusually fine singer and delighted us with a solo. Other features of the special musical program for the afternoon were songs by the Creseent quartet and a solo by Mrs. Wade.

Prof. Stimson brought the Glee Club from High Point College and sang several numbers for us at the evening service, which was a great treat. C. L. Gray, Jr., sang "Come, Ye Blessed" in his splendid way, which was an inspiration in itself. We thank these friends and all who helped in any way to make the day such a great success.

We were glad to welcome all our friends from other denominations and every one who enjoyed the program with us. Among the visitors of our own church from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Blanton, of High Point, and Miss Clara Taylor, of Winston-Salem.

REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—It is a great pleasure to report Kannapolis as going along nicely. The church is very comfortable now, and the appearance is greatly improved. The men of the church did the work at night, and on Saturday afternoons, after work the day. By doing this themselves they saved us nearly $80, for which the church expressed its appreciation by a unanimous vote of thanks.

We had a lovely Christmas program given by the children and adults, under the direction of Mrs. D. B. Cartner with the co-operation of other adults. The program proved successful beyond our expectation, convincing us that we really have talent among our people. The best was reserved for the last, when Mr. John Lisk came forward and gave Santa Claus a beautiful gold case, seven-jewel Elgin watch, to be presented to the pastor from the church and Sunday school. I have never had very much faith in Santa's benevolence and liberality. My faith was really very weak until then. Now I am beginning to believe he is all he has been represented to be and then some. With every tick of this watch I am reminded of the faithful devotion of my people to the pastor and church. This is only one of their expressions. Other favors are shown us in the most unexpected ways. May the Lord richly reward them beyond that I am able to do.

At the time the watch was presented, a beautiful ring was presented to Mrs. C. B. McCumbers, our pianist, for her faithful performance of her duties. Since organization she has been in practically every service except when she or some of her people were sick. I am sure she deserves this token of gratitude, and is no less thankful than the pastor. Many gifts were taken from the Christmas tree for different people. Every one received something, including a liberal bag of fruit for the S. S. All went home happy for the beautiful Christmas spirit manifested; but happy most of all for God's great gift to the world.

We are still rejoicing in spirit and expecting great things for Kannapolis. We have some new member to receive Sunday next, and a number of others expecting to come to us soon. Rev. G. F. Millaway, of the Concord church, preached for us in the evening service Sunday past. We were all very much edified by his impressive and inspiring message, and hope he can be with us again soon.

J. L. LOVE, Pastor.

DEDICATED TO THE YEAR 1930

The year 1930 swiftly passed, as have all years. The surging waves of time, diving before them an innumerable mass of humanity, carried by the unseen, inevitable forces of nature to the great beyond—Eternity. Some are riding them recklessly, hilariously, with only high anticipation of the waves which produce new thrills, with no thought of their ultimate destiny. Others are conscious of the dangers of the angry waves, bashing furiously against their frail craft, peering hopefully through the dense fog of doubts and fears for a ray of light of confirmation of the hope that is in them, yet with a calm and blessed assurance that the great Master Pilot is at the helm to guide them safely into the harbor of eternal bliss.

Four bells (4 o'clock) and all is well. A stream of light pierces the dark gloom, from the light house of faith. The dawn is breaking. Only a few more hours of anxious waiting and they will land upon the shores of eternal day.

We shall change our filthy, torn, drenched garments for a spotless, comfortable robe of righteousness, and rest under the shade of the tree of life, while the perpetual sunshine of God's incomprehensible and wondrous love streams through the green foliage; to dry our tears and fill our hearts with an unspeakable song of joy and thanksgiving. Our stifled hearts shall break forth in a glad, new song of the morning, blending with the music of Paradise. Then shall we understand why God said "I am that I am," and why a day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day. Time exists only in our realm of thinking. Eternity is, was and ever shall be. Instruments which register time are only for our convenience. Eliminate the past and future tense, leaving the present, and we have God; "Eternity," ever present with the Lord; where the noon hour remains ever six hours away, and night cannot come before mid-day.

But why this spontaneous, sudden burst of song? Because as we were watching the swirling billows of time still flowing at our feet a song of gratitude that we are no longer tossed about upon its restless bosom but are safely anchored on the shores of life. While, alas, many have been dashed to pieces upon the rocks and their souls plunged into the abyss of the deep. Others are still wandering about in circles, hopelessly lost, without a compass or guide, trying to determine their latitude and longitude. Let us throw them a life line and give them a helping hand. How can we enjoy our happy state while others are lost and perishing for the need of light.

J. L. LOVE,

Pastor Kannapolis Charge.

MARRIED

Pritchard-Powell

A marriage of much interest to a large number of relatives and friends was solemnized at Red Springs, N. C. on Saturday, December 12, when Mr. Emmett Pritchard and Miss Ruby Powell plighted their troth at the residence of the bride's parents. They left for a honeymoon trip to Florida, and returned to High Point last Saturday evening. For the present they are guests of the groom's parents on N. Ray St., but after January 15 will be at home to their friends in their own home on Sunset Drive. The groom is one of our own boys, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Pritchard, and was reared in First Church. He holds a responsible position as electrician in the Adams-Millis hosiery mills, and is a young man of sterling character and bright promise. His bride is a popular and attractive young lady, and has made a host of friends since coming to High Point.

Congratulations and all good wishes are extended to this deserving young couple with the hope that the sunshine and happiness in their wedded life may far outweigh the clouds and sorrow.

Wife—John, dear, is it true that money talks?

Hubby—Yes, my love, that's what they say.

Wife—Well, honey, I wish you'd leave a little here to talk to me during the day. I guess I need it.

A doctor was being examined for his mental condition. "Do you ever hear voices without being able to tell who is speaking or where the sound comes from?" asked the doctor.

"Yes, sir," replied the negro.

"And when does this occur?"

"When Ah's talking over de telephone, uh."

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Julian

Peter Monroe Julian died November 6, 1930, aged 86 years, nine months and 19 days. He was a son of Peter and Elizabeth Julian. December 26, 1866, he was married to Miss Caroline Carter. There were two children: Charles Edward and Mary Caroline. While a young man he professed faith in Christ and became a charter member of Cedar Falls Methodist Protestant church and remained a faithful member until death. He was a trustee of the church from the time it was built until he died. It was said he had dug more graves than any other man in the community. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. M. H. Ferree, of Cedar Falls, and two grandchildren, Garland and Edith Ferree. Brother Julian was calm and faithful in all the duties of life and no doubt in my mind had a victorious passing. On November 7 his funeral was conducted by this writer and Rev. G. F. Millaway, and he was laid to rest in the church cemetery. He is gone but not forgotten and his influences will live on to bless those left behind. May the Dear Lord lead his loved ones in the path of faith and peace until they meet again.

JOEL B. TROGDON.

Hawkins

Garnett A. Hawkins, aged 32 years, four months and four days, departed this life about two o'clock December 9, 1930, in the Rocky Mount hospital.

In his early boyhood days he joined Hawkins' Chapel church. His father, Mr. Charlie Hawkins, died when he was young, but he stayed with his mother, sisters and brothers, and worked faithfully until he was united in marriage to Miss Effie Pepper, and then he was a tax collector for a while. The last five years he has been the auditor of Halifax county.

Brother Hawkins was one of the best, and one of the best known men, in the county, and was admired and respected by all who knew him.

He leaves to mourn their loss his wife, one daughter, mother, four sisters, two brothers, and many friends.

The funeral was conducted at his home in Halifax by Rev. W. C. Wilkins of Halifax, assisted by his pastor, Rev. P. E. Bingham.

Beneath a mound of beautiful flowers his body was laid to rest not far from Hawkins' Chapel church beside his little baby girl, Hazel, one of the sweetest ones any one ever knew, who had preceded him to the glory world in July, 1928.

May the great God of all love and all grace comfort and sustain the loved ones in their bereavement.

A FRIEND.

Laughlin

Arlington Gray Laughlin, son of Rev. A. J., and Sally I. Laughlin, died November 5, 1930. Aged 80 years, seven months and 29 days.

Twice married, first time to Mary Bain to whom was born four children, three having died in infancy. His second marriage was to Louise Crocker, to whom were born three children.

Mr. Laughlin is survived by his widow, Mrs. A. G. Laughlin, two children, Robert Fletcher Laughlin, of Greensboro, and Charles Franklin Laughlin of Cedar Falls, and one brother, Rev. G. A. Laughlin of Cedar Falls.

On November 6 his funeral service was conducted by the writer and Rev. F. R. Love. Some very touching remarks by his only brother, Rev. G. A., and the only one left of the entire family of his father, Rev. Jack Laughlin, who went from mountain to seashore preaching the gospel.

Brother Arlington had been teacher of the men's class in Sunday school since I can recollect. Oh, how we miss him, but we feel our loss his eternal gain. May I ask that all who read this to pray for the only boy left, Rev. G. A., and the widow and children, that they may find in Christ the needed comfort for this hour.

JOEL B. TROGDON.

Litaker

We, the ladies of the Aid and Missionary societies of the First Methodist Protestant church, Concord, N. C.:

Wish to express our deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Litaker in the death of their little girl, Maxine. She was a very bright and interesting little child of six years.

We do not understand why God should see fit to let this little Lamb suffer so much (her suffering was intense from start to finish). Many prayers were offered for her recovery, but God in His all-wise dealings saw best to take her away to a home where there is no suffering and to be with the One who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

To the bereaved ones we would say she is now a light in the window of heaven to lead you on and upward. We desire a copy of this resolution to be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to be spread upon the minutes of our last meeting and a copy sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

MRS. B. F. WADDELL, President,
MISS BERTHA EARNHARDT, Sec'y.

Russell

Mrs. J. M. Russell departed this life December 19, 1930, at the age of 60 years, ten months, and fifteen days. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Spencer. At the age of 19 she was united in marriage to Mr. Addison Hege; to this union was born one son, W. M. Hege, of Midway, N. C. Mr. Addison Hege having preceded her in death she was married to Mr. J. M. Russell; to them were born three children; Mrs. Guy A. Barker of Lexington, Mr. Clarence Russell and Mr. Clifton Russell also of this place. Besides the children, and half-brother, Mr. Newton Swicegood, of Alabama, and eight grandchildren survive to mourn along with a host of friends, the loss they have sustained.

In early life Mrs. Russell professed faith in Christ and united with Sandy Creek Lutheran church. Later she joined Shiloh Methodist Protestant church of which she was a loyal and faithful member till she decided to move her membership to South Lexington. Until the call to come up higher, she was a faithful worker who loved and supported her church. She was a good woman; one who will be missed not only by her family but her neighbors and friends as well.

The funeral service was held at South Lexington M. P. church, Sunday December 21, at 2:30 p. m. by the writer. Burial was in the Shiloh cemetery.

"In presence she is gone from among us,

In influence she will ever remain;

For her kind disposition and goodness

Say, 'She did not live in vain.'"

C. G. ISLEY.

Rives

Mrs. Lottie Hardee Rives died on December 2, 1930. She was the daughter of Mr. J. W. Hardee. On December 10, 1923, she was married to Mr. Ralph C. Rives. She is survived by her father, her husband, an infant son and one brother, Mr. J. A. Hardee, and a sister, Miss Blanche Hardee.

At an early age Mrs. Rives united with Eden church and was a most consistent member until her death. She was interested in all activities of the church, having served as pianist, Sunday school teacher, and for a number of years held important offices in the Ladies' Aid and Auxiliary. She was always cheerful, kind, generous and loyal, brightening the lives of all with whom she came in contact. She was endowed with a most lovable personality, and will be missed and mourned by a host of friends throughout this and other states.

Mrs. Rives was a devoted wife, a faithful daughter, a loyal and loving sister, and we are glad that for a few days she was permitted to realize the crowning joy of motherhood. It seemed that she had everything to live for, but God thought best to take her home. May her bereaved ones take comfort in the thought that heaven must be replenished as well as earth.

Funeral services were held in the Enfield M. P. church, being conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, assisted by Dr. A. G. Dixon, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, Dr. Johnson and Rev. Mr. Anderson of the Baptist church. Her body was laid to rest in Elmwood cemetery beneath a mass of lovely flowers, which attest the high esteem in which she was held.

MRS. L. A. WILLIAMS.

Litaker

Lillian Maxine Litaker, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Litaker, died at her home here on Wednesday December 17, 1930, after an illness of several months duration.

Maxine was one of Concord's most beloved children, being of a bright sunny disposition, and made many friends during her short stay.

Besides her parents she is survived by one sister, Jeannette, and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sides, and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Litaker, her great-grandmothers, Mrs. B. L. Sides, and Mrs. C. M. Thomas, and other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held in the M. P. church and were in charge of Rev. G. F. Millaway and Dr. P. E. Monroe, pastor of St. James' Lutheran church, this city.

The little girl was born on July 27, 1924, was baptized by Rev. Lawrence Little during his pastorate here and had been a regular attendant at all services at the church where her mother has been the efficient pianist for several years.

She will be missed in the S. S. where she loved to go, and in the church and community but most of all in the home by the heartbroken young parents who did all in their power to save her, but to no avail. During the funeral, the choir sang, "Sometime We'll Understand," "There's No Disappointment In Heaven," and "Safe In the Arms of Jesus." "Your Best Friend Is Always Near," was used as a solo by Mr. N. J. Miles, tenor, of Albemarle.

The floral offering was large and beautiful. The body was laid to rest in the Oakwood cemetery.

"Safe in the arms of Jesus,

Safe on His gentle breast,

There by His love o'er shadowed,

Sweetly her soul shall rest."

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Check

On New Year's Day the death angel visited our membership and carried Mrs. J. M. Check to "the land that is fairer than day." Mrs. Check was ill only a few days. She contracted pneumonia on December 26th and was buried on the following Friday. Her funeral was conducted from the Chapel Hill Baptist church and her body laid to rest in the Chapel Hill cemetery.

It was not the privilege of the writer to know Mrs. Check, but those who knew her best had only words of praise to speak in her behalf. All who knew her said that she was a gentle, sweet, lovable Christian character. I am told that she loved her church devotedly, and this is a very high tribute. When a person is devoted to the church it is safe to say that that individual is devoted to Christ, the head of the church, and endeavors to follow faithfully and closely in His footsteps. Such a character is beautiful; a power of God; and an influence for righteousness. Tears are dried; burdens are lighter; people come to know the saving power of Christ; and the Kingdom of God is advanced because such a person has lived. Thus she is paid the highest possible tribute when it is said of her that she was devoted to the church.

May the blessing, comfort, and peace of God, our heavenly Father, be with those who mourn. May He dispel the shadows of grief and sadness and so shed abroad His love in their hearts that they shall be comforted.

Fred W. Pasenall.

Edwards

The entire membership of Friendship church was deeply grieved at the sudden and unexpected passing of Mrs. Lake Edwards on December 22, 1930. She was twenty-six years and a few months of age. Funeral services were conducted for her on Christmas Eve at 2:30 o'clock by Revs. J. Elwood Carroll and Herman Fisher. Interment followed immediately.

Mrs. Edwards leaves within the immediate family one daughter, Frances Lou; one son, Eldridge; and her husband, Lake A., of Burlington, Route 1. She is also survived by her parents, Mr. Alec and Mrs. Laura Comer, Swepsonville; four brothers all of Swepsonville: Worth, Howard, Clenton, and Clemoth Comer; and five sisters as follows: Mrs. Estelle Holt, Hlaw River; Mrs. Maudie White, Graham; Mrs. Meta Lemons, Durham; Miss Effie Comer and Miss Ruby Comer, Swepsonville.

The fine Christian work of Mrs. Edwards was cut short in its early flowering, but may what she has begun live on in those who loved her so dearly and will miss her. The short noble life ought to be one of inspiration to all those who knew her.

Wilson

Mrs. Luthishev E. Wilson, one of Friendship church's oldest members, passed away at the home of her son, Walter Wilson, at Alamance Factory, on December 15, 1930. Funeral services were conducted at her church by Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, and her body was interred in the local cemetery. She lacked only eleven days having reached the age of sixty-eight years.

Mrs. Wilson is survived by a large number of near relatives, all of whom live in or near Purlington. The surviving daughters are: Mrs. Georgianna May, Mrs. Cordie Hart, and Mrs. Madie Bailiff; sons: Charles, Walter, and Conway Wilson; sisters: Mrs. Sarah May, Mrs. Nancy Anderson, and Mrs. Ella Edwards; and brother, Mr. Ervin Isley. In addition to these named she is survived by fourteen grandchildren.

The fine Christian life of Sister Wilson is being expressed today in the lives of her progeny. Her son, Charlie, is the most excellent teacher in the Baraca class of nearly a hundred men at Alamance Factory.

Rives

"She is dead yet speaketh."

The last time I saw her she was in the best of health; jolly and planning for the future with all the faith that seemed possible. We had often taken trips together when I was her pastor, together with others and she was always the jolly one of the company. Picnics, fishing parties, religious meetings such as conventions, institutes, anything that was good and wholesome, she was one of the leading spirits and always ready unless there was some unavoidable hindrance. Yes, you could count on her.

Last summer during the meeting at Union where I was assisting her pastor in revival, and the last time I saw her, she made me promise to bring my wife by and go with them for a week to Ocean View next summer for a vacation trip and of course there was nothing else for me to do but to promise to go. Had often thought of that trip and talked of it at home since.

But what shocking news when I heard that she was dead! I cannot realize it yet. It must be true from the number of articles in the papers, but how to realize the fact has never yet come to me. Perhaps if I were there as once and not see her smiling face, share the hospitality of her home, see her in the church, at the piano, in the ladies' aid, in the sick room, doing something for someone, about her Master's business in general, for such was her life, then I might be able to take in the fact that she is gone. But they tell me that Lottie Hardee Rives is gone home. It must be true, but I am still groping in the dark trying to believe that perhaps she is only asleep. But no, that will not do, for all the ceremonies of the solemn funeral services have been held, the undertaker has performed his duties, loved ones are still weeping over her grave, she is being missed "because her seat is empty!"

"Lottie, we all loved you" And the fact that you are gone but still speaking to us will be an inspiration to us to live closer to our Master and get ready for that happy reunion over yonder. While we weep we also rejoice that we shall see you again. Such a life of blessing shall not be without reward now and still coming in. "For they do rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Glorious thought, Father, Ralph, Dawsey, little one, and Blanche whose soul was knit to hers like that of David to Jonathan, that you shall see your loved one in that better land "where God shall wipe away all tears from your eyes." "Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord, Jesus Christ."

N. G. Bethen.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY

Sunday, January 25th, has been designated as Young People's Day. Pastors are requested to observe the day one or both services by preaching a special sermon to the youth of the church, and the use of a special service outline which is provided by Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Seminary Building, Westminster, Md., Assistant Executive Secretary of the Council of Religious Education. An offering should be taken, which will count on the budget, and forwarded to Dr. George R. Brown, Reidsville, N. C., and marked "Young People's Day Offering."

This is a fine opportunity for the pastor to make an effort to rally the full support of the youth of the church to her program.

N. M. HARRISON.

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. C. W. Bates, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, J. F. Coble.

"EVERY SUBSCRIBER GET ONE MORE"

It has been suggested that we set goals again this year for Herald subscriptions. We are using the basis for last year, which was at the rate of one yearly subscription for each ten members. That is not unreasonable, and ought not to be difficult to reach. If every subscriber will get one, and every pastor will do his part, it can and will be done. Let's get at it, and do it NOW. Who will be first to reach the quota (first column). Come on, let's go!

CONCERNING THE THANK-OFFERING

With the beginning of a new year come many opportunities as well as responsibilities. The best of a business year is usually the first of year, so with this in mind we might expect a good thank-offering this February—it we devote the time and thought to the presentation of this subject that it deserves.

Each Auxiliary is informed that the N. C. Branch holds two thank-offering services yearly, one in September, the other in February. So often somebody asks, "Why is it that the literature that is distributed tells of November as the thank-offering month?" We observe the one in September because the governor of our state asks that a day's wages be contributed to some orphanage in November. Of course, we stress High Point orphanage. This free-will offering, or thank-offering, does not count on our budget. I give this only as an explanation, as frequently the question is asked.

At this particular time we are especially interested in the February offering. It has been found a wise plan to give a pageant missionary dress in the oriental costume and tell of the work. Others like to have the pastor preach a sermon especially suited for the occasion. The thank-offering services may be held in a home, or in the church. There is no set method, but I do urge the importance of every Auxiliary holding their semi-annual thank-offering in February. The money raised counts on your missionary budget. Please send the full amount to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, 909 W. College Drive, High Point, so that your Auxiliary may get credit for it. Tell Mrs. Taylor that it is thank-offering money.

MRS. D. S. COLTRANE,
Sec'y of Thank-Offering.

Past Finding Out

Before the world its course began,
When there was only thought of man,
Pray tell us quickly, if you can,
About the great Creator's plan.

Was it an instantaneous thought
At once to full completion brought,
Or was improvement ever sought
Till all the whole was nicely wrought?

Before God formed or planned the world
And rolling orbs in space were hurled,
With banner of light not yet unfurled,
In mind of God what thoughts were whirled?

Then take your glass of greatest power,
Ascend to top of highest tower,
And search the depths from hour to hour:
What lies far out in space's dower?

Then turn your gaze to very small
And try to see the least of all—
How long, how wide, how deep, how tall:
And when you see, please give a call!

Dr. C. E. Jefferson's Sermon On Letting Your Light Shine

(Memory Reproduction)

I want to think with you about our Master's words, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in Heaven." Our Lord had certain favorite words: Life, light, joy, peace, prayer, faith, Father, God. They indicate the habitual range of his thoughts. He uses the word "light" with reference to himself and also with reference to us: "I am the light of the world;" "Ye are the light of the world." In other thoughts he does not rank us with himself. He said: "I am the bread of life;" he never said, Ye are the bread of life. He said: "I am the water of life;" he never said, Ye are the water of life. He said: "I am the good shepherd;" he never said, Ye are the good shepherd. He said: "I am the door;" he never said, Ye are the door. He said: "I am the vine;" he was careful not to say, Ye are the vine. But he said, "I am the light of the world" and "Ye are the light of the world."

Some think he spoke these words while standing near the great golden candle stick of the Temple which sent a brilliant light out over all the city of Jerusalem. The light that Jesus and those enlightened by him shed forth is to be the light of the world, to extend to the uttermost bounds of humanity.

Jesus does not tell us why he employs light to represent the spread of Christian truth: therefore we have the right to indulge in conjecture.

I believe one reason is found in the superior power of light. Light can do what steam or electric power cannot do. It can do what the earthquake and the volcano and the tornado cannot do. It can do what dynamite or the most powerful TNT cannot effect. It can cover the earth with green grass and adorn the hills and mountain sides with beautiful foliage. We see evidence of its great power every year.

Then the light is unwearied in its course. It moves with a velocity of 186,000 miles a second, but comes to us from its distant source with as much vigor and speed as when it started on its way. The psalmist represents the rising sun as rejoicing like a strong man to run a race. The light seems ever joyful and exultant.

Then the light, while so mighty, is also of amazing gentleness. It comes in great masses from the sun, rushes in through our windows and rebounds from walls and floors without a sound. It falls upon the face of the sleeping invalid, not to awaken, but to impart healing and bring back health. The light is soft and quiet and gentle as an angel from heaven. It fittingly represents the wondrous grace and power of the Gospel of Christ.

But it requires experience to enable one to understand the words of Christ regarding the use of our light. I presume every preacher who has preached five years has preached a sermon from our text and thought he understood its meaning. I once thought I understood its meaning, but the revelations of later experience convinced me that I did not.

To illustrate my meaning I will relate an incident of my life. I was crossing the ocean in a great ship. There was but one minister besides myself on board and he died in mid-ocean and had to be buried in the sea. I did not wish to conduct the burial service, but had it to do. There came to my mind these words from the 139th Psalm: "If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me and thy right hand shall hold me." That seemed an appropriate scripture. To add to the impressiveness of the occasion the great ship stopped its movement and the strong pulsations of the mighty engine which had become a part of our consciousness ceased and there was a stillness like the stillness of eternity. I could feel my heart beating rapidly. At the proper time the coffin was lowered and another mortal had found a watery grave. But ever since I passed through that hour that scripture has had a real meaning to me.

I have had some experiences that have revealed the mean-

WHAT THE CHURCH OFFERS MEN

The Church of Jesus Christ offers to men an authentic message concerning God which leads to the secret of all worthwhile living. It recognizes the universal human hunger for God, and the possibility of communion with Him. It reveals God as a living, personal force. It offers a partnership with God.

The Church offers acquaintanceship with the great men of the past. In the lives of prophets and heroes and in the life of Jesus Christ, the Church holds up the ideals by which character and achievement may be measured. In the call to help build the kingdom of God on earth, the Church presents the purpose which gives deeper meaning to everything men do. It releases, through human lives, the transforming power of God. It gives men a long view of life.

The Church offers a fellowship with the great host of believers throughout the world. It gives an opportunity to work with other men for the cultivation of the spiritual life and for increasing the stock of goodness in the world. It offers membership in an organization which thinks in terms of world relations. It is the oldest and most honorable institution in existence.

The Church offers a comradeship of worshippers. While it urges private devotion, it brings men together so that they may receive the inspiration which comes from united worship; and to this end it provides a vast storehouse of aids so that men may "practice the presence of God." This comradeship is the greatest brotherhood in existence.

The Church offers to men the most inspiring task in the world. It gives them a view of life which lifts them out of themselves and relates them to vast purposes. It has a worldwide program of social adjustment, sanctioned and empowered by religion. It offers modern men a fighting chance in the great struggle to improve the conditions of life here on earth. It asks men to devote their best talents, their keenest wisdom, and their highest genius in helping to make this world what it ought to be.

The Church offers comradeship with Jesus Christ in all the affairs of life. It gives men a clear understanding of the mind of Christ. It is through Him that we come to know God. The steady discipline of intimate friendship with Jesus Christ results in men becoming like Him.

The Church offers to men a solution of the problem of sin. It gives comfort and strength when trials come and sorrows weigh upon the heart, an enlargement of life's meaning, guidance in life's endeavors, and an assurance of life's outcome. It offers a message of courage and hope, the gift of wisdom in times of perplexity, the assurance of perfect peace, emancipation from ignorance through the truth which makes all men free, and the power of eternal life.—Missionary Review.

SHOULD OUR ANNUAL CONFERENCE MEET A MONTH EARLIER?

The above question has been raised by one of our older and best known pastors and the writer is repeating the question through the HERALD, "Should Our Annual Conference Meet a Month Earlier?" When we consider the question, the further question may be asked, "What are the advantages of an earlier sitting of the annual conference?" An earlier conference date would be an advantage to the new pastor going to a charge. It would enable him to get the work started before the winter weather comes to interrupt the beginning of the work for the year.

The writer would be glad to see brief statements of the views and opinions of other pastors and laymen on the question of an earlier sitting of the Annual Conference in North Carolina.

THE BRIDGE BUILDER

"An old man going a lone high-way
Came in the evening cold and gray,
To a chasm vast and deep and wide
Through which was flowing a sullen tide.
"The Old Man crossed in the twilight dim;
That sullen stream meant naught to him.
But he turned when he was safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.
" 'Old man,' said a fellow traveler near,
'You are wasting your time building here.
Your journey will end with the coming day.
You never again will pass this way.
" 'You have already crossed the swollen tide,
Why build a bridge at even-tide?'
"The builder lifted his old gray head,
'My friend, in the way I have come,' he said,
There followeth after me today,
A youth whose feet must pass this way.
"That chasm has meant naught to me.
But to that fair-haired youth may a pit-fall be.
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim.
My friend, I am building the bridge for him.'"

TRUE GREATNESS

"When I was in London," said Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, "I received word that if I was at the Salvation Army headquarters at 10 o'clock sharp, I might meet General Booth. I hurriedly made my way there, for he was to leave for the Continent in a few minutes.

"When I looked into his face and saw him brush back his hair from his brow, heard him speak of his trials and conflicts and victories, I said, 'General Booth, tell me the secret of your success all the way through.'

"He hesitated a second, and I saw the tears come into his eyes and steal down his cheeks, and then he said: 'I will tell the secret. God has had all there was of me. There have been men with greater brains than I, men of greater opportunities; but from the day I got the poor of London on my heart, and a vision of what Jesus Christ could do for the poor of London, I made up my mind that God would have all of William Booth there was.'

"And I learned from William Booth that the greatness of a man's power is the measure of his surrender. It is not a question of who you are or of what you are, but of whether God controls you."—Publisher Unknown.

ing of our Lord's words, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in Heaven."

Traveling in Egypt I found a Mohammedan temple lighted with electricity. Edison had gotten his thought across in spite of all prejudice and the inferior lights had all given way to the superior. Cannot the thought of Christ be put across in all the nations and the superior light of the Gospel be made to shine to the exclusion of all false and all lesser lights?

Traveling in an Asiatic country I found Fords supplanting camels as means of transportation. The superior taking the place of the inferior again. The gospel of Christ produces the superior religion and will prevail if only Christians will let their light shine.

Traveling in India I came to a magnificent temple, one of the greatest ever built in all the world. Looking through an open door I saw a long line of Singer sewing machines all in operation. The heathen temple had been turned into a clothing factory. The truth had come to that region and changed habits of thought and of life. Jesus knew that his thought and way of life would transform the life of the whole world if only those having the light would just let it shine with its full power. That is all that is needed to reform the world—the light of truth rightly exhibited in doctrine and in conduct. Ridicule of error will not drive it from the world. In former days missionaries showed their contempt for idols by smiting them in the face with their walking canes. That was a false method. What is needed and all that is needed to drive away the darkness of error is the light of truth. How simple and reasonable is the method of Jesus. Through its use the church becomes a mighty social and spiritual force. By determined and quiet and gentle persistence through the years and through the centuries the Christian church will become the light of the whole world. What a glorious achievement Christ has committed to human enterprise and human endeavor! And he has given us the power as well as the problem. Shall we not in all earnestness and with unfailing persistence let our light so shine before men that they shall see our good works and glorify our Father who is in Heaven?

AS TO "EXTERNAL AUTHORITY"

The great evangelical scholar, the late Dr. Benjamin B. Warfield, had the following to say regarding this important subject: "There is nothing more important in the age in which we live than to bear constantly in mind that all revealed Christianity rests on 'external authority.' Religion, of course, we can have without 'external authority,' for man is a religious being, and will function religiously always and everywhere. But Christianity, no. Christianity rests on 'external authority,' and that for the very good reason that it is not the product of man's religious sentiment, but is a gift of God. To ask us to set aside 'external authority,' and throw ourselves back on what we can find within us alone—call it by whatever name you choose, religious experience, the Christian consciousness, the inner light—is to ask us to discard Christianity and revert to natural religion." We hope some people we know will let these statements soak in.

Just Natural Religion

That is what a good many people in our land have today—just natural religion, if they have any religion at all. They think the Bible is simply the result of the natural craving and seeking of the human mind. Hence, they want no "external authority," and by that term they usually mean the Bible. They want to make just what bubbles up out of their subconscious minds the sole authority. Yes, that is just natural religion, such as the Hindus, Chinese, Japanese and Animists have; it is not the religion of Christianity, which is a supernatural religion revealed to many by the Supreme Being.—The Bible Champion, Reading, Pa.

MY DAILY CREED

Let me be a little kinder,
Let me be a little blinder,
To the faults of those about me;
Let me praise a little more;
Let me be when I am weary
Just a little bit more cheery,
Let me serve a little better
Those I am striving for.

Let me be a little braver
When temptation bids me waver,
Let me strive a little harder
To be all that I should be;
Let me be a little meeker
With the brother that is weaker,
Let me think more of my neighbor
And a little less of ME.

—R. W. G., in Archwood Reminder.

"Help us to find new light and truth;
New dreams; new ways of doing good;
A quiet life without reproof;
The spirit of true brotherhood."

SAFE FOR THE FOX

A minister who paid more attention to the pleasures of life than to his sermons, was taken to task for his worldliness by his Quaker friend. The rebuke he received was tactful. "Friend," said the Quaker, "I understand you are clever at fox-catching." "I have few equals and no superiors at that sport," the minister replied complacently. "Nevertheless, friend," said the Quaker, "if I were a fox, I would hide where you would never find me." "Where would you hide," asked the minister with a frown. "Friend," said the Quaker, "I would hide in thy study."

The more the Christian student is filled with the Spirit of God the more industrious he will be in his work of preparation. Such a student has his heart in his work. He conquers indolence. He seeks by a constant study of the Word to be a workman who needeth not to be ashamed. High standards of Christian education and zeal in the pursuit of a knowledge of the Bible are worthy of the highest commendation.—From the Bible Today.

Kernersville

January 18.—According to appointment, we spent the day with this charge. The 11 o'clock service was at Sandy Ridge church. We found the Sunday School in session when we arrived, superintended by Mrs. L. G. Wood. Despite the winter roads and the threatening weather, quite a few persons were present, the number of small children being especially noticeable.

Sandy Ridge is the home church of our Brother J. P. Pegg, pastor of the Flat Rock charge. He has one brother, a graduate of High Point College, studying medicine in Richmond, and two other brothers taking Ph. D. degrees at the University of North Carolina, and all from Sandy Ridge church. Let us not delude ourselves with any thought that the small rural church has not and will not continue to be an important factor in human affairs. These young men will no doubt take their places of service and power in the world; but back of them is the little country church that ministered to them in spiritual things in the days when their minds were plastic and their hearts responsive. Their father is a strong supporter of this church. We were glad to meet him at the close of the service. We heard talk of a larger pulpit, platform and a better organ for the church. This indicates life. Mrs. Bates is to go up in the near future and confer with the women of the church in regard to an Auxiliary. The organization of the women and the young people is one of the needs of the charge.

At 2 o'clock, the appointment was at Pine Grove. The Sunday School was just closing upon our arrival. We found several present here, and they gave us helpful attention in our effort to preach. This church is located in a splendid farming community just two miles out from Kernersville, and has opportunity, it seems to us, of large usefulness. It is the strongest church on the charge.

The appointment at night was with the Kernersville church. This church occupies a beautiful location in a most desirable section of the town. The parsonage of the charge is well located on the church lot, and is an attractive cottage with modern conveniences. The rain that had set in before night most likely reduced the attendance here. However, we enjoyed the service with the few that came. We never go to this church without thinking of Brother W. S. Linville, who<sup>9</sup> was a leading spirit in the work here for many years. His sons are still active. Judge Guyer, who died recently, was also a member of this church. He manifested his interest in our institutions by remembering the Children's Home and the College in his will, so we are informed. We are grateful to him for this.

Brother Reed was busy during the day disposing of Journals and soliciting subscriptions to the HERALD. He has been kindly received by the charge. The people are looking out for his needs, and he is hopeful of a successful year. We were pleased to find Sister Reed up and without physical discomfort. It will be recalled that she has been afflicted for some time.

We enjoyed the day of work, worship, and fellowship on this charge. Brother Reed and his people have our grateful thanks for kindness and hospitality shown us.

Young People's Day

Some charges are planning for it; we trust YOU are. Just give Uncle Sam a card for Brother Gibbs, and right soon you will have the program. Your people will enjoy preparing it, and you will have the guarantee of a good service. The offering, too, will count on your N. C. S. budget.

January 25th is the day; but if you can not get ready by that time, please appoint another date, and observe the day at that time.

Budgets

Nearly one quarter of the conference year has passed, and according to Dr. Brown's reports but very little has been paid on budgets. "Let's turn over a new leaf" this year, and pay something, however little, monthly on the budgets. If that can be done, there will be much less to raise at the end of the year, and much more to report. We urge, brethren, that you insist upon this.

Poster

Pastors have no doubt received the "New Century Service Poster" prepared by Dr. Straughn. It is a good "get up," and shows through the eye gate just what we are doing, and what we are not doing, financially to promote the general programs of our denomination. Put the poster where the people can see it, and let it make its appeal for New Century Service. It will do good.

Methodist Protestant Convention

The Executive Committee of the General Church has launched a movement for holding a Denominational Convention in Washington, D. C., May 12-15. Plans for the convention are going forward through a program committee. This committee will keep the church abreast of the movement by giving detailed information from time to time of what is being done. Our conference will, of course, want to fall in line, and give the convention every possible support. The committee is asking that annual conference district meetings be timed so as not to conflict with the convention date. I do not anticipate any difficulty in our conference in conforming to this request. Let us pray that this convention may be owned of God in furthering his purposes through the church.

S. S. and C. E. Apportionment for Y. P. W.

The apportionment appears on page 89 of the 1930 Journal. It is very simple and easily understood. And it affords some worthwhile work for young people in our churches. They can take hold of this and raise it promptly. We would like to get this out of the way by an early date. One pastor has already written to us to that effect. We believe that all of the schools and societies on his charge will have this in hand very soon. Let's go after this apportionment now, and raise it. We urge the young people throughout the various charges to get behind this, and see that it is done.

District Meetings

Brother Harrison is arranging a series of district meetings for the purpose of promoting his work. His particular object in these meetings is to organize District Councils of Religious Education, according to the order of conference. These organizations are a part of the program of our young people's work, and are very essential, we think, to the success of the work. He is asking pastors and district chairmen to attend these meetings, along with the young people whom he expects to have present. We bespeak for him a hearty response to this effort. He probably will have his schedule of meetings ready to announce this week.

Appointments

January 21.—Lincolnton, Hour, 7:30 P. M.

January 25.—Flat Rock charge, as previously announced.

February 1.—Vance charge, in schedule as previously given.

February 8.—Asheville, 11 A. M.; Weaverville charge at night.

February 15.—Mebane, 11 A. M.

"Blessed are they that dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee."

LOOKING AT BOTH SIDES

"Well, mother, I do not think it is fair!" exclaimed Blanche Holloway. "Mabel can have six new dresses to where I have one—and there is no comparison in the cost. Her folk own a big mansion and ride in a Rolls-Royce, while father can not even afford to get us a second-hand Ford. She has what Carrie Stevens calls bushels, and lolls in a hammock. Her father is a rich banker, and she has more spending money than any of her chums—yes, ten times as much!"

Calm Mrs. Holloway smiled placidly as she said, "If you will hold your tongue-horses for a moment, Blanche, I would like to ask you a few questions. The first one is this: Would you like to change places with Mabel? Have you forgotten that Mabel's mother is an invalid, and a great sufferer? She is certainly no bundle of plumpness, as you call me at times. Have you forgotten that Mabel's father is accused of having used dishonest methods in his business, while your dear father is as honest as the day is long? Has the fact that you are a far better student than Mabel slipped your mind? Have you forgotten that Mabel's brother Ned is a ne'er-do-well in spite of his father's money, while your brother, Homer, is clean and up-right?"

"I might keep right on with such questions. I might say: Have you forgotten that you have most wonderful health, while Mabel is weakly? Have you forgotten that you come of a family who have a clean record, running back for many generations? Do you stop to think of the fact that Mabel's parents are nearly or quite infidels, while your parents are God-fearing and God-loving? What are a few new dresses, or a giant car, or even a mansion with a brown-stone front, when weighed against Christian character?"

"O mother, I throw up my hands," said Blanche. "Please do not ask any more questions or I shall feel so dried up and worthless that the first breeze will blow me away! Anyway, I am handy to have around to wipe the dishes for the very best mother ever! I doubt if Mabel would touch a dish towel with even the tips of her fingers. When the dishes are wiped I will go out and pick the strawberries, and new dresses would only be a nuisance in the strawberry patch. I would not exchange father for all the bankers in the world, while you are the best mother in Hopkinsville. I had better 'fess up to my blessings and allow Mabel to do the complaining."—George W. Tuttle in The Youth's Comrade.

A FEW FRAGMENTS

(1) What is a Christian? In Acts 11:26 we see that the disciples were first called Christians at Antioch. A Christian is in knowledge a disciple; in character a saint; in influence a light; in conflict a soldier; in communion a friend; in progress a pilgrim; in relation a child; in expectation an heir.

(2) What were some of the things done daily in the early Church? Sinners daily saved. Churches daily multiplied. Sinners daily searched.

(3) How full are the Scriptures of an evangelistic appeal? The greatest word in the Bible is God; the sweetest, Love; the tenderest, Come; the longest, Eternity, and the shortest, Now.

(4) How should a Christian try to be? Meek as Moses; courageous as Joshua; faithful as Abraham; determined as Daniel; bold as Peter; loving as John, and enduring as Paul.

(5) To be a healthy Christian, what should one daily desire? To be fed on the Bread of Life and to drink from the cup of Salvation; to be hid in the cleft of the Rock; to shelter under the precious Blood of Christ; to be kept in the love of God, and to pray in the Holy Ghost; to be led in the plain path; to be guided by His eye; and have His everlasting arms around us.

(6) If you want to be like Jesus: He will draw you into a life of crucifixion and humility, and put upon you such demands of obedience that you will not be able to follow other people, or measure yourself by other Christians; and in many ways He will seem to let other good people do things which He will not let you do. Other Christians and ministers who seem very religious and useful may push themselves, pull wires, and work schemes to carry out their plans, but you cannot do it; and if you attempt it, you will meet with such failure and rebuke from the Lord as to make you sorely penitent.—The P. H. Advocate.

HEROISM FOR GOD

An English college was once visited by a minister seeking volunteers for a mission field in India. He assured the students that the work was easy, the homes comfortable, the society pleasant; NOT A MAN MOVED. A little later a mission worker came, seeking for volunteers for the Congo, in Africa, to fill vacancies created by death, and he closed bluntly by saying: "It will most likely mean death to you, too." SIX MEN IMMEDIATELY ROSE.—Publisher Unknown.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE FRIENDLY BOAT

Billie had been feeling just a little lonely ever since he came out to Uncle Sid's ranch. It was a great ranch, of course, with horses and cows and calves and lambs. But Billie was the only child there. Uncle Sid was busy in the fields and Aunt Mary was busy about the housework. Billie wandered around wishing he had Jack and Gerald or some of the boys back home to play with. It's so much more fun doing things with some one you like, than doing the same things alone!

The creek was the nicest place on the ranch, Billie thought. Billie always felt lonely when he played by it. The creek, which laughed and rushed round boulders and sang over pebbles was almost alive. There were little shining trout in the green pools, overhanging alders and blue-gray king-fishers that darted down the stream sometimes looking for fish. Billie found a king-fisher-nest in a little tunnel in the bank right above the water. How he would have liked to show that to Jack or Gerald!

It was one day when Billie was feeling particularly lonesome that the little boat came floating down-stream. Billie saw its white masts gleaming in the sunlight. Then he saw what it really was—a little full-rigged ship with flags flying and with a red hull.

"O, I wonder if it'll come this far, or if it'll get wrecked on one of the big rocks first!"

Billie watched it eagerly. The tiny boat bumped a rock, but the water carried it on around the boulder. It bounced up and down in the ripples further along. Billie longed to wade out and catch the little ship, but the creek was too deep in the middle. He held his breath and watched to see if the boat would drift toward the shore.

"Oh, dear! It's going right past!" Billie murmured.

He ran along the rocky bank trying to keep up with the little ship. "Goodie!" he said, when he saw it ride safely into the quiet green pool.

He scrambled to the water's edge and reached for the boat with a long dead branch. He managed to draw the boat in toward him, into his very hands.

"What a beauty!" Billie looked the little ship all over.

It was beautifully carved and painted. The little cloth flags were spotlessly white and new. Billie thought what fun he would have sailing it.

Then another thought came to him. "I wonder who lost it! I suppose the boy or girl who did, will feel pretty badly about losing such a nice toy!"

Billie looked up the stream. Of course the owner of the boat must be up there somewhere. Billie began walking up the side of the creek, carrying the little ship in his hand.

He walked on and on, beyond the end of Uncle Sid's ranch. Just then he saw another boy, about his own size, walking down-stream toward him. The other little boy wasn't looking at Billie, though. He was looking at the water of the creek.

Billie hurried toward the strange little boy. "Here's your boat!" he called. "I found it down in Uncle Sid's creek!"

The boy smiled a very friendly smile. "Thanks a lot for bringing it back to me!" he said. "Do you live down here?"

"I'm staying there for a month!" Billie told him.

"Whoopie!" the new little boy shouted. "Then I'm going to have some one to play with! I'm up here visiting my grandpa, and I've been all alone so far, but with you living on the next ranch, what fun we can have! Come on up now and meet my grandpa. He'll make you a boat like this one, if you want! He makes them himself. And help me find a good name for my boat. It isn't named yet."

Billie and his new friend, Hal, decided to christen the little ship the "Friendly," because it was through it that they became friends. And what a good time they had together after that, sailing their boats, exploring the creek and riding the gentle old horses on the ranch! Billie never felt lonely again during his visit.—Publisher Unknown.

SET FREE

Old Timothy Tate, who kept a poor, little bird shop in one of the back streets of the town, was badly hit by the hard times.

"I say, Billie, we've got to sell some of these 'ere birds or they and we'll sing for our supper in vain! Rent day tomorrow too."

"What are we to do, uncle? With the coal strike and all, folks about 'ere 'ave no money to spend on pets."

"Well, as the customers don't be a-comin' to us, we've got to go to 'em. You can go out with some of the cheaper birds in the small cages an' try an' sell a few."

"Righto, uncle; it's a nice fine mornin'; wish me good luck." And Billie promptly got ready to go to the most likely part of the town with his feathered flock. He was very fond of the birds, and hoped each one would fall into kindly hands and be well treated.

"If I was religious now, like Dan Davis in the Sunday School, I'd put up a prayer for each one of these little birds to get a 'happy 'ome, but I don't feel familiar enough with God. I doubt if 'e'd 'eed me."

So musing Billy turned a sharp corner and ran into a gentleman, who, however, took the collision most good-naturedly.

"Hello, boy, what's your hurry?"

But Billie was busy soothing the wild flutterings of his feathered stock. The effect of his voice was quite magical, and the stranger stood watching him with interest.

"Where are you going with your pet birds?" he inquired.

Billie, scenting a possible customer, was on the alert at once.

"I've got to sell 'em for my uncle. 'E breeds 'em, you see. Times 'as been that bad so I'm takin' 'em out to try to sell. Won't you buy one, sir? This starlin' now is a first-class loud-speaker, no license to pay, no listenin'-in to 'ear 'im talk."

So Billie reeled off attractive descriptions of each of the birds, and the gentleman apparently seemed contemplating a purchase.

"What will you take for the lot, my lad?"

"Five dollars, sir," said Billie, "and dirt cheap too."

"I don't like anything too cheap, so here are two clean five dollar bills. Now follow me; I live just down this road."

"I guess 'e owns a bird 'ouse," thought Billie, feeling as if he were walking on air.

Through a massive iron gateway they turned into extensive grounds.

"Now, my lad, open the cages and let all your birds go free."

Billie gazed in astonishment! Had he heard aright?

"Hurry up," said his companion; "I've bought them, haven't I, so surely I can do as I like with my own!"

With a silent "Thank God," Billie saw the birds he loved regain their freedom. Timid, bewildered, and slow at first in using their wings, they soon appreciated their liberty and flew away in the warm sunshine.

"You think I'm rather strange, don't you, my lad, but you see I want you never to forget this incident all your life! Once I was a captive much worse off than any of your little birds. I had a cruel master who ill-treated me all the time. One day a Stranger came along and set me free. For some time I would not believe His Word, but when at last I did He gave me liberty, joy and everything heart could wish. Now I want to set all other poor captives free."

"Didn't your bad old master try to get you back again?" asked Billie with interest.

"Yes, he did, and does all the time, only my wonderful Friend is so powerful He keeps me safe."

"Sure 'e must be one worth 'avin'," remarked Billie, and the gentleman answered with a radiant smile:

"Indeed He is, and He'll be just the same to you if you'll let Him."

And then he explained to Billie how the Lord Jesus Christ had died on the Cross to save us from our sins and that if Bille would take Jesus as his Saviour he would be safe and happy too. There and then Billie asked this wonderful Saviour to set him free, and today he is as free and happy as his birds on that bright morning years ago.—Sunlight for the Young.

GOD'S CHOICE

Mildred had chosen her life work, or rather, she knew she had been chosen for a life work. It all started back when she was a girl of twelve. At that time a missionary had spoken in her home church. She told about the conditions as she found them in Africa, picturing the helpless and hopeless condition of the children, and the need of workers in a field that was white for harvest. Mildred wished then she was old enough to volunteer for this work. She did promise God that she would go if it was His will.

The years rolled on, and Mildred remembered her promise. After graduating from high school, she entered training for a medical missionary. Through her medical ability she could gain access to them to deal with their souls. It was while she was preparing for this work that a great temptation came into her life. She met a young man of strong Christian character, superintendent of one of the largest Sunday Schools in the city, who was also a medical student. In due course of time, he proposed marriage to her. This was just before she graduated.

"But you know my work will be in a far country," she replied.

"What difference does it matter where you work, as long as you are doing Christian work?" he argued.

"I wish to work where I am called to," she replied.

"Don't you think you could do good work here?" he argued further. "There are lost souls here that need salvation as much as those in Africa. It seems to me you could stay here and perhaps do better work than you could over there."

"That argument ought to work the other way," she retorted. "Why don't you give up your work here and go to Africa?"

"Me go to Africa?" he said surprised. "I'm afraid I wouldn't be much good over there. No, my work is here."

"And mine is in Africa," she concluded. "I might stay here and work, but I would not be a success unless I am where God has called me. He has not called me to stay here. Africa is my field."

"I offer you marriage, a good home, and opportunities and advantages which will not be yours in Africa, and also will not in any way hinder any Christian work you might wish to do," was the offer he held forth to her.

To say the least it was a tempting offer, but Mildred could not bring herself to accept. The vision of years before loomed larger than ever. The children of Africa in their wretched condition appealed stronger than ever before. A good home, love and comfort, these things were good in themselves, but when they came between her and duty there was but one thing to do.

"Your offer is splendid," she said, "and I know it is made with sincerity of heart, but I will have to refuse it. In its place I will encounter hardships, lonely days and more lonely nights amid African darkness, surrounded by danger, filth, heathenism, and much else. But I have been chosen to carry a message there, and an ambassador goes where he is sent. It may be much harder for me in some ways, but you know 'the sufferings of the present time are not worthy of being compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us,' and I must turn my back upon everything else to be faithful to the call I have received."

It was this manner of consecration that led lost souls of the Dark Continent to the Kingdom of Eternal Life.—Selected.

A SLUM GIRL

She was a child of the slums, a ragged, forlorn little girl of about ten years of age. Some one had given her a penny, and she had hurried away to the penny store and there purchased a stick of striped red-and-white candy. She was running along the streets, proud and happy in her new and rare possession, when I saw her. Suddenly another little girl, equally ragged and forlorn looking, came limping out of the dark hallway of a dilapidated old rookery of a tenement house. She was very lame, and had evidently suffered much in her short life. Her face had a drawn and prematurely old look, such as one is always sorry to see in the faces of children.

The two little girls met, and the one with the candy held it aloft, exclaiming, "See what I've got! Just see what I've got!"

"Where'd you get it, Janie?"

"Bought it."

"Where'd you get the money?"

"A man gave it to me for scooting after his hat when the wind blowed it off."

"Gimme some of it, won't you, Janie? Please do."

There was a wistful, eager, hungry look in the drawn little face.

Janie hesitated. Evidently sticks of candy came rarely to her. She looked longingly at the candy and then at the girl. Suddenly she rushed forward, saying eagerly, joyously: "You take it all, Maggie; you take it all. You can't scoot after gentlemen's hats and earn pennies, and if I git a chance to earn another penny I'll give it to you to buy anything you want to with it."

Generous little heart, in which love of self had not yet found an abiding place! What a lesson it teaches to the grasping and self-centered, who care not for the wants, the weakness, or the woes of others.—Publisher Unknown.

THE ONE WHO WAS BRAVE

"Elton Tilton is just the bravest boy you ever saw, mother," said Winfred. "One day a big dog came along with his tongue hanging out, and he thought he was mad and scrambled over the fence; but Elton walked right along as calm as ever. He says he isn't afraid of bears, of tramps, or anything. I wish I were as brave as Elton, but I'm afraid I never will be."

"I heard a story about two boys the other day," said his mother, "and I thought one of them was very brave. They went to school together and one day they thought it would be great fun to hide a frog in the teacher's desk; but the frog tipped over an ink bottle and spoiled a number of examination papers and other things, and the teacher was very angry. He asked the guilty boy to own his fault like a man and take the punishment he deserved. He put him upon his honor, you see. Well, the older boy, who found the frog and first thought of the joke, sat still in his seat without a blush; but the little boy, though he trembled with fear, went to the desk before the whole school, and owned his fault. And he sat for an hour on the dunce's stool, a target for fifty pair of eyes."

"O mother," cried Winfred, "I was so ashamed. I'll never do anything so mean again as long as I live. How did you know?"

"I heard two boys talking about it as I rode in the car. I was proud of my boy, Winfred; and I pitied Elton Tilton's mother, for I said to myself: 'My boy was brave, but her boy was a coward.'"

"Why, I never thought that was being brave!" said Winfred.—Youth's Companion.

THE CHILD AND THE BIBLE

Argument and criticism do not appeal to the child-mind. It is to his imagination that we must appeal through pictures and impressions. It is a good thing that mere reading lessons have given place to the reading of history, biography and fable.

Speaking of the child, William Dean Howells once said: "The Bible has more for him than any other and all other books."

This statement from a distinguished literary man whose primary business it was to know literature of every kind, ought to have much weight.

We wonder in this day when children's books are so multitudinous and so beautiful, if the old-fashioned Bible story is not being given the discard? Yet what fairy stories are equal in interest to many of the Bible stories?

What stories of modern authors are equal to the old Bible stories which were taught to the older generations at mother's knee? And those stories taught in the long ago will never be forgotten.

It is never too early to begin teaching Bible stories to little children. Mr. Howells was right.—Watchman-Examiner.

BE COURAGEOUS

God will always give you,
Grace to be a man.
Then why tarry longer?
Move at His command.

Questions so perplexing,
Where there seems no way,
Will brighten up before you,
Like the Dawning Day.

Climbing up the mountains,
You can see below,
And have a better vision
Of things you didn't know.

Resting on God's promise
He will take you through!
Do not be discouraged,
Come and start anew.

For the Leader

It would be interesting to have a large-size wooden type to show and explain that it is like the Christian Endeavor because, first it is made by an "impression" in a type foundry, and then because it is used to give "expression" to something by printing it on paper.

Dr. Clark received his impression that a society of young people for prayer, testimony, and Christian work in the church would be a blessing. He might have put this impression aside as we do many times, but he didn't. He was so sure that such a society would fit into the activities of the church that he gave expression to his impression by calling the first Christian Endeavor meeting in the parlor of Williston church, Portland, Me. For about half a century Christian Endeavor has been proving that it fits into the program of the church as a hand fits into a glove.

Our spiritual impressions must have expression or they will die. May we put those impressions into expression and in so doing help to carry on the work of the church.

Discuss These

1. Why should we look to the Lord for understanding?
2. What is our duty as a member of the C. E. Society to the church?
3. What do you think of Endeavorers who attend their own meetings, but do not attend the preaching services?
4. Can your society group always be depended upon to do their share of the church's work?
5. How may the Christian Endeavor fit into the missionary program of the church?
6. How may the Christian Endeavor society fit into Christ's program, "That they may all be one?"

Poetry

"Here's a creed that's broad enough for any man—

Help along.

God is doing for His children all He can;

Help along.

With loving hand he seeks to smoothe the way,
He's lifting up the fallen day by day;

Need is calling, be of service while you may.

Help along.

"Here's a creed that every man may safely hold—

Help along.

It will never be too narrow, nor too old—

Help along.

The Lord of hosts is working day and night
To bless the world and keep it going right—
If you would be heroic in His might,
Help along.

HENDERSON CENTER MEETING

I am calling a meeting of the pastors, Sunday school superintendents and Christian Endeavor society presidents and any others who desire to attend, to meet at the Henderson church at 3:00 p. m., Friday, January 23, for the purpose of organizing the Henderson District and deciding on the place and date of the Leadership Training School at that center.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

PROGRESS OF ELEVENTH DISTRICT

I have been asked to write about the work in the Eleventh District. Will say we have our district meetings in the spring in connection with the Conference District. We find this time is more suitable for the majority of members in this district, as it cuts down meetings, and we can put the women's work before the men and the church. The men have their meetings in the morning, the women in the afternoon. The co-operation of the pastors and auxiliary members in this district has helped make the meetings successful and given us a good attendance.

We try to have some officers of North Carolina Branch to present the work. Also have members of the different auxiliaries of the district to take part on the program. The willingness, readiness and hearty co-operation of our young people to help with the program is an inspiration to the meetings. This makes me feel that all the district chairmen would have to do is to give the young people a chance. Just call on them, they are ready to take part.

For the last two years we have had District Standards for the auxiliaries. A banner is awarded to the church reaching most points. The following is just what our standard contains and hope it will help make other districts' work increase and easy as ours has been.

1. At least one half of members having a set time for prayer each day—10 per cent.
2. Holding two Thank Offering services during the year—10 per cent.
3. Raising your apportionment—10 per cent.
4. Two-thirds of the homes represented in the auxiliaries subscribing to the Missionary Record—10 per cent.
5. Studying both Home and Foreign Mission books—10 per cent.
6. Twenty-five per cent. of members being present at district meetings—10 per cent.
7. Missionary program be given in Sunday School at least once each month—10 per cent.
8. Using program provided by Mission Board—10 per cent.
9. Three-fourths of the total number of members present being on time at each monthly meeting—10 per cent.
10. Helping district chairman organize adult auxiliary, young people circle and children's societies or foster weaker auxiliaries—10 per cent.

One thing that we have done for several years is to have an "All-Day Mission Study Class" for the convenience of those who are not able to get mission study leaders. The auxiliaries of the district are invited to meet together with the church that is convenient for the most members. Our meetings opens with devotionals at 10 o'clock, then the leader appointed reviews the mission study book. We then recess for picnic lunch. We reassemble and another appointed leader reviews another book. This has proven to be an important

HERE AND THERE

THE SPELL

Who among us can tell
When Graham is going to have a spell,
And take you by surprise,
Just before their eyes?
And while they have their fun
You stand speechless and dumb.
Well, this is what they did
To this poor, big invalid:
While singing in the Hut
They came all in a strut!
And what a pounding they gave,
Just to hear Auman rave!

There was sugar, coffee, and flour,
And many things in this shower.
Now what shall I say for all this array
Which almost filled my one-horse shay?
Now this is what I'll say,
And the prayer I'll pray:
Now to all my people
I serve under the steeple,
Dear folks of mine,
That was very fine;
And help me and mine, I pray,
To be true to you each day.

PINE RIDGE NOTES

We had a great Christmas season. In our services here there was a deeper spiritual life manifest than usual. We seemed to comprehend more fully the real meaning of the matter. Then, too, even though financial conditions have not been at their best, yet many friends remembered us with gifts and we were well provided for, so that the usual treats were passed around and there was much happiness.

Perhaps the greatest material gift Alvan Drew School has ever received came to us just a while before Christmas—a well of natural gas. For several years we had been hoping to drill a deep well since there was good reason to believe we would discover oil. We have some good friends in the oil business and finally we were enabled to make a contract that would give the school the full benefit of the result of the drilling. We began operations around Thanksgiving Day; the sand was reached at a depth of twelve hundred feet, and fifteen feet deeper we got a flow of gas which, after we had gotten it under control and in a two-inch tubing, showed a rock pressure of fifty pounds in two minutes and one hundred pounds in six minutes. Of course no one knows how long the supply will last, but at present there is an abundance to light and heat all our buildings. Of course the expense for plumbing and installing burners and other necessary equipment is great, but we are going ahead with the work and expect to begin burning the gas in our light plant and furnaces within the next week. We are taking every precaution and doing all we know how to avoid danger and accident. Of course such a gas well as this is an indication that there is oil near by, consequently there is quite an interest locally; leases are being secured and plans are being made for more drilling at once—so we are contributing somewhat to the solution of the unemployment problem. We are thankful, however, that we struck gas instead of oil as it is more useful to us at present.

I gave two days this week serving as a member of our county relief committee in connection with the American Red Cross and will continue to give a day each week. Surveys have been made and our people who are in the most destitute circumstances are receiving some help.

Our school opened January 5th with renewed interest and nearly enough new students to fill the little vacant space we had in our dormitories. With assurances of gratitude to all our co-operating friends everywhere, we enter the New Year with a thrill of joy because of the privileges we have in serving the Lord.

ALCOHOL FOR FUEL

A suggestion has been made, states the Clarion Call, a Melbourne publication, that the manufacture of power alcohol should be begun in Australia upon a large scale. Sugar cane is thought of as the raw material which might be used. For power purposes alcohol may well ultimately become the ideal fuel.

Every year something like 10,000,000 pounds is sent out of Australia for petrol. The use of Australian produced power alcohol may help to keep some of this money in Australia. This is alcohol's true role! An excellent thing for an engine but bad for an engineer!—American Issue.

HERE IS AN INTERESTING FACT

Wet propagandists tell that more liquor is consumed now than in saloon days. They also assert that the liquor consumed now is more deadly than it used to be. Then why is the alcoholic death rate on the decrease?

In 1917, with saloons running full blast, the government reported the mortality from alcoholism was 5.2 per 100,000 population, while in 1929 the death rate was 3.7 per 100,000. In 1929 there was a decrease compared with 1928. In saloon days with an increased mortality from alcoholism, wets said nothing about the deadly character of the stuff, and now the howl for the return of the "good old days" when they can buy "pure liquor."—American Issue.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE

If a smallpox or typhoid fever epidemic in North Carolina resulted in two deaths daily, it would be a matter of great public concern. Physicians and nurses would be mobilized and preventive measures taken.

Fortunately there is no such epidemic in this state, thanks to the preventive efforts of modern science, but there is another just as deadly. That is the speed craze. With the best highways of any state of similar environment in the nation, we have gone speed crazy.

Two persons daily are killed on North Carolina highways in automobile accidents.—Health Bulletin.

Dr. W. W. Staley declares that Christian education means the education of Christians—the proper training of those who, having embraced Christianity, are trying to learn more under the leadership and in the atmosphere of Christian schools, of what life really means and has to offer. According to this philosophy, we do not educate people into being Christians, but educate Christians into being men and women of worth, might and merit in the realm of Christian activity.—Christian Sun.

The New York Times says that not a liquor death occurred in that city on New Year's Eve, this fact setting a record.

Remember what Simonides said—that he never repented that he had held his tongue, but often that he had spoken.—Plutarch.

Paper Wanted: Mrs. H. A. Pope, R. 2, Enfield, N. C., wants a copy of Our Church Record of September 29, 1898, and will pay 50 cents for it. Write her if you can supply the demand and await her order for the paper.

Our minds play pranks with us sometimes. A brother recently sent us a letter containing some subscriptions for the Herald and closing with the words, "Enclosed please find check," but he forgot to enclose check. After he had mailed the letter he discovered that he had failed to insert check. He was mortified by this oversight. He sat down and wrote an apology, concluding with, "I will send check with this." But again he forgot to enclose check. We cannot describe his feeling when he found it out, but he tried the third time and succeeded. Please do not ask us to name this brother.

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson's series of sermons and addresses in our city elicited many cordial expressions of high appreciation. He spoke in colleges as well as churches and everywhere received the most respectful attention. His visit brought good to our city and we would be glad to hope that he will come again.

A kind letter we received from Dr. C. E. Jefferson includes this interesting information: "It may interest you to know that my Grandfather and Grandmother on my mother's side were members for many years of the Methodist Protestant Church in Cambridge, Ohio. Through them I came to know when only a boy of your denomination and the fine piece of work it is doing."

THE PENALTY

Today I saw a man
With sunken eyes;
His shrivelled body
Disarmed disguise.

The bloodless face
And hopeless look,
Men swiftly saw,
But none mistook.

Mind, body, spirit,
Bartered, sold;
His pockets bulged
With tarnished gold.

—Grenville Kleiser.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard volunteers this testimony: "In my work in the pastorate of nearly nineteen years the church paper has always been a great help, and I can go out and take subscriptions feeling that I am rendering a real service to the Kingdom." That "feeling" helps to explain Bro. Pritchard's success in building up the church paper's subscription list.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Spring Hill, North Davidson.—The S. S. and C. E. are still doing good work, considering the weather and sickness. The C. E. met Sunday morning after S. S. under the leadership of Miss Altha Craven.

A few weeks ago one of our most faithful and devoted church members departed this life. Mrs. Westmoreland was an aged lady, and everybody loved her. She joined the church while young and remained loyal to the end. Her husband died while fighting in the Civil War.

There has also been a young man, Mr. Banks Fields, age 19, taken from our presence. Banks was a kind, obedient boy, and the last words that he uttered were about his going home. He leaves a father, mother, four brothers and one sister to mourn for him. As a church, we are in deep sympathy with this family.

REPORTER.

Hebron, Orange Charge.—Rev. B. M. Williams delivered a worthy and thoughtful message Sunday afternoon at the 3 o'clock service. He used as his text, "All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth." The congregation was small, but this was due to the condition of the roads.

The Sunday School is still progressing, but the attendance is very small. When the bad weather is over a 100 per cent is expected. Under the leadership of the superintendent, we feel that we must and will reach this goal. The Sunday School owe many thanks to the secretary, Mr. B. F. Wilson, for his excellent service. He has a perfect attendance for three years.

First Church, High Point.—(Report received on Saturday).—The following have united with our membership since conference: Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Whitlow, Miss Madge Smith, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Sweet and daughter, Ellen, Hobart Ferree, Jr., Mrs. A. R. Peace, Mrs. T. D. Free, Dr. and Mrs. L. H. Zimmerman, Mr. Paul G. Moss, Misses Margaret and Virginia Dixon, and William C. Ferree, Jr.

On Sunday morning the minister delivered the second of the splendid series of messages to the seven churches of Asia, which he called, "The Peril of Lowered Enthusiasm—Ephesus" from the text in Rev. 2:4. "I have somewhat against thee because thou hast left thy first love." He said in part: "In Capp's Hill cemetery, Boston, there is a remarkable inscription on a monument. 'He was an enemy of Enthusiasm,' which could never be said of Christ or Christianity. Enthusiasm is not a kind of extravagant inspiration or frantic state of mind but a commendable instinct of devotion and eager interest. Emerson said, 'Every great, commanding movement in the history of the world has been the result of the triumph of enthusiasm.' Revelation, written by John, while in prison on the Isle of Patmos, is the only book dedicated solely to Jesus Christ. Ephesus was an ancient city of wealth, where was located the famous Oracle of Diana, and boasted of an amphitheatre which seated 24,000 persons about the same size of the Kenan Stadium at the University of North Carolina and the Duke stadium at Durham; the Yale Bowl has been made to seat 80,000 people on the occasion of football games between Yale and Harvard. Jesus walks around among the churches of America today, even in High Point, like a gardener, commends each one for some virtue, but rebukes them for some short-coming. He rebuked the Ephesians for lowered enthusiasm and lesser love toward him. It is a matter of interest that Ephesus was the only church that was removed from its original site. First love is always ardent. Young life confidently expects to turn the world upside down, but soon settles down to mediocre tasks. A Chinese convert said, "We want men with red-hot hearts to tell us about Christ." Christ evokes enthusiasm, which is never lost, but is a servant, an engine under control. A man ought to have many keen interests, but should have enthusiasm in his religion. There is sometimes a waning of first love. Rev. S. D. Gordon, the quiet, forceful speaker who once appeared in High Point, for a series of talks several years ago, and whom many of us remember for those helpful messages, tells about a dead debaucher in whose pocket was found a New Testament. When love fades, we get into a mechanical way of doing things. George Elliot said, "I have known two kinds of Methodists, enthusiastic and bilious." When you lose your first love, you become just a retired Christian. Repent of your sins, and that former love will be rekindled and there will be an afterglow. This is a challenge to First Church this morning, to be a spiritual dynamo. May we forget the preacher, but remember the preacher's Saviour. Like Gaspard de Coligny may we exclaim, "We have a king," who is the Lord.

An unusual lecture, "A Quest for a Pair of Slippers," will be presented this Tuesday evening in Roberts Hall, High Point College, by a distinguished speaker, Dr. Robert W. McLaughlin of New York, who is a warm personal friend of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

The choir was most happily entertained on Thursday evening of last week by Prof. J. H. Mourane and his mother at their attractive new home. Organization has been effected, and officers elected.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett is on her annual visit to her daughter, Mrs. H. S. Meredith, at Tampa, Fla.

The Ministerial Association of High Point on Monday enjoyed a visit to Greensboro to hear Dr. Jefferson.

Friendship.—Our Christmas program was held on Christmas Eve.

The wedding bells rung one time during the holidays in this community. On December 23 Miss Louise Hunt of Reeds and Paul Hartley, of this community, were united in marriage in South Carolina.

Mrs. Hartley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Hunt of Reeds, and was attending school at that place.

Mr. Hartley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Hartley of this community and was also attending school at Reeds. They will make their home with Mr. Hartley's parents. Their many friends extend to them their heartiest congratulations.

Quarterly conference met at Friendship Saturday evening, January 10.

Mrs. J. H. Shoaf is seriously ill, we are sorry to note.

New teachers have been elected for the year as follows: Miss Lelia Eyerly, Mrs. Zeb. Snyder, Mrs. W. M. Byerly, I. R. Michael, Miss Arlene Shoaf, Mrs. I. R. Michael, Miss Bertha Delapp, Mrs. A. L. Hartley, Miss Maie Shoaf.

Winston, First.—Yesterday was the beginning of our Sunday school and Church attendance contest with Charlotte and we made a right good showing. We were to take the average attendance for the month of December as the starting point and each person present over and above that number was to count ten points and if at any time we fall below that average each person below that average will count ten points and be subtracted from the previous total. Our average attendance for December was 119 and yesterday we had 157 which gave us 38 more than the average of 380 points. The attendance yesterday was the best we have had at all since conference and perhaps a good while before that.

In the church attendance contest we had at the morning service 90 persons which was 34 per cent of our entire membership and at the evening service, even though it was real rainy, we had 36 persons present or 13 per cent. After this week we will simply report the number of points in the S. S. contest and the per cent in the church attendance. Our editor has been good enough to publish the results of the contest and I trust it will stimulate others.

A week ago yesterday we received two new members, Mrs. Pritchard from the Asheboro church and Brother Lawrence White on profession of faith. Beginning with yesterday we will give an opportunity at every service just after the sermon for the decisions for Christ and for membership in the church. I have come to the conclusion that I have been playing with this job of getting folks to make decisions and of joining the church, so from now on I expect to press the matter more.

Our situation here in regard to the evening service is exactly the reverse from what it is in the most of our churches. Here our church is right in the heart of the city. As the years have gone by more and more business has crowded out residences and our people have moved out until now a great many of our people live out from one to two miles from the church while very few people live in the vicinity of the church. When our people come to Sunday school and church in the mornings it is somewhat difficult to get much of a congregation at the evening hour. Last evening we had our first Good News service when the people were to come prepared to tell the best thing they had heard about anybody else. Some fine things were said and following this the pastor preached on Brotherhood.

Next Sunday will be known as Young People's Day with an appropriate sermon in the morning and a service by the young people in the evening.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Tabernacle Charge.—In spite of the falling rain encouraging congregations were present at both churches last Sunday for the preaching services. It was decided to observe Young People's day on this charge on the first Sunday in February, 11 a. m., at Tabernacle and 7 p. m. at Julian. We hope to make these services helpful and inspiring to the young people as well as to the older. Our Sunday schools are holding up about as usual with a slight increase in attendance at Julian. The efficient superintendents, Brothers W. T. Hanner and C. M. Fields, are always on the job trying to inaugurate new methods. Miss Kathleen Reynolds is the new president of the growing C. E. society at Tabernacle. She is well trained educationally and has the work of the society at heart.

Tabernacle church had a Christmas tree and appropriate exercises on the afternoon of December 24, the pastor and wife receiving a number of beautiful and useful presents.

Our first Quarterly conference set apart April as "College Month." During this month we will endeavor to raise the $200 apportioned to Tabernacle charge for the running expenses for High Point college.

Misses Ezda Deviney and Elizabeth Hanner, who are teaching in Florida and Davidson county, spent the Christmas holidays with their people at Julian.

The people continue to remember the pastor with substantial donations. The following have our thanks: Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Fields and Mr. and Mrs. William Hardin, flour; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smith, some fine sausage; and Mr. J. E. Hanner for a cash donation. Mr and Mrs. Arthur P. Coble, perhaps thinking that pastor needed to read more, are sending him a weekly religious periodical. They have our thanks.

Most of our members who have been sick are improving.

We are grateful to Rev. T. F. McCulloch for preaching at Tabernacle on the 5th Sunday in November. H. L. ISLEY.

Moriah.—Our Sunday school and church services are doing nicely for bad weather, and bad roads that many of our members have to travel.

Our pastor brought us a wonderful message Sunday. His subject being "Faith."

What the world needs today is the faith of the Centurion; we put too much faith in ourselves and not enough in God that is why so many of us fail in our undertakings.

We should trust more in God our Heavenly Father.

We had several visitors with us for the services and we were glad indeed to have them worship with us.

The Christian Endeavor has been put off until last of February or first of March owing to the weather and road conditions.

May God bless us all and help us to be a blessing to others.

REPORTER.

South Lexington.—Our church services are making good progress. There were 200 in Sunday school Sunday. We were delighted to have Mr. W. M. Howard, of High Point College, preach for us at 11 o'clock. Mr. Howard delivered a fine message, his subject being "God the Father," and he brought out some fine points and all present expressed much delight in his sermon. Mr. Howard is a fine type of young man and we pray God to richly bless his efforts in the great work in which he has been called.

On Sunday evening at 7:30 Rev. N. M. Harrison preached a very forceful sermon and also told some interesting facts about the great work which our denomination is doing. He also talked about High Point College and the good work it is doing for the N. C. Conference. Our people at South Lexington church are interested in High Point College, and we are always ready to try to do our part for it.

REPORTER.

North Davidson Charge.—We have been going as usual. It looks now as though we may have to stop going for a while on account of mud. The roads off the hard surface are about impassable.

We had a very fine Christmas. The pastor did not get to all the entertainments. The first I attended was Spring Hill. A fine program, and it seemed old Santa had something for everyone; finally he came out with a bag of flour for the pastor. The program was short but good from the beginning to end and enjoyed by every one.

The next was at Canaan. It was my first time with them in a Christmas entertainment. Old Santa greeted a large crowd in spite of snow and bad roads. The whole program was as fine as you usually hear. Here the pastor was remembered.

I missed Mt. Pleasant and Bethesda. Bethesda did not forget the pastor. They had two bags of fruits and candy. The entertainment committee on the second Sunday informed the pastor that he was to take dinner at Bro. and Sister R. E. Leonard's. After satisfying a physical appetite at a table loaded with well prepared foods and about to start to conduct a funeral service, Bro. Leonard in his quiet, easy way said, "Wait just a minute; I have a little Christmas present for you." When he came out he had a bag of fine flour for us.

We thank the good people for these kind deeds of remembering their pastor and family. May God reward them and help us to be faithful.

A large part of the citizenship of North Thomasville was shocked when the sad news spread of the accidental shot fired in the home of Bro. and Sister McCrary and wounded their little daughter of nine years that resulted in the death of the child in about six hours. The funeral was at Midway church, M. E. South. The pastor of Midway and Bethesda, Rev. Stabler and Powell, conducted the service before one of the largest congregations I've ever seen at a funeral of a child. It took the large crowd about three-quarters of an hour to file by and view the corpse. The child was widely known as she had been a regular attendant of Sunday school from a child and had been a member of the Sunday school at Bethesda, Midway and Mount Pleasant. Many relatives and friends in Davidson county were present.

We sympathize greatly with the crushed and bereaved family. May the grace of God prove sufficient in this time of great need.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

Rechoboth, Granville Charge.—This Sunday morning I played "Give Me Thy Heart" on the piano before leaving for church, and what should Mr. Spencer take for his text but Prov. 4:23: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

We are commanded to give God our hearts, for they rightly belong to him anyway.

We have decided to take a collection for Mr. Minnis on next third Sunday in February. Folks, let's give, for he has left all and followed Christ. If we can't go, then let us give. I'm writing this notice so that all in this district may read and do likewise.

Miss Sue Harris and Lucy Rogers are sick. Miss Frances Cheatham and Mr. Edward Evans were united in wedlock before Christmas. They spent their honeymoon in Richmond, Va. Frances will be greatly missed at home and in the community. They will make their home in Durham.

Mr. H. L. Wright won a Bible Christmas for good attendance in S. S. He was present every Sunday during the year.

May we take up our cross and follow Jesus daily—not just on Sundays.

REPORTER.

English Street Charge.—One of the encouraging features of our Sunday school yesterday was that we had 94 more pupils in attendance than a year ago. The collection was also larger. New pupils are added almost every Sunday. The pastor is delighted with the activities of the C. E. Society. These young people are doing a fine work and show more interest than formerly. The society is very much pleased to add to its membership the Misses Bunkomyers, who are interested workers. Miss Ruth sang very beautifully for the Sunday evening preaching service last Sunday and all present greatly enjoyed it. Miss Kathleen Embler is leading these young folks as their president and is proving to be a most capable leader. At Midway next Sunday at 2 p. m. they expect to render a special program. Following this program the choirs of both churches will unite in a song service. Everybody who can come has an invitation and we would like to see the house filled with folks.

The Ladies' Aid Society at Midway will give a chicken dinner at the home of Mrs. J. A. Suits Friday evening of this week at 7:30. The proceeds from this will go to make a payment on their piano at the church. The price is only 25 cents per plate. Let everybody who can be present and enjoy this supper. Our Midway folks have also decided to paint their church and beautify the grounds. This done our church will be more in keeping with its surroundings, and will also give us more prestige in the community.

At Shady Grove our congregations have been small but we are favorably impressed. They have paid more promptly on pastor's salary than either of the other churches. They are to be commended for their promptness in meeting their church obligations.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Lebanon Charge.—Our charge was left without a pastor at the last Conference. For several weeks the pulpit was occupied by different ministers, among them President Taylor preached several times. A few weeks ago Bro. J. C. Madison, a student of High Point College, was assigned to our charge. He preaches for us every Sunday at 11 o'clock and secures someone for the evening services.

The Sunday school, despite the rough weather, is holding up in attendance under the leadership of Mr. J. W. Montgomery.

We are sorry to report some of our members remain sick. Stanley Montgomery, one of our Sunday school scholars, remains in High Point Hospital with a broken leg. Bro. J. W. Thacker, who has been sick for some time, doesn't get any better and is greatly missed at the services, also Mrs. Thacker. We hope that all will soon recover and be with us.

REPORTER.

Laurel Hill.—On Sunday, January 11, at 11 o'clock our pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, preached an inspiring sermon. His text was "He that overcometh inheriteth all things."

Communion service was observed at this hour also.

Mr. J. W. Allran is seriously ill. We all hope for a speedy recovery.

Rev. J. M. Morgan was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Hull Sunday.

A very good amount of different articles was collected for the Children's Home by Mrs. A. B. Willis. Rev. Mr. Morgan was kind and carried it to High Point. Mrs. Willis wishes to thank all that contributed to this good cause.

May this year bring great blessings to all and may much be done in advancing God's kingdom.

LOIS WILLIS, Reporter.

Shiloh.—Mumps and bad roads have had some influence upon the S. S. attendance; 171 were present today. Among those who have had mumps are Mrs. F. L. Leatherman, the children of Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Evans, the children of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Shoaf, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lanning, Mrs. Wiley Shoaf and children, and possibly others.

We have been unable to have a council meeting for this month. We are hoping to be able to have one just as soon as roads improve enough to venture out and be sure to get back home.

Rev. R. S. Troxler preached a most encouraging sermon today from Job 23:10: "But he knoweth the way that I take when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold." Everything is being tested and only the truth will survive, but thanks be to God, He knows the way.

Best wishes for all.

MRS. W. L. SHOAF.

Kernersville.—In spite of the rainy day Sunday, fairly good congregations came out at three of our churches to hear Dr. Taylor's fine messages of inspiration that gave us new hope. He knows how to say the right thing at the right time.

The S. S. under the efficient leadership of Mrs. Lilly Wood at Sandy Ridge is doing a splendid work. Few churches have a brighter future than Sandy Ridge, as evidenced by the large number of children who attend regularly. It is remarkable how the teachers hold the attention of the pupils.

We were taken by surprise again when we went to our tin "Lizzie" and found difficulty in finding a place for the driver. Don't know who was responsible; they don't let their right hand know what the left hand doeth; but God knows and we are thankful. We are finding some of the real salt of the earth on Kernersville. We are grateful to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hopkins, former parishioners of four years for gifts. They are friends like the McCollums, that hold on with the turtle's grip.

Finances are picking up. Pine Grove is taking the lead, Kernersville next, then comes Sandy Ridge and Ai.

We are encouraged with the outlook and are looking forward hopefully for a good year.

W. D. REED.

Palectine, Flat Rock.—Our good pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg, has filled all his appointments since Conference. Rainy days and bad roads have kept many people away. It seemed that Brother Pegg preached the best he ever did last Sunday. Somebody said he always saves the best for a bad day. Let's everybody go to church next rainy Sunday. I feel that sweet closing prayer was worth my going all this long way to hear.

Our Sunday school closed at Christmas for the winter months for the first time in several years. It seemed best, there being much rough weather and sickness.

Mr. L. C. Tucker has been feeble since Christmas. Little Tommy Sharron, baby of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Sharron, is better after being real sick. Willie Tucker, brother of the reporter, is some better, having been sick since Christmas.

Archie Tucker, one of our faithful stewards, is taking a treatment in St. Leo's Hospital, Greensboro.

GRACE TUCKER.

Fairfield Church, Guilford Circuit.—The attendance has kept up exceptionally well at Sunday school and meeting for worship despite the weather, and some sickness prevailing. Several of the regular attendants have had a siege of the flu in the past few weeks.

Mr. Peeler's first message of the year was an exhortation to the church to press forward for a big and profitable year, forgetting the progress of the past years. The church was pretty well filled.

Last Sunday 90 per cent. of the enrollment of the Sunday school were present and all remained for the preaching service. Mr. Peeler brought a message on "Seeing." I think one of the best he has presented at this place. Several of the Allen Joy school teachers were present; Miss Bavis and Mrs. Mendenhall rendering a duet.

The C. E. society is making commendable progress; we have been having good leaders, and the endeavors have responded well. Last Sunday night we had a debate. The affirmative team were J. Van Cashatt and R. C. Harris; negative, O. D. Ingram, Marvin Cashatt.

J. VAN CASHATT, Reporter.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—About 9:30 a. m. January 4 Mr. A. M. Neese, age 67 years, who had been in poor health took his life by shooting himself. He was born and reared in Alamance. He was married twice, first to Miss Eliza Jane Lincum. To this union were born four children. Mrs. Neese died in 1912. He married Miss Ada Eanes in 1913. He is survived by his widow, three sons, Arthur of Haw River; Talnage of Greenville, S. C.; Paul of High Point; three brothers, Ulysis, Jim and Cicero, one half brother, Will Noah. In early life he joined Mt. Hermon church, and though he lived in Lexington he remained faithful to his church and always remembered to send his checks before the end of the conference year. A brief service was held at the home in Lexington at 2 p. m., January 5, the next day the remains were brought to his church and funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Hayes, of Lexington, and the pastor, Rev. J. E. Elwood Carroll.

January 13th the pastor conducted the funeral of Miss Winnie Adaline Noah, age 76 years. Paralysis caused her death. She professed faith in Christ in early life at Mt. Hermon church. She leaves to mourn her departure, two sisters, Misses Mary and Sallie and one brother, Jack.

Mr. Kenneth Holt, a young preacher of this charge, filled the pulpit the third Sunday. He took for his subject the rich young man and his needs. He gave us some good food for thought, and judging from the way his material was organized he had done right much thinking.

We are very sorry to hear that our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, is in the hospital with "flu" and we are hoping and praying for a speedy recovery.

The young people of Mt. Hermon will give the program prepared for "Young People's Day," Sunday evening, January 25, at 7:30. The public is cordially invited to attend.

REPORTER.

Denton.—The Ladies' Aid society met with the president, Mrs. A. L. Hill, January 1st. There were ten members present with an addition of two new ones—Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Hedrick. Each member responded to the roll call with a quotation furnished by the president.

We organized as a sister's band. The duty of each sister is to notify their sister of the approaching meeting.

We are making a name quilt and we hope to have it ready to put together by the next meeting.

In order to raise funds for the society we are sending to our friends a little apron with a pocket for them to put a penny for each inch waist measure.

At the conclusion Mrs. Hill and little daughter served cake and cocoa. The next meeting will be with Mrs. W. E. Hill.

MRS. WALTER A. HEDRICK, Reporter.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.—Our work seems to be starting off nicely considering the unusual weather.

We were planning to hold a Christmas entertainment at two of our churches, when the big snow came which knocked up our plans, as our membership is scattered over the country, till it's almost impossible to get the little ones out to practice when the weather is so rough.

Our quarterly conference too was postponed once, but we held it last Saturday, the 17th. The usual business was transacted. Plans were laid for the year, and we are sure if these plans are worked, with the help of the Lord, we'll have a better year than usual.

The people still continue to remember us, with the substantial things of life.

Brother O. F. Hauser gave us a happy surprise a few days ago by presenting us with a nice, large ham.

We are thankful for all these favors, and hope to be able to repay with humble service.

A. L. HUNTER.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Church news has been so plentiful recently that I have hesitated to add ours to it for fear I might crowd somebody out. But it seems to be slackening up a bit, so I think I shall say a few things about Calvary church. And all of it encouraging, I am glad to tell you.

Just before Christmas the Auxiliary made the parsonage a Christmas present of a suit of living-room furniture—a welcome addition to the furnishings.

Last May when the Auxiliary made its budget for the new year, they set a goal of $1,000. Did it with a good deal of fear and trembling, because it seemed way beyond what might be expected. Yesterday it was reported that the Auxiliary lacked less than $10 of having it all, with two months to go. (You need not tell them I said so, but this is a wonderful bunch of women here at Calvary.)

Until last Sunday our church and Sunday school attendance was breaking all records. Attendance at the evening service has been as good as in previous years, but the attendance at the morning worship is better than at any time since I have been here. (That's especially gratifying, since congregations sometimes have a tendency to let up after a preacher has been on the charge a year or so.) And under the efficient leadership of our new superintendent, Brother J. C. Coe, the Sunday school is making fine progress in attendance and interest.

The editor has made mention of the fact that our Brother Booth set to music the poem, "Forgetting the Angels," which appeared in the Herald a couple of weeks ago, and sang it, much to the delight of all the folks who heard it. (If any one is interested let me say the poem can be sung to the tune "Have Thine Own Way, Lord.") At least two of those who heard it were very much touched by the incident.

We had two additions to the membership last Sunday, and will have at least one next Sunday, perhaps more. A number are thinking of joining soon, I understand. We are expecting this to be the banner year for Calvary in this respect.

The refinancing of the church debt, which was voted on favorably about a month ago, is going forward. Our total indebtedness will not be affected, but for the next four years we will have much less to pay in principal and interest. The new plan includes the parsonage debt, which was not included in the old debt-paying arrangement.

The Calendar Plan is still working, helping us to reduce our note in the bank by $50 a month. We are hoping to celebrate the seventh anniversary in May by burning the piece of paper which represents this $2,000 loan.

We are glad to see visitors from a number of our churches round about at most every service. We are glad to have any of the folks who may be in town on Sunday to worship with us. You'll enjoy the services, and we invite you.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

thank the committee and the entire charge for this kindness.

The people on the charge have been very kind to us during Christmas time. We have received presents and Christmas cards. We had a Christmas tree at Mt. Carmel, here Mrs. Spencer and myself were remembered with the rest of the Sunday school.

We want to thank Mr. A. L. VanDyke for a nice Thanksgiving turkey which the entire family enjoyed.

Rev. N. M. Harrison, promotional secretary of Religious Education, was with us at Union Chapel last Sunday, and Sunday night; his messages were very much enjoyed by those who heard him.

We are hoping to be able to have a training school some where in this district during the summer months.

Three new members have recently joined the church at Union Chapel.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

First Church, Thomasville.—Our church has made a good start in making this one of the best years in its history. It seems that everyone has taken a new interest in the church and its work. If we can just keep the people interested and working, our church will go forward as never before.

Our Sunday school is steadily growing. Last Sunday some of the classes had 100 per cent. attendance; one class had 110 per cent.; and many of the classes had 90 per cent. attendance. These were fine reports and we are hoping to make them better. We are also glad to see so many of the Sunday school scholars staying for church. It is encouraging to our pastor to have a large congregation and he can preach much better if he does not have to preach to empty pews. So let's help our pastor by our presence in church every Sunday.

We must not forget to boost our Christian Endeavor society. The Intermediate and Senior societies of our church have united and are making better progress than if they were separate. More of the young people are taking part in the programs of the society. We are also proud of our enrollment and attendance. In the last few weeks, many new members have been added to our roll. You are invited to visit us at any time.

We were more than glad to welcome six new members into our church Sunday morning: Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Teague and their two sons, Knox and Marx Teague; and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Myers came to us by letter from Pleasant Grove M. P. church.

Our pastor, Rev. T. G. Madison, has started two series of sermons. His morning series is on the "Christian Virtues." The evening series is on the "Seven Vices or Deadly Sins." I think that all who hear these sermons will be helped.

I think sometimes that we do not say enough about our pastor, or anyone for that matter. If we just spoke a word of cheer and encouragement now and then to our pastors and their wives, it would help them and us too. If our pastor never hears whether his sermon is liked or not, or has helped anyone, he will not know whether he is doing any good. So let's smile and speak some word of encouragement to our pastor and our fellow workers and the world will seem much brighter. I, for one, will say that I do not think that anyone could do more for our church than Mr.

Madison is doing. His sermons are helpful and inspiring and he is always ready to do anything that he is asked to do. By co-operating with him we can make this one of the best years we have had.

On next Sunday our church will observe "Young People's Day." Both services will be given over to the young people. We are hoping to have a special speaker and also special music. Everyone is invited to attend both services.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

First Church, Thomasville has been silent for some time, yet we would not have you think that nothing has happened worthy to be reported. We entered the work of the new conference year cheerfully and happy in the privilege of working with the good people of this church. They, too, have entered the work of the new year enthusiastically and are co-operating with the pastor in every way possible. We appreciate the many gifts and tokens of fellowship which we received at Christmas and at other times.

Our Christmas program was given on the evening of December 23. It consisted of carols, a pantomime, a play entitled, "Dust of the Road," and a Christmas tree with gifts for the children. The attendance was large and everybody seemed to enjoy the evening. Our Senior and Intermediate Christian Endeavor societies have united and as a result of the union the attendance and interest have greatly increased. We are glad to see the young people interested in the work of the church. Attendance in both Sunday school and worship services has been very good despite the rough weather. We are planning to observe "Young People's Day" on next Sunday. Both services will be given to that purpose. We are expecting to have Rev. Bill Howard, a student of High Point College, to speak for us in the evening service on "Youth Adventuring in the Christian Quest."

Last Sunday was a good day for us because it registered an increase of six in church membership. The new members are: Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Ivey A. Teague and their two sons, Knox and Marx. We are confident that they will be a strength to our church and we trust that we may be of service to them.

T. GLENN MADISON.

Anderson Charge.—The reporters on this work are keeping the people well informed about the work of the churches but we wish to say some things too. We entered upon our duties here the 20th of November; have been cordially received by the people. They also remembered us with a nice pounding from each church; we want to thank all for the nice things we received. We are optimistic about the work here, we believe these good people are going to do the very best for the Master this year. We see the need of Sunday school rooms at each church and believe that we will be able to get them. We covet the prayers of the Herald readers; pray that we will have a good year for the Master.

MARION C. HENDERSON, Pastor.

We view the world with our own eyes, each of us, and we make from within us the world which we see.—Thackeray.

Granville.—Everything seems to be starting off very well for the new year. We held our first quarterly conference last month. All of the churches were represented, and the reports were good. W. H. Greenway, C. W. Finch, and T. T. Ellis were appointed as a committee to have lights installed in the parsonage. The house was wired promptly, and we are enjoying the good lights. We are really seeing things around here at night. We want to

MEN IN THE CONFERENCE COURSE!

The last session of our Annual Conference acted favorably upon the following recommendation made by the conference faculty: We recommend that Lawrence Little be elected a member of this faculty, to teach or have in charge, the giving of a Leadership Training course.

That we require each person taking the course of study to complete credit for at least one unit of the Standard Leadership Training course in each year of his course, the particular units to be selected according to the needs of the person involved and the opportunities that may be available for taking such courses under the auspices recognized by the Board of Christian Education of the Methodist Protestant church. We would further recommend that the three units thus required include if possible, course No. 6, "The Teaching Work of the Church." (Units of the Standard Leadership Training Course may be completed in training schools or classes conducted under the general direction of the Board of Christian Education of the Methodist Protestant church, or in standard schools or classes conducted by the other denominational or interdenominational agencies fully recognized by this board. Certain courses may also be completed by correspondence through the Department of Religious Education of said board).

In view of the above ruling, I am giving below, for the convenience of those taking the conference course, the names of those people in our conference who are accredited to teach a standard course. Rev. J. Clyde Auman, Missionary Methods and Materials; Rev. E. L. Pallard, New Testament; Rev. C. W. Bates, the Life of Christ; Rev. E. A. Bingham, A Study of Early Adolescence; Mrs. Hermon Coble, Primary Materials and Methods; Dr. C. E. Forlines, A Study of the Pupil, the Principles of Teaching, New Testament, and the Curriculum of Religious Education; Rev. F. L. Gibbs, the Principles of Teaching, Church School Administration, and the Teaching Work of the Church; Mrs. F. L. Gibbs, Junior Materials and Methods; Dr. G. I. Humphreys, New Testament; Dr. T. M. Johnson, New Testament, and the Life of Christ; Dr. P. E. Lindley, the Principles of Teaching, and the Message and Program of the Christian Religion; Rev. L. C. Little, Training in Worship and the Devotional Life; Mrs. H. W. Maier, A Study of the Pupil, and Training in Worship and the Devotional Life; Rev. F. W. Paschall, the Message and Program of the Christian Religion; Mrs. F. W. Paschall, Young People's Materials and Methods; Miss Kathleen Paschall, Primary Materials and Methods; Rev. H. F. Surratt, Church School Administration.

The above list may not be correct up to date because new people are becoming accredited and those already accredited are becoming accredited in other subjects, but it is correct so far as I know. If the men in the course wish further information, I will gladly answer any questions that I can. If you wish to write to Rev. L. C. Little address him, 1424 Boulevard, New Haven, Conn. If you wish to write to Rev. F. L. Gibbs, address him, Westminster, Maryland. Address me at Burlington, N. C.

THE LADIES' AID

The old church bell had long been cracked.
its call was but a groan,
It seemed to sound a funeral knell
With every broken tone.
"We need a bell," the brethren said,
"But taxes must be paid;
We have no money we can spare,
Just ask the Ladies' Aid."

The shingles on the roof were old,
The rain came down in rills;
The brethren slowly shook their heads
And spoke of "monthly bills."
The chairman of the board arose and said,
"I am afraid we shall have to lay the case before
The Ladies' Aid."

The carpet had been patched and patched
Till quite beyond repair;
And through the aisles and on the steps
The boards showed hard and bare.
"It is too bad," the brethren said,
"An effort must be made
To raise an interest on the part
Of members of the Ladies' Aid."

The preacher's stipend was behind,
The poor man blushed to meet
The grocer and the butcher as
They passed him on the street;
But nobly spoke the brethren then:
"Pastor, you shall be paid;
We'll call upon the treasurer
Of our good Ladies' Aid."

"Ah," said the men, "the way to Heaven
Is long and hard and steep,
With slopes of ease on either side
The path is hard to keep.
We can not climb the heights alone,
Our hearts are so dismayed,
We ne'er shall get to Heaven at all
Without the Ladies' Aid."

COUNCIL CENTERS

Below I am giving the group of charges and churches of the conference around a center for the purpose of our work with the Council and the Conference.

There are 23 centers in all. Each center is to be organized with a chairman, vice-chairman and secretary-treasurer and two committees; first, the committee on leadership training school, second, a committee on college affairs. This organization will be created as rapidly as I can call the churches of each center together for that purpose.

It is our expectation, also, to conduct a leadership training school in each center sometime during the year. I would be glad to have the reaction of the pastors, Sunday School superintendents and Christian Endeavor workers and others as to the idea of organization and centers. The centers are:

1. Creswell Center: Creswell charge.
2. Aurelian Springs Center: Halifax, Littleton, Enfield, Whitakers, Roseneath, Speight's Chapel charges.
3. Spring Church Center: Spring Church, Greenville, Chase City charge.

A single word
Can wound or kill;

Or fear instill.

One word can do

One word can heal

day in our district. Any district that has difficulty in securing leaders to review mission study books may profit by the use of the above plan.

I consider it a great privilege to serve as a district chairman for in serving I have received many blessings. Our district has not accomplished great things since I was elected chairman, however I feel sure some good seeds have been sown. When the N. C. Branch first elected district chairmen the First church in Winston-Salem was the only one with a Home and Foreign society, also a Ladies' Aid society. I am glad we have outgrown the three societies and now have just the auxiliary. Our district has grown from one organized church to nine and we have young people's societies in four churches. Our work has been slow but we are hoping to report an auxiliary in every church in the district before a great while.

Last year I visited all the auxiliaries with the exception of one in this district. This year I called for representatives from each auxiliary to visit me when I entertained the auxiliary in my church. We had a very nice meeting with the exchange of ideas and became better acquainted with each other.

Christian fellowship means much to the individual. I will appreciate any new ideas or plans.

We desire each Auxiliary of the N. C. Branch to observe this Day of Prayer. If impossible to have an all-day service, then use the afternoon for your program.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Owen

Paul Byron Owen, son of Thomas and Susan Loidexter Owen, died December 17, 1930, aged 49 years, 7 months, and 21 days.

He professed faith in Christ in early life and joined Shoals M. P. church, and lived a consistent member until death.

He was married to Lucy Scott, March 9, 1910; to this union were born three children, Ila Mae, Ruby, and Carroll Jennings. The little son preceded him to the glory world, and no doubt was at the Pearly Gates to welcome him.

He leaves a wife, two daughters, one brother, one grand child, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Brother Byron from youth was loved and admired by those who knew him best, for his cheerful and loving disposition. He was a devoted husband and father, and a good neighbor and friend. He will be greatly missed by his family to whom he was deeply devoted. His church and community also realizes a great loss in his passing.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Brother Ferguson, pastor of the Baptist church, and despite the very rough, snowy weather, a goodly number assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to one they loved.

The beautiful floral designs also showed the high esteem in which he was held by his many friends.

We extend our sympathy to the bereaved ones.

A. L. HUNTER.

To all Churches and Sunday schools that are going to paint, we will give 10% discount until Dec. 31, 1930. Inside paint from $2.25 to $3.00 per gallon. Outside paint from $2.50 to $3.50 per gallon. Prepaid to station nearest you. Color sent on request. We handle a product made in Carolina. D. A. McLaurin, Concord, N. C. tf

The Rest of Life

The lives we've lived cannot be changed;
Their ugly scenes must all remain—
A shame to us, offense to God.
O could we live our lives again!

But past is past and can't return.
Our only solace is the thought
That pardoned sin, all blotted out,
Will lose its sting and hurt us not.

We thank Thee, Lord, for Thy clear word
That Thou wilt move our sins away
As far from us as east from west.
O won't that be a happy day!

But what of life remains to us—
May it all be unmarred by sin!
O lead us, Lord, in paths of right
And keep our hearts all pure within!

The Temptations of Jesus

Only three of Jesus' temptations are described, but we are told that he was "tempted in all points like as we are." We are also told that he was 40 days in the wilderness, "being tempted of the devil." When those wilderness temptations were over, we are told that Satan departed from him for a season, implying that the tempter returned to his task later. In boyhood Jesus must have been tempted as other boys are tempted. In young manhood Jesus must have experienced the temptations that are common to young men. In every stage of his life the tempter would come to him with special temptations adapted as he supposed to effect the overthrow of Jesus. So much was dependent on Jesus' steadfastness that Satan would leave untried no device that seemed to offer any hope of success. It seems that Satan did not give up hope of inducing Jesus to take a false step until near the end of Jesus' career. Then Jesus said of him: Satan cometh and findeth nothing in me. He had lost hope of swerving Jesus and turned all his attention to Jesus' disciples.

Temptations resisted grow weaker; temptations yielded to grow stronger. Jesus resisted all temptations until none of them could make any appeal to him. His virtue, his moral power, was perfected. Temptation had accomplished its purpose in him without doing him any harm. He thus teaches us how to react to temptation and shows us what to expect if we hold out against the allurements of evil. That which tries to destroy us will bring us to moral health and perfection.

Jesus succeeded where Adam failed. Adam easily went down before the tempter. Jesus, the second Adam, stood up against him.

In the three temptations described the tempter seems to be trying to impose on Jesus' mind the fallacy that the end justifies the means. Jesus had the great problem of winning a kingdom. How to do it was the question. Satan would have him believe that an end so high and great would justify any means that would facilitate its accomplishment. Success was Satan's criterion. The will of God was Jesus' criterion. Jesus stood by his rule of morality. Satan could not budge him. The way that might lead to the imperial throne in Rome could not allure him from the way of God's will though it led to a cross in Jerusalem.

The heroism of Jesus shines out from this passage at arms with the Prince of Evil. It is inspiring to believe that he will now help those that are tempted as he was, for he is abundantly able to help.

Is Hoover a Prohibitionist?

The meagerness of Hoover's statements regarding prohibition has left many in doubt as to his real attitude. He called it "a noble experiment." That remark indicates that he had given the matter some thought; it does not reveal a strong interest, and certainly not a fighting opposition. Again, his move for a commission on law enforcement seems to indicate an undecided mind on his part as to the course to pursue. But Mr. Hoover, like other men, is a product of his environment and experience. Before his election to the presidency he had not trained with the prohibitionists. He could not have their point of view nor their readiness for battle. Now Mr. Hoover has had two years to see and hear and think and feel, and we believe his most recent utterance gives evidence of progress toward the position of the veteran prohibitionist. We believe Mr. Hoover is a coming prohibitionist, if he has not already come.

A "Wet" Writes the Herald

Our issue of January 1st aroused the resentment of a Western North Carolina man and he took his pen in hand to write a few things. He did not like our position with respect to prohibition, though he acknowledges that he formerly voted dry. Since he was himself formerly so blind as to be a prohibitionist we might expect that he would have some pity for those who are still groping in darkness. But he has none. They are fanatics and "sentimentalists," a word he did not get out of the dictionary. He also distorts HERALD into "hearld." His thinking is as loose as his spelling. His reason for opposing prohibition is the fact that within 20 miles of his

Reply to "WHY PROHIBITION HAS FAILED" in December 1920 Number of Psychology Magazine

By DR. THOMAS C. AMICK

In our reply to Henry Knight Miller's article in the Psychology Magazine of November, 1930, a conclusive argument was made to all the statements Dr. Miller had made in this former magazine article. In the December number of the same magazine appeared another article under the title heading this paper. Our former reply was sent to Henry Knight Miller, the editor of the Psychology Magazine, but, so far, he has failed to publish, or to make any reference to it.

The article in the December number of the Psychology Magazine, in two or three introductory paragraphs, presents a condensed statement of the points in the first article, and then the writer, undertakes to enlighten us as to why prohibition has failed. He takes it as a foregone conclusion that we all agree with him that prohibition is a miserable failure, and makes a number of dogmatic statements, on most of which we propose to take issue with him. The fact is there are thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands of us who do not believe prohibition has failed, but we believe that it has really been a wonderful success and will continue to be a success unless our people, like Dr. Miller, become turncoats, and are willing to plunge our country into moral and spiritual degradation and ruin. Prohibition has not failed; but a few of our people, like Dr. Miller, have failed. And, because they have failed to uphold prohibition and the nobler aspirations of our people, they hide their heads, like the pursued ostrich, and believe that everything has failed with them. As great a psychologist as Dr. Miller claims to be should be able to observe a little more closely and, if he should do so, he will surely see that the signs of the times do not point to any revocation of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The following are the reasons listed by Dr. Miller for the failure of prohibition:

First—It attempts coercion of the citizens.

Second—There was a deep set objection to the method whereby prohibition was "put over" and an increasing resentment to the methods used to keep it in force.

Third—Prohibition has failed because it seeks to supplant education with legislation.

Fourth—The "inferiority complex" is almost universal in society.

Fifth—Notwithstanding the arbitrament of the sword in the Civil War that the majority of the states have a right to dictate to the minority, there is a persistent feeling that the principle of self-determination is paramount.

Sixth—Prohibition has failed to take the profit out of liquor.

Seventh—Human nature has not yet evolved to the plane of perfection at which the average man can resist the appeal of easy money, especially when this is condoned by fellow agents and winked at by superiors.

Eighth—Prohibition has failed because it overlooked the fact that liquor, with all its evils, does fulfil certain social needs.

We shall answer these reasons seriatim, and, for the sake of brevity, we will suggest answers to these reasons and leave the reader to follow out these answers in his own thinking.

Replying to the first reason why prohibition has failed, we admit that prohibition does attempt coercion of certain of the citizens of our country. But who are those people that prohibition attempts to coerce? We will answer: The bootlegger, the heads of the speakeasy, the drunkard, the man who wallows in the mire and the ditch, the social drinker, and the man who would put the bottle to the mouth of his neighbor for gain. We admit that prohibition attempts the coercion of these classes of people and it is right, that it should do so. There is not a law upon the books but was directly aimed to coerce certain classes of persons. The law against theft, the law against murder, the law against prostitution, and vice, all are coercive measures. The Ten Commandments had for their sole object the coercion of the Israelites from doing things against which the commandments were aimed. Certain classes of people must be coerced if we wish decent society. The drunken sot, the manufacturer of alcoholic poisons and dopes, the whole "wet gang" who would fleece the widow and the orphan, taking their unholy gains to fleece their nests, all these must be coerced. If we must repeal law because by law some men are coerced we might as well repeal all law at once, and go back to savagery. Mr. Miller's play on words will not fit here. Civilization is based on the fact that each of us gives up certain of our cherished "personal freedom" and we allow ourselves to be coerced with reference to those things that do and would injure society as a whole. Any student of the institutions of our civilization must recognize this at a glance. We are glad to give up certain of our cherished "personal freedom" and we are happy to be "coerced" for the good of the body politic. You may flaunt the word "coercion" before the very ignorant populace if you wish a following of that kind of crowd and you may flaunt it before the "wet" and he will roll it like a sweet morsel under his tongue, but the thinking person who has the highest interests of his country at heart is glad to be "coerced" that civilization may advance, property may be safe, and God honored and exalted.

We have heard numbers speak both pro and con about prohibition, but we had not heard a single man whether for or against speak of it as a "put over" job. At this late day Mr. Miller has made a startling discovery. With all the publicity that Mr. Miller, in his former article stated that he had given to the Eighteenth Amendment with all that was published in the newspapers, how can any person claim that the establishing of this Amendment was a "put over" job! These are two methods by which the Constitution of the United States may be amended. One is for the legislature of each state to call a convention and when the conventions of three-fourths of the states ratify the proposed amendment, it then becomes a part of the law of the land; the other method is for Congress to refer the proposed amendment to the legislatures or the general assemblies of the different states and when the proposed amendment has passed the legislatures of three-fourths of the states, then it becomes law. In other words, the methods of ratification are by conventions or legislatures according to the will of Congress.

Some of us are still alive who were living when Congress referred the Eighteenth Amendment to the legislatures of the different states, and we know the publicity given to the matter. The anti-Saloon League did its part in putting on a publicity campaign, the church and the church publications did the same, the great metropolitan papers and magazines did their bit of advertising and the "wets" fought to the last ditch. There was nothing done under cover or in the dark. It was a great fight for a great moral ideal, a saloonless nation on the earth. The fight was won and nobly won notwithstanding the machinations of the wets. The wets have tried to blast that ideal by all kinds of subterfuges and claims. There is nothing that is so low and mean but that they will stoop to do to accomplish it. And their claim that prohibition is a "put over" job is one example of their degradation. This claim has no foundation whatever and every thinking man and woman should hail it at once as a pusillanimous falsehood. When this Eighteenth Amendment was before the states there were sixteen to one for it. That looks like a "put over" job, does it not? Mr. Miller claims to have been a member of the anti-Saloon League force then and we suppose he thought he "put it over" on the American people, but the people and our legislators were thinking for themselves and they will continue to do so.

Mr. Miller's third argument is that prohibition has failed because it seeks to supplant education with legislation. To an extent this argument is valid. Those favoring prohibition should make careful note of it. For more than two score years we had been educating the people against the evils of the liquor traffic. Prohibition could never have been made an accomplished fact without this education. Possibly we have not put as much stress on education for the last ten years as should have been put on it, but we must commence an intensive campaign of education. There must be no let up. The forces of evil are on the march and there is no let up with them. Let this word of Mr. Miller be a trumpet blast to the forces of temperance and prohibition to rouse themselves from their lethargy and put on such a campaign of education that will appeal even to the most sordid and blatant of the liquor element. Let the church arouse herself and commence a campaign of education against the liquor nuisance; let the anti-Saloon League and the Business Men's League against the liquor traffic rise to the height of their opportunity and put on such an educational campaign that the liquor traffic, that menace to the nations and that curse of the people of the earth, shall be banished and Mr. Miller and his "wet" gang will know that they are beaten forever.

Is the "inferiority complex" any reason why prohibition has failed? Dr. Miller tells us this "inferiority complex" leads tens of thousands to drink today just because they get a kick out of defying the law. He further says that they drink simply to prove their superiority over one law. Is this the part of good citizenship? Do good citizens violate the law just to get a kick out of the violation? Are the laws directed against the good citizens? He lives above the law. The law has no hold whatever on the good citizen. The law is always directed against the evil citizen. Shall we repeal a salutary law to comply with the desires of the bad citizenship of our country? Are we to allow them to govern this goodly land of ours? We can see nothing in this "inferiority complex" argument of the wets except a plea to the good citizenship of our country to capitulate to the lower element of our country who steep themselves in liquor and crime and allow them to govern us. Shall we do it?

The next argument when reduced to its final analysis simply means that all law should be made null and void. Mr. Miller tells us that if the people of one state wish to regulate the liquor traffic and the people of another state wish the open saloon, the people of the first state nor the people of the United States as a whole have any right to interfere with the second state. Following this line of argument further, if one county of any state wishes to have the open saloon, that county being a self determining unit, the other counties of the state and not even the state itself has a right to interfere. Pursuing still further this line of argument if any township of a county as a self determining unit wishes to have the open saloon, then no other township, neither the county, the state, or the United States government has any right whatever to molest or interfere. And further this means that if any individual person he being an individual self determining unit wishes to set up a saloon or to participate in any sort of crime whatever, then no person or government has any right to come in and tell him nay. This "reductio ad absurdum" argument can be applied to practically every "wet" argument and we can demolish the "wet" argument just as readily as we have demolished this one. No, Mr. Miller, the Civil War made us one nation, not simply a group of separate states. What would be done with the interstate commerce act, the Mann White Slave act, the anti-trust laws, and all the other laws of our nation if Mr. Miller's arguments and the arguments of the wets prevail? The Civil War was fought once for all times and the decision of the sword was that the majority of the states have a perfect right to dictate to the minority.

The next reason offered by Mr. Miller as to why prohibition has failed is that prohibition failed to take the profit out of liquor. Who is to blame for this? Mr. Miller attempts to answer this question in his next argument in which he tells us that human nature has not yet evolved to that plane of perfection at which the average man can resist the appeal of easy money. In justification of his statement, he tells us that one bootlegger boasts that his trucks covers sixteen states unmolested and that his protection pay roll amounts to one hundred million dollars a year.

The Roman historian Sallust pictures the bandit Jugertha after he had paid a visit to Rome and had bought off the magistrates from punishing him for his crimes, when leaving Italy for his native shores of Africa, he turned back his eyes on Rome and cried out, "O venal city, thou wouldst sell thyself if thou could find a purchaser." It was but a matter of time after this until Rome fell and was plundered by her foes.

Does Mr. Miller mean to tell us that the American people have lost their virtue and their valor? Have we lost our sense of honor? Have we become like the venal magistrates of Rome? If Mr. Miller is correct, he brings an awful charge against the American people. It is time for us to arouse and strengthen our moral fibre! It is high time for us to get behind our prohibition laws and see to it that they are absolutely enforced and every such sleuth as he has mentioned must be driven from the land.

Let us call the roll of a few of our immortal heroes and ask if their spirits are dead. Spirit of William Lloyd Garrison, have you forsaken your country forever? You who fought and gave your life that the slave might be free, are you not calling us to liberate and free our country from a galling servitude to rum and drink? E. P. Lovejoy, come and help us fight again the battle against slavery to alcoholism. Spirit of John B. Gough, have you departed from your country forever because of the evils and machinations of the liquor men? Let the spirit of Frances E. Willard come again and lead the forces of temperance and prohibition to the most glorious victory over all their foes. May the spirits of those immortals who have fought and bled and died that man might be free under law from the field of Runnymede, down through Pym, Hampton, William the Silent, Washington, Lincoln, and Wilson animate the hosts of righteousness and temperance to greater conquests than we have yet known. Yes, "new immortals" will rise when necessary and the whole "wet" crowd will be silenced forever.

This is not a real argument against Mr. Miller's sixth and seventh statements. It is simply a statement of faith in our people, Mr. Miller gave one lone piece of statistics in support of his argument, that of the man whose liquor trucks cover sixteen states. If Mr. Miller knows the facts as he claims and if Mr. Miller is a good law abiding citizen of our country, why does he not report this flagrant violation of law to the United States Prohibition agents and let us see whether or not all our people will accept bribes. A good law abiding citizen would be so incensed at such violation of law that he would take up the cause himself and never rest until such a sleuth and his henchmen were brought to justice.

The last argument of Mr. Miller is that intoxicating liquor "in moderation" promotes conviviality, break-down frigid barriers between men, cause men to forget, for the time being, all their troubles, throws a glamor over a drab, hard life, and creates sociability. He then gives an illustration of a crowd of men attending a banquet, when conversation grew dull, and the banqueters lost interest, if intoxicating drinks were passed, as if by magic the whole atmosphere changes, smiles replace frowns, laughter replaces sighs, songs break out, and good fellowship becomes contagious. Let us ask what decent well thinking men would care to attend such a banquet as this? Was ever a poorer argument produced in favor of strong drink! Who is to decide what "in moderation" means in a case of this kind? Will not some "coercion" have to take place? Why did not Mr. Miller tell the whole story? Why did he not tell the story of Alexander's feast?

Since Mr. Miller was afraid it would terribly mar his argument if he told the full story, we turn to others. They have given us the sequel to Mr. Miller's banquet. The great English painter William Hogarth has left behind pictures of the after-maths of such banquets as Mr. Miller wishes us to have; virtuous womanhood violated, the banqueters lying under the tables dead drunk wallowing in their own froth and slime until they come out from under the influence of the poison, fights, brawls, the banquet hall turned into bedlam, all this to the shame of the banqueters, we ask why Mr. Miller did not paint the remainder of the picture? If Mr. Miller did not do the painting Hogarth did it from life, and the stench was just a little too strong for Mr. Miller's nose.

Such an argument as this shows the flimsiness of the liquor men's appeals and there is not a single argument that the whole host of them can produce but is as flimsy as this one. We wonder why Mr. Miller did not add still that other old gag that we must have whiskey because it is "good for snake bites."

This ends Mr. Miller's arguments. We have endeavored to look at his arguments candidly, sincerely, and in the light of reason. We leave it to our readers to determine whether or not we have been convincing. Of course the "wet" will not be convinced. It is the old fact of the sow returning to wallow in the mire and filth, of the buzzard feeding on carrion. But in the mind of him who has the best interests of his fellow man, his nation, and himself at heart, there is no compromise with evil. "They enslave their children's children who make compromise with sin." The man who looks for a forward and upward move in civilization bares his brow to nobler ideas and ideals, to loftier and holier sentiments, than that found in the stench of the whiskey bottle or the rum soaked devotee.

Mr. Miller promises another article outlining a plan which will meet with the approbation of both wets and dries. He sets himself up as the repository of all knowledge as he so confidently tells us that all will approve of his plans.

To our mind and to our way of thinking anything less than we now have will be a subterfuge, and nothing will be acceptable to the good people of our country less than the absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic.

THEY APPLIED THE SERMON

By BISHOP JOSEPH F. BERRY

I preached in the pulpit of a downtown city church a while ago. The sermon selected was one that I had often used when called upon to preach on short notice. The text was, "Bear ye one another's burdens." In the discourse I dwelt eloquently upon the brotherhood of man, and showed that it is both a privilege and a duty to help our brothers who are in distress. The congregation was exceedingly attentive. "I am making a strong impression," I thought as I went along. At the close, the people pressed forward to greet me.

The first "brother" to shake my hand expressed great admiration for the noble sentiments of the sermon, and was thankful that he, a stranger, had that morning strayed into the sanctuary to hear my truthful and impressive words. Then, lowering his voice almost to a whisper, he suggested that I would no doubt be glad to furnish a practical illustration of the great truths of the message. He had not yet had his breakfast, he declared, and hoped I would contribute a dime to help him out. I wanted to be consistent, and, remarking that a dime would not pay for much of a breakfast, I gave him a half-dollar.

Half-way down the aisle I encountered another "brother." He, too, warmly approved the teaching of the sermon. He avowed that he had just reached the city, and, unfortunately, had partaken of no breakfast. I gave him a half-dollar.

As I passed down the front steps a hand was gently laid upon my shoulder. Turning around, I found a son of the Emerald Isle, whose glowing eulogy of the morning's sermon was enough to make any preacher happy—that is, if he had not had a vague suspicion of what was coming. This "brother" had partaken of a very light breakfast, but was in pressing need of a suitable midday meal. "It's God's own truth you've been givin' this morning, sir, and I know'd you'd be too glad to help your brother." What could I say or do? Only one thing—contribute another half-dollar. Without tarrying to acknowledge his shower of appreciation, I hastened to the street.

On the sidewalk there stood a well-dressed man, apparently waiting for me. He bowed politely as I approached. He then came very close to me and, taking me affectionately by the hand, began to tell me of his misfortunes. He had not succeeded in several of his recent business ventures, but was now about to start an enterprise that was sure to be a big thing. All he needed was a little capital to get things going. He urged the sublime teaching of the sermon, and asked for a loan of a thousand dollars! That suggestion took away my breath. I shook my head and—stammered. Then in sheer desperation I parted company with this solicitor, rushed across the street, and fled in the subway station.

I have resolved not to preach my sermon on "Bear ye one another's burdens" when I supply a down-town city pulpit again. Next time would I not do well to preach on "The Spiritual Values of the Proper Control of the Subconscious Mind," or some such theme?—Zion's Herald.

MY POINT OF VIEW

ERNEST CHARLES CARPENTER

The exact appearance of almost anything depends much on the place from which it is viewed. To many the country looks "wet" and getting more so. It looks to me just the opposite.

Here is my place of lookout. In one of New England's cities of 175,000 I am what is known as the "Americanization secretary." This city has 45,000 foreign born, and about 8,000 illiterates. Probably about 72 per cent. of the population might be called largely foreign. During the nearly twelve years that I have been here, I have had more or less intimate contact with 100,000 foreign people in citizenship classes, reading classes, personal assistance, and thousands of visits to their homes and clubs. I know of no one who has had more opportunity to observe their drinking habits than myself.

It is clear to me that a large number of foreign families make wine in their homes and use it more or less at meal times and when company comes in. The Italians are much given to clubs where the men spend their evenings in card-playing and visiting. Many of these clubs sell their members cigars, soft drinks, and wine. I have never seen evidence that they deal in hard liquor. An Italian friend of mine once told me that his club put up fifteen barrels of wine each year for the use of the club. That seems large. But the club has 300 members and it was to last a year. In clear alcohol it could have been scarcely more than a quart a member for a year.

It seems plain that to win the immigrant entirely to total abstinence will be a long, slow process. But I am convinced that the total consumption of alcohol per capita among them is not large, and is constantly decreasing. This is due to its cost, the bother of getting it, fear of poison drink, and to some extent to a growing sentiment that drinking is an evil. I think I see less and less evidence of drinking among them. I doubt if I have seen a dozen intoxicated persons in the past five years. Eight or nine thousand immigrants come to our office each year. Yet I question if a dozen have been here this past year who gave evidence of lingual acceleration caused by drink. In hundreds of groups and classes that we have conducted, there has never been the slightest disturbance. They are invariably quiet and well-behaved.

If asked about it, these newcomers will almost always complain about the eighteenth amendment, and will repeat parrot-like the stock phrases about there being plenty of bootlegging. But no one need be alarmed for fear their resentment may break out into violence. The only danger is that they may be inflamed by the wet press and the vast money interests that wish to break down the law.

Total abstinence will come about the time all the Ten Commandments are obeyed. But the use of alcohol today is but a small fraction of that of former days and it is decreasing. At least, so I believe.—Zion's Herald.

THE LIVING BIRD

In ancient times birds were little esteemed except for food, and among some peoples this attitude of mind is still predominant. But as we rise, even though slowly, from barbarism, we are conscious of a growing appreciation of the bird's beauty of song and habit, first expressed in an occasional passage in Holy Writ, or in the writings of the earlier poets. To a growing multitude the living bird has become a source of joy and inspiration, a symbol of beauty and freedom.

In our early years we all love birds; "Let me hold it in my hands," begs the child, if a helpless nestling or a wearied migrant comes its way. And so we have the Audubon societies, and the Bird Study classes, all for the purpose of learning to recognize the bird in the wild, and becoming acquainted with its habits and its song.

Some birds remain with us all the year; others have learned to go to the tropics for the winter, and we watch for their return, and record the day of their home-coming. We piece together, bit by bit, the scattered facts we learn about them, and we put these on record, and are eager to discuss our discoveries with our friends of similar tastes. We set aside areas where certain species may find sanctuary. We have reserved an island in our Tropic forest that we may observe at close range its wild creatures. We spend many days or weeks in trying to photograph some shy bird, and feel repaid if we succeed. Many have discarded the gun for the camera, for a bird may be photographed many times, but killed only once.

To learn the extent of the birds' migratory journeys, and how long they live, we put on them tiny bands that serve as badges. By this means we may recognize the finch that last winter gathered the food from our bird table, and that meantime has raised a family in far-off Labrador. These birds, from being merely recognizable as of a certain kind, have become personal friends. We have helped them to live, and we both are benefited.

When winter is upon the land, and our visiting bird friends are hard beset, we put out food for them, and gain pleasure from their near presence, and their confidence that our bounty has quickened.

All these activities, that assist us to be interested in life, have to do with living birds. We are learning that, while a dead bird is gone forever, we may revisit with a live one, each time gaining a new message, and so we wish them long life. Who could kill the bird that he has once held in his hand, and that has come back to him after spanning half a continent?

Man's inventions, developed and used under the implacable urge of commercialism, have vastly increased his ability to kill, but we believe that a change of sentiment is coming to the fore. Other inventions have increased man's ability to appreciate his wild friends, and his use of these is increasing. Certain species whose flesh is palatable, and whose pursuit furnishes sport, are termed game birds, after ancient custom. They are treated as apart from others, and man seems willing to destroy them, and then replace them with aliens. But standards change; many birds commonly pursued long ago by the devotees of falconry are no longer objects of sport, and as we realize the havoc caused by the gun, successor of the falcon and the bow and arrow, reason dictates that we cease to use these things of beauty as targets. Their charm as living creatures has increased with their scarcity.

Some people, it is true, still bring birds to our shores from foreign lands, and after feeding and caring for them for a season, turn them loose to furnish sport for the gunner. Some will raise from the egg even our own bobwhites, and after a few months of domestication, betray the confiding creatures to their enemies. Let us not dwell on this subject, for to those who can do such things, the appeal of the living bird plainly has been in vain.

Ours was a land signally blessed with birds, blest probably beyond any land on earth. Yet we have so failed to heed the silent plea of these fairest of created things, that we have totally exterminated some, and have driven many others to the very brink of extinction. But as we rise from barbarism we are turning our ears more and more to catch the appeal of the living bird. Shall not its cause prevail, that our children may gather their rightful heritage—the opportunity to see, alive and in confiding familiarity, these creatures of beauty that we now harass?—Nature Magazine.

—A tragic end of a conspicuous career comes in the death by suicide of former governor and United States Senator Edwards of New Jersey. His attitude towards the liquor traffic caused the wets to talk of him for the Presidency.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Lincolnton

January 21.—We were with our people here on this date in a prayer service and business meeting. The Methodist Episcopal church, South, Rev. Mr. Tucker, pastor, invited us to worship with them, and to hold our business meeting there, following this service. I share with our people their full appreciation of this brotherly kindness on the part of our Methodist brethren. It was a pleasure to worship with them in their beautiful church, and to speak in this service.

The burning of our Lincolnton church has created a building problem for our people there. We found them quite ready to go ahead with this project. A building committee had already been appointed, and drawings were ready to submit at this meeting. By invitation, Brother D. A. McLaurin was present, and gave helpful suggestions as to the construction of the building. The final conclusion of the meeting was that he should revise the plans, make estimates on the cost, and see the committee again at an early date. We were pleased to find in the church a disposition to build adequately, both as to auditorium and Sunday school. We believe that this can be done, and the cost kept within the financial limits of the congregation. We shall watch developments there with deep interest and prayers.

The three churches of this charge — Lincolnton, Bess Chapel, and Fairfield—constitute a new grouping, and form, what seems to us, a good work. Opportunities for development are abundant, and the financial strength of the charge is sufficient to provide an adequate salary for pastors, and to meet all budget allotments. Brother Cranford is serving his first year here, and has the full co-operation of his people. He is greatly pleased with the work and finds much to encourage a hopeful outlook.

Flat Rock

January 25.—This brightest of all the bright winter Sundays of this year was spent on Flat Rock charge in two services. It was our privilege and joy in the morning to preach in the presence of a large congregation at Flat Rock church. The new seats that had just been installed blend pleasingly both in finish and construction, with the stone building. The book containers and memorial tablets are yet to be put on the pews. This is one of our most attractive rural churches, and does credit to the splendid history that the church has made during the century of its existence. We missed Brother J. B. Ogburn in this service, and regretted to learn that he was not well. We wish for him an early recovery to his normal health.

In the afternoon, we had our first visit to Bethany church. The attendance was not large here but very helpful in the attention that was given to us in our effort to preach. This church was formerly near Bethany high school. In recent years the school has been moved some distance away, and a new center, thereby, established. This has no doubt affected the growth and prospect of the church. However, we have some splendid people there, and it was a pleasure to be with them in this service.

South Winston

Our night appointments was with this charge. At my request, Brother R. S. Troxler was present, and preached. He was heard with interest by a congregation that very well filled the house. Brother Reed has found that he can not serve this work satisfactorily from the Kernersville charge, owing to the night travel that would be required, and the afflicted condition of Sister Reed. He has, therefore, asked to be released. The South Winston people would have been pleased if he could have continued with them, though they were not disposed to work a hardship upon him. Brother Troxler will succeed Brother Reed here. He will prove a good assignment for the work, both as preacher and pastor, and by the assistance that he will be able to give to them in their building project. South Winston appears to us to be a promising field. We shall expect a marked increase in their work when they get into their new building. We believe, also, that Brother Troxler and the people here will be very happy in their work together. We were glad to see Mrs. Troxler and the children with him on this visit.

We enjoyed the day with these churches, and we trust that some kingdom fruitage may follow our labors. One of the purposes of the visitation of a conference president among the churches is to intensify the feeling of solidarity—to get us strong in the feeling that we all belong; that all of us together make up the conference family, and that the weakest and strongest alike have a contribution to make to the programs by which we are seeking to establish God's Kingdom. The more this spirit can be intensified, the stronger we will be to do the work that God expects of us as a conference.

"And they stood every man in his place round about the camp; and all the host ran, and cried, and fled."

We found Brother Pegg dealing earnestly with his work, and happy in the fact that hope and harmony prevail on his charge. We are grateful to all who befriended us during these visits. God's blessings on them.

Quarterly Reports

The first quarter of this new conference year will end February 4. Report blanks will go out promptly, and we trust that the spirit of hopefulness and harmony, that has been so in evidence during the quarter, may be intensified when these reports get back to us. One pastor has reported already, and a magnificent report it is, too. We hope to receive many of this kind.

Salaries

We urge the officials of the churches to give attention to this matter. The salary is the only support of most of our pastors, and the officials are the ones to whom the pastor looks for the raising of the salary. We urge, them, therefore, to go about this matter earnestly and prayerfully, and see that pastors are not embarrassed because their salaries are not paid. A good business system, and small amount from many people, makes the meeting of this obligation easy. Remember, brethren, that it is written, "The labourer is worthy of his hire."

OUR STORY PAGE

HOUSEKEEPING AND HOME-MAKING

"Eric, I wish you would come in or else go out. You are holding that screen door open like an invitation to the flies."

The boy, who was standing in the doorway looking up and down the street, turned at his sister's impatient call and entered the house. "I didn't think about the flies," he said good-naturedly. "Did any of them dodge in over my head?"

Frances did not reply. She was looking at the floor, an expression on her face which was somewhat between horror and indignation.

"Eric Fraser, where in the world could you have found any mud today? No matter if there hasn't been any rain for a month, you'll come into the house and make muddy tracks across the floor. And I spent such a long time polishing it this morning," sighed Frances, with what her brother called her martyr-like tone. "Well, I don't hunt up the wet places, if that's what you mean," was Eric's rather short answer. He pulled an easy chair into the bay window and settled himself comfortably with the morning papers. Frances, who had gone for a dusting cloth to remove the traces of his tracks on the polished floor, uttered an exclamation as she entered the room.

"Eric Fraser, would you mind leaving that chair where I put it? The room is simply spoiled with all the furniture huddled into that end of the room. If you want to sit in the window take the window seat."

"Oh, no! I'll go upstairs to my own room, and maybe there I can have a little peace." The slam of the door behind him was very expressive, and Frances sighed as she looked at her aunt. "You see how it is," she said. "Eric doesn't appreciate how hard I work to keep things nice. I think housekeepers have very hard times."

Her tone seemed to indicate that a little sympathy would be welcomed. Aunt Elizabeth was sorry for the girl, who was trying so hard to fill her mother's place, but she did not think that sympathy was just what Frances needed. "My dear," she said, instead, "what is the object of all this dusting and scrubbing and polishing that goes on in a home? Why isn't it left out?"

"Left out!" repeated Frances. She stared at her aunt incredulously. "Left out, Aunt Elizabeth! Why, it would be intolerable. Nobody could have any comfort in a house that wasn't kept clean and in order."

"Exactly." Aunt Elizabeth looked pleased. "The comfort and enjoyment of the family are the first consideration. Order and cleanliness are important as they contribute to the more important things. Just as soon as they interfere with the family comfort they have gone too far."

"I suppose you think I ought to let Eric track all around and not say a word," remarked Frances crossly.

"I mean, my dear, that home-making is a higher art than housekeeping. I knew a woman once," said Aunt Elizabeth reflectively, "who had a reputation as a good housekeeper, and she was determined to live up to it. When her husband came home at night he found his slippers waiting for him on the outside steps. He put them on before he crossed the threshold."

"That was going rather far, but still it had its advantages," said Frances, laughing in spite of herself.

"Yes, but it didn't stop there. The mania for keeping things in order grew on her till after she would lock the door and not allow any one of the family to use it. The kitchen was the last to be closed. Her husband came home one night and found a cot on the back porch and the cooking stove in the yard."

"Why, she must have been crazy!" Frances exclaimed.

"That's what the doctor said. But I have always thought that she should be a warning to the housekeepers who keep their homes neat at the expense of family comfort. I have known," added Aunt Elizabeth, with a twinkle in her eye, "a number who have started on the same path, even though they never went as far."

Frances looked at her, and her eye reflected the twinkle.

"I wonder if Eric would like to make candy," she said reflectively. "I've objected several times lately when he's proposed it, because the chafing dish gets in such a condition, and the room is always out of order before he's through. I suppose the good housekeeper you were telling about would never have allowing such a thing."

"I don't believe she would, but a good home-maker might," said Aunt Elizabeth, smiling back.

And then the aggrieved Eric, sulking in his room upstairs, was as surprised as delighted to hear his sister's voice in the hall, "Eric, come down. We've just time to make fudge before supper."—The New York Observer.

THE BOYS AND THE BEES

Many, many years ago the people in Germany lived in little towns with high walls around them. They built walls around their towns because they had quarrels with other towns. The walls protected them against their enemies.

Sometimes people kept beehives on the high walls. The bees could fly away into the field outside and gather honey. There were not many flowers inside the city to get honey from.

One morning two baker boys were hungry. They had to get up early. Some fine rolls had just been taken from the oven. The boys thought it would be fine to have some rolls and honey.

"Let's go up on the walls and get some honey out of one of the hives," said John.

"But the bees will sting us," answered James. "Beside, the watchman on the walls might see us. Then we would be in trouble of another kind."

John, however, persuaded James to go. The two boys stole out of the shop, and ran across the street.

In a few minutes they were creeping up the stairs that led to the top of the wall.

There was no watchman to be seen. He had gotten sleepy probably, and had gone somewhere to sleep. But there was a noise coming from somewhere.

The boys listened, but all was quiet again. They made their way quietly along the wall till they came to the hives.

Then they covered up their faces and got ready to rob the bees of their treasure. John was just lifting the top from one of the hives, when he heard another strange noise. He dropped the hive hurriedly.

The noise seemed to come from the outside of the wall. The boys looked over, and saw a small army. It was the people of Linz, who had come to attack the town.

Both boys were terribly frightened at first. They saw, however, that something must be done to save the town.

"James," said John, "you run yonder and ring the bell. I will tumble the beehives down on their heads."

James did as he was told. John pushed a hive over the wall. It fell on the leader's head, and went to pieces. The bees were angry at being disturbed in this way. They flew at the men and stung their hands and faces, so that they were glad to run away.

Another beehive came tumbling down and then another. And the angry bees put the whole army to flight.

By this time the bell had called the people out to defend the town. But the army had already departed. The two boys and the bees had saved the town.

The boys were not punished. Instead the people praised them for their wise acts. It was decided to erect a monument in their honor.

One of the boys afterward became mayor of the city. The other was long known as the most famous baker of his time.—A Rhine Legend, from "Child Lore."

ONE YEAR TO LIVE

"If I had but one year to live;

One year to help; one year to give;
One year to love; one year to bless;
One year of better things to stress;
One year to sing; one year to smile;
To brighten each a little while;
One year to sing my Maker's praise;
One year to fill with work my days;
One year to strive for a reward
When I should stand before my Lord,
I think that I would spend each day,
In just the very self-same way
That I do now. For from afar
The call may come to cross the bar
At any time, and I must be Prepared to meet eternity.
So if I have a year to live,
Or just one day in which to give
A pleasant smile, a helping hand,
A mind that tries to understand
A fellow creature when in need,
'Tis one with me—I take no heed;
But try to live each day He sends father's country home he can buy more liquor than he could before the prohibition law was passed. He does not take into account the thousands of communities in which you can now buy no liquor at all. He asks why there is more crime in the United States than in European countries where there is no prohibition, which reminds one of Franklin's puzzling question to French savants—why no water will overflow from a full vessel when you put a live fish into it. Our contributor has jumped to a conclusion. He would better reconsider carefully. His letter was mailed in Atlanta, Ga., and gives no hint as to his place of residence more definite than "Western North Carolina." For aught we know he may be a boot-legger and the profits of his business may account for his change of attitude toward the prohibition law. But we hope better things of him. If he is honest at heart we do not expect him long to remain out of the dry column. He says his people are Methodist Protestants. We trust they will pray for him. That is perhaps all he will let them do for him.
To serve my gracious Master's ends."

THE HIDDEN POWER

The vessel's great propeller
Was hidden 'neath the sea,
And never left the circle
Of its activity.

A patient, plodding toiler
Chained to one hidden spot,
Obscure but uncomplaining,
Contented with its lot.

And yet it drove the vessel
The trackless ocean o'er,
And wove a fabric binding
Together shore and shore.

And you, O human toiler,
Who, hidden far below
The bright and glinting surface
Of social ocean's flow.

Be cheered! for 'tis the power
Of your unnoticed hand
That moves the springs of nations,
Uniting land to land.

No superficial glitter
And empty pomp and show;
The real heart of the nations
Lies hidden down below.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By J. T. BOWMAN

President High Point College C. E. Society

FEB. 8: WHAT IS IMPLIED IN "GOD IS MY FATHER?"

Scripture Text—Acts 17:22-31

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—A New Birth, John 3:1-8.

Tuesday—A New Life, Tit. 2:11-15.

Wednesday—God's Care for Us, 1 Pet. 5:7.

Thursday—Trusting God's Care, Matt. 6:24-34.

Friday—Accepting God's Discipline, Heb. 12:4-11.

Saturday—A Father's Love, Luke 15:20-32.

For the Leader

In the Bible we find certain great doctrines or teachings. The main one of them all is "The Fatherhood of God." Its meaning was revealed to us by Jesus. He taught us to pray to God as "Our Father who art in heaven." When we work out the teaching of the Fatherhood of God, which is the central revelation of the Bible, we shall see that it includes everything else.

When man was created by God, "He breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul." What there is in mankind that makes him different from animal-kind may be seen in three qualities:

1. The ability of man to think above the animals.
2. The ability of man to love above the animals.
3. The ability of man to resolve and endeavor above the animals.

Back of these three qualities lie INTELLIGENCE, AFFECTION and WILL, which are manifestations of spirit—the God part of man. "God is the 'Father of spirits.'" It is that which he breathed into man that made him more than an animal. And it is that which we must bring back to God to be claimed and trained by Him. That is what it means to be a Christian."

Discuss

1. What does the Fatherhood of God mean?
2. How can we explain it that Athens with all her learning, did not know God, and therefore did not know how to live?
3. What does the Fatherhood of God mean to us personally?
4. Do you not suppose there is a difference in the relationship between a loving father and a loving child and that between a loving father and a disobedient child?
5. Do you want to risk the Father's care for you when you are unmindful of Him?

Poetry

God of our fathers, known of old,

Lord of the far-flung battle line,

Beneath whose awful hand we hold

Dominion over prin and pine,

Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,

Lest we forget, lest we forget.

Far called our navies melt away,

On dune and headline sinks the fire,

Lo! all our pomp of yesterday

Is one with Nineveh and Tyre—

Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,

Lest we forget, lest we forget.

The tumult and the shouting dies,

The captains and the kings depart;

Still stands the ancient sacrifice,

A broken and a contrite heart—

Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,

Lest we forget, lest we forget.

—Rudyard Kipling.

C. E. SOCIETY, LINCOLNTON

We are sorry that our church was destroyed by fire. But we have a large bunch of young people going right on with the good work of our Lord.

We are having our regular meetings in our homes. The two last meetings we had, the topic was, My idea of what a young man and woman ought to be.

These are some of the write-ups of our people which might be of interest to you all. My Dear Friends and Fellow Endeavorers:

Here I have listed the things I would expect of a young man to make him an ideal companion. First of all I would require that he be a Christian. Though he may be possessed with some desirable traits, he could not be an ideal associate without being a Christian.

He should be fond of his home and be very considerate of every member thereof.

He must be particularly devoted to his mother and always interested in her well-being and happiness.

He must respect my opinion just as I shall respect his.

He must have a will of his own and not allow me to command him too much.

His habits must be clean, he must abstain altogether from such habits as tobacco in any form.

I would expect him to be somewhat particular concerning his personal appearance. Although he may not be in the position financially to obtain the best and most expensive wearing apparel, yet he must always be neat and attractive.

He must be fearless, possessed with a broad knowledge of human nature, and always considerate of others, their feelings and desires.

He must be honest, truthful, courteous and sincere.

In defining my ideal young lady the first requirement I would make would be that she be of Christian character. Then I could expect her to be endowed to a certain extent at least with all the virtues that go with a Christian character. These being, namely: Purity, helpfulness, generosity, love, patience, gentleness, and faith.

This I consider to be by far the most important requirement in choosing an ideal but there are other points we can't afford to overlook.

She should take pride in her personal appearance and dress modestly, neatly and attractively.

She should be able to arrange a home tastefully and to manage it efficiently and above all economically.

And to be of a quiet, understanding disposition, and able to sympathize and encourage those in need of it.

To be always considerate of the feelings of others in whom she came in contact with.

My Idea of What a Young Woman Should Be

True beauty comes from within and not from a compact.

Some girls think, Oh, well, if I have a compact and keep my face very unnaturally colored, every one, especially of the opposite sex, will think me beautiful and go wild about me. This is not at all true. People do not notice the appearance of others as much as they notice their conduct and ways.

I think a girl should be religious, and in doing so she would have good conduct, be a home-lover and not keep late hours at night out riding, petting, drinking and smoking.

A girl should always love, respect, and obey her parents to the best of her ability and respect her neighbors and all older people as well.

Every girl should guard her speech not only before ministers, and such like people, but before everyone.

Most girls of today are counted as "Sissys," conceited, high fluttin, and bigotry and therefore each one should have or at least try to have a very friendly and sweet disposition.

The more wealthy class considers the poorer, religious people as nothing, they ignore them in most cases, but this does not get them anywhere at all and when the final day comes all of it will be remembered. No one has to be "up in society" to progress in life and furthermore they would get along much better if they would put all such things aside. Both sexes should lay aside all worldly pleasures, such as theatres, swimming pools, dance halls, pool rooms, bowling alleys and such things.

All girls think of appearance, form, figure and complexion as important but it is not so much so, although they should be neat and clean.

Girls should be trusted by all.

TO THE MEN IN THE CONFERENCE COURSE

Our Conference in 1929 voted to put Robert's Rules of Order in the Conference Course, first year, and I was named to examine in that study. For some reason it was not listed with the other studies in the "Journal" and I did not examine in it last Conference. In some way it was left out of the last "Journal," but the men taking the first year's course will please prepare to take this study this year.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

HERE AND THERE

GRATEFUL

Years of loneliness faced the mother if she had to give up her children because of poverty. A few months ago there had been the happy little family, poor as worldly goods go, but rich in love for each other. Then the father had been taken ill and had died. The mother had bravely faced the future, determined to make a living for her two children as best she could. She rose early in the morning, cooked, washed, sewed for them, and for the neighbors who brought her odd bits of work. At night she was tired, and there was a dull ache in her side from running the heavy machine.

She realized she could not give them all they needed. Their food was not quite adequate, and what mother can bear the thought of her children not receiving proper nourishment?

So one day she told the younger child, five years old, that she must put him in an institution where he could be well fed, and warmly clothed. It was a sad occasion, for mother and children dread separation.

But something happened. The superintendent of public welfare visited the family and told them that the state had a fund called Mothers' Aid which was established for the purpose of helping such worthy mothers deprived of their husbands' support in order that they might rear their children at home. They decided to make application.

That night the little boy knelt and prayed, "God bless Mothers' Aid." His prayer has become a classic among those who know of North Carolina's way of saving the poor, fatherless home from destruction.

The family required some medical attention before it was approved for Mothers' Aid. With the help and advice of the superintendent of public welfare, this treatment was obtained and the mother could then meet the health requirements of the state. A monthly allowance of fifteen dollars was granted, which enabled the mother to adequately feed her family.

As the children grew older, the mother found a job as a clerk in a store. The work seemed more suited to her frail strength than heavy sewing, and brought in a steady income of twenty-five dollars per month.

In January, the family was discontinued from the active list as self-supporting, the mother's salary having been raised to sixty dollars per month as she was given additional responsibility. The older child, a girl, has now finished high school and is going into training to be a nurse. The younger is now twelve years old, and is helping out by raising chickens, making enough to buy his own clothes.

Recently the State Board received the following letter from the grateful mother:

"For several days I have been trying to find words to express my gratitude for the Aid. It is impossible to write what this has meant to my children and me. I wish for you and every one responsible for this to know that with my whole heart I thank you and I have tried to be worthy and have impressed on my children the best I could that they also have a duty to the state of North Carolina to be citizens that the state be not ashamed of."—"Public Welfare Progress."

SOME OMISSIONS AND CORRECTIONS

It is not the purpose of the writer to play the part of fault finder, but unless there are some corrections made the ones who deserve justice will not get it. I refer to the new Journal.

The first thing is that there is no credit given to Gibsonville for raising the two per cent. for the support of the Herald. If you remember that church was the first to raise this, and overpaid. Would be glad to do it again. It is a shame if I may use that strong term, that we are not giving Brother McCall, both any better support than we are. ONLY SIXTEEN CHARGES RAISED THE AMOUNT ASKED! Is that fair? Is that treating one who has given us his life for this cause right? We stress the fact, some do, that without a college we could not exist. If that be true would we be existing had it not been for what the Herald has done for us? "Think on these things." See her or roll, page 116, Journal.

A little understanding of simple book keeping would enable some to see that the salary mentioned there as being paid to the writer, was for the year 1929 and not last year as the question was raised by some, "Why did no Fountain Place raise the salary promised?" They did and they tell me the easiest they ever raised. The only thing I regret about this is that I did not get that item, that is last year. See Church Extension report, page 69, Journal Disbursements, 1929.

This is not written to find fault with any one, for these errors will occur some times, and things will be misunderstood some times, too. Surely it is not the fault of the publisher of the Journal, for the fact of his honesty has never been questioned, and his work as secretary has never been surpassed or equaled in my judgment, even if I did serve in that capacity for a few years.

This is written that justice may go to whom justice is due.

N. G. BETHEA.

GIVE ME A BOOK

Of many things
I want but few,
But since you ask,
A book will do.

To me a book
Is better far
Than jewel rare
Or gaudy car.

If you would have
Me think of you,
Just know, good friend,
A book will do.

—Grenville Kleiser.

POLLY WAS NOT SO DUMB

I was very reluctant about taking charge of my friend's parrot while she was absent. I feared my big Persian cat, "Boots," would try to devour it upon first sight, and that it would require constant vigilance to keep them separated. I warned her of this ever-present danger to which she proposed subjecting her pet, but she laughingly replied, "Oh, don't worry; Polly'll take care of herself."

She was quite right as I soon found out.

The gorgeous bird was perched on top of its cage when Boots first saw it. I was right there ready to prevent a tragedy, but curious to know just what bird and cat might do,

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

NOTES FROM PLEASANT HILL AUXILIARY WEST FORSYTH

Our Auxiliary I think is worthy of a little praise, few in number since some have located in other communities. We are progressing right along, all obligations being paid in full up to date with a good balance in the bank.

We use different methods of raising our budget, suppers, selling vanilla, free-will offering and each member contributing an article either made by herself or produced on the farm and sold to eager buyers. So far everything has been sold at our meetings and the money handed to the treasurer.

The question has been asked, Does your society have a secretary of Young People's Work? Glad to say we do, and we are using the programs and literature planned by Mrs. Mori, which we find in the Missionary Record.

The monthly meetings are looked forward to with keen interest by each member, feeling it their duty to do the Master's work, and enjoying it too from a social view.

MRS. R. J. WHITMAN, Cor. Sec.

There was a gleam of fire in Boots' eyes as he sped the bird. He crouched down, his tail swished ominously, and he began creeping stealthily toward the cage.

He was getting dangerously near and I was just about to interfere when, at the top of her small voice, Polly shrieked "Hello!"

The cat gave one backward leap, his back arched and every hair stood on end; he backed slowly to the wall and then sidled along till he came to the open door when he turned and darted out like an arrow. As he disappeared Polly yelled, "Good bye!"

I kept Polly three months but all that time Boots shunned her as though she were a vicious dog.

Yes, Polly could take care of herself.

Schoolmaster: "Now I want you to tell me which of those words are singular and which are plural. Tomkins, you take the first, 'transes!'"

Tomkins, after deliberation: "Singular at the top and plural lower down, sir."

She: "No one understands me."

He: "No wonder; your mother was a telephone operator and your father a train announcer."—"Baptist Student."

The plumber worked and the helper stood helplessly looking on. He was learning the business. This was his first day. "Say," he inquired, "do you charge for my time?" "Certainly," came the reply. "But I haven't done anything." The plumber, to fill in the hour, had been looking at the finished job with a lighted candle. Holding the two inches of it that were still unburned to the helper, he said, authoritatively: "Here, if you gotta be so conscientious, blow that out."—"Masonic Craftsman."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mt. Pleasant Church.—Rev. J. R. Hutton gave his congregation a soul-stirring view of "the Conversion of Zachaeus," at our 11 o'clock service Sunday morning.

We were given a mental vision of the handicapped and dwarfed publican, who, desiring a vision of Jesus, and being hindered by the passive crowd that hedged Him in, was willing to overcome his obstacle by departing from the customary manner of viewing Christ; was even willing to make himself ridiculous by seeking the natural elevation of a tree, that he might see Christ.

We were warned that we, as friends, parents, and relatives if not active Christians, possessing an active and working faith, in Christ, might be the passive crowd hedging in some one from Christ—unintentionally, perhaps, merely by the sin of omission.

"When one seeks Jesus there will be a meeting place," was the promising message of our pastor, "Get above the crowd and custom in your search for Him, and He will call to you, 'I must abide at thy house,' and there will be joy abundant."

Since our last report there have been two impressive funerals held in our church: that of Mrs. Alminta Curtis, who has been a resident of this neighborhood and a member of our church for over fifteen years, and that of Mrs. Sarah Shepard, who resided near Liberty, N. C.

The two C. E. societies of our church are planning, and working for a favorable year's work with Messrs. Walter Causey and Guy Alexander as presidents.

The members of the Philathea class greatly enjoyed their lesson as taught by Mr. William Spoon, Sunday before last.

Miss Edith Causey, a student at N. C. C. W., spent the week-end with her parents and visited our church Sunday before last.

Last Sunday, Miss Mary Walker from Gibsonville spent the week-end with Miss Margaret Causey and visited our Sunday school.

NILA GARNETTE AMICK, Reporter.

Bethel, Alamance.—Our pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, gave us, last Sunday, another of his splendid sermons. We regret that more of our members were not present to hear it.

The board of stewards held a meeting and considered methods for raising our finances.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the leadership of Mr. Lon McPherson as superintendent. Teachers have been elected as follows: Rev. G. W. Holmes, Mrs. Lon McPherson, Miss Bessie Holmes, Miss Eunice McPherson, Miss Marcie Foust, Mrs. W. W. Workman, and Mrs. J. L. Hogan. The officers and teachers recently held a business meeting and made plans for making the Sunday school better this year. We hope each member will co-operate to the best of his ability. During the past year we built four new rooms to the church, so we are better prepared to have a more efficient school.

Mrs. Lon McPherson recently entertained the Mother's class, of which she is teacher, at her home. This was a splendid occasion of spiritual uplift and social fellowship.

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary continues very active with good attendance and good programs. The next meeting will be held the second Sunday in February at 2 o'clock at the church.

May we each do our part to make this a good year.

MARCIA FOUST, Reporter.

Tabernacle Church.—We are moving steadily along. We are having a splendid Sunday school. The interest and attendance keep up fine.

Mr. Cecil Fields is our superintendent and is doing splendid service. Last Sunday, Sunday school was opened by Mr. A. P. Coble.

The second Sunday Rev. Mr. Isley preached from, "Thy Kingdom Come." Last Sunday was a continuance of Sunday before. Lesson from Romans 8:9, 14. Last Sunday was communion service and a large number partook of the Lord's Supper.

We are sorry that a larger number could not be present to hear these wonderful sermons. Brother Isley has something good for us each Sunday and as the winter months pass and the spring months open up we hope to have larger attendance.

The first Sunday in February will be "Young People's Day." We hope to have a large number present for this service.

We are planning to build Sunday school rooms which are needed very much, Brother Isley is working hard to get the work started.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. J. P. SHORE.

West Forsyth.—Our appointments for the past two Sundays have been at Pleasant Hill and Harmony Grove churches. The third Sunday we were at Pleasant Hill, and the usual size congregation was present. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed, and a large number of people, both young and old, participated.

The service at Harmony Grove last Sunday was well attended. The weather was pleasant and the day was ideal in contrast with the last several Sundays. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered and a goodly number partook of the elements which represent the body and blood of our Lord. After the service the pastor and two of his children went to the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Warner and daughter, Miss Bessie Warner, where a splendid dinner and a pleasant visit were enjoyed. Mrs. Warner is a near-invalid and attends services only occasionally.

Since our last report we have been remembered with suitable gifts for the dining table from the following: Mr. and Mrs. U. Walter Long, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Whitman, Prof. and Mrs. W. B. Spears, Mrs. Florence Whitman, of Pleasant Hill church; Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Spears, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Doub, of Stony Knoll church; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Briggs, Mr. and Mrs. Robah Culler, of Tabernacle church; Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Anderson.

We regret to note the serious injury sustained by Brother J. H. Spears, superintendent of Stony Knoll Sunday school. He received a serious injury to his foot in an accident with a road drag, and required the attention of a physician. He will not be able to walk for two or three weeks. We hope for him a speedy and complete recovery of the injured foot.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be at Baltimore church at 11 a. m., and at Stony Knoll church at 2:30 p. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Mebane.—Attendance for Sunday school yesterday was some better than the previous Sunday, 145 being present. Collection over $6.00. The young people occupied the choir at the 11 o'clock service, and the pastor delivered a timely and interesting message, choosing as his subject, "The Question of the Ages," from the text "What Shall I Do Then With Jesus Which Is Called Christ." Misses Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson sang very beautifully, "Take My Life and Let It Be."

Sunday evening at 7:30 the young people presented the program, "Youth Adventuring in the Christian Quest," in a very creditable manner. This program was sent out by the department of Religious Education. A reading "I am Youth" was given by Lois Wilkerson. "The Idea and Beginning of the Christian Quest" was presented by Grover Sykes. "The Quest of the Early Christians" was splendidly presented by Harlan McAuley. The Scripture lesson, "The Beginning of Jesus' Quest," was read and followed with prayer by Hildred Loy. Special music, a duet, by Misses Lorena Potts and Edna Nicholson, was very effectively rendered. "Young People Today in the Quest for a Christian World" was brought to the attentive audience by Merle Clayton. "Opportunities Along the Way of the Quest" was presented very impressively by Elizabeth Nicholson. This program was one of the best that has been presented here and we felt justly proud of our young people and we feel sure they have received worthwhile training through their Christian Endeavor activities.

The circles of the Woman's Auxiliary met Monday evening at 7:30 with Mrs. Frank Jobe, Mrs. E. W. Allen, Mrs. Cliff Cheek and Mrs. C. C. Smith.

Bessie Barnette, student at High Point college, spent the week-end with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Foster, of Burlington, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Nicholson and attended our 11 o'clock church service.

Miss Lorena Potts, of Philadelphia, is the guest of Miss Ruby Jones.

We are glad to report the condition of Mrs. Edd Scott somewhat improved.

REPORTER.

Siler City.—We are still very much alive and doing things. In spite of the snow and rain the work of the church has gone on as usual.

Our Sunday school is very encouraging. We have been holding our own all through the inclement weather and we feel sure each member of our church is proud of our school and wide awake superintendent who is doing so much to make the Sunday school a success.

Our mid-week prayer service is another feature of church work, that all who attend, enjoy so much. Dr. Williams is giving us each week a most interesting message on one of the seven Christian Graces, found in the first chapter of 2nd Peter. We were delighted to have Mr. Hannon of Liberty worship with us last Wednesday night.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church on last Wednesday afternoon with 13 members present. Mrs. L. L. Woody, our president, had charge of the business part after which the meeting was turned over to Mrs. T. L. Smith, program committee, who had for us some very interesting reading on Home Missions. At this meeting it was decided to write Mr. Minnis a letter each month.

We are so glad to have Mrs. Ross, Mrs. T. L. Smith's mother, back with us after spending some time in Mississippi, Georgia, and South Carolina. She is a great help in our Auxiliary meetings and can always give us so many new ideas along the line of making money to finance our Auxiliary.

Since January 25th was Young People's Day in our denomination, Rev. N. M. Harrison of High Point college filled our 11 o'clock hour bringing us a splendid message on the youth of today. He also gave us some interesting facts in regard to our college which made us feel so proud that we have a part in it, and that we are full-blooded Methodist Protestants. Mr. Harrison is a great preacher and we were so glad to have him with us and hope he can come again in the not far distant future.

The Christian Endeavor society is growing by leaps and bounds. Last Sunday night there were 45 present. That was by far the largest number ever present. We are glad that so many of our young people are taking an interest in this great work. They now have on a contest and each side is working hard to win.

The Junior Philathea class won over the Senior Philathea in a six weeks' average at tandance contest. They have already been entertained and each one present enjoyed it very much.

First Church, Burlington.—Following the mid-week prayer meeting last Wednesday night, the membership pounded one of our members, who was found to be in urgent need for food supplies. An especially selected group went from the church carrying the gifts. The lady receiving the pounding was made so happy that she could hardly go to sleep that night, according to her statement. This reminds us again of the words of Jesus when he said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

We are glad to report that Miss Elizabeth Rogers, who recently underwent an operation at a local hospital, is improving nicely at her home on Ruffin street. Also, Mr. J. Ed. Moore is improving and was able to be out at the preaching service today.

Attendance in the Sunday school today was 206 and the regular offering amounted to $18.33.

The stork has been busy in our congregation lately, as announced by the following: Born to Mr. and Mrs. Ben Wiles recently a son; to Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Perry, Grace street, a daughter, Peggy Lou, Saturday, January 24th; to Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Braxton, a daughter, Sunday 25th. We congratulate these parents upon the arrivals of these little folks and wish them useful lives in the Kingdom.

Our pastor brought splendid messages at both services today and we hope that each member, who heard the sermons, will strive to be more active in the great work of the Master.

The Woman's Auxiliary of First church met in the Hut Monday evening, January 19th with 42 present. Circle number 3 was in charge with Mrs. I. C. Smith acting as program leader. The program was as follows:

Call to Worship—Mrs. Lula Riddle.

Song—"My Faith Looks Up To Thee."

Prayer—Dr. F. W. Paschall.

Theme of the Evening—"Faith Without Work Is Dead."

Scripture—James 2:1-20.

Special Selection—Burlington Junior Girls' Quartette.

"Facts About M. P. Children's Home"—Mrs. John Barnwell.

"Facts About Dillonvale"—Mrs. F. W. Paschall.

"Facts About Pine Ridge School in Kentucky"—Mrs. L. R. Pickard.

The meeting was presided over by Miss Susie Stafford. The report from the secretary was given, after which followed the reports of the circles and treasurers. All reports were interesting. The executive committee appointed a nominating committee in order that they might submit to the next meeting officers for the coming year. The auxiliary then adjourned. Circle number 3 served fruit for refreshments.

Friendship, Stanley.—Our new pastor, Rev. O. B. Williams, is greatly liked by all.

We are sorry to know Sister Betty Sides fell and broke her arm. We are praying for her recovery soon.

The Ladies' Aid met on Friday night for their supper, it was a great success; the amount was $40. We thank our friends for their helping hands.

On Sunday night, the 25th, our pastor delivered a wonderful message to the young people, also the old. His text was, "For ye have not passed this way." After preaching the church took a vote on building a hut for the Ladies' Aid. We got the vote to build it. We thank the good people for their help.

May we take up our cross and follow Jesus daily, not just on Sunday.

We are glad to see visitors from a number of other churches around us. Please come again.

REPORTER.

Lexington.—Sunday was a record-breaking day for us. We had 228 in Sunday school which is the largest number we have had in a long time.

We were very fortunate in having with us Rev. Mr. Lyons of High Point college who preached at both services. There was an unusually large crowd present for the morning service and Rev. Lyons delivered a very forceful and interesting sermon and all present expressed much delight in having him preach for us. In the evening service the church was filled. Mr. Lyons preached another good sermon, his text being "Watch and Pray." He brought out some very interesting thoughts.

We have had ministerial students to preach for us for the last two Sundays. On last Sunday Rev. Mr. Howard was with us, we enjoy having such fine men as Messrs. Lyons and Howard with us. It is a great inspiration for us to see such fine young men as these preparing for the ministry and we pray God that their work may be crowned with much success.

REPORTER.

Liberty.—Rev. J. D. Williams brought us a wonderful message Sunday morning. His text was, "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Brother Williams was at his best and all that missed hearing this sermon on adults teaching youth certainly missed a great treat.

We were glad to have Miss Mabel Williams, and Mr. Frank Shepard with us at Sunday school and church service Sunday. Also very glad to have with us Mrs. J. B. York, one of our most faithful workers, who has been sick.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church, January 13th, at 3 o'clock, and the same evening at 7:30 o'clock the Philathea class held a business meeting in the class room. The following teachers and officers were appointed: Teachers, Mrs. E. L. Tate, assistant teacher; Mrs. Mamie Smith; president, Mrs. B. B. Reitzel; vice-president, Mrs. Myrtle Smith, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Cecil Frazier, assistant secretary and treasurer; Mrs. A. J. Brower.

Our Sunday school is not what we would like for it to be now, but we trust that more of our members will come out now since the weather is not so bad.

Circle number one will meet with Mrs. J. B. York, Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Circle number two will meet with Mrs. J. W. Curtis, Thursday at the same hour.

We are glad to know Mrs. Will Smith is better.

Best wishes to "Herald" and its readers for a prosperous new year.

MRS. J. N. ISELEY, Reporter.

Greer's Chapel.—Rev. R. S. Troxler filled his pulpit Sunday. The sermon was beneficial to all. After the sermon the Troxler quartet rendered special music, which was enjoyed by all present.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely, though the severe weather somewhat decreased the attendance for a few Sundays, we are expecting it to be the average and above the average in the future.

Our Christian Endeavor society has been dropped on account of bad weather until the next quarter. We were moving along very nicely with our society. The last meeting being the best meeting of all, Mr. J. W. Jarrett being the leader.

The Ladies' Aid society meets after service every second Sunday. This society too is moving along nicely.

May God help every church in every way to stand more for the year being than ever before, so when the day comes, we will be as sheep to stand on the right hand of God.

LOTTIE FITZGERALD, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—On Sunday, January 15th, the minister delivered the third of the series of messages to the seven churches of Asia, "The Value of An Earnest Minority—Sardis," from the text in Rev. 3:14, "Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white, for they are worthy." Sardis was an ancient city of wealth; Midas, who turned everything he touched into gold, lived there; Solon, the wise man, visited it; and Cyrus destroyed it, but it was rebuilt. The people had been stifled by evil art, and were living in an atmosphere of which Jesus could not approve, but there were a "few names" left to redeem it. Numbers, wealth, reputation do not give life to a church; what is the test of a church? "By their fruits ye shall know them." It takes patience and courage to persevere in a cause that is not popular. I want you to remember this morning that it is possible to be true, faithful, and loyal in the most trying circumstances. Virgil said, "They can conquer who believe they can." Lad companions need not upset you. It took strong moral courage for William Henry Harrison, when a candidate for President of the U. S., at a banquet a man from New York insisted that a toast be drunk in liquor, to decline emphatically. It is perfectly possible to be courageous under most trying circumstances, for there is always some redeeming feature in every circumstance. I still believe that God has His faithful, true; Paul, Stephen, Moses, Malachi, Abraham. High Point has a few faithful men and women, who are loyal to the personal character of which He approves. "They shall walk in white, for they are worthy." God's processes always start with the minority.

On last Sunday morning the fourth in this series, "The Privilege of Service—Philadelphia," was delivered from the text, "Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it; for thou hast a little strength and has kept my word, and hast not denied my name." He said in part: In 6th century B. C. Pythagoras said "it is only given to God and the angels to be lookers on." The best way to serve ourselves is to serve humanity, and this seems to envelop the whole program of service of the church. In the economy of God the humblest service is acceptable to Christ, even the shade of a little violet which envelopes a dewdrop. Philadelphia was an imperial pastured, and prominent city of that day. It and Smyrna were the only churches that were not condemned. Work is always a blessing, not a curse. To evade service is to miss the open door. Our highest privilege should be to minister, but not to be ministered unto. The curse of America is what people do with their leisure time. "Sceest thou a man diligent in business?" He shall stand before kings." I am interested in the small fidelities, not the number of talents. The world's greatest door is Jesus Christ, who affords security, expansion, freedom, and fullness. The eastern sheepfold has only one door, Christ's way and life is our door. The need of others is our opportunity. Margaret E. Sangster says, "God asks not success, but fidelity; He is responsible for results, it is ours to obey His will." God's prizes are not for the brilliant alone, but for the faithful. If we run from service, it is the crucifixion of Christ anew."

The 5 o'clock vesper service was in keeping with the observance of Young People's Day. The minister spoke on "Youth and the Christian Quest," and a special program in which Messrs. Tyson, Ferree, Alton Gray, William Joister, and Ernest Auman, Jr., assisted, was presented.

On Monday morning at 10 o'clock the Sunshine Circle visited. Band met in the church with Mrs. Rev. H. Davis the leader.

The Golden Jubilee celebration of C. E. is being observed by the society this week, beginning Monday evening with the meeting led by Mrs. Theodor. Entitled on the topic, "What My Denomination Means to the World." In the Wednesday Evening Fellowship supper the Endeavorers will be present in a group and sit at a special table. On Friday evening they will enjoy a banquet at the church. Christian Endeavor was founded 50 years ago February

2, 1841, by Dr. Francis E. Clark, that apostle of "sweetness and light," who has gone to his reward, but he lived to see the society fostered by his efforts and labor, encircle the globe.

The Lord's Supper will be observed next Sunday morning, and the privilege of baptism infant and adult, will be presented. The quarterly Conference will convene the following Wednesday evening.

Messrs. M. P. Schreier and J. R. Montgomery were involved in an automobile wreck last week, but fortunately neither was seriously injured.

The sympathy of a host of friends is extended to Evangelist and Mrs. George T. Stephens in the loss of their lovely seven-year-old daughter, Sarah, who died of pneumonia last Friday morning after a brief illness of two days.

Gilberg, Vance.—We are still trying to move onward. Our Sunday school has been very dull for the past few months, but as spring approaches we are hoping it will grow more than ever before.

Rev. J. W. Braxton, filled his appointment the fourth Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. A very good and helpful sermon, his subject being "Chained Eagles." There was a very good crowd there, and his sermon was greatly enjoyed by all.

We are now making plans for a young people's program to be held the second Sunday afternoon in February.

REPORTER.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Sunday school attendance has been good considering the rough winter months, attendance was 72 last Sunday.

Our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, delivered a splendid sermon. Following this Communion service was observed.

We are glad to have our pastor and family back with us for another year.

The family of Mr. Elias Lane have been joined with, and also Miss Lola Barber.

REPORTER.

Graham.—Graham has had another "spell." Last Sunday morning the treasurer of the church, Don S. Holt, read a letter from the President of the General Conference relative to the financial needs of the Conference, which requested that we raise $50. And we DID with $30 to the good. It was a real joy to have a part in this service, and a delight to serve a people who are so responsive to the call of their church.

It was a good day all around. At the evening service Rev. N. M. Harrison was with us and stirred our hearts with his splendid message. Following closely the program put out by our Board of Christian Education we made religious education and a better trained leadership the central theme of the day.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Piney Grove, Denton Charge.—I was thankful for the privilege of being at church last Sunday. It was a service well worthy of note. We appreciate our pastor, Brother Short, joining us in our class and making it so vividly clear, that Jesus, in the flesh, was tempted in like manner as we, making it possible that He could, through His sympathy and power bear us up in our resistance of temptation.

The sermon that Mr. Short delivered to us on "Broken Things," was heart-touching, and may God help us to bow down our heads in submission, trusting all to Jesus, for we feel that He careth for us.

There was a nice supply carried in to pound the pastor and wife, though we feel sure there would have been much more liberal pounding had more known of our intentions.

A MEMBER.

Carleiden.—We are climbing higher and higher every Sunday. We had 124 present in Sunday school, and $9.17 in collection for the Children's Home. We hope that by the next fourth Sunday we will have a better report.

We are having a free-will offering to those who want to give anything to the Children's Home. Fifteen or 20 packages have already been received, with only one week's notice.

Mr. P. D. Padford, one of our faithful members who has been sick for some time, was able to be back with us Sunday.

MRS. O. C. WEBB, Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Sunday was a good day for us. The attendance at Sunday school and the morning service was good. Our pastor brought to us another one of his good sermons. He used for a text that beautiful passage of scripture spoken by Jesus, "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." He said that, Christ was not an afterthought in the mind of the divine Intelligence. Rather that, "Christ existed at the very root of our common humanity." Finally that, "through His entrance in the flesh, Christ proposes to lift humanity to his side by leading men through certain great moral experiences which alone are capable of such high endeavor." His call is, "Come, and follow me." All of Brother Fogleman's sermons are good but this one was especially good. Just after the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered. We were pleased to see a large number of people partake of the Lord's Supper.

The writer spent Sunday at the parsonage with Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman. From the way things looked in the pantry and kitchen I don't think they will suffer for something to eat in a long time. I began to question them as to where they got all those things to eat and they told me that they had had a pounding. The people of Eden and Union churches and some individuals from other churches had given them a pounding. I told Mr. Fogleman that the people of Hollister hadn't pounded them yet but we would some time, he said, "please wait until we get over the effects of this pounding."

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

First Church, Albemarle.—At the morning worship hour last Sunday Mr. Curry brought us a splendid message on "A living sacrifice in self." Mr. Curry pointed out many helpful thoughts in his sermon. And from the expression of the members as well as the visitors his sermon must have gone to the hearts of many.

Mr. and Mrs. Curry left last Thursday for a visit with Mrs. Curry's mother. Mr. Curry returned the latter part of the week to fill his place Sunday.

Mrs. Jim Green and Mrs. J. W. Hornbuckle entertained the Ladies' Aid society at a 25¢ social last Thursday afternoon. We enjoyed games and contests for an hour. Mrs. Arthur Furr and Mrs. Ira Smart won prizes in the contest for their outstanding ability. After the social hour the hostesses served sandwiches, cake and coffee. All the members present enjoyed the social to the fullest.

MRS. A. A. WAGNER, Reporter.

Oak Grove, Cleveland Charge.—Owing to the fine weather Sunday the attendance was much better than usual; everyone present seemed to enjoy the wonderful message given us by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge.

Much more interest was manifested at our C. E. society Sunday evening. Several interesting talks were made by the members. Brother W. W. Covington from the M. E. church, Polkville, made a very interesting talk also.

We miss the presence of Mrs. John A. Powell who has been confined to her room for some time. We hope she will soon be able to be with us again.

We wish to extend our appreciation to the members of the Oak Grove church for the extension of the M. P. Herald to reporter. May the Lord bless them and the Herald.

REPORTER.

Sea Grove, Why Not Circuit.—Pastor Neese preached last Sunday night. His sermon was based on the Sunday school lesson and was very interesting. The attendance was good.

We are having a splendid Sunday school with an enrollment of 58 and the average attendance has been good this winter, considering the rough weather. We have organized a young men's class with Mr. S. G. Richardson teacher.

The young ladies have named their class, "The Live Wire," and have ordered class pins.

We have paid our general conference budget for this year and some on pastor's salary.

We are few in number, but the few are nearly all faithful.

Our Ladies' Aid society met Wednesday night, January 21, with Miss Nettie Allen. All members were present except three. An interesting program was prepared by Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Neese, and Mrs. Auman. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. J. R. Comer's.

The society bought a heater for the church recently.

MRS. NOAH WILLIAMS.

Lexington, State Street.—The last few Sundays have shown a steady increase in Sunday school attendance that is very gratifying. Last Sunday the record showed a gain of ten over the previous Sunday.

The worship services both morning and evening are being well attended. The evening services are of unusual interest in that they feature special music, splendid evangelistic addresses by the pastor and a general spirit of hopefulness and enthusiasm that is contagious and much needed at this time.

A week ago last Sunday night a chorus of singers from Albemarle came and sang for us in a very splendid way that was much appreciated. A large audience dared face one of the most inclement nights to be present at this good service.

Both circles of the Missionary society will meet at the church Wednesday night of this week for a varied program including devotionals, a chapter from the study book by Mrs. C. L. Koonts, a pageant by a number of the ladies, business features and a social period with refreshments. All are expecting to experience a very profitable and pleasant evening.

We all extend sympathy to Mrs. Younts, one of our number whose husband was called in death last week.

We are glad to note that little Miss Alta Veigh Koonts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Koonts, is out again after a recent illness.

REPORTER.

Asheboro.—The January meeting of the auxiliary was held in the home of Mrs. J. S. Lewis with a good attendance. We were pleased to have Miss Mary Young of High Point college, with us to give a talk on the Young People's Work.

One of the circles serves the Rotary club at noon each week. Last Friday evening the auxiliary had the pleasure of serving a banquet to the stockholders of the Randolph County Building and Loan association, from which we realized a nice profit for local work.

The social room of the church and the Sunday school rooms on the first floor have been made more attractive and very much more comfortable by the addition of a nice wooden floor, over the concrete floor.

Mrs. A. B. Copenhaver and Mrs. G. P. Pritchard were hostesses to the Philathea class at the January business and social meeting. Officers were elected at this time. Mrs. Copenhaver was re-elected teacher.

Mrs. T. F. Lowdermilk, a recent bride, and a member of the class, was given a miscellaneous shower. The gifts were concealed and after searching diligently a large number of useful and beautiful gifts were found. A delicious salad course was served.

Our pastor's subject Sunday morning was, "Folks you can depend on."

The Sunday evening service was in charge of the young people with the Intermediate C. E. society leading. The pastor also gave a short talk to the young people. This was a very interesting and helpful service.

In the pastor's talk he said we should organize, socialize, spiritualize and capitalize our young people in order to hold them. He said they were the greatest asset of the church.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. J. B. Dickens, Eden Auxiliary, Halifax, 25 dresses, 25 pair hose, 1 apron, 1 sweater and 9 pieces of underwear.

Mrs. J. L. Bellamy, Eden Auxiliary, Halifax, 2 dresses, 1 shirt and 1 pair pants.

Mrs. W. T. Newell, Eden Auxiliary, Halifax, 2 dresses and 2 coats.

Mrs. J. B. Dickens, fell upon a novel plan to secure the Thanksgiving Offering from the Eden Auxiliary, Halifax. She bought a large pair of overalls and got the various members to sew a patch on the overalls concealing their gift of money. As a result we have the overalls, and when we had removed the patches, which were not needed on a new pair of overalls, we also had in hand $12.28 in cash as reported above.

We have a short report this week, but we are thankful for those who made it possible.

Sickness in the Home

Mother Dixon and Daddy Dixon have both been shut in with the "flu" for nearly a week. We are just getting up a bit today, Monday, and will get back into the work as soon as we can.

We have six girls and six boys in bed with "flu" today. Being short of workers, and mother and I both being laid-off for the present, we have had to employ one extra worker for the time being. Also our daughter, Vista, has thrown herself into the work without price. "Aunt Mattie Keltz," who is visiting us from Pennsylvania, is also lending a hand in every way she can.

Coal

We have ordered a car load of coal which will be on the yards in High Point about the time you read this. There is no money with which to pay for it. Our faith is in God and in His people. We had to have the coal or permit our children to suffer from the cold. So with a prayer to God for the funds we placed the order.

Making up this report, and writing it has kept me up longer than I have been at any one time, since last Tuesday so I'm tired. Pray for us, and help us in every way you can. Goodbye, and God bless you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. C. W. Bates, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, J. F. Coble.

"EVERY SUBSCRIBER GET ONE MORE"

It has been suggested that we set goals again this year for Herald subscriptions. We are using the basis for last year, which was at the rate of one yearly subscription for each ten members. That is not unreasonable, and ought not to be difficult to reach. If every subscriber will get one, and every pastor will do his part, it can and will be done. Let's get at it, and do it NOW. Who will be first to reach the quota (first column). Come on, let's go!

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

A TRIBUTE OF LOVE

We, the members of the Sunday school of Mount Pleasant M. P. church, North Davidson charge, wish to express our deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McGary in the death of their little girl, Lucille. She was a very bright and sweet child of nine years.

To the bereaved ones we would say, "She is a light in the window of Heaven to lead you on and upward."

"In presence she is gone from among us,
In influence she will ever remain;
For her kind disposition and goodness
Say! She did not live in vain."

We desire a copy of this resolution to be sent to the bereaved family and to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

To Our Father

Our Father in Heaven!
Hallowed Thy name!
Thy glorious goodness
Ever the same!

Thy loving affection,
Constant and true!
Thy wisdom and power
Wondrous things do!

Thy grace and Thy mercy
Bring us release:
They make us e'er joyful,
Fill us with peace.

O Greatness and Goodness,
Strength of our hope!
By Thy help we can with Evil One cope.

O grant us Thy presence,
Give us Thy hand!
And lead us and bring us
To the Blest Land!

Magnifying Superficial Differences

Those who live on the surface are likely to make much—too much—of superficial differences and too little of deep-seated differences. They see a great change in a man when he changes his clothes or turns out a beard. They see a great difference in young people when they turn to new forms of amusement or religious activity. They see a wide difference between two churches if one baptizes by immersion and the other baptizes by pouring. Seeing superficial differences and not seeing deep-seated resemblances, they magnify the former and ignore the latter. Such judgments are unfortunate, for they lead to wrong attitudes and to unwise action. We must know a subject to be prepared to deal with it. We are expected to grow out of the simple-mindedness of childhood and into some depth of discernment. Those who apply their minds aright will do so. Shallow minds are not designed for perpetual use. Thinking, thinking, thinking, through the days and years will be rewarded with some deepness of mind. Shallow-minded people can breathe and live and do much superficial talking, but they would be far more interesting and useful citizens if they would learn how to see more deeply into things.

Laws and Penalties

"Scofflaw" is a term that was made a few years ago to describe those who hold civil laws in contempt. There are such people and the prohibition laws are the ones most heartily despised. But it cannot be truly said that these people hold in contempt the penalties of the laws they despise. They have a wholesome fear of the penalties, and herein lies the hope of the prohibition movement. When the liquorites learn that it is decidedly unsafe to violate the prohibition laws they will begin to have some respect for the laws themselves. And this is the lesson the American people should teach most thoroughly to the scofflaws. They should be impressed with the thought that when the great majority said "No liquor" they meant "No liquor." We must either fight liquor or be subject to its control, and most of us know that we have had enough of its control. The war is on and must be fought to a finish. It may be that we will have to put in the White House a man of the type of Andrew Jackson, but the man will be found if the war goes on long. It is unthinkable that we will surrender to an enemy like liquor.

"Good Preacher, Poor Pastor"

This is a common expression and describes a fact, but we are going to call in question its correctness. It means as ordinarily used that a minister preaches well, but fails in his personal contacts with his parishioners. He serves them well from the pulpit, but fails to serve them well in their homes. A pastor is conceived to be a minister looking after the people outside the church. But does this not narrow the application of the term "pastor"? Is not preaching a pastoral function, one of the most important pastoral functions? The office of a pastor is that of spiritual leadership. Wherever he serves as spiritual leader he is serving as pastor, whether it be in the pulpit or in the field or shop or by the fireside. A minister does not cease to be a preacher when he puts off his Sunday clothes nor become a pastor when he dons his week-day suit. The distinction intended is that between a preacher addressing a congregation and addressing an individual. Some can speak well and with great freedom to a large audience who can hardly summon courage to speak to one person about his relationship to God. Jesus spoke to the multitude sometimes and to one man or one woman sometimes. He was everywhere and all the time the Good Pastor. The so-called "poor pastor" may have a great spiritual influence through his pulpit ministrations, but should not neglect the opportunity to minister to the single soul. The minister should be to all he meets a pastor, a good pastor. This practice will make his pulpit service more acceptable and more effective.

PRESIDENT'S RECOMMENDATIONS

(Note: The Committee on President's Report, recommended that these items be inserted in the Journal, but the Secretary overlooked it. I regret the omission, and am asking the Editor to publish them in the HERALD. C. W. Bates, Sec.)

1. That payments to superannuate fund, as per recommendations of conferences of 1928 and 1929, be continued, and that it count on the special allotments to charges as a stimulus to them to pay in full.

I recommend further that one-half of the total amount thus received be distributed annually to the superannuates and the other half placed to the credit of the permanent superannuate fund.

2. It is the opinion of your executive that the Robert's Fund should be loaned to ministerial students on the same terms as the general educational fund of the church is loaned, viz. that all beneficiaries of this fund be required to take the course at Westminster Theological Seminary unless excused by the trustees of the fund.

I, therefore, suggest that this conference make this recommendation to the trustees of the Roberts Fund. (Not adopted.)

3. I recommend, again, a definite financial allotment for every member of the church. It will no doubt require time and patience to work up to this good end, but it is certainly worth trying, both from the standpoint of increased receipts, and training in Christian stewardship. Our membership will respond to this in proportion as they believe the church is in earnest about it. Of course tact will have to be employed; but it is difficult to believe that we have exhausted our genius in this matter, as long as large numbers do not make any contribution to the church, and do not have their financial obligations measured in any definite amount.

4. It is noticeable to all of us, I am sure, that we have come to measure our church programs in terms of goals. Whether this is best or not, it is the present practice of the church. The result is that our people plan their work in terms of their goals. If they feel that their goals are within their reach, they strive to attain them. On the other hand, if they think that their goals are beyond them, their efforts are weak, and the results poor.

I am venturing to suggest another goal—a hard one, perhaps, but seemingly worthy and attainable. This is it: ONE HUNDRED PER CENT CHURCHES IN DEFINITE FINANCIAL ALLOTMENTS AND PAYMENTS. That is, every member given some definite financial allotment, and every member paying some amount, whether his definite allotment or not.

I recommend further that all such churches be given honor roll recognition in the conference Journal.

5. That Sunday Schools and churches that pay monthly to the Children's Home be listed in the conference Journal.

6. That we continue the plan of financing the Conference Council of Religious Education through offerings made by Sunday Schools and C. E. Societies. That allotments to the schools and societies be made by the Budget Council and published along with other allotments. And further that the conference make up out of the budget what this offering lacks of amounting to $500.

7. That Rev. N. M. Harrison be loaned to High Point College and the Conference Council of Religious Education, for field work, and that his office be that of Promotional Secretary for High Point College and Conference Council of Religious Education. I recommend further that he work under the direction of the college and council, and that his salary be fixed by these two agencies, and paid by them.

If this recommendation is accepted by the conference, I recommend that the amount in section 6, be increased to $800.

8. That we continue to lay on the district an apportionment of $4,000 for superannuates, and that we keep our goal of $500 as the minimum annual payment to each superannuate.

9. That Harris Chapel be sold. This is one of the churches that belonged to the LaGrange charge. The charge no longer exists, and this church has long since been extinct.

10. That Pleasant Grove church near Morganton be investigated, and the work there revived, if possible. If not, that the church property be sold. This is also an extinct church that belonged at one time to Caldwell charge.

11. That Crooked Run church site in Stokes County be investigated and sold, if the property belongs to the conference.

12. That provision be made by the conference for carrying the debt on the district parsonage in High Point, and recent repairs made on the Tate Street property in Greensboro.

13. Dr. Straughn will submit a uniform conference report blank to this conference: I recommend that we concur in his recommendations as far as possible.

14. That the Pastors' Summer Conference be supported out of the budget to the amount of $100, if it is needed.

15. That April be designated Stewardship and Pay-up month.

16. That the Third Sunday in May be continued as High Point College Day, and that the college be asked to prepare a suitable program for the observance of the day.

17. That the Second Sunday in June be Men-for-the-Ministry Sunday.

18. That the second Sunday in October be Annual Conference Day and Pay-up Day.

19. That pastors seek to enroll tithers in all of their churches throughout the year, and that during the month of October all of our people be urged to tithe, and to give the amount for salary and other local expenses, and for the budgets.

20. That the remainder of the Gratitude Gift Deficit be allotted to charges that did not pay their quotas last year.

21. That Dollar-a-Member be discontinued, and that the $20,000 agreed upon last year as an annual amount to be raised for High Point College Maintenance, be apportioned to the charges.

22. That Conference districts be left as they were last year; provided, however, that changes may be made in some instances where a different grouping would facilitate the work.

—It is good to read of new churches and Sunday School rooms being built here and there. Some of the people have a mind to work.

TO SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES IN CONGRESS

(AN OPEN LETTER)

Esteemed Sirs:

If you should suddenly learn that some eighteen million subjects of a foreign sovereign reside in the United States, you would probably be surprised. Should investigation disclose that their foreign allegiance has been so veiled that our Government is granting them all the rights and privileges of citizenship, you would likely be astounded. If it should finally be revealed that many of them hold high public office in our state and federal governments, some sitting beside you in the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States with legislative power equal to your own, you would recognize the urgent necessity of corrective action.

Unbelievable as it may appear, this condition is not merely hypothetical. It actually exists in this country today. Eighteen million people whose first allegiance is to a sovereign potentate in Europe are enjoying the full prerogatives of American citizenship. The law of that potentate commands their implicit obedience in the many points wherein it conflicts with the laws of the United States and the respective states.

It is solely because the legal status of their foreign ruler has been so generally misapprehended that this anomalous situation has been permitted to grow up in our midst. The allegiance of his subjects has been represented as purely of a spiritual nature. On the contrary it is essentially civil and political.

The ruler referred to is the Pope. His subjects in this country are the hierarchy and membership of the Roman Catholic church. With any spiritual relations between him and them, this letter is not concerned. The writer discriminates against no man on account of his religion. The status of the Pope to be considered is entirely outside the pale of spiritual matters. Only the legal and political aspects are involved here. "Let facts be submitted to a candid world:"

1. The Pope now has diplomatic relations with thirty-nine of the civil governments of the world.

2. He is accustomed to make treaties with the civil powers. Dozens of such pacts are now in full force and effect.

3. He deposes rulers and sets aside the constitutions of sovereign states, at will.

4. He has enacted and developed the canon law, which is one of the three judicial systems administered in Europe and America.

5. He occupies a great bronze throne identical in every essential with those of emperors and kings.

6. He wears a gold crown which differs from those of other crowned rulers chiefly in being three-storied to attest his pre-eminence.

7. His law emphatically condemns our public schools and is so enforced here as to prohibit more than 2,500,000 pupils from attending them.

8. The four cardinals occupying thrones under his authority in this country are members of his court in Vatican City, are designated as "princes of the blood" and entitled to rank with royalty.

9. The canon law vests in him ultimate title to all ecclesiastical property, so that he is by far the wealthiest individual in the world.

10. A complete judiciary is attached to the throne of each of the hundred members of his hierarchy in the United States.

11. He maintains in this country a political organization that for efficiency and power is not rivalled by either of our two major parties.

12. His three hundred periodicals with a circulation in excess of seven million subscribers constantly attack our public schools, our immigration laws, prohibition and the federal Constitution.

It is no accident that this situation is very widely misunderstood. Every proposal to discuss it openly is rebuffed by the misapplied taunt of religious "bigotry." Most Roman Catholic laymen have no adequate realization themselves of the futile attempt they are making to render civil allegiance to two distinct sovereign authorities. They are forbidden by canon law to hear the situation discussed.

The antidote suggested here for the cure of this malignant national ailment is so prescribed as to avoid the possibility of interference with legitimate religious rights. But it will terminate the maintenance here by alien authority of political institutions and aggressions and insure to our Government the undivided loyalty of every American citizen.

With the sincere conviction that it ought to be embodied in the supreme law of the land, the following suggested amendment to the Constitution is respectfully submitted:

No person shall be a citizen of the United States who, being within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction, acknowledges the authority or is subject to the law of any foreign government, prince, potentate or sovereignty which claims or exercises the right of active or passive legislation; or which makes treaties, pacts, covenants or agreements with civil powers; or which engages in activities, functions or prerogatives belonging to sovereign states in virtue of their sovereignty; or which claims or exercises legislative, executive or judicial control of matters subject to legislative, executive or judicial control by the United States or by the states.

What valid objection could be offered to the adoption of this proposal? Who could oppose it without tacit admission that its provisions apply adversely to him? Would not a great majority of the American people favor enactment of substantially this provision if its purpose and importance were fully and freely elucidated? Will you introduce and support a joint resolution submitting it to the states for ratification as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States?

GILBERT O. NATIONS,

(Lecturer in Roman Law, Canon Law and Legal History in the American University.)

This, for instance: "The Church is all that lifts us from the coarse and selfish mob; but the Church that is to prosper, needs the layman on the job. EVANGELISM

"Thy Kingdom Come"

Vance

February 1, Sunday.—It was my pleasure to be with Brother Braxton and three of the churches of this charge on this date. Upon our arrival at New Hope for the morning service we were grieved to learn of the death of Brother Hugh Wilson, which occurred that morning at 5 o'clock. He had been sick a week of flu-pneumonia. Brother Wilson was a member of New Hope church, and a good man. His surviving widow has our deepest sympathy. We arrived here in time for Sunday School, and joined the small group in a study of the lesson, with Pastor Braxton as teacher. The congregation grew for the 11 o'clock service. We enjoyed the worship with them, and preaching at this time. Our membership here is not large, but faithful, and has in it some of the most influential folks of the community. The church will continue to render helpful service, both locally and in the conference.

In the afternoon we were at Flat Rock. This is one of the strongest churches on the charge, and is located in a splendid community. Several were present, though the attendance was not large. In the recent passing of Brother Hunter Satterwhite, Brother Eugene White, and Sister S. W. Revis, this church has suffered the loss of three valuable members. Brother John Revis is the only surviving member of the original builders of the church. He is still active and faithful, though more than eighty years old. We enjoyed the fellowship with this congregation.

The night service was at Spring Valley. We arrived in time for the C. E. Society—a joint organization between Flat Rock and this church. The society was observing the fiftieth anniversary of Christian Endeavor. It has been many a day since we have seen a better prepared and better executed C. E. program. The largest attendance of the day was at this place. Our visit carried us back fifteen years when we first began working with this congregation as their pastor. Our sense of gratification was greatly stirred by the marked improvements that have been made by this little group during these fifteen years. Brother Lonnie Harris, of sainted memory, started the church by gathering a few children of the community together and holding Sunday School under a large oak tree. From this small beginning has grown a church that is a spiritual force in this community, and a contributing factor to every conference and denominational program. This is one of the few churches that has every honor roll recognition that the conference provided last year. It was a pleasure to us to be with them and to speak in this service and to fellowship with the people. We were glad also to find in this service friends from other communities, whom we learned to know in other years, and to highly esteem. It was a great pleasure to us to be with each of these churches and to share with Brother Braxton and his people in the work of this day.

We noted with what care and completeness the pastor had prepared the worship programs for these services. And we also noticed with what readiness and ease the people entered into the worship. This is telling and important work; we urge it upon all of our pastors. Brother Braxton has the full co-operation of his people, and he is hopeful of a good year. We are grateful to him and to all others who were so thoughtful for our care and comfort during this visit.

Eastern Pastors' Federation

This meeting was held in Littleton on Monday, February 2, and all the pastors in this federation, except one, were present. Dr. T. M. Johnson, the chairman of the Federation, was in charge of the meeting. Brother H. S. B. Thompson conducted the opening worship. An interesting and profitable feature of the morning hour was a survey by each pastor of his charge. Not a pessimistic note was sounded. The reports revealed problems on all the charges, as was to be expected. But these pastors were not deterred by these problems; neither are their people. The predominant spirit was one of courage and hope. Following this was our presentation of conference plans and programs. The interest and the response here, both by the pastors and the members of the various charges present, was earnest and heartening. A spirit of readiness to co-operate with all conference purposes was unmistakable. In the afternoon, Rev. N. M. Harrison presented his work—first the College and then the Young People's work, known as Conference Council of Religious Education. We are gradually becoming accustomed to this new designation, though it is a little hard to get away from the old. But Brother Harrison will soon familiarize us with it. He is full of his work, and is putting on a very fine program, both for the College and the Council. Two Conference Councils were organized for this district, with centers at Aurelian Springs and Spring church. These committees will promote college matters and training schools around these centers. Brother Harrison made a fine impression at this meeting on behalf of the work that he is doing. Brother Spencer thought that this meeting was very much like an annual conference in the length of the session. We began at 10:30, and adjourned at 3:00, with no intermission for dinner. Dr. Johnson was re-elected chairman of this Federation, and Brother Spencer secretary.

We enjoyed this occasion very much, and we believe that every one left the meeting, feeling that we had spent a very profitable day. It is our purpose to go back to this section later, when we can have more time there.

Sickness

Brother Carroll writes today that he has been in bed three weeks with an attack of flu. Regret that we did not know it sooner. Mrs. J. N. Garrett, widow of Rev. J. N. Garrett, is in very poor health; Mrs. D. M. Loy is seriously sick in Watts hospital, Durham; Dr. and Mrs. Dixon are just recovering from flu, and so are a number of the children at the Home; others there are still sick, though the number is diminishing. All of these will have our sympathy and our prayers.

Goals

The HERALD last week carried our list of 27. One pastor said that he read them to his congregations Sunday. Perhaps other pastors have found them worthy of that; and may be still others will.

Just now we wish to call attention to No. 3—"A Prayer League of 1,000 Volunteers." We trust that pastors will present this to their congregations and give the people an opportunity to enroll with them. When the names are secured, I want the list for my files. No publicity will be given to the list. I do not want it for that purpose. But I do want to know that 1,000 persons in the conference are willing to enroll their names in a prayer league. I want it to be purely a voluntary matter on their part. That is to say, I do not want pressure brought to bear in order to get these names. I want the people to do it of their own accord,—just because they have it in their hearts, and want to do it. When pastors present the matter, I trust that they will emphasize that side of it. But surely there are a thousand of our people who will be ready to join this league when once they are given the chance! For what are they to pray? For the special blessings of God upon our conference during this year. We have a great work to do; through prayer, strength will be supplied for this work. We have perplexing problems to solve; we are confronted by perplexing problems, both local and as a conference; prayer is a way by which solutions can be found for these problems. "Prayer changes things." Is it too much to hope that this league may be completed very promptly—during February, say. Let us do it in that time.

Young People's Day

We are pleased that a number of pastors have observed this day, and that others are planning for it. It is not too late yet to put it on. Put it in the hands of your young people and let them arrange the program for some Sunday in February. Brother Gibbs will send the program for the asking. Churches will find it very worthwhile to do this. And please let the offering go promptly to Dr. Brown, and take credit for it on your N. C. S. budget.

A Pleasing and Hopeful Spirit

"Optimism." This is the way one pastor begins his report for the first quarter. He uses this word to indicate the attitude of the people of his charge. There seems to be prevailing throughout the conference a most pleasing and hopeful spirit. Pastors and people alike are adjusting themselves to the new economic conditions, and are settling down to their church work with the feeling that it must go on, and with the confidence, too, that the same God who has brought us through other hard and trying times is with us still. That is sufficient; and in that hope and that confidence we are going forward with our work.

"They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which can not be removed, but abideth forever."

SOMEBODY ELSE

Who's Somebody Else? I should like to know.

Does he live at the North or the South?

Or is it a lady fair to see

Whose name is in every mouth?

For Meg says, "Somebody Else will sing;"

Or, "Somebody Else can play."

And Jack says: "Please let Somebody Else

Do some of the errands today."

Is there any hard or unpleasant task

Or difficult thing to do,

'Tis always offered to Somebody Else—

Now, isn't this very true?

But if some fruit or a pleasant trip

Is offered to Dick or Jess,

We hear not a word of Somebody Else.

Why? I will leave you to guess.

The words of cheer for a stranger lad

This Somebody Else will speak,

And the poor and helpless who need a friend

Good Somebody Else must seek.

The cup of cold water in Jesus' Name,

Oh, Somebody Else will offer;

And words of love for a broken heart

Brave Somebody Else will proffer.

There are battles in life we only can fight,

And victories, too, to win;

And somebody Else cannot take our place

When we shall have "entered in."

But if Somebody Else has done his work

While we for ease have striven,

'Twill only be fair if the blessed reward

To Somebody Else is given.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S ESTIMATE OF WASHINGTON

"Washington's is the mightiest name of earth—long since mightiest in the cause of civil liberty; still mightiest in moral reformation. On that name no eulogy is expected. It cannot be. To add brightness to the sun, or glory to the name of Washington, is alike impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe we pronounce the name, and in its naked deathless splendor leave it shining on."

HOLLAND'S DIAMONDS

A Little Country With No Idle, No Slums, and Few Very Rich

The only European country not greatly disturbed by the tariff is Holland. Diamonds are her great industry. Previously the United States collected a heavy tariff on them; now it is cut to ten per cent. A Dutch business man said that the United States would make money by the cut since the old rate led to so much smuggling. Ninety-five per cent. of Holland's diamonds go to the United States, and the business is carried on almost wholly by the Jews, of whom there are 70,000 living in the Netherlands. America's late minister, Gerrit John Diekema, who died December 20, was of Dutch descent, his father having been born in Holland. Mr. Diekema was fully posted about conditions and during my visit to Holland a few months ago granted me two interviews. He said, in part:

"The war put Holland between the devil and the deep sea. Germany criticized if the Dutch did one thing and Great Britain if they did the other. Three hundred of the fishermen near the Hague were killed by floating mines while out trying to get something to eat.

"The wealthiest families were reduced to one fire in their houses. The country has a wise foreign minister and he kept the nation out of war and from making bitter enemies. The people, therefore, were not debilitated by the war and were ready to help feed the hungry Europeans when the war was over. They have no idle folks, no slums, and not many who are very rich. A few counts and barons inherit titles, but outside of that there are no titled classes or entailed estates. The country's agricultural products are valued at $480,000,000 a year; of these, $200,000,000 worth are exported. The Dutch do a large business with their foreign possessions.

Holland has only 7,000,000 inhabitants, but she rules 63,000,000 others. She has practically no trouble with her dependencies. That is probably because the Dutch have a very keen sense of justice and then grant the largest possible liberty to those they govern. In fact, Holland claims much credit for helping the United States formulate its plan of government. The Pilgrim Fathers sailed from Delft in Holland and carried with them many ideals of liberty. The Dutch have two houses for legislation like our Senate and House.

"I visited Holland several years before coming here as minister," continued Mr. Diekema, "and was startled by the drunkenness I saw. It seems to have disappeared. A burgomaster recently told me that many liquor-selling places were giving up their licenses. This sobering up is traceable to three causes. First, one in three of the 7,000,000 people owns a bicycle. The level roads make it possible to do much touring. Young couples as well as groups of the same sex take long excursions into the country instead of sitting around and drinking. Second, closely related to this is the increased emphasis on outdoor sports. It attracts spectators away from drinking places. Then, too, youth aspires to succeed in these sports and is warned that it cannot do so unless it leaves all alcohol alone. Third, the union labor organizations are doing all in their power to discourage the use of alcoholic drinks.

"The people of Holland go to church. I have found it necessary to stand through the whole service. The unheated, bare, and unattractive auditoriums that resulted as a protest to the old-time Roman Catholic forms and adornments do not make it easy to attend. The people sing Psalms and listen to a one-hour sermon cut into three separate parts by the singing of Psalms. Four collections are taken at every service. Two are taken even at a church wedding.

"The social legislation is the finest known. Employees and employers alike contribute to an old-age and non-employment insurance fund that provides an old-age pension at sixty-five and many other benefits. It was supposed that it would finance itself, but last year the Government had to make up a deficiency of 5,000,000 guilders (about $2,000,000). They have an excellent school system, which permits a very complete course in religious education. The people of Holland are very friendly to the United States. They make no automobiles of their own. They also purchase vast quantities of farm machinery from us. They are gratified over the reduction in the tariff on diamonds but are exercised over the fact that the duty has been greatly increased on bulbs, which they export to us in large quantities. While Holland is a free-trade country, it does have a tax on sugar so that the growing of sugar beets can be profitable."

An automobile tour from one end of Holland to the other leads to a few crisp observations. The auto roads, unlike those in Germany, which run as a snake might crawl, go straight as a crow flies. It was easy to travel sixty miles an hour. It startled one to see that the canals ran along twelve feet above the fields filled with sleek cows turning luscious grass into rich milk that was to become nourishing butter and cheese. Pigs wander about the fields with cattle, but seem, like them, to need no more fence than the four-or five-foot streams that divide the fields. Pork lacks the strong taste it acquires in the fenced-up swine of America, and it is therefore hard to distinguish it from veal.

The old Dutch windmill, which was once necessary to pump the water from the fields into the canal streams, is no longer needed, though a few still grind wheat. The water is led from the smaller streams by scientifically constructed locks into the elevated canals, so that pumps and other artificial methods to raise it are no longer required. Few buildings except in the cities run over two stories high, as the land is so saturated with water that, until late engineering methods were known, taller buildings could not be constructed. The old city hall in Amsterdam, which Napoleon turned into a palace when he installed his brother as king of Holland and which is still one of the Queen's residences, stands on thousands of driven piles. Rotterdam is, however, now constructing a twelve-story skyscraper, while all the cities are erecting taller structures.

The houses are small and are painted in bright colors. Each door has a little peep-window in it so that callers can be inspected before being admitted. The people are gradually discarding wooden shoes, which we had not seen since leaving France, and buying American-style footwear. They are also buying and imitating a great many other of our articles of clothing.

In Holland, the inhabitants are happy and contented, prosperous enough to supply necessities, and active; never lazy, though cautious and slow-moving. Business is gradually catching the American fever and combining into chains and large corporations. Two of the greatest corporations in the world are controlled by Dutchmen. One combine directs the oleomargarin business of all Europe as well as most of the soap business and has now combined with Proctor & Gamble and Lever Brothers in the United States. The directing head of "Shell" gasoline, though knighted and living in England, is nevertheless a subject of the Dutch Government. The large department store idea is growing. One firm with German capital, after starting out new with a large building in two Dutch cities, is now erecting an immense building in Rotterdam, covering a whole city square, and surmounted by a great tower, and will open soon with a huge staff, though it has never previously done business in that city.

The citizens of the Hague, where the Queen and her cabinet live, though the capital is Amsterdam, show the impressive and appropriately constructed Carnegie Peace Palace, where sits the International Board of Arbitration as well as the World Court, one of whose judges comes from the United States, though we are not a member of the League of Nations. The inside walls, statues, and furnishings are gifts of various nations. One of the most beautiful and best-kept gardens in the world forms the setting for the building. Crowds of visitors from all nations visit the Peace Palace daily, and the influence of the United States is thus greatly augmented by its presence there.—Christian F. Reisner in Zion's Herald.

ARE WE GROWING BETTER?

Sometimes we wonder if we are deceiving ourselves by believing that the world is growing better and better every day. It is so easy for us to be optimistic in the face of the most formidable trouble. It is possible for a man to sit and whistle in his tent at night when shaking with fear, hoping to frighten the ghosts away. There are many things in this country making a large contribution to pessimism. The reason they do not do so is that pessimism is out of style. The pessimist is scorned, discredited, and altogether undesired. This is the reason why we will go on with social, economic, and religious conditions, carrying the greatest possible amount of distress without saying a word. Men do not want to hear it. They dislike the pessimist. Old Jeremiah nauseates his audience; therefore, dispose of him if he persists in crying out against the social or religious order.

About nine persons out of ten, possibly ninety-nine out of a hundred, believe that the United States has attained its evil reputation as a lawless nation during the past decade of prohibition.

We are shocked by the record of 12,000 murders per year in the United States. In proportion to our population, this number is said to be the greatest in the civilized world. We should be ashamed and chagrined by the humiliating horror of it! But we should not allow those who have selfish interests to serve to lead us to believe that murders would be reduced, and that the bloody stain would be wiped from our national escutcheon by a return of the legalized liquor traffic.

In 1895, when the population of the nation was 71,000,000, and when the legalized traffic flourished, the record stood at 10,500 murders. There were, therefore, almost exactly fifteen murders per 100,000 of the nation's population. The World Almanac for 1930 places our annual murder rate at 12,000, with a population of 120,000,000, or ten murders per 100,000. That is exactly fifty per cent less murders per 100,000 population than in 1895 in those "good old" license days. Otherwise stated, if the murder rate of 1895 prevailed now, there would be 18,000 murders annually, or 6,000 more than the record shows. One may credit this to prohibition or not, but the fact is undisputable.

Again, it is probable that blah and balderdash of propaganda has convicted America that Chicago is becoming a hot-bed of crime and violence. The Chicago Crime Commission reports a steady decrease in crimes of violence, in spite of the fact that the city has gained well over a million in population during the past decade. In 1919 Chicago reported 6,108 burglaries, and in 1926, the last report before me, the number had dwindled to 897. In no year since 1919 has the number reached 6,000; in no year since 1920 has it reached 5,000, and in no year since 1923 has it reached 3,000. In other words, it has steadily decreased, and the record for 1919 was almost seven times that of 1926.

The robberies in Chicago in 1919 totaled 2,912. In 1922 the number was down to 2,007, and never reached 2,000 thereafter, and it stood at 1,298 in 1926.

New York is called the wettest city in America. The World Almanac, published by the New York World, perhaps the wettest newspaper on earth (with one deplorable exception), carries official figures which show that arrests for drunkenness for the first three years of this century 1901, 1902 and 1903, averaged 44,268 annually, while for the last three years for which the record is available, 1926, 1927 and 1928, the average was 12,560. If population were taken into consideration, arrests were more than four times greater under license than under prohibition. Credit prohibition or not, the fact remains that the blatant blab of persistent and pernicious propaganda is for the purpose of misinforming and misleading the public into false belief that evil conditions have become intolerable, in the face of the fact that under prohibition the improvement has been almost incredible.

These statements are not very assuring. They may discourage some. They may please others. Let us not forget that, after all, we are not living in a world that will improve itself without the assistance of the strongest-resolution on the part of its best citizens.—The Way of Faith.

OUR STORY PAGE

IN THE LION'S CAGE

"Hold on, Bowyer, don't go yet, it's early. Besides, I think there's something doing, eh, Champe?"

"Why, certainly," answered the young collegian to whom this appeal was made, "certainly; I can't say much for our present tripple, but it will save our manners, at any rate."

While Champe was speaking he rolled off the window ledge where he had been sitting, and hastily unlocked a small cupboard over the mantle piece; from it he brought out a rather suspicious looking bottle, and, with a little more diving, a plate of crackers and a pineapple cheese; then several dusty glasses.

"There you are, boys," he said, putting the things on their study table; "not much of a spread, you see, 'a poor thing, sir, but mine own.' Draw up a chair, Bowyer, and as they say in the mountains, 'make a long arm.'"

Wilfred Bowyer had been in college only a week or two and this was the first time he had been asked to do anything contrary to his home training. That training he (and his sister Jessie) had received from Grandmother Bowyer, having been left orphans in her care when they were small children. In Grandmother Bowyer's house the boy had never seen a bottle of wine, nor had he ever tasted it.

Some contend that this is a danger to a boy; that it leaves him too ignorant of what intoxicating drink is. I am not going to argue the question, for my business just now is to tell a story. But it is part of my story to say that the sight of the bottle stirred in Wilfred a certain distrust, and, I might almost say, disgust.

Is that—or is it not—a pretty safe feeling for a boy to have towards such a bottle?

And yet this invitation had come in a very different form from what Wilfred had expected. He had thought to meet gay, noisy fellows, who would show the effects of drinking themselves, and who would boisterously insist upon his going to some saloon or place of carousal with them. This imagined temptation the young collegian was prepared stoutly to resist.

But Champe and Arnold were fine fellows, good students, with an excellent stand in class and out of it. Wilfred felt sure they were not what is called drinking men; and they seemed to be a mere form of hospitality. Surely it was not his business to set himself up as a critic of their customs.

These thoughts passed so rapidly through his mind that no hesitation was seen in his manner of accepting his comrade's invitation. Wilfred drank one small glass of wine with accompaniments of crackers and cheese, and the others did the same; a more innocent bit of indulgence, apparently, could not well be found.

And yet Wilfred had stood at that moment at the parting of the ways. He did not know it; his good-natured entertainers certainly did not; and, ah, that is the reason we need the dawn of every day, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil;" we do not recognize danger when it comes.

Arnold and Champe were not dissipated; they were hearty, healthy, sound young fellows; but they had never had their eyes opened to the danger that there is for everybody in the drinking habit; to the certainty of harm there is in it for the large majority of drinkers. So far, they had never wanted to drink too much; and they scorned all coarse or low dissipation.

More than this, they respected any man who refused, from principle, to drink. True, they allowed themselves to jeer a little at what they called the "We-C-To-Us!" And they always had a jest ready for those of their companions who were "teetotal," but it was perfectly respectful and good natured raillery, not at all hard to stand; in other words, these lads were gentlemen.

If Wilfred had said that night, however awkwardly, that he would have to be excused, as he did not take anything, the bottle would have been clapped back into the cupboard, and the affair would have been passed off with some merry quip. Moreover, Wilfred's position as an abstainer would have been established as an abstainer from that hour, and these very lads would have helped him to maintain it, by expecting him to stick up to his principles.

Alas, alas! that wrong-doing should be so easy to slip into! Having taken that first glass naturally, as if it were with him also a matter of course, Wilfred was now in that class, and he found it a constantly occurring event, that he should be asked to drink in a friendly and respectable way.

"Grandmother was all wrong about this," Wilfred began to say to himself; "women don't understand these things. The only sort of drinking she knows about is drinking to excess, and that, no doubt, is quite as bad as she think it is, or perhaps worse. But I see now that gentlemen can take a glass of wine in a friendly way, and no more harm come of it than if it were lemonade."

Naturally, Wilfred now began to extend to others the same hospitality that he received from them. He drank a little oftener, and a little more at a time, as months went by; but the term ended and the young freshman went back home without having ever been what you could call drunk, though he had sometimes felt that he had taken a little too much.

And his homefolks? Wilfred was much too frank to conceal his changed views and habits, even while he was at college; and many a heart-breaking hour had Jessie spent with her head in grandmother's lap, weeping over this beloved brother's danger.

But the old grandmother was wise. "We must not nag him, Jessie," she said, "he is not ready to listen to us now. We can only pray for him, that the Angel of the covenant would bless and protect the lad." But there came to the grandmother a sudden thought of one who might help her. "And I believe he would," she said to herself, "I believe he would be willing to do it."

After Wilfred had been at home for a few days, he owed to himself that he missed his glass of wine. It vexed him to find it so. He had not expected it. He was quite sure the habit had gained no hold on him; nevertheless, he felt cross and unstrung, at times, and he distinctly wished for the pleasing glow and invigoration of the stimulant.

Sometimes he was strongly inclined to seek it; but there was no place for Mrs. Bowyer's grandson to gratify this taste, except in the saloon, and Wilfred knew that the grandmother would consider it a disgrace for him to be seen drinking at a public bar. So he frequented the soda fountain, drank coca-colas every day, and whatever else of that character he could get, smoked cigarettes, and tried to reason down the uncomfortable suggestions of reason and conscience.

He was just in the mood to have defended his new views vehemently and with asperity, but neither Jessie nor his grandmother spoke to him on the subject, though he made frequent allusions to it, as if daring them out into the open. But their silence, their lowered glances, and the occasional tears that Jessie found it difficult to hide, were eloquent of the sorrow he was giving them, and Wilfred was far from a happy youth.

"Son, I have an errand for you," Grandmother Bowyer said one evening, as they were having an early tea on the side porch. "Old Joshua Wicks asked me to send him a loaf of home-made bread; he made some pretence of liking mine specially, but I fancy Joshua hasn't an abundant supply of anybody's bread."

Wilfred gave a start that made him realize how often old Joshua had been in his thoughts before his grandmother spoke; for Joshua, however little bread he might have, was never without something to drink, and many a time, during the past weeks, the young collegian had had to resist the inclination to go to Joshua's. He did not resist now, but accepted eagerly, and set off before it was dark.

"I feel as if I had been guilty of deceit to my boy," the old lady said to herself; and leaving Jessie with some young empanions who had dropped in, she went up to her own room, and to her knees, to remind her covenant keeping God of his promises to children's children.

Meantime, Wilfred found the old man sitting in his doorway, a picture of hopeless poverty and dejection. He gave him the grandmother's loaf, and added, in a jocular tone, that something was needed to wash it down, producing at the same time a piece of silver.

But he was not prepared for old Joshua's reception of the suggestion:

"Mr. Will, do you mean to tell me that you are at the cursed drink?" the old man asked, turning his bleared eyes mournfully upon the boy.

No, Wilfred had not intended to tell him any such thing; but being perfectly truthful, and not knowing how to parry Joshua's plain questions, he had soon confessed his new habits.

"Well, I tell you plain, sir," said old Joshua, "that you are a goner; you might much better go down there to the circus (the gaudy tent could be seen from the old man's cabin) and climb right in 'mongst them lions. Lions! I should say so! You'd stand some chance. Folks might pull you out, for one thing; or you might get a grip on them somewhars; or they may be old fellows with their teeth drawn, some folks say so.

"But don't think it 'bout this here wild beast of drink that is roarin' in my ears this minute, that is devourin' me, body and soul, inch by inch. No, Mr. Will, if you're fairly inside that lion's cage—good-bye! Frien's can't do nothin' fer you; ain't I had frien's? You can't do nothin' fer yo'self, what's worse? They do say Almighty God can help you, but even He can't 'thout you're willin', and the drink won't let you be willin'."

This was no maudlin raving; Joshua knew the boy was coming and had fought off his thirst that he might fulfill his promise to one who never failed to be-friend him, drunk or sober, and he was terribly in earnest.

Darkness fell upon them, and the glorious worlds of light blazed out in the vaulted space above, while Wilfred stood spellbound, listening to a story of bitter struggle, of vain effort, of heart-rending suffering, of shameful, hopeless defeat.

Only once did he interrupt the old man's hot words, by a faint protest of "moderation in his drinking."

"One glass, you say—two glasses!" shouted Joshua, "you fool, does a body begin any other way?"

When at last Wilfred turned back to his grandmother's home it was with a painful memory that would never leave him, of what drink had done for this poor ruined life. But the prayers of two loving hearts were already answered, for the boy was praying for himself, as he walked home under the stars, praying in the words of his boyhood's psalm—"O God, help me to tread upon the lion and the adder, the young lion and the dragon—Oh help me to trample them under foot!"—Elizabeth Preston Allan, in East and West.

I WON'T LET GO

I want to let go, but I WON'T let go.
There are battles to fight
By day and by night for God and the right,
And I'll never let go.

I want to let go, but I WON'T let go.
I'm sick, 'tis true,
Worried and blue—worn through and through
But I won't let go.

I want to let go, but I WON'T let go.
I will NEVER yield! What?
Lie down on the field and surrender my shield?
No! I'll NEVER let go.

I want to let go, but I WON'T let go.
May this be my song against legions of wrong.
O God, keep me strong.
That I may NEVER let go.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By J. T. BOWMAN

President High Point College C. E. Society

FEB. 15: WHAT IS IMPLIED IN "THE CHURCH AS A FAMILY?"

Scripture Text: Eph. 3:14-19; Gal. 3:26-29; Rom. 8:14-17.

Daily Bible Readings

Monday: Brotherhood. I Pet. 2:17.

Tuesday: Co-operation. I Cor. 12:12-21.

Wednesday: Mutual helpfulness. I John 3:16-18.

Thursday: Unity in diversity. I Cor. 12:1-6.

Friday: Care of the little ones. Matt. 19:13-15.

Saturday: Care of the weak. Rom. 15:1-6.

To the Leader

The family is no place for selfishness but there we should learn to be considerate of others. The great family, the household of faith, has the set task of winning mankind to the service and worship of God. Christians in this world are in the spiritual family and under a Father's care and training. If we are corrected we should understand that it is for our good and that we are to benefit by it. May we learn to let love overcome our differences.

For Discussion

1. What is the real basis or occasion for the intimacy and affection enjoyed in family life?

2. How far can the tenderness and intimacy of the family be carried into the church relation so as to reproduce there the kindly spirit of family life?

3. Is the Sunday service in your church today thought of as a family worship service?

4. What is there in the church life that corresponds with the meeting of the family at meal time?

5. How many things do the old and young of your church do together?

6. What is the Christian's inheritance that he has by virtue of having been adopted into the family of God? (Read I John 3: 1, 2).

For Debate

If you wish a debate you might discuss the following question: Resolved, That the church falls short in her work of cultivating a family feeling among the members.

Poetry

LOVE THAT MISLED

She loved him so, she could not bear

To see him do one foolish thing;

A careless act was pain to her,

A fault would set her shuddering

And scolding, when she wished to weep;

She thought that way his love to keep.

O'er trifles others noticed not

She grieved and fretted night and day.

Each tiny speck became a blot,

Each flaw a thing to rub away.

He took her censure for disdain

And never guessed 'twas born of pain.

"Nag! Nag!" he cried, "That's all you do,

My faults are all you ever see!

From such a scolding dame as you

"I'll ask the courts to set me free!"

She lost him, but he doesn't know

It was because she loved him so.

MISSIONARY DECLINE

The Southern Presbyterians have been compelled to reduce their missionary force by recalling 88 missionaries and native workers.
The Southern Methodists have recalled 200 of their missionaries and dismissed hundreds of their native workers. Other churches have had to retrench their missionary work. Is this retrenchment due to financial depression or to lack of interest in missionary work? Too many church people, in times of depression, neglect their religious obligations both at home and abroad and withhold from the church what justly belongs to God.—Christian Sun.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

DOORS, KNOCKS AND A LOCK

There is a deep-seated faith in the human heart in the riches of the universe. In both children and adults this faith is found. It is present in the burglar and in the millionaire.

"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."

Ask whom, for what, and what shall be given us? Seek for what, where, and what shall we find? and when knock, where, how, and shall we find what we expect when it is opened?

"Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask me anything in any name, that will I do."

Here is a door to incalculable riches. On it is a combination lock. Our entering this door and enjoying the riches depends on whether we understand the combination.

What is asking in Jesus' name? James wrote to some, "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may spend it in your pleasures." Evidently they had mistaken the combination.

But what is asking? Occasionally we read,
"And Jesus answered," when there is record neither of question nor request. There is asking that is not vocal, and asking is more than words.

The combination lock that guards the rich store is further complicated. "Ye . . . ask."
"Ye" is plural. Many individuals have asked and received their requests. But the treasure-house is open wide "if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask."

HERE AND THERE

UNCLE ISAAC'S COURTSHIP

Uncle Isaac went a-hunting
For to catch a wife,
And had the greatest race
In all his blooming life.

Widow Simkins saw him coming,
Rushed to top of house,
And there she sat as still
As little frightened mouse.

Maiden Jennie Horner wouldn't Hear his honeyed speech:
When he essayed to talk,
Then she'd emit a screech.

Mrs. Mary Bolingbroker
Rushed to cyclone pit,
Lest she be borne away
By storm of Isaac's wit.

Mollie Barber dashed to cover
Back of neighbor's barn;
She quickly set her mind
That she'd no stockings darn.

Uncle Isaac spent the winter
Running races bold:
The only thing he caught—
A nasty common cold.

COURAGE!

Press on! Though mists obscure
The steep and rugged way,
And clouds of doubt beset—
Soon dawns the brighter day.

Keep on! Though hours be long,
And days deep-fraught with woe,
Let patience have her perfect work,
And vanquish every foe.

Hope on! Though all seems lost
And storms beat high,
Have faith! Be still and know
That God is nigh.

"BOBS" AND THE CROWS

Two young crows were brought to a country house in the spring. Tragedy had come upon their nest, so the household, particularly ten-year-old Grant, devoted much time to feeding and caring for them. Their wings were clipped so that they might not get too far away before they were able to take care of themselves, and they were soon annoying as well as amusing pets. "Bobs" in particular was annoyed by them. His food dish was placed not far from theirs and they delighted in stealing choice bits from his meal, and then they would apparently laugh at him.

But his dislike for them was nothing when compared with their hate for a neighbor's dog named "Chips." When the crows, "Juliet" and "Caesar," went waddling or half fluttering down the lane, Chips delighted in coming along and barking at them. They'd flutter into a tree and scold until Chips grew weary and went home.

One day as they hobbled down the lane through the woods they came to an open place where there were no trees or bushes close enough for refuge. From the opposite side came Chips in high glee. He barked, and poor little Juliet and Caesar shrieked loudly. Bobs, on the front porch a few hundred feet away through the woods, heard the smaller dog and recognized that teasing, delighted yelp. Then he heard the crows' call of fright and dismay. With a bound he was off through the woods and into the clearing. With no preliminaries, no comment from Bobs, Chips or the birds, the birds, the crows flew to the dog's back and quietly and with much dignity Bobs carried his master's pets home at a steady little trot.

DO SOMETHING

If things go wrong,
Don't sit complaining
All day long—
Do something, whistle,
Sing a song.

If you feel blue,
Think of others
Worse off than you—
Do something, smile,
That will do.

If you're in debt,
Useless to sigh,
Repine, regret—
Do something, hustle,
Don't forget.

If down and out,
Know opportunity
Lies all about—
Do something, work,
Don't doubt.

If you're sick,
Don't grumble,
Despair, nor kick—
Do something, play,
HEAVE A BRICK!

MAKES MONEY FARMING AND SCORNS RELIEF

As the live-at-home campaigners go about the state urging the adoption of better farming methods in 1931, they are constantly finding good farmers who are making a success of their business and are putting aside some cash each season.

Such a person is Z. K. Simpson, of Marshville, Route 2, in Union county. Mr. Simpson is a young man, only 39; he is married; has five children, and owns the place he bought on credit in 1919. T. J. W. Broom, county farm agent of Union county, says Mr. Simpson bought a farm of 78 acres for $3,250 in 1919. A small inheritance of between $600 and $700 from his father was paid on the place and with that start Mr. Simpson began farming. The farm was poor, with no improvements, only a small house to live in while he fought for something better.

Today Mr. Simpson has the farm all paid for. In addition he has built a new home costing $3,500 cash; a new barn costing $500 cash; new poultry houses costing $500 cash, and has installed a $1,000 water system for his home, barns and poultry yards. In addition he has $1,500 loaned out, has 22 bales of good cotton in storage and has a nice checking account at the bank.

The details of how he won this from the 78 acres of soil is interesting but hard work and common sense backed the enterprise. He first standardized his fertilizer problem by using 1,000 pounds of a 10-4-4 fertilizer per acre for his cotton. In 1930, he made 14 bales on 12 acres; in 1929 he made 16 bales on 13 acres; in 1928, he made 13 bales on 12 acres, and in 1927, he made 23 bales on 18 acres. He rotates his crops, has filled his soil with humus so that the fertilizer is more profitable and he has never run a time bill at the store nor bought feed and foodstuffs. His gross income each year from poultry, surplus milk, and garden stuff is over $5,000 in addition to his cotton and other cash crops. —F. H. Jeter.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mizpah, Haw River Circuit.—Rev. J. L. Trollinger preached a very interesting sermon on the first Sunday morning from the subject: "Living and Dying." He made it very plain what the death of Christ meant to the world. At the close of the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered to a larger number.

As the weather becomes more favorable and the epidemic of colds passes we hope to see an increase in our Sunday school. Considering all, our congregations are quite large.

Our community was saddened last Sunday when we learned J. A. Harrison was dead. He had been a patient in Anne Penn hospital one day. Double pneumonia caused his death. He was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. L. Trollinger Monday afternoon, after which he was buried in the Mizpah cemetery.

Mrs. Margaret Harrison, one of our older members, is sick with flu.

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—The continued fair weather and sunshine served to greatly improve the condition of country roads and resulted in an increase in the attendance at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday. We had much larger congregations than were present a month ago. After the service at Baltimore the pastor and family went to the home of Brother J. S. Phillips, having had a previous invitation to go there for dinner. The good dinner and visit was enjoyed.

After the service at Stony Knoll we were invited to the home of Brother J. W. Mickles, where a short while was spent and a splendid supper was enjoyed. The pastor also visited Brother L. D. Speer, who met with an accident in December and spent twelve days in a hospital for the treatment of a dislocated knee cap. He has gradually improved but is not able to walk without the use of crutches. Brother J. H. Spens, who suffered a severe wound to his foot in a road drag about three weeks ago, was able to attend the service at Stony Knoll last Sunday, being able to walk by the use of crutches.

Mrs. Sarah Doub, member of Baltimore church, who has been in poor health for several months, suffered a renewed attack last week, but is reported better. Mrs. Lou Long, of near Pleasant Hill church, has been ill for over a week. She has been confined to her bed most of the time. She was better Sunday night when the pastor visited in the home.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be at Tabernacle in the morning, at Union Hill in the afternoon.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit.—Our attendance at Sunday school is fine during this fine weather and our enrollment is still increasing. Every one seems to be taking great interest. Some time ago the Baraca class was invited up to Advance M. E. church to visit their Baraca class and on next Sunday morning they will return the visit.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment here yesterday. A very interesting sermon was rendered.

The Christian Endeavor society is doing much toward the progress of our church work, for the youth are depended upon entirely. We gave a social at the home of Miss Kate Tucker last Wednesday night.

On last Sunday night the Epworth League of Mocks church came down here, and gave an interesting program. We are glad that older leagues are willing to help us.

On Sunday evening, February 8, at 7 o'clock we are giving a special Young People's program.

We ask the prayers of all readers and former pastors for a greater success.

STELLA BAILEY, Reporter.

Spring Church, Spring Church Charge.

"But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." This was the text from which Brother Lowdermilk preached last Sunday. I am sure all enjoyed the sermon and will be greatly benefitted by it. He leaves with us such good thoughts to meditate on. After the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered, the majority of the congregation partaking.

Brother Lowdermilk is getting around among the people. I am sure he will make many friends. We are that "old timey," we like to have our pastor in our homes.

The conference journal failed to credit Spring Church Charge with what we raised for the Children's Home the past year. Spring Church alone raised $48.77. I am sure Lebanon and Pleasant Hill raised some, too.

We were very glad to have with us in Sunday school today, our primary teacher, Mrs. R. C. Crew, who has been a patient in Roanoke Rapids hospital for some time.

We are glad to know that little Byron Holt Mitchell is much improved, and expected home the last of this week. He has been in the hospital in Richmond about two months.

We are very fortunate; none of our flock have "flu" and the people around in general seem to be enjoying good health.

REPORTER.

Chase City Charge, Friendship Church.—Sunday school was called at 10:30 o'clock with 43 present.

Our regular preaching service at 11 o'clock, which our church holds every first Sunday in each month.

We held our first quarterly conference, February first after preaching, about 12 o'clock, conducted by Rev. C. W. Saunders.

At 6 o'clock the same day the Bible class met, which we are all interested in and we hope to continue it.

In the evening at 7 o'clock Rev. Mr. Moore preached for us a very interesting sermon.

MISS BERTHA JARRELL.

English Street.—Sunday school last Sunday was off some because of sickness. The attendance, however, was larger than a year ago. The Christian Endeavors gave a very interesting radio program Sunday night, which was enjoyed by a large congregation. We were pleased to see several new faces in the audience and hope they will continue to come. In the home department of our Sunday school, Mrs. Lee has a large class who seem to enjoy her visits, and the work she is doing in this department is causing many to study the Sunday school lesson who otherwise would neglect it. Our field in this part of the city is "already white unto the harvest," and we hope soon to get in shape to meet more fully the demands the Lord is making upon our church here. We think our church debts here are getting under more easy control which will help us greatly in all our departments of church work.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Bessemer City Church.—We are still on the firing line and are still trying to do something for the upbuilding of the Master's cause. Brother J. D. Morris preached a very interesting sermon Sunday morning.

We have a very good Sunday school; it is not very large but is very interesting. We also have C. E. services on every Sunday afternoon. Much interest is taken in these services, also. Brother Morris' appointments at this church are the second and third Sunday nights and fourth Sunday mornings. Brother Morris preaches extra good sermons, and so plain that even a child can understand them. He never fails to come even when the weather is very unfavorable. We hope to be able to show our appreciation of his good services this new year.

Pray for us that God will help us to accomplish much and greater work than ever before. Best wishes to all.

MRS. LUCY BRACKETT, Reporter.

Charlotte Church, Richland Circuit.—Our S. S. attendance is very good considering the cold weather. Our first Sunday's offering goes to the Children's Home. Also the third Sunday's offering of $5.00 is sent for clothing a child at the home.

We have had the Bulla quartette to sing for us nearly every Sunday this winter, which adds much to the interest of the Sunday school.

Our pastor, Mr. Trogdon preached an interesting sermon Sunday, February 1st. His text was: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

There were visitors present. We welcome them and hope they will come again.

REPORTER.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.—We met in S. S., as usual the fourth Sunday at 10 o'clock with a better attendance than for several Sundays. We hope our sick people will soon be on the road to recovery. Among those sick of our number are Mr. and Mrs. W. Hayworth and little Miss Bernice Hilton.

At the 11 o'clock hour Brother H. L. Powell delivered a splendid sermon. Everyone present, both large and small, could understand what he was trying to bring to us. Among the visitors present were Miss Liza Kanoy, Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Hayworth and Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Nifong. We were indeed glad to have these people with us and we hope they will come again very soon.

We are meeting the first and third Sundays in Christian Endeavor. We had Christian Endeavor the first Sunday with Miss Verta Perryman as leader. Miss Mildred Green will have charge of the program the third Sunday in this month and Miss Helen Hiton will have charge the first Sunday in March. We are looking forward to some splendid programs.

On Friday night, January 9, friends and neighbors were horror-stricken over the sudden and shocking death of little nine-year-old Lucille McCrary. She was a very sweet and loving child, and was loved by everyone that knew her.

She was a member of the Sunday school of Mt. Pleasant church and a student in Wallburg high school, being in the fourth grade. She certainly is greatly missed at Sunday school and in school as well as in the home.

RUTH PAYNE, Reporter.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—The attendance at Sunday school last Sunday gives evidence that a number of our people are at work. There were 335 present. The Young Men's class had 104. Mr. J. E. Hardin met with this class Sunday and talked to them; they are planning to build a hut this spring.

The Christian Endeavor society meets every Sunday night at 6:30; the young girls and boys are taking very much interest in this society and we hope it will grow and much good may be done; for the burden of the church will soon rest on the shoulders of the young people and we trust they will be well trained in the service of the Lord.

The Ladies' Aid gave a chicken stew Saturday night at the school building. The ladies donated the profit from this supper to the Young Men's class to be used on the hut. The profit was something around $57. We owe many thanks to our Ladies' Aid; for they are always ready to help in a time of need.

Preaching every Sunday at 11 o'clock and at night. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night; visitors are always welcome at St. Paul.

The Ladies' Aid will meet next Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Kennett.

MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit. — We have been having preaching the third Sunday night but it is now changed to the first Sunday night, 7:30. Rev. P. E. Bingham took a very sweet chapter to read from Sunday night, 14th chapter of St. John, of which the first four verses are Christ's Promises and just think verse two said, "In My Father's House are many mansions. If it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." That is if we obey His teachings.

Our Sunday school and C. E. society are still going. Miss Beatrice Hawkins, the junior teacher, says she dearly enjoys teaching her class. She awarded several of her pupils a pin Sunday for attending Sunday school so regularly.

The C. E. had a play Friday night at Hawkins Chapel school. They are planning to take it to Aurelian Springs high school.

MRS. C. H. HAWKINS, Reporter.

Haw River Charge.—In reading the reports from certain of our churches, located in two of our largest cities, we find that they are checking up on the attendance records. After reading these reports we began to look over some of our records of attendance, and find that we have something to be proud of, too. We usually think that our city folks would have a higher per cent. attendance than the people in the country, but I find that as a rule it is just the opposite.

I do not know how these brother pastors count this percentage, do they count every member of the church separately, or do they just count the whole congregation, and let that total present equal the stated percentage of membership? If they count the entire congregation, and the total number being the basis of average figured, then I think this rural charge can very well compete with them for the highest percentage.

By an actual count, we find that for the last five Sundays our record out here among bad roads, with some of them so bad that at times we can't find bottom, the record shows the following facts:

January 4, the attendance was 80% of membership.

January 11, the attendance was 51% of membership.

January 18, the attendance was 54% of membership.

January 25, the attendance was 69% of membership.

February 1, the attendance was 64% of the membership.

The attendance for the other Sundays since conference has made an average for the whole charge equal to 58% of the total membership. This, I think is very good, when we remember that several of these days were so cold, and the roads were in such condition that a great number of our people couldn't get to church.

There may be a depression out here when it comes to the price of our major farm products, but I can vouch for the statement that there is no depression in church attendance. Of course we could have a larger attendance, and we will when the weather gets better, and the flu situation clears up. But right at this time, the church attendance is better on Haw River Circuit, than at any other time of the winter months that came during the present pastorate. This is about the half-way distance through the third winter I have been here, and we have every reason to believe that this spring and summer will show a decided increase over the figures given above.

We have received five members at one of the churches, since conference. Three came from other denominations by transfers, and two of the outstanding young business men of the community by confession joined last Sunday.

The people are co-operating splendidly. Every church on the charge—and there are but five of them—shows that the people are deeply interested, and anxious to do something for Kingdom Service. As an evidence of that fact, the Sunday school at Fair Grove will be re-organized next Sunday morning. There has not been a school here for months and more months. We are starting one next Sunday. The people say that they want it, and must have it, and they are doing it themselves. The morning light is breaking again, and the new day promises to be a good one. God grant that the prophecy may become a reality. I believe it will.

J. L. TROLLINGER.

Corinth, Little Circuit.—Rev. P. E. Bingham preached a fine sermon yesterday, using as his subject, "Comfort." All enjoyed this sermon and thought it the best he had preached on this work. All that missed this sermon missed a treat. Just after the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered and a goodly number partook of the elements which represent the body and blood of our Lord.

Our night service has been changed from the second Sunday night to the third Sunday night; so don't forget to be present on the third Sunday night at 7:30.

At the service yesterday a church letter was granted Mr. B. M. Morris, one of our young members who wishes to unite with the Monument M. E. church at Richmond, Va., where he is located.

One of our good members, Mr. M. J. Morris and daughter, Vera, who were severely lamed about two weeks ago are improving. We hope they will soon be able to be out again.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

English Street Church.—We noted a great decrease in our Sunday school attendance Sunday, due to the illness of so many of our members.

Mrs. J. A. Robbins is very ill at her home with influenza.

Miss Kate Phillips is confined to her home due to a fall, which resulted in a sprained ankle.

Our Christian Endeavor society observed Christian Endeavor week from January 25 to February 1. The week was begun by organizing a society at Midway church. A large crowd attended this service, which was enjoyed by all present. Long timers' night was held on Tuesday night, January 27. All people who had ever belonged to the society were invited back and, an enjoyable hour was spent in bringing back old memories. Wednesday night was observed as Devotional night. The mid-week prayer service was led by a member of the society and all of the other members took part in the meeting. Our social life was not forgotten. Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bowers a season social was held. Many games and contests were enjoyed, after which we were invited into the dining room, where delicious refreshments were served, according to seasons. To bring the week to a close, a mock radio program was given at the regular evening service at the church Sunday night. The program consisted of songs by the society, talks on many interesting subjects, and special music. Misses Iris and Artis Caudle rendered a duet and Miss Ruth Bonkemeyer sang a vocal solo. A piano solo was also given by Miss Annie Bonkemeyer. We believe that these programs of Christian Endeavor week have strengthened our society and will help us to go forward in the future.

Weaverville Church.—First, let us thank the annual conference for sending to us such a splendid pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Cowan. We feel that they are especially well suited for our needs and we are exceptionally well pleased with the manner in which they have taken hold of the work here.

There have been some improvements made on the parsonage and others to be made later. The people seem willing at any time to follow a good leader. The interest in our church work and Sunday school is increasing rapidly. We also have a wide awake Christian Endeavor society. The young folk are so willing and ready at all times to serve when ever they are called upon.

The Ladies' Auxiliary is a very active and meet this month with Mrs. Marvin Garrison. We are having very interesting meetings.

Rev. and Mrs. Cowan's son, Earnest, from Hampton Roads, Va., spent a few days with them last week. Our young people enjoyed knowing him ever so much and hope he will come again soon.

We are looking forward with great pleasure to having with us Dr. Taylor on Sunday night, February 8th.

Best wishes for the readers of the Herald.
MRS. FRED P. EDWARDS, Reporter.

Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—Rev. C. G. Isley gave us yesterday, another of his splendid sermons.

Yesterday showed a steady increase in Sunday school attendance, with the largest number present in a long time.

The foundation of the new church was completed last week with the contractor, Mr. Luther Williams, taking charge this morning. We are looking forward to our new church with Sunday school rooms, something that we have not had in the past and are all very proud of.

We are expecting to have the High Point College quartet with us at the next appointment which is the third Sunday afternoon, providing the church will permit us to have service.

ZULA FRITTS, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—On Sunday morning a delightful Communion service was held, in which a large number joined, the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered an impressive appropriate short sermon on "Things to consider when we take the Lord's Supper;" first, we must appropriate Him, that is, continue to take this bread; then we must assimilate Him, as we eat food to make our bodies strong, so we make Him a part of us; we must appreciate Him, publicly giving our lives in appreciation of what He has done for us. The minister was assisted by Dr. G. I. Humphreys and Dr. Paul S. Kennett in administering the Sacrament. At the close of this service we were rejoiced to receive twelve members into our fellowship: William F. Foister, James Ellington, little Misses Sibby Fogleman, and Frances Moser by baptism; Mrs. James Ellington by transfer from Thomasville; Mrs. Lizzie Leonard, from Lexington; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Riggins, the latter having been the former Miss Verna Garrett, who is pleasantly remembered as a teacher in the city school, this couple coming from the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church, Taylorsville, N. C., where they lived before moving to High Point; Mrs. J. L. Shaw from Randolph Circuit; Mrs. Edward Suits and two daughters, Misses Emma and Egora, from Lebanon church, Mechanicsville.

In commemoration of the Golden Jubilee of Christian Endeavor, the Young People's society gave a delightful banquet at the church last Friday evening, which was greatly enjoyed by a large number of members and their friends. Miss Myrtle Davis had charge of the enjoyable program, of which pleasing features were talks by Rev. R. I. Farmer, Capt. A. M. Rankin, and Richard H. Shaw on "The Need of C. E." and a vocal solo, "Long, Long Ago" by Miss Margaret Opal Neese in a quaint costume of olden days. The Sunday 5 o'clock vesper service gave special emphasis to this celebration, Miss Dennyce McAdams presiding. She was ably assisted by Messrs. Ralph Vance, Arnold J. Koonce, Misses Inez Reynolds and Ina McAdams. The final observance of the Golden Jubilee or Fiftieth Anniversary was held Monday evening at the regular weekly meeting, when Miss Mary Elizabeth Adams led on the topic, "The C. E. Society in the Program of the Church."

The Executive Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary held its usual monthly meeting on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. G. Snipes on Steele street.

The A. M. Idol Philathea class will be entertained Tuesday evening at 8:00 by Mrs. F. R. Auman at her home, 801 Montlieu Ave.

At the Wednesday Evening Fellowship supper the minister will present a message on "The After-glow Life," and Circle No. 6, Mrs. Paul S. Kennett, chairman, will be in charge of tables and coffee. The members of Circle No. 8, Mrs. J. G. Snipes, chairman, are planning to sit in a group and enjoy supper together once more before the circles are changed March 31st.

Mrs. Geo. T. Penny has invited the Woman's Auxiliary to hold its meeting next Monday at her handsome home on Greensboro road before leaving next day for Florida to spend a month.

We are pleased to learn that Misses Peggy and Jean Teague, small daughters of Judge and Mrs. Lewis E. Teague, who are suffering from influenza, are improving.

At the Executive Board meeting at the home of Mrs. C. W. Bates in Greensboro last Tuesday, a formal invitation to the N. C. Branch of Woman's Missionary Work to meet in High Point with First church in April was accepted, the exact date to be announced later. The invitation was extended by Mrs. S. S. Coe, president of the local Woman's Auxiliary, who attended the board meeting with Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, and Miss Mary E. Young.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Snipes went to Greensboro Saturday afternoon to be present at the funeral services for Mr. Snipes' uncle, Mr. S. J. Lamb, a Confederate Veteran and a well-known and highly esteemed citizen.

Mrs. R. R. Blackburn and Mrs. R. T. Pickens and two daughters went to Salem yesterday to attend the funeral services for the venerable and greatly beloved Bishop Edward Rondthaler in the Home Moravian church. This service was simple and exceedingly appropriate for the life of this saintly man of God, who spent all the mature years of his long and active life in teaching and the ministry of Unitas Fratrum, or the Moravian church. The church was not large enough to admit the immense throng, who came to pay their last tribute of love, but amplifiers placed on Salem College campus made it possible for all who came to hear the services. A memoir of his life and service in detail was read by the present pastor, Rev. J. Kenneth Pfohl. A notable feature of these last rites was a beautiful silver loving cup, which was placed in front of the bier, a gift of award from the Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce to the Bishop for the most outstanding service to the community for a period of 55 years, an honor most worthily bestowed.

—Dr. T. C. Amick, professor of mathematics in Elon College, is using in his class in Analytical geometry a text book of his own production. He is using mimeograph print. But may have the book printed in regular type form later.

A TOBACCO PARADOX

We are living in strange times. With the use of tobacco increasing by leaps and bounds, the sentiment against tobacco grows stronger, in some circles. If anyone thinks the agitation against tobacco is not bearing fruit, just let the mind go back a few years when the question of smoking on the part of public school teachers, especially men, would not have raised a ripple of excitement.

Now a city in Michigan gets "all het up" because the principal of one of its high schools smokes, with the question warmly debated as to whether or not he should be asked to resign.

The Ann Arbor Times-News discusses the matter seriously, saying: "It must be admitted that there is something about a cigarette-smoking school principal that is not altogether satisfactory. The example of a cigarette 'fiend' is not good for the boys and girls who are given into his care and keeping."

Then the paper adds: "But maybe he can't stop the habit. What is to be done in that case?"

Strange that it should not occur to the editor and others that a man who isn't his own boss, in the matter of habits, is no person to be placed in a position of authority over others. A simple way to have settled the matter would have been to say to the man: "If you quit smoking, the position is still yours. If you can't or don't quit smoking, you quit the position of principal. Take your choice."—Will H. Brown.

—Rev. N. G. Bethea has reached the Herald goal at one of his churches and hopes to do so at the other soon.

—Rev. R. C. Stubbins has been elected president of Asheboro's ministerial association.

—Plans are forming for a great celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington in 1932.

—We have received for publication a list of names of persons who last year contributed money for High Point College, in response to the appeal for "a dollar a member." No church is named and the writer withholds his or her name. We can not publish such communications unless we know who wrote them. We could guess the name of the church, perhaps, but we cannot guess who sent the list.

—An average of 55 bushels of corn an acre is reported from the corn contest held in Bertie county this year by Farm Agent B. E. Grant.

—Worn out and washed soils in Orange county will be started on the way back to fertility by a multitude of mangum terraces which the landowners are now preparing to build.

—Lincoln county farmers co-operated to sell over 6,000 pounds of turkeys during the recent holiday market season.

—A double-decked car containing 123 fat hogs was shipped to the Richmond market by E. C. Winslow, of Edgecombe county and topped the market on the day shipped. Most of the animals weighed about 200 pounds.

—Nash county poultry flocks are leading the state in egg-laying and profits per bird according to recent tabulations by the poultry extension office at State College.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mr. W. F. Grags, King, N. C., 2 union suits, 1 shirt, 2 pair socks and 4 quarts canned fruit.

Mrs. Modlin, 1 quilt.

Mrs. T. A. Hunter, for "The Hunter Room," 4 sheets, 2 pair pillow cases and one bureau scarf.

Mrs. J. A. Richardson for Ladies of M. P. Church, San Angelo, Texas, 1 sweater, 1 tam, 4 pieces of underwear, 1 suit for little boy, 2 pair pants, 3 coats, 1 pair pillow slips and 4 little pillows.

Mrs. Helen R. Hartman, Baltimore, Md., 1 coat, 1 hat, 6 dresses, 1 skirt, 1 pair of shoes, 3 pieces of underwear and 2 pair of stockings.

We are thankful for these gifts of money and produce. God's children, our friends, as shown above came to our rescue and enabled us to pay for the car load of coal and the freight, and the coal is being put into our basement today. We thank the Lord, and we thank His servants through whom He found this expression of helpfulness. May the dear Father bless and prosper each one who contributed. And may He also bless all who contributed in the First Sunday's collections, which were taken yesterday, and which will be coming to us shortly. You dear people have begun to help us to see daylight with our finances here, if you will only keep it up in EVERY SUNDAY SCHOOL in the Conference during every month this year. One of President Taylor's Goals for this Conference year is, "A monthly offering from each Sunday school for the Children's Home." We are trusting that ever Sunday school will measure up to that goal.

See Conference Journal for 1930

By reference to the Conference Journal, pages 60 to 62 you will see how the Home was supported by the charges last year. You will find it an interesting study. The amounts given by charges were culled from pastor's reports. This same report taken from our books would make a better showing for some of the charges; but we would like to have you pick out all the charges giving $100.00, or more, and you will find it interesting to list them in the order of those contributing the highest amount. See where your charge stands in the list.

The Sickness Among Us

Conditions have very materially improved among us since last report, thanks to Dr. S. S. Coe and to our faithful workers. However, because of the serious condition of one little boy and one little girl we have, at present two trained nurses. With Mother Dixon and me unable to help, and with our daughter and the other workers going beyond their strength this was necessary. We need, and we know we shall have, your prayers and your continued help.

May God bless His dear people everywhere.
Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON.

BILLY SUNDAY

Rev. William A. Sunday is at Buffalo, N. Y., holding a meeting at Churchill Tabernacle. The Buffalo Evening Times, commenting on his services, says that "Billy Sunday bears the same relation to genuine religion that a Fourth-of-July firecracker bears to political economy. He is a vulgarian, resorting to tricks of cheap showmanship to induce a kind of emotional joy in superstitious folks. Buffalo will be worse after Sunday gets through with us than it was before. It is easier to harangue than to teach. It is easier to mistake the hullabaloo for the substance. It is the lazy man's way to be satisfied with the shadow and let the substance go."

The evangelical ministers of the city, in their Monday meeting, passed the following resolution: "Be it resolved, That the Buffalo Evangelical Synod Ministerial Association herewith emphatically dissociate itself from the pseudo-religious campaign of bombast, ballado and over-wrought emotionalism now being conducted in Buffalo by Billy Sunday, and that it is the opinion of this group that his interpretation conveys a distorted impression of the sane and noble religion of Jesus."

Evidently Buffalo does not approve Billy Sunday's harangue and emotionalism. His style of preaching, his emotionalism, and spectacular method, and his psychology do not strongly suggest the method of the quiet, meek and lowly Nazarene.—Exchange.

HEAD OF SUNSHINE SOCIETY DIES

Cynthia Westover Alden, founder and president general of the International Sunshine Society, died at the ripe age of 70 on January 8th, in Brooklyn, N. Y. Mrs. Alden had a varied career in life. She was school teacher, choir singer, customs inspector, executive secretary of New York's street-cleaning department, and editorial and free-lance writer. She organized the International Sunshine Society for blind children under eight years of age, for whom she found no other institution that would admit them, and also founded Sunshine homes for blind children in 14 states.—Christian Sun.

Many persons laud the East,
Others loudly praise the West,
Arguments are freely used
Just to prove one place is best.

List Chicago first of all,
Say some critics of renown,
Tho' citizens of Cannon Ball
Call it just a pistol town.

Californians advertise
They have golden climate there,
While men down in Florida
Claim they have it and to spare.

Boston is, of course, the Hub,
So New Englanders still say,
But New Yorkers simply smile
And affirm they lead the way.

Thus the wordy warfare goes,
Unconvinced is either side;
They continue harmless foes,
Designating home with pride.

THE BEAUTIFUL BOOK OF ST. LUKE'S GOSPEL

It was Renan who called the Gospel of Luke the most beautiful book ever written. The tradition that Luke was a painter is doubtful, to say the least. He was an artist, but in words, not in pigments. He is the father of Christian art; the great artists have taken their subjects largely from his Gospel. He is sensitive to beauty. Poetry finds a place in his book. Lovely stories are here, as of the shepherds on the hills the night of the Nativity, the boy Jesus in the temple, the walk to Emmaus. Luke's researches recover for us the greatest of the parables, which are themselves literary gems. The Prodigal Son, the Good Samaritan, the Pharisee and Publican at Prayer—these are found only in Luke.

Luke was a physician, keenly sensitive to human suffering. His sympathy with the underlings of the world is evident. The publicans, the sinful women, the Samaritans, the gentiles—Luke seizes upon our Lord's treatment of these pariahs of the Jewish world and in incident, or teaching, or parable, he gives us lovely pictures of the Master's compassion. He saw the splendor of women, and gives us glimpses of their part in the history.

Luke's Gospel is the gospel of the penitents. The woman who was a sinner and bathed Jesus' feet with her tears, Zaccheus, the prodigal son, the thief on the cross—it is only Luke who tells of these. He lights the scenes of sin with dawning hope.

It is a beautiful book. It pictures for us the beauty of the Saviour and with exquisite art reveals the immortal loveliness of the old, old story.—(Lucienne Hall Wilson.)

—Rev. S. K. Snider addressed the Ministers' Association last Monday on Pastoral Work. He thinks pastoral work has grown more difficult because it is now difficult to find all the family together.

—Rev. N. G. Fisher's car was stolen from his yard last Sunday night while he was in church. General search was made and the car found on South Main street with the battery exhausted and the rear shaft broken.

—Rev. C. W. Bates was called to Union Chapel, Granville, last Thursday to conduct the funeral of Brother Henry A. Finch, an aged and prominent member of that church. There was a large attendance of sympathizing friends. Brother Bates was requested by Mr. Finch several years ago to conduct his funeral service.

A Royal Proclamation

The King came down to men.
He stood upon the earth:
He saw the multitude
In all their moral dearth.

He climbed the mountain height,
He sat on kingly throne;
He spoke deep words of truth
To those He'd make His own.

He saw the hearts of men,
The true and false as well:
He spoke of joy and woe
That come with men to dwell.

He sketched the way of life
As Heaven's King commands,
The way of truth and love
The highest law demands.

He pointed out the ends
To which our lives will lead—
Both when we disobey
And when we take due heed.

Obeys the King's commands—
Your house will never fall:
Despise the royal will,
And down you'll go with all.

Church Growth

President Taylor is gratified to see how much our church in North Carolina has grown in the last fifteen years. This period includes the more than four years of the great World War, with all its hindrance to church work and growth. Considering the comparison Brother Taylor presents in another column, we should thank God and take courage. And would we not be surprised if looking over the past we saw no evidence of growth? Christ planted the principle of growth within the church. He set the heaven to working. He predicted that it would spread through the whole mass. Every real Christian exerts an influence on other souls and helps to enlarge the church. Growth is in proportion to wise effort put forth when there is plenty of material. Some of our efforts are abortive because there is no material to draw from. One of the difficult problems of this time is to make our influence reach the unreached. They are shut off from us by a wall of distance or by a different social environment. We should utilize for all they are worth the impressible days of childhood. Then there is least resistance and most tender susceptibility. But we should not give those up who have wandered far from the fold. We should have the good shepherd's concern for the lost sheep. There is a place in the church for the reclaimed. We should rejoice when our church grows, but we should not relax our efforts for those we might save. No church has done its work until it has brought to Christ all it can bring.

"Stop Alien Representation"

Our fathers made some mistakes in framing the Constitution of the United States. Hence amendments have been necessary. Still another amendment is now considered necessary; an amendment to make the basis of representation in Congress and in the Electoral College the number of citizens and not the number of residents. The present article gives to cities with large foreign population more representatives than they are entitled to. If their representatives were on the right side of moral question it would not be so bad, but often they align themselves against moral reforms. We suggest that voters who read this and favor the proposed amendment at once inform our two Senators (Simmons and Morrison) and all our representatives in the House of Representatives. The "wets" are opposing this amendment.

Bishop Cannon Exonerated

Charges were preferred against Bishop James Cannon by four ministers of his own denomination (M. E. Church, South). These charges were rather vaguely stated to the public, but the gist of them seems to be that the Bishop had pursued courses detrimental to the church, probably referring to his political activities and to his commercial transactions. A jury of twelve ministers sat in Washington last week and heard the charges stated at length with evidence of their truthfulness and also the Bishop's defense. He is now badly afflicted with arthritis and made a pitiable figure as he on crutches with body much bent slowly wended his way to the place of trial. After five days of hearing the jury decided that there is not sufficient ground for further action.

Burglars invaded two churches in Greensboro last Sunday afternoon, Church of the Covenant and Grace church. They broke open a number of doors and a safe. They found no money and were doubtless disappointed. Had they been regular church attendants they would have known better and saved themselves this disappointment.

SET THE DECALOGUE TO "LOGGING"

Thomas A. Edison says: "If we want to cut down the job of our jails, if we want to reduce the congestion of our criminal courts, one of the first places to begin is to find our boys and girls the right kind of work. It is more important than finding the right kind of wives and husbands."

He claims that the weakest spot is in our schools. But that is not the fault of the teachers, or the school boards, or the textbooks; it is the fault of our own miserable, narrow jealousies and sectarian prejudices. We might have a religious and moral education in our schools in an honored place by the side of "readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic," instead of having to bring it in as a side-issue, as the indirect result of a word now and then by an earnest teacher, or the fine, upstanding example of so many fine teachers.

But the hindrance is that

Catholic, Jew, Agnostic

all fear and fight shy of Protestants and of each other. Each is afraid that the other will sneak in something that will undermine his belief and boost his rival. And so we have the spectacle of perhaps the greatest civilization the world has ever seen, quarrelling over old musty bones, while the most vital thing to us is neglected in our educational system, as Mr. Edison calls it,

The Teaching of Plain, Every-Day Honesty

He goes on: "It is not a matter of religious discussions. It is a matter of taking the Ten Commandments," as "Colliers" quotes him, "or the Sermon on the Mount out of the moth-balls and putting them to work. It is a matter of down-to-earth morals that we can get hold of and live by. And good morals are hard-boiled, commonsense economics."

"We are letting our boys and girls go to the devil because we are not providing in their youth a definite, practical guidance in clean thinking and right living."

Why should it be so impossible for all decent people to agree that the sins denounced in the Decalogue are the enemies of society, and should be so presented officially to our children?

If a man doesn't believe that stealing is wrong and should be so described to childhood at the expense and under the authority of the state, let him step up and draw a blue pencil across the Eight Commandment—and then let him be taken to police headquarters to have his "mug" photographed and his finger-prints recorded. For

That Man Is Unsafe to Leave At Large

Any one can see that he is a dangerous citizen. He should have no vote in controlling the schools or anything else.

So with a man who is afraid to have the teacher he pays teach his children, or those of any one else, that it is wrong to kill, to perjure one's self, to commit adultery. He should lose his citizenship by taking such a stand. No state could stand with only such citizens. The names "citizen," "American," are mockeries in the mouths of such men. There would be no cities, no America, if only such men lived.

But you would not have to disfranchise many. Few men would publicly

Own to Such Rotten Morals

Not one man in a thousand would want his children taught so. Whatever a man's own practices, he would be the first to revolt and cry out if the schools began to teach that theft, murder, lying, lust, were virtues to be emulated. He would lead a mob to drive the teachers out, and burn the schoolhouse, and destroy the Government that used them for so vile a purpose.

At heart

119,000,000 of Our 120,000,000

or whatever our population is at this minute—believe with Edison that these essentials of honesty should be taught in some way; but here's where the pinch comes; they're afraid that honesty may be forced down the throats of their offspring with a Protestant label, or a Catholic label, or a Hebrew label.

Mind you,

Catholic and Protestant Have Taken Them from Moses a Jew, centuries ago. There has never been any dispute about that. But Jews, Catholics, Protestants, are too narrow and suspicious of each other to get together and agree that what they have accepted from a Jew all these ages shall be read and taught as authoritative in the schools, lest the other fellow get some proselyting advantage out of it.

It is a situation to make a national convention of jackasses laugh themselves sore under the ribs. A judge whose salary we all share in paying, as we pay the teachers, can sit on his bench and say that stealing, lying, perjury, murder, adultery, are gross crimes; and he can say it with a prison sentence or a fine that carries disgrace and suffering with it.

Why doesn't some Jew, or Catholic, or agnostic rise up indignantly and protest:

"Ten Years for Burglary! That Is Sectarian!"

He would be sent to the psychopathic ward. The judge, the policeman, paid out of taxes paid in the same check that pays school taxes, may enforce the morals of Moses and the Decalogue upon hardened criminals, with whom there is little hope of reformation. But a teacher, who is dealing with young, receptive minds, with whom moral instruction may prevent the very evils for which the policeman and the judge arrest and inflict severe penalties, must not teach the "Thou shalt nots" against stealing, murder, perjury, adultery, because he is paid out of public funds; and if his teaching should save young fellows from lives of crime, why, the Protestants might get the credit for it, and the Jews and Catholics be put to shame.

Was there ever any irony like

The Irony of Religious Jealousy?

A great moving-picture concern can spend $2,000,000 making a film of the Ten Commandments, using from 1,400 to 3,500 persons daily, 5,000 animals, reconstructing the temple of Rameses with 2,000 mechanics, using 550,000 feet of lumber, 3,000 tons of plaster, and 25,000 pounds of nails, piping water for miles into the California desert, and building electric light and power lines. They can do all this, with 224 orthodox Jews to take part in the play, and maintain a daily school with seven teachers for the sixty children in the camp.

But now suppose that one of those teachers should attempt to teach the children in this school that the Ten Commandments, the filming of which they were watching and taking part in, were an authoritative moral code, and just watch the fur fly.

California Schools Would Not Stand It

Only last winter the California legislature refused to pass a bill permitting two hours a week of school time to be used for religious education, "by request of the parents," and outside of school buildings and by teachers provided by the churches.

It is the greatest farce being enacted on earth. No theatre has even presented a comedy that could equal it. In a way these people of California, constituents of the assemblymen who defeated the bill for religious education last winter, are paying taxes to support all the movie theatres in the State in which this film was produced. They pay policemen to keep order in them if necessary and to patrol the streets in front of them day and night. They pay firemen to be ready to fight flames in them. They pay for sewers to serve them, and water-mains, and other things that come out of the tax budget. But

No Voice Protests Against the Decalogue in Theatres so protected at public expense. But let some fanatic propose that the children be taught this same Decalogue, or the Golden Rule, or the Sermon on the Mount, in the public schools, and see what a howl that will raise.

It may be objected to the view I have taken that since Catholics, Protestants, and Jews have different versions of the Bible—though as to the Old Testament, the Decalogue, there is little difference—it would be impracticable to teach Bible morals satisfactorily to all forms any one edition of the book. No one, I think, believes that the entire Bible should or could be taught in the public schools. We are not doing that now in our Sunday Schools in all grades alike. What is suggested is that of the Bible, those most essential to private decency and public probity, should be compiled.

Selections from the Most Salient Teachings

I feel like saying this as to the hopefulness of such a proposition, that if it is declared to be impossible that Catholics, Protestants, and Jews can agree on a compendium of Bible teachings for use in the public schools, then why hope any more that there will ever be a united Christendom? Why talk any more about a world fellowship of nations and peoples?

If we cannot think of having peace between religious bodies, why cling to the delusion that we may have peace between political bodies? If peace is ever to smile on the whole earth, who does not believe that it must begin with agreement on some fundamentals, and peace between those who claim to be the leaders in and apostles of world peace?

"Physician, Heal Thyself"

we retort to religion when it tells us that we should have no more war.

Teaching religion and morals to the childhood of America is not a matter of sentiment. As Mr. Edison says, it has become—if not always so—a matter of self-preservation. It is the only serum that will antidote poison that is fast making America the most criminal people on earth. We have to do something, or there will be nothing left to do anything about. —John F. Cowan, D. D., in C. E. World.

RESOLUTIONS

Resolutions presented and passed at the First National Convention of Evangelists and Christian Workers, held at the Moody Memorial Church, Chicago, January 4 to 11, 1931.

The Resolutions Committee was composed of the following men: W. E. Biederwolf, Charles Reign Seoville, John S. Hamilton, Harry O. Anderson, E. C. Miller and George T. Stephens. These Resolutions were read by George T. Stephens, secretary, of High Point, N. C.; were seconded by Marshall Mott, of Winston-Salem, N. C.; and were presented for action by the president, Harry W. Vom Bruch, to an audience of fully 5,000 people that packed the Moody Memorial church on Sunday afternoon, January 11, 1931, by whom they were unanimously adopted.

FIRST RESOLUTION—The Convention of Evangelists and Christian Workers assembled in the Moody Memorial church in the City of Chicago, January 11, 1931, do hereby through a unanimously adopted resolution convey to Herbert Hoover, our great and beloved President of the United States, their heartiest approval of the splendid and determined efforts towards the preservation of the majesty of the laws of our land by his program of efficient law enforcement, and we hereby pledge to him the sympathetic support of the Evangelists and Christian Workers of these United States in all his efforts towards National righteousness.

SECOND RESOLUTION—Be it further resolved, that we go on record as endorsing the law enforcement programs sponsored by worthy agencies throughout our beloved land in an endeavor to save our fair country and restore respect for the law. We further believe it incumbent upon every community to arouse public sentiment in their own respective communities; and there is a need that each community take local action at this time, and announce it far and wide.

THIRD RESOLUTION—Be it further resolved, that we go on record as deploring the great lethargy now manifest in our churches throughout the land toward our great missionary cause, whereby it is necessary to recall hundreds of our missionaries. Also that we as a group of Evangelists are interested in the great work our missionary organizations are doing through regular channels. And we go on record to urge all of our members to deliver missionary appeals wherever possible; not only to secure volunteer young men and young women, but volunteers who will open their pocketbooks and that means may be forthcoming that will check this great retreat in the missionary ranks.

FOURTH RESOLUTION—It is hereby resolved in this National Convention of Evangelists and Christian Workers that we unqualifiedly endorse and sponsor the ministry of evangelism in the activities of the Christian Church at large by the preaching of the pure Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ in special mass meetings, together with a person-to-person appeal. We believe this method of bringing the Gospel of Christ to a lost, sin-sick world by evangelists, pastors and Christian workers with ever increasing zeal and intensity will, under the power of the Holy Spirit, bring to pass another great awakening.

We are unalterably opposed to any methods in evangelism which savour of the sensational, spectacular or vaudeville features to attract the attention of the crowds, and believe only in a sane, Scriptural, and dignified ministry as the method of appeal our Lord will bless with abiding victory.

FIFTH RESOLUTION—Further, it is our firm conviction that the deepest need of this crucial hour is a God-honoring, Christ-exalting, Bible-preaching, family-praying, brother-loving, heart-cleansing, soul-saving revival from Heaven. We also believe that such a Heaven-sent revival is the only means that will save us Internationally, commercially, industrially, domestically, morally, ecclesiastically and religiously. With all our hearts we believe this great revival is very near, and during this convention of Evangelists and Christian Workers we have heard the sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees, and have felt the power and presence of the Holy Spirit upon us. We now call on all of God's dear children to fall on their knees, humble themselves and confess their sins; then our God will hear from Heaven, forgive our sins, heal our land and pour out His Spirit and bless us abundantly. (2nd Chron. 7:14.)

The Convention unanimously voted that this Convention be made an annual affair, and that the next Convention shall be held for eight days from Sunday, December 27, 1931, to January 3, 1932. A committee of three was appointed to receive invitations and decide on the place for the next National Convention of Evangelists and Christian Workers. This committee consists of: George T. Stephens, chairman; Harry Vom Bruch, president of the association; and E. C. Miller, treasurer and secretary.

WHEN MEN QUIT TOBACCO

WILL H. BROWN

It has been demonstrated many times that men CAN quit the use of tobacco when the motive is strong enough, whether self-imposed or imposed by others. A state corporation commissioner of Los Angeles was fined $50 for smoking in a national forest. A smoker near Red Bluff, Calif., whose smoking started a grass fire, was "sentenced" to quit smoking for a year, the judge adding: "You can quit; and if you quit for a year, you can quit for a hundred years."

Many times men quit tobacco when a physician rattles "the skull and cross-bones" in front of them. Here is an incident to the point: L. E. Eubanks tells in Good Health magazine of an athlete he knew who performed in a circus; whose specialty was the cycle-whirl, a highly dangerous performance, requiring a world of coolness and nerve. This athlete was a heavy smoker of cigarettes. He quit the circus when 40, saying age had made him nervous. He was advised by a doctor to give up cigarettes. The result of following the doctor's advice was such an unexpected improvement in health, strength and ambition that he went back to his circus work, with the same success that he had enjoyed years before.

A barber in Maine who had smoked for 25 years, says he had to quit smoking because of injury to his eyes. He would not even permit others to smoke in his shop, for the same reason.

A New York man of 79 who practiced "slapping" his body after each bath, said he felt much better than formerly. In an interview, however, he said: "I quit smoking ten years ago." The reason was not given. It is presumable that he felt the need of getting the nicotine out of his body. This may have had more to do with his improved condition than the "slapping."

WHAT IS LIFE?

REV. W. A. LEDFORD

To this vital question many answers may be received. James thinks of life as a "vapor"; Job describes it, "as swift as a weaver's shuttle," and the Psalmist employs two metaphors, "dust" and "smoke." These all think of life as something short, vanishing and transitory. None of them go as far as the dying French Skeptic, who exclaimed, "I am now through with the farce and I go to the perhaps."

While these inspired writers think of this life as something that will soon be over; yet, they see in it something that is of more value than all worlds. The worth of life must be seen in the light of the Atonement. If one wants to know the real worth of this life, don't go to the skeptics, nor men in their gloomy moments; but go to Jesus Christ, who left His Father's throne that He might redeem the world from sin. Life for the consecrated man of God, in his Father's world, is far more than any mere farce, and he has something far better to go to than the skeptic's "perhaps." When he leaves this world, he does not go on a "Great Adventure," but goes to his Father's house of many mansions.

*"Thy Kingdom Come"The High Point Meeting

February 5.—A group of nearby pastors and laymen were called in conference on this date to consider some important conference matters. The meeting was held at First church, and was attended by about 25 ministers, laymen and laywomen. The chief purpose of the meeting was to consider plans for raising the allotment made by the conference for High Point College maintenance. President Humphreys and Brother Harrison were present, and each spoke encouragingly of the college. Mr. J. Norman Wills, the secretary and treasurer of the Board of Education, was also present, and participated in the discussion. After thoroughly considering the manner of procedure in raising this allotment, the unanimous decision of the meeting was to set apart February and March for this purpose. We are, therefore, designating this period as "High Point College Months." The plan is to raise the total allotment at each church during this time, in cash and in pledges. It will be necessary to have a certain amount of cash promptly. Some churches will be able to raise their allotments now, and provide the college with this needed money. Others may not be able to raise in full now, but can pay a part; in that case, we are asking that the remaining allotment be covered by pledges to be paid later in the year. The plan briefly stated is this: As Much Immediate Money As Possible to Enable the College to Meet Some Pressing Obligations, and Balance of Allotment Covered by Pledges to be Paid Later in the Year.

There was earnest support in the meeting of this plan, and we have full confidence that pastors and churches that were not represented in this meeting will give full co-operation to this effort. In planning for the meeting, we had regard to the distance that many pastors and laymen would have to travel in order to be present, and therefore called only those who were nearer by. A committee was created, composed of J. E. Pritchard, N. M. Harrison, T. M. Johnson, J. D. Morris, and S. W. Taylor, to promote this undertaking, and to render every assistance possible in bringing it to a successful termination.

Some pastors have plans already for raising their allotments; all will, of course, begin now to work definitely on this matter. We trust that by next Sunday several churches may have their allotments in hand. And please let the amount go promptly to Dr. Brown, so it may be available at once for the college. CHURCHES MAY TAKE CREDIT ON THEIR ALLOTMENTS FOR ANY PAYMENTS ON COLLEGE PLEDGES. Everybody ready, now, and let's get this over in a good way during February and March.

Winston—First Church

On Friday night, February 6, it was the good pleasure of my son and myself to attend a most delightful occasion at this church—a Father and Son banquet. This is an annual event in Brother Pritchard's church calendar. He has these banquets on all charges that he serves, and finds them always full of pleasure and profit. The women of the church were up to their high standard in the splendid meal that was served; and their pastor spoke very commendingly of the readiness and ease with which they did it. About 60 fathers and sons were present, and every one was in the spirit of the occasion. We were glad to find Brother Whitaker and Brother Gerringer present and to share in their good fellowship. We wish that we could compel the invader of Brother Whitaker's chicken roost to restore his hens. A chicken thief, alas! is no respecter of persons. Brother Pritchard and his wife are very happy in their new field of labor, and their feelings are fully reciprocated by their congregation. People and pastor are very hopeful of a good year. Brother Pritchard announced that only three HERALD subscribers were lacking to complete the full allotment to that church. We suspect that these subscriptions will be in the hands of the editor before this report reaches him. No more loyal Methodist Protestants are to be found any where than we have in our Winston church. This occasion recalled vividly the happy four years that we spent with them as pastor. We were glad to be back again, and we thank Brother Pritchard for the invitation that made this privilege possible for us.

Asheville-Weaverville-Democrat

We are giving two days—February 8-9—to these charges. Sunday morning was spent with the Asheville church in Sunday School lesson with a group of adults, and to preach in the service that followed. The attendance was not large on either occasion, but gratifying. There were about forty present at the 11 o'clock hour. A brief business meeting followed this service. The money depression, and certain financial obligations that the church desires to meet, makes it impossible, they feel, to support a pastor at this time. They hope to get these obligations cleared up, and then they will be ready to maintain a pastor and go forward with their work. The Sunday School, C. E. Society, and Auxiliary are all functioning well, and regular Sunday morning services are conducted by visiting speakers. The parsonage is rented, though it must be recovered, and a new heating plant installed in the church. Our people here have our deep concern and prayers, and our readiness to render them every possible assistance in working out their problems.

The night service was at Weaverville. The attendance here was most gratifying, and we trust that pleasing and helpful impressions were made by the service. A most hopeful sign in this church is the marked interest shown on the part of a group of boys and young men. Their loyalty and helpfulness was a matter of comment on the part of the pastor and other leaders in the church. God's blessings upon them! May their interest and usefulness increase. Our people here are hopeful, earnest, and active. An improved church building would add to their usefulness and growth. We trust that this desire of their hearts may yet be realized. Their immediate project in repairing the parsonage and beautifying the parsonage grounds. Brother Casto is one of the moving spirits in this undertaking. With but little cost improvements can be made that will add much to the appearance of the property and to the comfort of the parsonage family. We trust that this undertaking may go forward to an early completion. Brother and Sister Cowan have been most cordially received here, both by the church and the community. They are happy in their work and hopeful of a good year.

At this writing we have not had any contact with the churches on Democrat charge, and weather conditions do not give promise of that during this visit. However, we are to see Brother Thompson, the pastor, tonight, and will get from him a report of the work.

Weaver College

We are accorded the honor this morning of speaking before the faculty and student body of Weaver college. This institution has served long and well, both in this immediate community and throughout this section of the state. We had the privilege of holding our Young People's Training School here a few years ago. It was a pleasure to us to be back again for this short visit. We wish for President Trowbridge and the Institution continued success.

Well

It will be gratifying to the many friends of Rev. J. S. Williams to know that he has fully recovered from his accident of some weeks ago, and that he is "on the job" now with his usual zeal. He and his estimable wife are bringing untold blessings to thousands of sick and unfortunate to whom they are constantly ministering. It was a gladness to us to be their guest in their home. We had a short visit with Brother Helms on our way up to the hills, and since arriving, we have had a little time with Brothers Casto and Thompson. Expect more fellowship with them before leaving this community. We have enjoyed the day with Brother and Sister Cowan in their home, and they, with others who have ministered to our welfare and comfort, have the fully measure of our appreciation.

A study of this report will be rewarded by some interesting and pleasing facts.

Fifteen years ago we had 115 ministers and preachers; now we have 148, an increase of 28%. We had then 64 charges; now 87, an increase of 36%. We had then 21,906 members; we have now 30,109, an increase of 37%. Then we had 18,009 in Sunday School; now our enrollment is 26,263, an increase of 45%. Fifteen years ago, we had 8 C. E. societies, with 237 members! now we report 119 societies, and 3,069 members. The number of Missionary organizations and Aid Societies is not given in the Journal of 1915, but judging from the amount of money raised then and now, these organizations have had marked growth in these fifteen years. We have now 81 auxiliaries and 42 Aid Societies, with 2,541 members in the former, and 972 in the latter. By the new order of women's work the Aid Society is gradually being merged with the Auxiliary. Our church paper subscription has grown only 318 during this period. In our finances, an increase in property values, is where we show our greatest gain. Last year we paid our pastors $104,390, as against $33,204 fifteen years ago. This is a gain of 214%. The Woman's Auxiliary raised last year for New Century Service, $6,889, as against $1,212 in 1915 raised by the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. combined, an increase of 46%. The Auxiliary raised last year for local purposes, $14,245. In 1915, the Aid Societies raised for local purposes, $3,009, as against $8,154 last year—an increase of 169%. In addition to what our women raised last year for New Century Service, they raised $2,714 for North Carolina Work. The total amount raised by the women last year appears to be $32,002. Their total for 1915 is, $4,221—an increase during fifteen years of $27,781, or 558%.

In 1915 we raised for Young People's Work, $61; last year the receipts through the Sunday Schools and C. E. societies amounted to $368, and this was supplemented by the amount raised in registration fees for the Summer Training School. I do not have information just now as to what that amounted to. But our increase in this phase of our work is to be measured more by what our Conference Council of Religious Education is doing in promoting training schools throughout the conference, and vacation Bible schools, than by the actual money that we are raising. Judged by this, we have made marked progress in this field during this period, and the prospects now are highly encouraging for increasing growth in this department. Fifteen years ago our total amount raised for annual and general conference purposes was $64,994; last year it was $264,315, an increase of nearly $200,000, or 306%. Our total net value in all church and parsonage property in 1915, was $408,141; last year it was $1,737,707, an increase of $1,329,656, or 301%.

Every thing about this comparison is highly encouraging except the spiritual aspect of it, as measured by the professions reported. Last year, with thirty thousand members, and ninety-two charges, we had fewer professions, by seventeen, than we did in 1915, when we had only 64 charges and 20,000 members. But spiritual assets are not so easily counted as material, and doubtless we have made more progress here than we are able to tabulate. Unmistakably, the conference is much stronger today than it ever was. Two of our biggest assets, the College and the Children's Home, have hardly been touched in this comparison. To count them in our property value would be swelled many thousands, and the working program of the conference magnified many fold. There is surely in this comparison much to strengthen our hearts, and to cause us to lay hold upon our work with joy and confidence, in as much as we "know that our labor has not been in vain in the Lord."

DAYS

Glad days, sad days, duly ebb and flow,
Long days, wrong days, serpentine and slow,
Brief days, grief days, laden deep with woe,
Days that all must have an Ending.

Free days, glee days, flitting here and there,
Chill days, ill days, difficult to bear,
Mood days, brood days, fraught with carking care,
Days that all must have an Ending.

Bright days, right days, pleasant things to do,
Mild days, wild days, making much ado,
Gay days, play days, happy times for you,
Days that all must have an Ending.

Slave days, grave days, naught but toilsome work,
Worst days, curst days, times all like to shirk,
Bleak days, freak days, wherein dangers lurk,
Days that all must have an Ending.

Great days, fete days, beauty-filled and light,
Fair days, rare days, swift as eagle's flight,
Best days, zest days, ere the peaceful night,
Days that all must have an Ending.

—Grenville Kleiser.

DO WE LOVE ONE ANOTHER

"It is easy to say 'Love one another,' but there are some people whom one can't love." This statement, from the lips of a babe in Christ, expresses all too well the attitude of many more-seasoned Christians, who make it their business to love only the loveable.

We have the great example of love in our Lord Jesus Christ. Inglis Fleming speaks of His love as our pattern:

"In Ephesians 5:5 we have the pattern of love. Let us never forget that Christ gave Himself for us. The Cross was the downward sign; the love came down as a sacrifice. Here we get the pattern love of Christ! It is a pattern for us. How much am I to love my fellow-Christians? As Christ has loved me. The Lord said in a corresponding Scripture in John: 'That ye love one another as I have loved you'. Love one another; walk in love as Christ also hath loved us. Whom am I to love? How much? As Christ has loved me. How much did He love me? You know John 3:16? Yes, in the Gospel, but do you know what it is in the Epistle? First John 3:16: 'Hereby perceive we the love of God, because He laid down His life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.' And we ought to—we owe it, somebody has said—we are debtors; if He laid down His life for us we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren; for all who are Christ's."—The Pilot.

In 44 of the 49 states the leading cause is listed as 'strictly preventable' —Tom Mooney, convicted of throwing a death-dealing bomb, has been in a California prison for fifteen years. There is some doubt of his guilt and repeated effort has been made to secure his pardon. But no governor has come to his rescue. If he is innocent it is a sad miscarriage of justice. United States Senator Wheeler declares it is a case of conspiracy against Mooney because he was a labor agitator. Associate Justice Langdon of the California Supreme Court dissented from the judgment of that court. The case is involved in mystery, but it has been said that it is better for two guilty men to go free than for one innocent man to be severely punished. We are sorry for Mr. Mooney and we wish the governor of California would give Mr. Mooney the benefit of doubt and release him.

THE LOST BALL

Mary lived in a white house surrounded by a large, beautiful yard. Around the yard was a tall, thick hedge.

Johnny lived in a nice yellow house next door.

Mary and Johnny became good friends, and played together, went to school together, and to Sunday School together.

One day Johnny went shopping with his father and mother. He saw a nice ball in the store that he wanted very much, so he asked his father if he might have it. His father said he had been a good boy so bought the ball for him.

Johnny could hardly wait until he got home to run show his new ball to Mary. Mary thought it was a fine ball too and begged Johnny to stay and play. They had a fine time and Johnny went often to play ball in Mary's yard.

One day they had been playing as usual when suddenly the ball disappeared. They hunted and hunted but could not find it. Johnny felt so badly about losing his new ball that he got naughty and blamed Mary. He said she hid it because she wanted it for herself. But Mary said she did not, and Johnny said she did. Poor Mary felt so badly to have Johnny blame her that she went into the house crying, then Johnny went home crying too.

Johnny's mother tried to talk to him and tell him that he should not blame Mary, and that she was sure the ball was somewhere in the yard, but he said it was not.

The next day Mary came running over calling, "Johnny, oh, Johnny, I have found the ball; come see where it is!" Johnny hurried to follow her. She went to the hedge and there lay the lost ball in a small hole in the hedge. Both children shouted with delight, then Johnny stopped and looked at Mary with a shamed face and said, "Mary, I am sorry I blamed you, will you forgive me?" Then Mary took Johnny's hand said, "yes," and both children were happy again.—Selected.

ALWAYS OBEY YOUR PARENTS

Mrs. Lewis was going Christmas shopping, and took her eight-year-old daughter with her to Wanamaker's large store. It was very crowded and they could hardly buy anything.

She had bought everything but Elsie's present, so took her to the book counter and told her to sit there quietly until she came back. Elsie promised, and Mrs. Lewis went off, leaving her there.

Elsie watched the gaily-dressed crowd pushing to and fro. Presently a neatly dressed lady came and spoke to her.

"Elsie, your mamma told me to come and get you; she is at the lace counter, and there is such a rush that she sent me."

"I can't go, ma'am, because I told mamma I would wait."

"But she sent me."

"I can't go, because I promised to sit here."

"Well, if your mamma sent me for you, you ought to mind her."

"I won't go because I don't believe mamma sent for me, for she told me to stay here! There! And I just believe you want to carry me off. Mamma has told me about that."

"Well," said the lady with a sigh, "I'll have to tell her you won't come, and she will have to push through this crowd after you."

But Elsie had turned her back to the lady and would not listen.

Presently Mrs. Lewis came and said, "Come on, Elsie, we must be going now."

Elsie looked at her mother in wonder, for she fully expected a scolding, then said, "So you didn't send a lady for me after all?"

"What lady?" said Mrs. Lewis surprised.

Then Elsie told her all that happened, and Mrs. Lewis said in a trembling voice:

"I'm so glad you obeyed me, dear, because I have heard about that lady, and she has been trying to steal a child for a reward. Remember this, daughter, 'always obey your parents' and you will be all right."

"Yes; I always will," giving her mother's hand a squeeze.—Epworth Herald.

THE SECRET OF POWER

The power of a church is not measured by its numerical strength. It is not uniformly indicated by its increase in membership, yet a church that has power is likely to be steadily growing in numbers. The powerful church is the one that secures definite results—results spiritual and otherwise in the conversion of souls and in the culture, up-building and usefulness of believers. It requires a power that not every church possesses to produce these results.

It is said that from one church in Chicago forty young men went into the ministry during the pastorate of one man. If forty young men went into the ministry because of this pastor and these members they have had unusual spiritual power. There must have been a spiritual pulpit, a spiritual people with spiritual prayer and other meetings. Developing such a spirit of loyalty to Christ as finds expression in aggressive Christian effort, they made their strength count.—The C. U. Herald.

THE UNITED STATES OF EUROPE

Aristide Briand of France continues to hold this idea close to his heart and mind. The present meeting of the League of Nations at Geneva cannot get away from it. The ideal will not down. Russia and Turkey, two non-members of the League, are now included in the committees working on the the proposal. Germany and Italy were insistent in the demand that these two nations should be represented. There is suspicion reported in the press particularly in France to the effect that such a suggestion coming from Rome and Germany envisages an alignment of Rome, Berlin, Moscow and Angora and that this group of nations all stand for revision of the Treaty of Versailles.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By J. T. BOWMAN

President High Point College C. E. Society

Feb. 22: EVERY CHRISTIAN A MISSIONARY
Scripture Text—Acts 1:6-8; 4:8; 13:1-3

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Missionary Enthusiasm, Acts 2:41-47.

Tuesday—Personal Work, Acts 8:26-40.

Wednesday—Missionary Results, Acts 8:1-8.

Thursday—Healing Service, Acts 14:8-18.

Friday—Missionary Vision, Acts 16:9-13.

Saturday—Soul Winners, Acts 16:25-34.

To the Leader

Every Christian should be and is a missionary. The most important form of personal work is that of winning others to Christ and then there is that which began at once in the church at Jerusalem, the nurture and directing of Christians and the care of the unfortunate. We have these today and we must not become so interested in one that we forget the other for they must both be carried on.

Missions is the seeding process of the church. By this means new converts are made, new churches founded, new territory entered. Each and every Christian should be anxious and willing to do his part. Christ has given us a work to do and may we always be ready to serve Him. He offered a more abundant life, something every one ought to desire.

To Be Discussed

1. What is the difference between a missionary and an evangelist?
2. Is it necessary to go into a distant part of the world to be a missionary?
3. How can we be missionaries now?
4. How can we share our gifts?
5. Why are we so sensitive about approaching any one on the subject of obedience to Christ?
6. Were you displeased or peeved when some one spoke to you about being a Christian? Or did you feel happy that you had been remembered?

Poetry

If I have eaten my morsel alone

The patriarch spake in scorn.

What would he think of the church, were he shown

Heathendon huge, forlorn,

Godless, Christless, with soul unfed,

While the church's ailment is fulness of bread,

Eating her morsel alone?

Lord, let me live from day to day

In such a self-forgetful way

That, even when I kneel to pray,

My prayer may be for others.

Help me in all the work I do,
To ever be sincere and true,
And know that all I'd do for you
Must needs be done for others.

Let self be crucified and slain,
And buried deep nor rise again,
And may all efforts be in vain
Unless they be for others.

And when my work on earth is done,
And my new work in heaven's begun
May I forget the crown I've won,
While thinking still of others.

—Meigs.

J. CLYDE AUMAN, Treas.

February 10, 1931.

—An accident which involves two Methodist Protestant families in poignant grief occurred near Greensboro last Monday morning. Mr. A. B. Hunter, Misses Lillian Myrtle Richardson and Agnes Stewart, all teachers in Alamance high school, were returning from Charlotte, accompanied by Mr. M. F. Stallings. They were in Mr. Hunter's car and he was driving. A door flew open and while Mr. Hunter was trying to close it the car swerved against a telegraph pole. Miss Richardson fell out and was fatally injured, dying before she reached a hospital. She is a daughter of Brother J. T. Richardson of Haw River charge. Mr. Hunter's parents are members on West Forsyth charge. All these will have the sympathy of many friends. Miss Richardson's funeral service was held at Fair Grove church on Tuesday.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

As Secretary of Christian Education for the Branch, we have prepared quite a bit of material to be used by the local secretaries of Christian Education in your Auxiliary and Circle meetings. We mailed copies of this material to as many secretaries of Christian Education as we had listed. If you failed to receive this material, please write me to that effect and we will see that you have it by return mail. As soon as you have received this Christian Education material you are urged to make immediate use of it.

Christian Education secretaries are asked by our constitution to prepare once a year in your Auxiliary a Christian Education program. You will find a suggestive Christian Education program with the other Christian Education material which I have or will mail you. If we can assist you further in your work, please let us hear from you.

MRS. H. W. MAIER,

Secretary of Christian Education
North Carolina Branch.

MISSIONARY EDUCATION

There is supposed to be a Secretary of Missionary Education in each Auxiliary. When a secretary is appointed, his first question is always, "Well, what am I supposed to do?" I shall attempt to here outline the duties of the Secretary of Missionary Education with the hope that our secretaries of this department may follow as many of the suggestions here given as possible:

1. Find someone in your church to give a course of missionary education to your little children in your church and Sunday school between the ages of six and nine. "Children of the Sea and Sun" by Mable Garrett Wagner is recommended as a series of mission lessons to be used from March until August. This is a small book of missionary stories and plans for primary children, and can be secured from Mrs. Marie Thompson, 516 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md., for seventy-five cents.

2. Secure a person who will give a course of missionary instruction to your juniors, boys and girls from nine to twelve. "Sugar is Sweet" by Dorothy McConnell, price seventy-five cents, is recommended for use from March through August. This book of stories and missionary lessons is a study of the Caribbean Islands and may be given through the Sunday school, Junior Christian Endeavor, Junior church or a Junior missionary society or circle.

3. Discover from among your people a competent person to give your intermediate boys and girls a course in missionary education. Enroll in such a study all boys and girls between the ages, twelve to fifteen. "West Indian Treasures" by Winifred Hulbert is the text book of information recommended for

Clothing and Other Gifts

Some one, Snow Camp, N. C., 2 lilac bushes and 1 white ash.

Miss Anniebell Thompson, 8 plates for dining room.

Miss Laura Thompson, 20 glasses for dining room.

Mr. T. M. Crutchfield, Etland, N. C., a good farm bell.

Mrs. W. F. Grabs, King, N. C., apples as usual.

Some weeks ago we reported some materials as having come to us from Knob Creek, Fallston. We learn that it came from Laurel Hill instead. We gladly make correction.

Young Trees and Shrubbery

The time is here now to begin planting shrubbery and young trees, and having enlarged our campus we need at once some maple trees, some crepe myrtle and just lots of shrubbery for the yard around the cottage and between the cottage and girls' dormitory. We would like some lilac bushes, especially the purple.

We just received promise today of some cherry trees from upper New York, a very fine variety. If you haven't the shrubbery and will send us the money nurserymen will sell to us at reduced prices. Thank you.

Hymn Books

Our hymn books are completely given out. We need 30 persons who will send us $1.00 to buy hymn books. A young lady visiting in the home yesterday agreed to give the first dollar. Who will be the next?

That Two-Horse Wagon

One brother wrote us and offered to sell us a good two-horse wagon, but we are still hoping some body is going to make that gift to the home. Of course we want one that will stand the strain of heavy hauling. Who will answer?

We very quickly secured a farm bell this way, as reported above.

We thank all of you for your thought of us. Please keep it up; for the recent sickness in the home has added materially to our expenses. The added cost will be $300.00, and more. Pray for us, and give as the Lord may direct. Thank you and God bless you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

LINEBERRY CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

We were very glad indeed of the privilege of meeting with Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Bingham to hold our regular business meeting on January 31. The following program was rendered: Song service conducted by Grady Burkhead; devotional was conducted by Rev. E. A. Bingham. After the business had been transacted, the society adjourned for the social hour, during which the social committee, by the help of all present, rendered some interesting games.

The Young People's program, "Youth Adventuring in the Christian Quest," was rendered here on last Sunday, with the pastor preaching to the Young People in the morning, and the Christian Endeavor giving their program on "Youth Adventuring in the Christian Service," in the evening. We were delighted to have so many visitors with us from other churches. You are cordially invited to come again, we are glad to have you at any time.

We as the C. E. society are very sorry that Mr. Jesse Taylor, one of our faithful members, is deprived of the opportunity of being with us in our Christian Endeavor and also Sunday school. We miss his face, his presence, and hope and pray for his recovery. Also Mrs. C. O. Lanier of Hardy who has been very ill.

This splendid weather we are now having, should cheer us up a bit; make us feel fresh and new, and take a new start in the Christian work and by doing this we can make our C. E. and Sunday school the best yet.

PRESS COMMITTEE.

If the brethren who remit to the treasurer will make their checks payable to Geo. R. Brown, Treasurer, I shall appreciate it. I shall be doubly grateful when the brethren get the habit of remitting dollars only, keeping fractional parts of a dollar as a balance in their treasuries.

During the remainder of February and all of the month of March the assessment for the College is to be raised. The need is urgent and we are sure that our people will meet it promptly and fully.

GEORGE R. BROWN, Treasurer.

MY VALENTINE

You put a rosbud
In your hair;
I knew, dear heart,
Why it was there.

You spoke a word
That made me strong,
And changed depression
Into song.

You said your faith
Would do for two;
So hand in hand
I walk with you.

Patient: "So I've got to have an anaesthetic. How long will it be before I know anything?"

Doctor: "Now don't expect too much of the anaesthetic."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Union Grove.—Since the last report, which was at the beginning of the year, the health of the community is not so good. Lots of people are suffering from flu, which is a very bad disease.

Mr. Powell, our minister, delivered another very splendid sermon on last Sunday morning. His sermon was based upon sin, which is a very dangerous disease, if I may explain it in this way. After the sermon we had communion in remembrance of our Saviour. The majority of the congregation took part in this service.

Mr. Powell has been spending a short while with some of the members after every service, which is enjoyed very much.

We are asking for the prayers of all you Christian people.

LILLIE BERRIER, Reporter.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—Mr. Joyner preached an excellent sermon last Sunday morning on "The Presence of God." We were very glad to have so many present to hear him, and hope that still more will hear his next sermon, which will be the third Sunday night.

Our Sunday school has entered a contest with the Beulah and New Hope churches, and we hope we will improve, if not win. It was decided that the winning church should be given a program by the other two.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stallings and Jack McCorkle were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clebern Stallings Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Phillips have returned home after spending some time with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Drye.

Misses Kathleen Hargette and Mary Jane Phillips were the guests of Miss Leith Drye Sunday.

IRMA DRYE, Reporter.

Winston, First.—Yesterday was the last yet during the present pastorate both at Sunday school and morning church services. There were 163 in S. S. as against 122 a year ago and 119, the December average. The number of points made in the contest with Charlotte was 440. The number present at the morning church service was 104 or fourteen more than at any other service during the present pastorate. And the weather was somewhat unfavorable also, and there is still a good deal of sickness among the membership. The increased attendance had a fine effect on both pastor and people. It is the determination of those in charge to press right on to the 200 mark which was the goal set for our S. S. Brother F. D. Voss, the superintendent, is working hard to accomplish this and the rest of us are helping the cause along.

Our Father and Son banquet last Friday evening proved to be a very great occasion. Sixty-seven fathers and sons were around the table to make the banquet a success. President Taylor delivered a wonderful message, directed largely to the boys. The pastor presided and in explaining the purpose of the meeting, said, it was to help the boys realize that the church cared for them and wanted them to love the church and to love all things that the church stands for. The women of the church served the banquet free to all.

We observed Young People's day on January 25, and had a fine programme by the young people at the evening hour, the pastor preaching a special sermon to the young people in the morning service.

In the Herald campaign we lack only two subscriptions of reaching our goal. We expect to reach the goal before the sun goes down this evening.

In answer to the questions of Rev. J. L. Trolinger in the Herald last week: We count everybody present at the services and divide this number by the number of members on the church roll. The country church has the advantage of the town church in that very few members of the Sunday school in the country leave before the preaching service, whereas in the towns a large number of them leave.

Yesterday was known as Every Member Day at our church. Of the 104 persons present at the morning service, 67 were members of the church. It was a singular fact that while 67 were present, just 200 were absent as we have 267 members. Of course some of them are on the other side of the earth, some sick and some do not come at all.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Winston.—The Philathea class of the First church met Monday evening at the Universal tea room with Miss Nannie Watson, Miss Leota Loggins and Mrs. J. R. Brewer, associate hostesses, with thirteen members, one new member, and one visitor present.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. W. C. Tise, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard presided, with Mrs. H. G. Paschal conducting the impressive devotional exercises, using the life of Paul as subject of her discourse. Prayer was offered by Rev. J. E. Pritchard.

The reports of the various committees were heard and approved and forty visits to the sick and shut-ins were reported, with Mrs. B. K. Milloway winning an attractive prize for having made the greater number of visits.

The class voted to continue the offer of this prize for the month of February.

A delightful social hour followed the business session and delicious refreshments were served, with the valentine suggestions carried out in detail.

The meeting adjourned to meet again the first Monday evening in March with Mesdames B. K. Milloway, T. C. Milloway and Miss Margaret Masten, associate hostesses.

Asheboro.—William Frank Redding III, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Redding Jr., was baptized at the morning service on Sunday, February 1st. Our pastor preached an excellent sermon on "Pictures of Christ."

We had with us at this morning worship Mr. and Mrs. George Ross and sons, George Jr., and William Goley, of Raleigh, and Mrs. N. M. Harrison, Sr., mother of Rev. N. M. Harrison.

Our pastor had a birthday on January 29; the S. S. classes of Miss Esther Ross and Mr. Robert T. Lloyd gave him a nicely bound Methodist Protestant Hymnal with his name engraved on it, upon this occasion, for which he expressed his gratitude and for birthday cards received also.

Mr. Stubbins has been confined to his home for several days with influenza, but is improving and expects to be out in a few days.

He was unable to fill his appointment last Sunday but he had a real good substitute, Rev. N. M. Harrison preached at the morning hour, delivering a splendid message. Mr. Robert Lloyd preached at the evening hour giving us a good sermon.

On next Sunday evening, February 15, the Woman's auxiliary will hold their Thank Offering service. An attractive calendar of directory of the church for this year are being distributed to the members.

Albemarle Tidings.—The regular monthly communion service observed on the first Sunday of February was very beautiful and largely attended. Our communion services are always the sweetest and most beautiful of the month. It is indeed inspiring to witness the very large portion of this congregation, both young and old and often in families, kneeling at this beautiful altar in this sacred service. At times souls have become full almost to the point of overflowing while at the communion altar.

And heaven comes down our souls to greet, While glory crowns the mercy-seat.

At the last communion service Mrs. Lee Threese was received by statement from the Baptist church as a new member. We are indeed glad to have Mrs. Threese with us.

By order of the quarterly conference our monthly meeting or monthly congregational conference is to meet during the week following the First Sunday of each month. The February conference was entered into by our people in a very interesting manner. Various matters were discussed and it is believed that good will come out of these meetings.

At the mid-week services the pastor had been discussing "The Bible and the Folks," as a continued subject. The people have been kind enough to say that these subjects were interesting.

At a recent worker's council of the Sunday school the workers showed themselves much interested in working out plans that would mean a higher development of the Sunday school work. The Sunday school here is doing a fine piece of work but one of the fine things of it is that they see where they may further develop themselves. The best is yet to come for Albemarle Sunday school.

The Beginner's and Primary departments have recently been furnished with new tables around which the classes gather. These tables have been designed and built on the semi-circle style. The writer has observed and studied many styles of class tables but has found none that seems more ideal than these. They were built by a local manufacturing concern.

The Golden Links which is a work in our church equivalent to the Junior and Intermediate Christian Endeavor societies is doing a most splendid work under the supervision of Mrs. Allen Wagner for the Juniors and Mrs. Carl S. Moten for the Intermediates. A public program was rendered from the choir loft on last Sunday night in the presence of a large congregation. All present were well pleased and highly edified.

The pastor and family are indeed grateful to Brother Ralph Andrews for one year's subscription to the Stanley Press, our local paper, and Brother D. J. Hatley for a truck load of oak wood for heater.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Union Grove, Mocksville Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, last Sunday morning preached a most inspiring sermon on "The Christian Invitation and the Duties of the Christian Life." We had one of the largest congregations of the year.

Our protracted meeting will be held the fourth Sunday in September. It will be conducted on a somewhat different plan from usual. Our pastor and the church has invited several ministers from neighboring churches to help in the meeting. We are expecting some six or eight ministers to be with us.

It will be a union meeting in which Methodist, Baptist and all denominations will meet and worship together and work to defeat the devil. We are hoping for a great revival and we desire the prayers of all Christians that much and lasting good may be accomplished. Under the wise guidance of our faithful pastor we are expecting a great year.

Our Sunday pschool is progressing nicely, our superintendent, Mr. Blaine M. Madison, is having a summary of the lesson every Sunday, which is proving very interesting and helpful.

REPORTER.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Mr. Henderson brought a splendid sermon at the morning hour yesterday. Sunday school was good with a good collection, which goes to the Children's Home. The Young People's program was carried out at the evening hour. The pastor also gave a short talk to the young people. And in this talk he let us older folks see that we can help or hinder our young people by the life we live before them. Just before the benediction Mr. Tom Gaston was received into the church by letter. Little Elaine and Jerome Harrison had to miss Sunday school yesterday. They are both in bed with the flu.

We have quite a bit of sickness in our community now and pray that all the sick may soon be restored to health. Best regards to the Herald and its readers.

MISS LULA DEESE, Reporter.

We were glad to have some visitors to worship with us Sunday.

LOIS WILLIS, Reporter.

Mr. Gerringer can preach only once a month.

The flu is now passing through this city and we regret to learn that Mr. Earlie Warren is very ill.

The second conference will be held March 2, 1931.

PERMELIA SMITH, Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—The work in all its branches is being somewhat hindered because of sickness among our folks, but despite this handicap, all departments are moving forward admirably under the circumstances.

Mr. and Mrs. Hendry have both been sick but were out again Sunday. Mr. Hendry conducted both the morning and evening services as usual.

The evening services continue to be of much help and large congregations attend.

Special music is always a pleasing feature of these services. Last Sunday night the Crescent quartet was present. These fine singers always delight all who hear them.

Last Wednesday night a fellowship hour was enjoyed followed by the quarterly conference. On Wednesday night, January 28, both circles of the Missionary society met at the church for the regular program. A pleasing and helpful pageant was given at this time and some matters of business adjusted and a social period enjoyed.

Mr. John Leonard of this city taught the Men's Bible class of our church Sunday in his able and efficient way. The Ladies' Bible class visited with the men and enjoyed Mr. Leonard's fine address also.

Mrs. Hubbard of Rockingham county, mother of Mrs. Tom Neal of Lexington, visited Mr. and Mrs. Neal last week. We regret to learn that Mrs. Hubbard was taken sick here and cut her visit short on that account.

We were to have received some new members into the church last Sunday but sickness prevented their coming. We hope, however, to receive them soon. Mr. Qualls, manager of the Carolina Theatre here, was received into church membership a week ago last Sunday night.

Mrs. Qualls had joined our number several weeks ago. We are all very glad to add these fine people to our roll.

REPORTER.

Albemarle.—At the Sunday morning worship hour the men's quartet sang a very impressive number, "Calvary." Pastor Curry's subject was "Breaking Ground." He compared the breaking up of the soil to that of the human soul. He said that as we go out into the fields we find before we can plant the seed we must break up the soil, remove the old snags, roots and rocks. Therefore to plant the seed we must have patience and courage. This same patience and courage must be had when we deal with the soul of man. We cannot plant the seed without first cultivating the soil; to do this, we must take out the old Gospel plow and put the ground in shape if we accomplish things which will be pleasing and acceptable to the Lord.

The Sunday evening service was in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the Christian Endeavor. The young people, under the direction of Mrs. C. S. Moton, gave a very impressive program, after which Mr. Curry gave a short address.

The Ladies' Aid societies met the first Tuesday in this month. The Lucy Hatley circle met with Mrs. Ralph Andrews, but because of sickness several members were absent. The Kam Snotherly circle met with Mrs. John Whitlock; a good meeting was reported.

REPORTER.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—On last fourth Sunday morning our pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, preached a very interesting sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was administered to a large number of the congregation. We are glad to report that our S. S. is improving both in interest and attendance, there being 77 present last Sunday afternoon, also a large crowd was present for preaching.

On the first Sunday just after S. S. the young people had their C. E. meeting, conducted by Hollis Harrison; this was an interesting meeting, and these young people are faithful to their work. They very often have the meetings on Sunday nights in some of the homes. Mrs. C. W. Butler who has been confined to her room most of the winter is improving.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Fountain Place.—Last Sunday was a good day. The attendance at Sunday school was 102. It has been the desire of our superintendent to reach the hundred mark for several months. More than usual were present at our preaching service and our pastor, Mr. Bethea, preached a good sermon on hearing our cross.

The Annie Forest Philathea class has been awake for some time and is doing things. It has been divided into two parts for two months; each side is trying to raise the most money for the benefit of the church. Last Friday night an old-fashion spelling match was held by the side of which Miss Eloyse Jones is captain. The Blue back speller was used and Prof. Stout pronounced. Although the crowd was not large it was a pleasant and profitable evening. Recently the other side entertained at the home of their leader, Miss Myrtle Ledbetter, and all enjoyed the evening there.

The Ladies' auxiliary is planning to make vegetable soup this week to be sold Friday morning. It was also decided at the meeting last night to get another bag of peanuts, as the sale of peanuts seems to be profitable. We are planning to hold our Thank Offering service the first Sunday night in March at which time Mr. Bethea will tell of his experiences in Jerusalem.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Terrell have born unto them a daughter, Patricia Scott.

MRS. A. V. AMICK, Reporter.

Our faithful pastor, Rev. H. W. Bell, gave us a splendid sermon Sunday at 11 o'clock.

We are proud of our Sunday school: we have 197 members on roll. Our average attendance for January was 169. This is the largest Sunday school that we have ever had.

We have a splendid Christian Endeavor society which meets each Sunday evening. It is composed almost entirely of the young single people. We had a banquet at the home of one of the members Tuesday evening, February 3. A nice supper was served by several of the girls, and several of the boys furnished plenty of string music. All had a nice time in a good way.

The Ladies' Aid society met with Mrs. R. L. Binkley for the regular monthly meeting Friday evening, February 6th. Mrs. Binkley had charge of the devotional service, after which business was transacted. After the benediction the hostess served delicious cake, cocoa and dainty valentine favors.

Please pray for us in our work here.

REPORTER.

First Church, Charlotte.—As you have noticed the report in the Herald each week of the Winston-Charlotte contest you see our increase in Sunday school and church attendance. We have several sick with colds but there seems to be a general epidemic.

We enjoyed the splendid program put on here in Charlotte of station WBT last Friday evening by High Point college. It was a fine program well rendered and we feel very worthwhile to let the public know more of our college in High Point and our denomination.

The Story Lady hour has been discontinued for the present and some of our Juniors who were to be on next Sunday will be announced at a later date when they will broadcast again over WBT.

Miss Rosalie Andrews of High Point spent the week-end here with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Andrews.

Dr. and Mrs. Andrews have entered into the work here whole-heartedly and it is earnestly desired they may have the co-operation of the entire membership.

Tuesday the third of February, the Philathea class met with Mrs. R. M. Andrews for their regular monthly meeting. After the devotionals and business the social hour was enjoyed. Mrs. Andrews assisted by her daughter, Dorothea, served delicious refreshments.

Next Sunday morning Judge Harding will speak to the Baraca class and also the Young Men's class at the S. S. hour. A good attendance is desired.

Next Sunday evening, the 15th, the Woman's auxiliary will hold a Thank Offering service at 7:30 o'clock with an interesting program.

Tuesday afternoon of this week circles No. 1 and 2 will meet with Mrs. R. C. Millaway at her home on East Boulevard. The missionary year is almost gone and we have much to do yet. We have never failed to meet our budget, so we shall continue to work and pray that we may not come up lacking.

The World Day of Prayer will be observed in the city by the Interdenominational Missionary Union, February 20. Our ladies will take part in this program.

We are glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Penny to our city and also in our services.

English Street Church.—Rev. G. L. Reynolds brought to us a very inspiring sermon as "The Dangers of Falling by the Way-Side in Christian Warfare." He stated that today in the church we have great problems to deal with, and we must have strong men to handle these problems. The devil is working in new ways, and never has God needed real men more than today. "He that endures to the end shall be saved." We must fight on and at the end we will have won the crown of life. Let us go forward with determination to yield not to temptation. We were delighted to have with us at this service Mr. Francis Gibbs from Greensboro, who favored us with a vocal solo.

The members of our church were delighted to receive Mr. A. W. McBride, who has already proved to be very helpful in our Sunday school.

We regret to learn of the illness of so many of our Sunday school members, which has caused a decrease in our Sunday school for the past few Sundays. Two of our teachers are ill with influenza, Miss Irene Reynolds and Mr. B. A. Lockhart.

The Ladies' Aid and Brotherhood will meet with Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Gibson on Tuesday evening, February 10.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—Sunday at 11 a. m. we had with us our beloved president, S. W. Taylor, who preached to an attentive and appreciative congregation. A number were absent due to illness.

Dr. Taylor spoke on "Obedience to Christ." He showed that obedience to Christ both on the part of the church and the individual would result in the solution of many problems which we are facing is this most difficult and complex age. He referred to Dr. Chas. Jefferson of New York, and his visit to Greensboro in most complimentary terms; he considers Dr. Jefferson one of the greatest, if not the greatest, in America today; he revealed the secret of Dr. Jefferson's success and power of preaching: Is it to avoid "isms," "fads," and "cults" but always preach the Greater Christ. We might add by way of parenthesis, The All-Sufficient Christ. Dr. Taylor was making his annual visitation to W. N. C. going from here to Weaverville and Democrat. Dr. Taylor brought with him a distinct note of optimism, a feeling which he indicates is wide-spread throughout the church at this time. He was well received here, and we hope he will come again. We wish him every success in his work for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom.

Our S. S. children are looking forward with great anticipation to the valentine party Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the S. S. auditorium. Miss Verda McIntire, the superintendent, never forgets the children, and they all love here.

We are a small congregation but we will not give up and Dr. Taylor encouraged us so much. He told us to remember the scripture: "Despise not the day of small things. Through faith great things are accomplished."

The C. E. monthly meeting and social will be held at the home of the Misses Mildred and Janeth Younginer Friday evening at 7 o'clock. The members gave $5.00 at the last meeting toward the support of Rev. J. F. Minnis, our own N. C. missionary to Dublin, India.

Miss Verda McIntire returned to E. C. T. C. at Greenville, N. C., today, having spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. McIntire. Mrs. McIntire has been ill but is improving, we are glad to report. We are always glad to see her.

The Woman's auxiliary met Thursday with Mrs. G. M. Foster for their January meeting. A short business session was held after which a pleasant social was enjoyed, delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Foster assisted by her daughters Helen and Mary.

Due to a severe cold our S. S. Supt., Mr. E. C. Fawcett was absent from both services Sunday. He and Mrs. Fawcett are most loyal to us in every phase of our church work. They are never absent except for illness, and we miss them. If all our Methodist Protestants were as loyal and faithful, what wonders might we accomplish for the Master's work.

REPORTER.

First Church, High Point.—We are much grieved to announce the illness of C. L. Gray Jr., our splendid young worker and soloist in the choir, and a student of High Point college. He had influenza which developed into pneumonia. Special prayers were made by the minister at the Sunday morning service in his behalf, again in the auxiliary meeting Monday afternoon and later in a prayer service at the church preceding the C. E. meeting Monday evening. Every member of the congregation joins in the hope for his speedy recovery and prayers for strength and courage.

to be granted to the fond parents in this anxious and trying time.

On last Sunday, February 8, the church school under the superintendency of Prof. C. R. Hinshaw, convened at the usual hour, 9:45 o'clock, and the junior church met in the Assembly room with the leaders, Mesdames L. R. Johnston and S. S. Coe, at 11 o'clock. At the same hour the adult congregation worshipped in the auditorium, and after listening to a lovely violin solo, Handels' "Largo," by Miss Mildred Luce of the music faculty of High Point college, and a beautiful Anthem, "Gracious Saviour," sung by the choir, with organ accompaniment by Prof. E. B. Stimson in his usual masterful manner, we heard the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, sound a note of encouragement by his message, "The Inner Joy of Victory—Pergamos." This was the fifth in the series of letters to the seven churches of Asia, and was based on the text in Rev. 2:17: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." He said in part: "The greatest battles of life are those waged in the human heart as well as the greatest victories. Many a man who has led his armies to victory has had remorse in his heart, as Napoleon, who almost conquered the whole world was grier-stricken and lashed by his conscience in those lonely hours on St. Helena. If you would win a victory, you must pay the price. The hidden manna and new name is the result of a heart struggle. The pleasures of sin must be shunned in order to gain an inner victory. Helen Keller said 'Our greatest foes are our wavering spirits within.' The books of Phillips Brooks and Robert Browning can be bought with money, but you cannot buy the zeal and hidden power that prompted them to be written. Each life in this presence means tremendous influence in the kingdom unless God made a great mistake in creating it. If the price of victory is great, the price of defeat is greater. This letter to Pergamos teaches us that it is sin not to hate what God hates, and not to love what God loves. It takes Christ to make us free. The greatest reward of victory is a new name and fellowship with the Lord when you overcome temptation."

On Monday evening at the C. E. meeting Miss Ina McAdams was the leader on the topics, "What is Implied in God my Father?"

The Wednesday Evening Fellowship Suppers continue with much interest, and on the coming Wednesday the minister will discuss "Christian Heroism As Exemplified by Lincoln."

Circle No. 7 of the Auxiliary, Mrs. Lewis E. Teague, chairman, will be in charge of tables and coffee.

At their handsome home, "Pennybyrn," near Jamestown, on the Greensboro road, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny entertained on Thursday, February 5th, at a delightful dinner party in honor of Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer, who on that day celebrated the 13th anniversary of their marriage. A delicious menu in four courses was served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. James M. Millikan, of Greensboro; Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Young, of High Point; Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer, and children, Mary Elizabeth and Joseph. To Mrs. Farmer a beautiful corsage was presented by Mrs. Penny, and to Mr. Farmer a boutonniere.

Again on Monday afternoon, February 9th, Mrs. Penny was hostess to the Woman's Auxiliary at its monthly meeting and a Valentine party, complimentary to Mrs. S. S. Coe, who has served so efficiently and faithfully as president of the Auxiliary for two years. After a hymn, Miss Mary Young read Psalm 24, and Mrs. C. L. Whitaker led in prayer; Mrs. C. F. Barton read an interesting letter from Mrs. Maude Lawson Soderbom, one of our missionaries in China, and Miss Vera Idol, another from Miss Mildred Miskimen in India. The program was in charge of Mrs. E. L. Douglas. Plans for a rummage sale on next Saturday and a chicken supper were discussed. The appointment of the date for the annual meeting of N. C. Branch of Women's Missionary Work, which will convene here in April, was left to be decided by the committee from the Executive Board. The nominating committee for new officers presented the following, which were duly elected: president, Mrs. P. S. Kennett; first vice-president, Mrs. L. R. Peacock; second vice-president, Mrs. S. S. Coe; recording secretary, Mrs. R. F. Pickens; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. H. Walker. Rev. Mr. Farmer then made an earnest talk on missions. After the conclusion of business, Master Tommy Foister, small nephew of the hostess, presented a large and beautifully decorated box of Valentines from members of the Auxiliary to Mrs. S. S. Coe, which came as a distinct surprise. In behalf of Mrs. Penny, Tommy also presented to Mrs. Coe a large Valentine box of candy, and for Mrs. C. C. Robbins Miss Elizabeth Welch presented her a lovely potted cyclamen. The hostess, assisted by Mrs. J. H. Walker, Mrs. J. C. Welch, Jr., Misses Ruth and Elizabeth Welch, Mrs. J. T. Ryan, and Mrs. J. T. Foister, served to the fifty guests dainty refreshments, a salad course and an ice course. The ice cream had for the center a red heart, and the sandwiches were heart-shaped. The favors were Valentine baskets filled with red candy hearts to carry out the Valentine motif. The hospitality of Mrs. Penny was gracious and lavish, and the members of the Auxiliary owe her many thanks for an unusually pleasant afternoon.

A number of our congregation are suffering from influenza: Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., Miss Xannie Stowe; Messrs. W. C. and Henry Ferree; Miss Irene Reynolds. We earnestly trust that all may soon be restored to health. Alson Gray, who has been ill, shows decided improvement.

—Thrift is a determination to live with a margin for future advancement; to earn a little more than one spends or to spend a little less than one earns, getting meanwhile the value in strength, in satisfaction or in other worthy return for the money one feels free to spend. The spirit of thrift is opposed to waste on the one hand and to recklessness on the other. It does not involve stinginess, which is an abuse of thrift, nor does it require that each item of savings should be a financial investment. The money that is spent in the education of one's self or of one's family, in travel, in music, in art, or in helpfulness to others, if it brings real return in personal development or in a better understanding of the world we live in, is in accordance with the spirit of thrift.—D. S. Jordan.

BOQUETS

If you have any praise to use
Let this helpful word be said;
Give your boquets to the living,
Keep your brickbats for the dead.

What's the use of wounding others
With brickbats sent in showers?
Do not wait till one is dead
To cover him with flowers!

Give your boquets to the living,
Do a loving deed today,
Cheer a lonely heart with kindness,
Help a pilgrim on the way.

You will have a sense of pleasure
When a hungry soul you've fed:
Your boquets will cheer the living,
Brickbats cannot hurt the dead.
—Grenville Kleiser.

A FAULTLESS MAN

To hear of him will cause surprise
And make some folks wide open eyes,
For this man lives in your own town
And is a man of some renown.

His age is just about your own,
His size about what you have grown,
His form and yours do well agree,
As fine a match as e'er you'll see.

How spends his time, this faultless man?
I'll tell you that as soon's I can.
For he's a very busy man,
As all who know well understand.

He's well equipped with glasses strong
With ranges short and ranges long:
That he may scan his fellowmen
And magnify their faults by ten.

And that's just why he has no flaws,
Just why he never breaks the laws;
His mind's so set on neighbors' deeds
That how he acts he never heeds.
—J. E. M.

THE TALKING BORE

The tiresome talker is a bore
From whom men like to flee,
Wherever you may meet the pest
He talks eternally.

He pours a stream of useless words,
You frown at him in vain,
He simply takes a fuller breath
And starts ahead again.

The tiresome talker is a thief
Who fleches time and peace,
If you kicked him down the stairs
You could not make him cease.

The tiresome talker is a pest,
A selfish man is he,
There is no way to silence him,
Your one course is to flee!
—Grenville Kleiser.

6. Plan, if you can, for the men of the church some definite course in missionary education.

MRS. H. W. MAIER.

Sec'y Missionary Education, N. C. Branch.

The Ladies of Calvary, Greensboro had a meeting for mission study Wednesday, with a morning and afternoon session. The home mission book, "In the Trail of the Conquistadores," was the study, and the leaders were Mr. and Mrs. Bates. The "Conquistadores" were the Spanish conquerors of America. This study is therefore very much American, and deals with things that we know and that we should know. The Mission-Study day is to be commended. We had a pot-luck dinner, each person bringing some dish of her own choice. The attendance was very good.

The Rev. John Wesley Forrest, a native of Littleton and retired minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, died last Tuesday at the Harrisburg hospital. Death was due to paralysis. He was aged 60 years, 11 months, and 29 days. He was a brother of Miss Annie Forrest, returned missionary.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER
EVE, CHRIST
AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XXXVII

GREENSBORO, N. C., FEBRUARY 19, 1931

NUMBER 15

A Composite Story

They brought to Jesus a sinful woman;
Her face was filled with shame and fear:
They called his mind to the law of Moses
Prescribing death so very clear.

The Master stooped low and wrote with finger—
No idle word, you may well know:
Maybe he wrote: "Though your sins are crimson,
They may be made as white as snow!"

And then he spoke to the noisy rabble:
"Let first to throw be sinless soul!"
And one by one is the mob diminished
Till none remains of all the whole.

The Master speaks to the sinful woman:
"Has none condemned who witness bore?"
"Not one, my Lord," does she meekly answer:
Then he said, "Go and sin no more!"

The Master dined in the house of Simon
And sat among the rich and great:
The servants served in their grandest manner
And all was done in lordly state.

A sinful woman is seen to enter
And kneel behind the Master's seat;
Her tears are mingled with precious ointment
With which she bathes his wearied feet.

The Pharisee is indeed astonished
That he shrank not from her mere touch:
He surely lacks the prophetic insight
Or he would flee in haste from such.

But Simon knew her as "sinful woman"
And failed to note her moral change;
To him the miracle of soul's salvation
Was unconceived in his thought's range.

But Jesus came to the help of sinners,
To save the lost, restore the vile;
And this once sinful, now sinless, woman
Has borne a witness well worth while.

"It Is the Unexpected That Happens"

This is a proverb that has many illustrations. Each day it comes to pass somewhere that the unexpected happens. Our power of foresight is very limited. Movements already started are for the greater part unknown to us, and suddenly, unexpectedly, some of them burst upon our view. Then out of the future comes a great throng of happenings that will presently take us unawares. Very few expected the World war three months before it started. How often does death come when not expected. Few of the world's great disasters can be foretold—earthquakes, storms, pestilences, famines. If we know so little about the changes that spring out of our material environment, it is not surprising that we are ignorant of the coming events that originate in the great unseen world. The Jews in the days of Jesus were resting in a false hope. He saw the day of doom and warned his disciples. The ancient, honored city of Jerusalem must come ere many years to its destruction. Our picture of the future differs widely from what the reality will be. Man proposes, but God disposes. Jesus tried to teach us the wisdom of being prepared for the divine ordering. But we often ignore his warnings and, like foolish birds, build our houses where they will be swept away in the coming storm. "Be ye always ready, for ye know not the hour when the Son of Man cometh" with some unexpected revelation of His mighty power.

The Ideal of a Full Belly

The stomach plays a mighty part in human life. It is the furnace whose heat keeps the pot boiling. If the stomach remains empty long enough there will be nothing doing: life will have ceased. Yet, important as the stomach is, it is not of paramount importance. "Man shall not live by bread (food) alone." Into his life enter elements of higher importance than food. Man is not a mere animal. When he forgets his need of higher things and devotes his thought and energy to the acquisition of physical supplies alone, he very often debases himself. The man content with a full dinner pail or a full stomach is dead or asleep in his better nature.

Those Israelites who clamored for the fleshpots of Egypt were blind to life's best prospects. They could not appreciate life in the Promised Land as God designed it for them. They despised the divine ideals and had their debased minds set on the physical comfort of the full stomach as the chief thing in life.

We wonder whether the people of Russia are not now being reduced to a state of slavery to the State by the attractions of the full stomach. If so, they will later wake up to a realization of what they lost when they gave up the glory of their higher ideals. The hog goes round with a full stomach, but he is nothing but a hog.

"In every community three things work together—the grog shop, the jail and the gallows—an infernal trinity."—
Henry Ward Beecher.

11. OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO THE PROGRAMS AND INSTITUTIONS OF THE DENOMINATION.

Will God bless a church that does not share in a world-wide kingdom program?

The program of the General Church is the opportunity of the local church to give the Kingdom to all the world.

Last year we published in the HERALD a suggested program for our district rallies. The question has been asked if this would be done again this year. Since there is a desire for this, we are submitting the above. This, of course, is only suggestive. Chairmen of districts may prefer to make out their own programs, which they are at liberty to do. However, there is merit in a uniform program. But that is a matter for conference action, and can probably be agreed upon next year.

We trust that our district chairmen will give very earnest attention to this phase of our conference program, and make the rallies this year the best ever.

S. W. TAYLOR.

THE COURAGE THAT WINS

Courage is that quality of mind and spirit which enables one to take blows without flinching, to be knocked down without taking the count, to go ahead regardless of obstacles. The conditions through which we are passing demand the highest type of courage on the part of the man who refuses to fail in his endeavor. This is no time for weaklings. Hundreds of business men are standing up against the greatest odds, not knowing what tomorrow may bring forth. But it is the man of courage who never flinches, never gives up, and eventually emerges a stronger, better man. The experience may be just what he needs to make a man of himself. The weakling falls and disappears from view—the man of courage refuses to be knocked down, or if knocked down, gets up, brushes off the dust and proceeds upon his way, finally reaching the goal. His has been a hard fight, perhaps he has seen his business go to pieces, but he pulls himself together and makes a fresh start, stronger, more self-reliant and more of a man because of the experience. He is the gainer in the end, and can look back upon his struggles with satisfaction because he has not surrendered in the midst of the battle.

TOBACCO IN HIGH PACES

By WILL H. BROWN

When President Coolidge was spending his summer vacation in South Dakota he permitted newspaper men to meet him at stated times. One writer, Paul R. Mallon, United Press correspondent, in a signed and published article, on August 5, 1927, made the statement that the President had manifested signs of "impatience": that he had dismissed a secret service man without apparent cause; that he "argued with Mrs. Coolidge in the presence of newspaper men and photographers;" that he had "abruptly terminated conversations with newspapermen and others." Then Mr. Mallon added:

"He smokes ordinarily only a few cigars a day, although lately he has taken to smoking almost continuously."

Excessive smoking causes many users of tobacco to become nervous. The weed knows no favorites. Nicotine will weaken the nerves, injure the bodily organs and poison the system of the most exalted citizen, or the most humble; of the richest or the poorest.

Tobacco killed President Grant. Tobacco prevented the recovery of President McKinley from the assassin's wound, so one of his physicians stated, the president's smoking having weakened his heart. President Harding, a heavy user of tobacco, who was thought to be recovering from a sick spell, died so suddenly that not a physician was with him at the time, due to a weakened heart. Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, Caruso, the noted singer, and other men of renown, slaves of tobacco, have passed away when they should have been at their best.

TRANSFIGURED LIVES

Communion with Christ transfigures a life. Every one we meet leaves a touch upon us which becomes part of our character. Our lives are like sheets of paper, and every one who comes writes a word, or a line, or leaves a little picture painted there. Our intimate companions and friends, who draw very close to us, and are much with us, entering into our inner heart-life, make very deep impressions upon us.

If, therefore, we live with Christ, abide in Him; the close continued companionship with Him will change us into His likeness. Personal friendship with Christ in this world is as possible as any merely human friendship. The companionship is spiritual, but it is real. The devout Christian has no other friend who enters so fully into his life as does the Lord Jesus Christ. The effect of this companionship is the transfiguring of the character.

Gazing by faith upon Christ, the lines of His beauty indeed print themselves on our hearts. "We all, with unveiled face, beholding, as in a mirror, the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same image." The Gospel is the mirror. There we see the image of Christ. If we earnestly, continually, and lovingly behold it, the effect will be the changing of our own lives into the same likeness.

The transformation is wrought by the Divine Spirit, and our part is only to behold, to continue beholding the blessed beauty.—The Bible Truth Gleaner.

THE CHALLENGE

The challenge comes
To Christian men,
The world demands
New proof again.

Material might,
With ugly mien,
Defies the power
Of things unseen.

The Church, the Book,
Must stand the test,
To show the world
God's truth is best.

The cause of Christ
Must suffer loss,
If Christian men
Bear not the Cross.

No longer words
Nor empty creeds,
The world demands
New proof in deeds.

—Grenville Kleiser.

NOTE: A giant material machine is being erected in Russia—tireless, defiant, ruthless. How will Christendom meet it?

LOVING WHEN CHASTENED

My little two-year-old received a spanking for walking among some broken glass, after being warned not to do so. She cried bitterly, but a moment or two, with her little face still bathed in tears, she threw her arms around my neck and whispered, "I love you, mamma."

Oh, that we could always look up into the face of our Heavenly Father in times of chastening and say, with such loving confidence, "I love You, blessed Lord!"—Grace C. W. Greben in the Christian Visitor.

—We have heard the wish expressed that everybody had all the money desired. Suppose that should come to pass. Some cold day you would ask your coal dealer to send you a ton of coal. He would tell you that he has ceased handling coal since he got all the money he wanted. You would telephone to your grocer for bread. He would tell you that he had ceased to run a store since he got all the money he wanted. You would get sick and send for your physician. He would tell you that he had given up the practice of medicine. You would go to the clothing store for needed garments and find "Store closed." You would die and the undertaker or his present-day successor would be sent for. His answer would be, "I have gone out of business because I have all the money I want."

Cleveland Charge

We were with Oak Grove church, on this charge, in a night service, February 11. This could hardly be considered an official visit. We were on our way from our mountain charges, and just stopped over here to see Brother Ridge and his family, and to have this one appointment with his people. We had thought also to have a like appointment with Brother Morgan and his people at Friendship church on the following night, but the time did not seem opportune. We were glad to see that a new roof was being put on this church. It was our pleasure to have Brothers Morgan and Morris in the Oak Grove service, and to take dinner with Brother Morgan and his family on Thursday. Pastor Barber and his people of the Polkton M. E. church did us the courtesy of calling in their Wednesday night prayer service in order that they might worship with us. I share fully with the Oak Grove congregation in their appreciation of this brotherliness. We missed Brother Powell in this service. He has been a pillar in the church here for many years, but is not able to attend so regularly now because of declining health.

The congregation was large for a mid-week service, and the spirit of interest and worship, pleasing. Brother Ridge is alert to his duties and his opportunities, and the work is prospering under his leadership. The charge is working toward an improved financial system. Salary and budgets have been apportioned to each church, and two churches have passed out their allotments to the membership in individual apportionments. We trust that this system may become uniform on the charge. We were pleased to learn through the pastor that Kistler and Pleasant Hill churches are ready to unite on midway ground, and build a new church. They are to be heartily commended. For the present, however, this good purpose is being held up by the prevailing money stringency. This is a very fine section of our state, and our churches draw their congregations from a sturdy and substantial citizenship. It is our purpose to visit more of the churches in this part of our conference district during the year. The brethren of this charge, and their families, have our hearty appreciation for their kindness and hospitality. It was a pleasure to be with them.

Mebane

According to appointment, we were here on the 15th, in the morning service. It is not often that we find a congregation so nearly filling the church as we found here, their usual practice. They were helpful in their attention, and it was a pleasure to be with them and to speak in this service. Pastor Loy is earnest in his prosecution of the work, and is pleased with the co-operation that he is receiving from his people, and the general progress that he feels the church is making. The church appears to be well organized, and all organizations are functioning. The women of the church are particularly active and efficient in their work. They were looking forward with deep interest to their foreign Thank Offering service to be held on this Sunday night. The financial depression is being felt here, but the people are loyal and ready to meet their financial obligations to the limit of their ability. They can also be relied upon for support of all conference programs. We are glad to have this renewal of contact with this church, and to find a spirit of hope, harmony, and steadfastness prevailing. We bespeak for them a good year. It was a pleasure to see Brother Auman and his family on this trip, also Brother Paschall. They spoke hopefully of their respective charges. We received kindness at the hands of Brother Loy and his people, for which they have our grateful thanks.

Herald Thermometer

The Directing Committee has the thermometer ready to test the temperature of the conference on this campaign. The black mark stood last week at nearly 400. We surmise that it will rise this week. This is an interesting device, and it will be watched with growing concern from week to week. "How is the thermometer this week?" will be on many tongues now, and we greatly hope that the answer may always be, "Rising." Let's everybody help lift the length of that black line. Two charges, Pleasant Grove and Winston, First, now appear in capitals. Hats off to these churches and these pastors! Brother Pritchard tells us today that his goal now is to double his allotment. Success to this ambition! We do not know which of these charges has first place. It is probably a tie, as the report of each appears in the same issue of the paper. With most charges there is yet much room for increase. But the campaign is still young. A few charges, 17, to be exact, are not yet in the count. But they will no doubt get in, and may yet be leaders. Again: Let's Everybody Help Lift the Length of That Black Line.

College Allotment

Churches are giving this attention now, and we expect some good reports soon. We heard encouraging comments at Mebane Sunday, and one pastor told us that his church hoped to send in part payment this week. For the remainder of February and through March, this matter is on the main line. Let's make it go strong, and be happy with results. All together, now, in one earnest, prayerful effort, for College Maintenance Allotment.

Day of Prayer

Friday, February 20, is the world-wide day of prayer for missions. May the spirit of prayer be mightily upon all people every where as they meet to pray for this one great cause of the church. We trust that many of our own people may be found with those who meet on this day to pray the blessings of Almighty God upon the missionary enterprises of His church. Others who may not find it possible to meet for this purpose, can pray in their own secret chambers. Let every Christian breathe a prayer this day for the cause of missions.

A Sign Demanded

Our generation is like that of Jesus—it demands a sign. His generation demanded such a sign as bread from heaven, plenty without labor. He saw the selfishness and unreasonableness of the demand and said no sign should be given it except the sign of Jonah—Jesus' resurrection from the dead. Multitudes now demand a similar sign from the church: supply us with loaves and fishes, prepare tables for us in the wilderness, provide oil and wine (especially wine), leave us nothing to do but to eat, drink and be merry, and we will believe in you, we will even condescend to join you and give you the benefit of our influence.

We are surrounded by a world that would like to repose in idleness in the lap of the church. It demands nursing and coddling. Because the church does not meet its unreasonable expectations it fills the air with its wail of distress. It pronounces Christianity a failure. It has for the church nothing but words of depreciation and condemnation. The church needs the wisdom and gentleness of Jesus in dealing with men of such a spirit. How can they be saved and brought to unselfish living? Jesus did give His generation one sign and that a mightily convincing one. The church can give a similar sign—the mightily convincing sign of a new spirit and life.

MORE THAN CONQUERORS

This is more than victory. This is a triumph so complete that we have not only escaped defeat and destruction, but we have destroyed our enemies and won a spoil so rich and valuable that we can thank God that the battle ever came. How can we be "more than conquerors"? We can get out of the conflict a spiritual discipline that will greatly strengthen our faith and establish our spiritual character.

Temptation is necessary to settle and confirm us in the spiritual life. It is like the fire which burns in the colors of mineral painting, or like winds that cause the mighty cedars of the mountain to strike more deeply into the soil. Our spiritual conflicts are among our choicest blessings, and our great adversary is used to train us for his ultimate defeat.

The ancient Phrygians had a legend that every time they conquered an enemy the victor absorbed the physical strength of his victim and added much more to his own strength and valor. So temptation victoriously met doubles our spiritual strength and equipment. It is possible thus not only to defeat our enemy, but to capture him and make him fight in our ranks.

The Prophet Isaiah speaks of flying on the shoulders of the Philistines (Is. 11:14). These Philistines were their deadly foes, but the figure suggested that they would be enabled, not only to conquer them, but to use them to carry the victors on their shoulders for further triumphs. Just as the wise sailor can use a headwind to carry him forward by tacking and taking advantage of its impelling force; so it is possible for us in our spiritual life, through the victorious grace of God, to turn to account the things that seem most unfriendly and unfavorable, and to be able to say continually, "The things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the Gospel."—Life More Abundantly.

BE COURAGEOUS

God will always give you,

Grace to be a man.

Then why tarry longer?

Move at His command.

Questions so perplexing,

Where there seems no way,

Will brighten up before you,

Like the Dawning Day.

Climbing up the mountains,

You can see below,

And have a better vision

Of things you didn't know.

Resting on God's promise

He will take you through!

Do not be discouraged,

Come and start anew.

—The H. of L. and Z. W.

ON WHICH SIDE ARE YOU?

A just God and a faithful Judge must condemn sin. He commands men, "Avenge not yourselves," and He commits Himself, "I will repay." But, the same faithfulness and justice that condemns sin is the security of the believer who confesses his sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins."

In this verse Evan Hopkins, a founder of English Keswick found rest. He says, "I was in great anxiety of soul, reading in my room alone. I said to God, 'Lord, I cannot see this. If it was written, 'Thou art gracious and merciful to forgive,' I could understand it, but how canst Thou be 'Faithful and just to forgive'? Faithful to whom? Just to whom? Now, Lord, show me'.

"Before I arose from my knees the whole thing was made plain. I saw that there was a covenant, not between God and man; but between God and Christ. If I was of those who confessed their sins, I was in the agreement; and then He was faithful to the Son and just to the promise made to the Son, to forgive me then and there. I saw at once that I had pardon, and peace came into my soul."

The faithfulness and justice of God are wrath, and are against the unbelieving and unconfessed sinner, but are mercy, and are for the sinner who believes and confesses. On which side are you?—C. J. Boppell.

OUR STORY PAGE

DOWN ON THE FARM

"This farm is all right," grumbled Tom, good naturedly, "but I'd just as soon be where I could take a swim once in a while."

"So would I," was my reply. "But when Uncle Fred was showing us around this morning I didn't even see a place wet enough for the cows to get a drink, let alone for us to have a swim."

"But there must be water somewhere. This is called the Spring Basin Farm, you know."

"Then let's ask Uncle Fred," I suggested. "Maybe he doesn't know that we like swimming and so didn't bother to show us the river or the lake or the creek or whatever it is people cool off in around here."

Uncle Fred listened to us with a broadening grin on his face and then said:

"It is a hot day and I don't blame you two boys for wanting to have a swim. But this is a farm, you know, and not a beach."

I saw Tom's face drop, but it brightened up again as his uncle went on:

"But I think we've got just what you want, and so I'm going to send you down to see Jerry."

"Who's Jerry?" we asked.

"Oh," was the vague reply. "He's our star boarder."

"How will we know him?"

"He's got big ears and a long nose, and when he laughs you can hear him all over the farm. He'll be dressed in brown, I think, and you'll know him by the funny way he stands."

"Where will we find him?" Tom queried.

Uncle Fred took us to the hall window upstairs.

"Do you see that roof just showing above the crest of the hill?" he asked. "Well, that is where you ought to look first. If he isn't there, go on anyway."

"Go on where?"

"Well—just go on. You'll know what I mean when you get there."

"There's a mystery about this somewhere," said Tom, as we took the path in the direction of the building whose roof we had seen from the house. "Uncle Fred says he thinks he has what we want, but instead of showing it to us he sends us to Jerry, who must be an odd-looking man, if he's anything like what Uncle Fred described. I'm puzzled."

"So am I," was my admission; and I was more puzzled than ever when suddenly we came upon an old signboard lying by the side of the path. It had been broken off from its stake but we could still read what it said, which was "To the Boat-house."

"Come on, Joe," exclaimed Tom. "Let's hurry."

When we got there we knocked on the door and waited for an answer. There wasn't any so we knocked again and called for Jerry.

"Nobody's in, I guess," said Tom. "I wonder if it would be all right to open the door and look inside."

"Is the door locked?" I asked.

"No," replied Tom, pushing it open. "But it's pretty dark inside."

We stepped in and looked around. We couldn't see much at first but after our eyes got used to the dimness we noticed something big in the middle of the floor covered with a piece of canvas.

"I wonder what that is?" queried Tom.

"If this is the boathouse, that must be the boat," I replied.

"Lift up the corner of the canvas and find out."

But what we saw instead of the bow of a boat was the wheel of an old carriage!

"This is no boathouse," cried Tom. "It's a stable."

As he spoke he threw the canvas back over the carriage, then said, "Ouch," and ducked his head so that he wouldn't get hit again, for something had dropped from the rafters overhead and hit him.

It was a paddle!

We looked at it in wonderment, and then our eyes went to the roof—and there, resting on the rafters, was a large red canoe!

Tom recovered from his surprise before I did. Running to the back of the boathouse he unhooked a latch and swung open two big doors, which led to a runway which in its turn led down to a river!

"I know now what Uncle Fred meant," he cried. "The canoe belongs to Jerry and we are supposed to ask him to let us take it. He isn't here, but we're allowed to take it just the same, because that's what he meant when he said to go on anyway."

We had the canoe down from the rafters and out of the boathouse in less than a minute. I found another paddle and two cork cushions, and as soon as the canoe was launched and we saw that it didn't leak, we got in and pushed off down stream. The water wasn't deep enough to swim in, but the current was fast and the canoe sped along like an arrow.

"Wonder where Jerry is?" Tom called out.

I had been wondering the same thing, but I didn't answer because just then I saw some rapids ahead and they looked pretty dangerous. I pointed them out to Tom, who was in the stern of the canoe.

"We'll shoot them," he said. "It's the best fun in the world."

"But there's a bridge at the other end!" I cried.

"We'll go under it," replied Tom. "Don't be afraid, Joe. I can handle the canoe all right."

Give Tom credit. He ran through those rapids like a veteran, and I wasn't a bit afraid until we almost got to the bridge. Then I saw that the arch under which we were supposed to go was fenced off with barbed wire, and that we could not escape being cut and torn by the sharp-pointed and twisted wires!

Tom saw the danger, too, and with a strong sweep of his paddle he tried to turn the canoe to the left, where there was a small inlet half-hidden by overhanging trees. The canoe swerved out of the current, was swept sideways in through the branches and then, as we struck the bank, it tipped over and threw us into the water.

I sputtered my way to the surface and struck out for the bank, and as I did so, I noticed that Tom wasn't the only other boy in the water with me. There must have been at least a dozen of them and they were just as frightened as I was and scrambling for the shore just as fast.

"Well, where did you two boys come from?" called out a cherry voice. "This is a fine way to break into a private swimming hole!"

"Whose is it?" queried Tom, trying to press the water out of his clothes. "Jerry's?"

Everybody laughed at this question, including the big boy who had asked us where we had come from.

"It might well be, because he's always down here," he answered. "Are you two looking for Jerry?"

Before we could answer yes, we heard the funniest hee-haw we had ever listened to. It was wheezy, but it was loud and I knew Uncle Fred wasn't stretching the truth when he said it could be heard all over the farm.

We looked across the narrow cove into which we had been swept and saw, standing bow-legged on the opposite bank, his big ears straight up into the air, his long nose lifted up to help him bray louder, a shabby brown-coated Missouri mule!

Tom laughed.

"So that's Jerry!" he cried. "Well, this day has certainly been full of surprises."

"I'll say so," I agreed. "Let's take off our wet clothes and swim over to say hello."

And that's how we found out who Jerry was, and where the swimming hole was on the farm; and all that summer we had the best time ever with the canoe and with the other boys. The greatest fun was when Uncle Fred let us hitch Jerry to the old carriage and drive him around the farm, but we couldn't understand why, whenever we crossed the bridge where the barbed wire was strung to keep the cows from coming through the arch to the deep water of the cove, Jerry would stop and hee-haw just as if he understood everything and was having a good hearty laugh at our expense.—Selected.

ARE YOU AN OVERCOMER?

"I declare I get so wearied I feel like giving up," said Jean Hartley. "That would be a serious mistake. Have you ever taken into consideration the rewards of those who overcome?" answered Jean's chum to whom she had been relating her experience.

"I cannot say that I have. Where am I to learn about them?"

"The best authority is the Bible. In Revelation 2:11, we are told, 'He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death.' And in the 26th verse of the same chapter, 'He that overcometh, and keepeth My works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations.' And in the 28th verse, 'I will give him the morning star.'"

Then in the 3rd chapter and 5th verse, "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the Book of Life, but I will confess his name before My Father, and before His angels." And in the 12th verse of same chapter, "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of My God: and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of My God, and the name of the city of My God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of Heaven from My God: and I will write upon him My new name." In the second last verse (but not the least) we find, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with My Father in His throne."

"Can you think of any more?" asked Jean when her chum paused a second.

"Wait a moment, indeed I can," answered Mary as she glanced through her Bible.

"Oh, here is one that I missed giving you. It is in the 2nd chapter and 7th verse, 'To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.' And there is still another good one in Revelation. It looks as if the best was kept until the last, in the 7th verse of the 21st chapter, 'He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be My son.'"

"It certainly sounds well worth-while," answered Jean.

"And the best part is that it is every bit true, the rewards are sure for God never breaks His promises."

"If one could be sure of overcoming," said Jean in a timid sort of tone.

"You can be sure; if you are willing to surrender your life to the 'Overcomer.' He has all power, and longs to bestow it on all who desire to have it. Faith is the connecting link, it is not a question of our abilities or qualifications, but of the power behind us. If that is human we can expect nothing but failure, but if we link ourselves to the Eternal Power of God, nothing is impossible."

"It sounds wonderful. You say we get this power by faith."

"Yes! each time you face some difficulty or temptation, just look to God and tell Him you are depending on Him for everything you need, and you will get it, for He never fails those who trust Him."

"I have so little faith. You seem to have a great faith," said Jean.

"Indeed I haven't great faith. I have little faith, but it is in a great God. Weak faith I find usually is due to something wrong in my life. Every temptation yielded to weakens both our strength and our faith, while every temptation overcome is an increase of spiritual power."

"You have given me new courage. I will endeavor to follow your advice, for I do want to reap the blessings that belong to those who overcome," answered Jean, as a new hope swelled up in her heart.—Esther D. Hooey.

To the Leader

It cannot be denied that a knowledge of the true God is essential to the highest civilization. No nations are really and truly Christian entirely but there are those which are more Christian than others. It is the element of a religion with God that turns the scale in every instance. When mankind is given a knowledge of God and the Bible, it raises but when it hasn't this it keeps to a dead level or constantly falls lower.

God has revealed Himself to us through His Son, Jesus Christ. He sent His Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and "While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." In this study we can do no more than study Jesus as the revelation of the Father.

For Discussion

1. What is worship?
2. What is it to "Worship in Spirit?"
3. What helps are there in worship, as conducted in churches of Christ that will enable us the better to know God?
4. How does the Bible help?

Quotable Prose and Poetry

Matthew evi, a Jewish tax-collector, became a disciple of Jesus. In later life he wrote many interesting things he had learned of his Master. Among these is the following:

"Bless them that curse you; pray for them that despitefully use you. To him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; and from him that taketh away thy cloak withhold not thy coat also. Give to every one that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

"And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

"If ye love them that love you, what thank have ye? for even sinners love those that love them. And if ye do good to them that do good to you, what thank have ye? for even sinners do the same. And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? even sinners lend to sinners to receive again as much.

"But love your enemies and do them good, and lend, never despairing; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be sons of the Most High: for he is kind toward the unthankful and the evil."

Thus those of us who have been adopted ought to so behave that we will become like the Father—our Father and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Poetry

Abou Ben Adhem—may his tribe increase—
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace
And saw within the moonlight in his rooms,
Making it rich, like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold.

Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold;
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" The angel raised his head.

And, with a look that made all of sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."

"And is mine one?" Abou spake more low;
And the angel answered, "Alas! no."

"If not, I pray thee write me then
As one who loves his fellow-men."
The angel wrote and vanished, but the next night

Came again with a great awakening light,
To show the names whom love of God had blest,

And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

(A Warning to the Gullible)

Oh, yes!—
Humpty Dumpty had a great fall,
His tumble upset the finances of all.
All Morgan's millions and keen Wall Street men
Couldn't put Humpty together again.
Men were despoiled of their stocks and their cash,
Widows lost all in the terrible crash.
Brokers and bankers were in a bad way,
For millions of lambkins it was a black day.
They suddenly found, alas and alas,
That Humpty was principally water and gas.
The moral this teaches is now quite plain:
Never trust Humpty Dumpty again!

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

BETHEL HOME

Dear to the hearts of the women of the North Carolina conference is the subject of this article. Bethel Home is a small co-operative institution for tubercular patients. It was founded by Rev. Homer Casto in faith, and in the Spirit of the Master. The atmosphere of the average sanatorium is not conducive to spiritual growth, and Rev. Homer Casto, realizing this through observation and personal contact, began praying, with a small group of friends, that a way would be open to start such a work.

It was in May, 1919, an attractive and modern house was bought on faith. The initial payment of $100 represented the total wealth of the little group. The home is situated in the town of Weaverville, about nine miles north of Asheville. It is ideally located, being on the side of Hamburg mountain. The panoramic view of valley and range is one of the finest in the Blue Ridge mountains. The home is somewhat isolated from the village activities, thus affording peace and quiet so needed for sick folks.

The home will now accommodate twelve patients. Mr. Casto has recently erected a 1 g bungalow which contains his office, a bed room and living room. And there is no indebtedness on the home.

In this home is a spirit of brotherliness and mutual helpfulness. The fellowship is precious. Mr. Casto's aim is to have his guests feel they are members of a happy family, not inmates of an institution. This idea was achieved early in the history of the home. God's blessing is asked for this splendid work, and its self-sacrificing leader.

It will do you good to visit this home, see Mr. Casto and Mr. Altman, and the hearty welcome you receive from them is refreshing.

A LETTER FROM JAPAN

Jo Gakko, Maita Machi,

Yokohama, Japan, Jan. 21, 1931

Dear Mrs. Brown:

Christmas has come and gone and the New Year, which, in Japan is the year of the sheep, is rapidly growing old. As usual my Christmas season began the latter part of November when I was busy addressing parcels, letters and cards to my friends in other parts of the world, continued all through December and the many celebrations which are a regular part of life, and lasted on until this week when I am receiving belated cards and letters whose writers forgot that we do

A CALL FOR INSTRUCTIONS

In my younger days I took great pleasure in looking up to my parents and the "elders" for instruction. After I reached the age of 26, about that time, my father made an expression by saying, "I know you better than you know yourself."

Near that date one of the active professional men, one who was the first to teach me in the "free school," a three month term, made the same expression. "I know you better than you know yourself." These instructors were trying to encourage, and tell me how to venture out, but I was slow to venture. Soon after the time of the above expression, one of the aged preachers, while standing on the steps of Tabernacle church, after he had preached a sermon inside, and his "congregation," and I were standing on the ground, made the expression by saying, "Brother Grabs, read and study, and inform yourself, and you can help to do work in this country some time." The work that I want to do is public speaking.

Although I am far past "21," I feel that I have not yet had my share of public speaking. However, I can write easier than any other work that I can do. Seeing that the young people, and those of popular education are pressing for varied instructions I feel impelled to ask Dr. Elderdice for a few lines of instructions—to publish. I am hardly able to tell now why I thus call for help at a distance.

I am writing Dr. Elderdice, and hope to hear from him later on; and I hope to publish his letter in the M. P. Herald. My work is in the public, and I ask one of the able school authorities to give me serious advice. There are two ages in life that need encouragement. The very young and the very old.

There is prevailing prejudice against aged people venturing out before the public, and especially so in the case of this humble farmer.

If Dr. Elderdice gives me the encouragement that I ask for, I will make haste to venture. I must travel and further than I have ever ventured to do. If I obey my present impulse. I want to visit more of the children's homes besides "Our Home" at High Point; but I am not able to meet the expense.

My hope for financial aid is by taking up a collection in the churches. I want to visit our M. P. churches each about one time in my life, and the task of taking up a "collection" is the close rub now.

I want to speak on Human Life, and I want to serve well enough so as to be able to collect, help to pay the man I ride with—and traveling expenses are great of late. I can speak on "Human Life" a half hour without notes.

I am now moving to ask Dr. Elderdice to try to help me to persuade "the people" to make a man able to help me to travel abroad.

W. F. GRABS.

—Rev. R. J. Tambllyn goes to Virginia cities and colleges to lecture on some subjects in which he takes a special interest. Dr. Spahr will preach to Grace congregation in his absence.

HERALD CAMPAIGN

My great interest in the success of the Herald Campaign impels me to write a few words. The question should come to each of us. Are we doing our best to help our good editor carry this load? To my mind there has never been a finer spirit of sacrifice to come under my observation than that of the editor, Dr. McCulloch, who was willing to undertake to carry on another year even though he worked all last year without getting a cent for his services. It does seem to me that each minister and each layman in the conference ought to be deeply concerned about this matter.

And in pressing this matter of the church paper, I do not want to leave the impression that either the editor or the Herald is an object of charity. I can ask the people for subscriptions because I believe they are getting their money's worth. If it were a question of putting a value on the paper, then I would have to say it is worth more than two dollars. For thirty-five years I have read this paper every week except a few summers when I was in college and could not have it forwarded to me on the road. To me it is like a letter from home. I hear from so many of my brethren whom I love and hear from so many churches that I am interested in, then there are so many fine things in it of an inspirational nature that I just do not see how a church member can get along without it.

Now I have have no hard and fast rule by which you shall take subscriptions. Do it in your own way. If the pastor wants to do it let him do it; if the pastor wants to appoint some one let him appoint that one and urge the one appointed to get busy. But whatever method we use, let us use it NOW. The people need the information that is in the paper and the paper needs the financial help, so do your best.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

"... Queer marks! Do you know what they mean? Look at the Herald Campaign and see if you can tell. They have no place in the campaign. I hope you who read this will get rid of them.

Congratulations to Pleasant Grove and Winston for reaching their quotas! Don't know who got there first. Winston isn't through yet. Expect to go way over the quota. Now, brethren, go and do what these have done. The returns are encouraging. But we want to see this blank line moving faster. Get behind and push it along.

C. W. BATES, Campaign Chairman.

THE READING CIRCLE

Some time ago at the summer conference at High Point College it was decided to start a Reading Circle. Well the work was begun with the understanding that each member would buy a book, read it and then send it on to the address following his in the list. I was asked to start the circle turning. Several men wanted to come in on the proposition, so we started the distribution of books.

Recently some inquiry has been made about the books. It seems that some one or more than one is holding the books and that the circle has ceased to turn. If you are a member of the circle see that the books are sent on. They must go back to the owners, and complaint is made that there is too much delay.

So I am writing to urge each member of the circle to look among your books. If there is one there that belongs to another reader please send it on home. They have been out too long already. Two weeks was suggested as the period for holding a book, but in fact more nearly two years has passed it seems. So please attend to this inexpensive matter; straighten out this book business, co-operate with your friends who own the books and send them on the way rejoicing. Thank you.

P. E. LINDLEY, Chairman.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Maple Springs.—The Woman's Auxiliary held the monthly meeting Thursday evening, with Mrs. L. W. Gerringer on Reynolda Road, with thirteen members and two visitors present.

The study for the evening was: Facts from the Foreign Fields, Japan, China, India. Present facts were presented by Mrs. Ira Baity, Mrs. T. L. Speas and Mrs. C. A. Long. Question box was conducted by Miss Myrtie Kiger, followed with prayer by Mrs. L. W. Gerringer.

During the business session the secretary's report was read and approved. Dues collected, $805. The following personal service report was given: sixty visits made, thirty-two trays, seven baskets and two flowers sent during month. Plans were made to observe the day of prayer, February 20, at Maple Springs church with all auxiliaries of Eleventh District invited. Plans were also made to remember Miss Annie Forrest, foreign missionary, on her birthday with handkerchief shower. Officers for another year were presented to the Auxiliary by the nominating committee and were unanimously elected.

The officers are: President, Mrs. T. L. Speas; vice-president, Mrs. L. W. Gerringer; secretary, Mrs. C. A. Long; treasurer, Miss Myrtie Kiger; secretary missionary education, Miss Ida Long; scholarships and workers, Mrs. D. E. Shamel; secretary spiritual life, Mrs. L. C. Hine; secretary literature, Mrs. Ira W. Baity; secretary thank offering, Mrs. R. E. Watts; secretary Christian Education, Miss Elsie Baity; secretary Young People's Work, Mrs. Ira W. Baity; secretary temperance, Mrs. L. W. Gerringer; secretary benevolences, Mrs. Paul Hine; secretary memorial and perpetual membership, Mrs. Eugene Kiger; secretary pastor's aid, Miss Ida Long; secretary Bethel Home, Miss Elsie Baity; secretary student loan fund, Miss Flora Kiger; secretary Children's Home, Mrs. Eugene Grubbs.

During the social hour the hostess, assisted by Miss Mary Frances Gerringer, served delightful refreshments.

MRS. C. A. LONG, Rec. Sec.

Creswell Charge.—All's well along Albemarle Sound. We thought some of the Herald readers might be interested in hearing from this far-off corner of conference.

We are grateful to be able to report that death has not visited our Methodist Protestant family since conference, despite the prevailing epidemic of "flu" with its concomitant complications pneumonia and pleurisy, which have taken a large toll in this section outside of our family. We are also happy to report that there is no suffering in this county from drought or depression. The farmers of the county wisely resisted the lure of cash crops and diversified sufficiently to supply most of their needs throughout the winter. There is certainly no lack of something to eat. The pastor of this charge has had this brought home to him by the generous disposition of his people to share what they have with him. Instead of a single annual "shower" or "pounding," he has enjoyed a continuous shower. Hardly once in thirty or more times he has been out in his car visiting his people has he returned without bringing back something for his pantry, and hardly a week passes that some one or more does not bring something to the parsonage. And not only have the donations been generous, but they have also been varied, some things he could not buy at the stores, such as something green all winter, and some things he had not tasted before, such as venison. To any of the itinerant tribe of Abraham, father of itinerants, who like the writer, is fond of fresh and smoked meat, sausage, yams, vegetables, game and fish, this is indeed a "promised land."

Finally, we want to ask a place in the prayers of the Herald family. On account of their isolated location, over 200 miles from the center of conference, we feel the need of sympathetic interest and prayer on the part of our far-off brother Methodist Protestants. While we realize we are but the extremities of the conference body, we are none the less members of it, just as the extremities of the human body are an organic and necessary part of that body, in accordance with I Cor. 12:21-24.

J. C. RUSSELL, Pastor.

West Forsyth.—We had a good attendance at three churches during the past two Sundays. The second Sunday we were at Tabernacle at 11 a. m., and at Union Hill in the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Last Sunday we were at Pleasant Hill church. Here we had an unusually large attendance. The pastor was delighted to have a number of visitors in the congregation, some from a distance. Brother A. A. Doub and family, of Baltimore church, worshipped with us. We also had Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bailey and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hargrove, of Burlington, as visitors. They are relatives of the pastor's wife and were guests of the parsonage during the week-end.

The district conference, or rally, for the eleventh district, of which West Forsyth charge is a part, will be held at Pleasant Hill church the fifth Sunday in March. Dr. Taylor gave the place as Tabernacle church in his appointments. That was a mistake. Pleasant Hill church invited the conference at the 1930 rally held at Mount Zion church, on Pinnacle charge, last year, to meet with them this year. Chairman Gerringer has started the preparation for the program in co-operation with the women of the district, who will have the afternoon program. Dr. Taylor and Rev. N. M. Harrison are to be speakers for the morning program.

There have been many cases of sickness among the people at West Forsyth charge for the past few weeks. We are glad to note the improvement of the condition of Mrs. Lou Long, of near Pleasant Hill church. Brother R. P. Petree, of near Tobaccoville, member of Pleasant Hill church, is also improving slowly from a siege of illness. Mrs. Susan Gray, of Harmony Grove church, is also slowly recovering from a severe stroke of paralysis suffered over two weeks ago. Mrs. Sarah Doub, of Baltimore church, is also much improved. We hope that all of those who have been attacked by the "flu" and other illness will soon be restored to usual health.

The people of West Forsyth charge have continued to remember the pastor and family with suitable gifts for their dining table. We acknowledge with thanks gifts from the following: Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Doub, of Baltimore church; Mrs. W. W. Whitman, Mrs. Maggie Kreeger and Mrs. J. W. Masencup, of Tabernacle church; and Mrs. A. R. Long, and Mrs. J. F. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church. The pastor's wife sincerely appreciates the kindness of Mrs. C. G. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church, who baked a nice cake for her father, Mr. J. J. Thomas, of Burlington, who has been in poor health for the past two years. The gift was highly appreciated by Mrs. Way and her father.

Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Gerringer, of Forsyth charge, were guests of the writer and wife Friday afternoon of last week. A very enjoyable afternoon was spent with these splendid people. They are liking their new work and seem happy and hopeful for a good year's work on Forsyth charge.

Our appointments will be with Harmony Grove church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Just a few items of interest:

Last Sunday was a good day with. Fair attendance at the morning service; and a full house at night. It was Missionary Day. It may be the attendance at the morning service was off because I preached a missionary sermon, but that may not have had anything to do with it. At night the service was in charge of the auxiliary, and a splendid service it was. A missionary play, "Old Mother Budget," a candle-lighting service in connection with the thank-offering, which amounted to exactly $40.00; a report of the auxiliary's work for the past year. The women folks set out to raise $1,000 during the branch year. The offering Sunday night put them over the top by a good margin. They propose to spend the remainder of the branch year in raising money for the church debt, on which they have already paid more than $200 this year.

The folks who came to church Sunday were delighted to see a new pulpit and a rebuilt platform. The pulpit is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cox. At the suggestion of the preacher, the rostrum has been enlarged so he can prance around a little more. The work was done by Brothers Cox and Parish, who also built the pulpit stand. Friday a group of men, Cox, Causey, Sullivan, bossed by Bates and Coe, made new movable platforms for use during the pageants and plays put on in the church from time to time. These were made necessary by the rebuilt rostrum.

The Sunday school attendance was 204. Brother Bissett was delegated to visit the West End Sunday school and present the attendance banner promised them when they won the contest last summer. For the last two years Calvary and West End have had an attendance contest during the month of June. It will be repeated this summer. Calvary won the first year, West End last year. We expect Calvary to come off victorious this year. So we are just leading West End the banner for the time being.

The auxiliary had its meeting last night with thirty-seven women present. It was the time for election of officers. Mrs. D. E. Curtis is the new president; Miss Pearl McCulloch, secretary; Mrs. Willis Booth, treasurer. The treasurer reported $80.00 raised last month, and the secretary reported 200 visits made, one circle not reporting. This phase of the auxiliary's work is to the pastor more interesting than the financial, as important as that may be.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Roberta Station.—Our Sunday school fell short some today. Attendance was only 172.

Rev. Mr. Hill delivered a fine message this morning, February 15.

On next Sunday morning the Ladies' Aid society is going to make a drive for 100 members.

A marriage of much interest throughout this community was that of Mr. Millard Nance and Miss Ola Hill, which took place in S. C., February 14. Mrs. Nance is the third daughter of Mr. J. B. Hill and the late Mrs. Hill. Mr. Nance is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Nance. He holds a position with the Roberta Mills. We extend to them our heartiest wishes for a long and prosperous life together.

Preaching services at Roberta every Sunday morning beginning at 11 o'clock and at night beginning at 6:45. All are welcome at any time.

Mr. Hill announced today that the meeting will begin at our church the first Sunday in August. He has secured Rev. Mr. Trogdon as pulpit help.

MISS ELMA MILLER, Reporter.

Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit.—Due to the sickness in our community, our attendance at Sunday school and church services was below the average. But we hope by Sunday it will be back and above the average.

We are very sorry to note that our pastor was unable to give his regular appointment yesterday afternoon. Due to the fact that two of his children are critically ill with pneumonia. May God bless them in our prayer. The appointment was filled by Mr. Gentry, our high school principal. He delivered unto us a splendid message from the 14th chapter of St. John.

The Ladies' Aid society met at its usual hour Sunday afternoon.

We were very glad to have Mr. Harrison with us in our special young people's program last Sunday night. He made a splendid talk on "Youth Adventuring Into the Christian Quest," the subject; every one present enjoyed it very much. We hope he will find it convenient to come again soon to visit our C. E. society. The society is putting on many interesting programs. We are glad to note the attitude our young people take toward Christ's work. We have been in service something over a year and have not yet found one to say, "I can't," when called upon, but always there with a willing and outstretched hand.

Best wishes to the Herald and its Readers.
STELLA BAILEY, Reporter.

Pine Bluff, Midland Charge.—Our pastor, Brother Fred Love, preached a very inspiring sermon February 15. His text, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done," was thoroughly treated in a way that it brought a great inspiration to all who heard it. The fact that this text was not very well kept was well illustrated. The angels are continuously doing God's will. Solomon did the will of God, as likewise did Abraham. We of today are so prone to question the thing that we should do in order to do the perfect will of the Heavenly Father, but to do His bidding in a harmonious way. So we should do His will in a cheerful harmonious way. If we will but only do this, all will be well with us.

Under the leadership of our beloved pastor this church, and we can truthfully say, the whole charge is moving along in a smooth way. However, by the depression through which the whole country is passing, we are somewhat behind with the financial side of the work. We hope business conditions in general will be greatly improved in the right near future, and we will be under normal conditions to some extent at least. Brother Love has done quite a bit of work in and around the parsonage. The lighting of the parsonage has added much to it. Not all of the expense of this has been met as yet, but we are hoping all the churches will quickly see the wisdom of this and meet their part of the expense promptly.

The Sunday school promises to observe all special days as was suggested by Brother Taylor. Plans are already underway to observe Easter in the Sunda school. Sister Love is very active among the ladies of the church. She hopes to have the ladies of each church working toward some definite goal in the near future. Our pastor and wife are so much help to us in all lines of church work. We are more grateful to the conference for sending these good people our way.

May God is His great wisdom bless the entire conference and all connected with it in any way, from the least to the greatest, and make this a banner year for the church. Our continued prayers are for the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Welch Memorial.—Our work here is moving along very nicely except the finance. Our church got behind with its finance last year due to the general financial depression.

With the epidemic of flu, short time in the factories, and some extra expense in the church, is seems hard for us to catch up, but there is no church in the denomination making a greater fight to get its head above water than is Welch Memorial.

It is very gratifying to see the increase in numbers both in the Sunday school, and at the preaching hours. Many who had lost interest in the church are coming back and renewing the covenant.

Our old Sunday school roll has been discarded and a new roll made. Just before the epidemic of the flu struck us we had two hundred and eighty on roll with two hundred and thirty-five present.

We have the auditorium practically filled at the morning worship hour and almost as many at the evening service, which means an increase of more than 67 per cent, and the people seem to be hungry for the old time Gospel.

We have received eight new members into the church since our last annual conference, all adults except one.

J. R. ANDERSON, Reporter.

First Church, Thomasville.—Our church and Sunday school are getting along fine. Recently we held a meeting of the teachers and officers of our church. At this meeting plans for the year were made and the problems of the Sunday school talked over. After the business, Mr. and Mrs. Connel served delicious refreshments.

On the fifth of this month the ladies' aid society held its regular monthly meeting, at which time an interesting program was given. This society decided to observe the "World Day of Prayer," next Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock. After the program, every one enjoyed the refreshments of hot coffee, sandwiches, and cake, served by Mrs. A. H. Ragan.

In our prayer meeting service we have been studying the Sunday school lesson for the following Sunday; but now we are going to take up, for awhile, the study of missions. Mr. Madison is going to conduct this study class. We are proud of the past attendance at this service, but we are hoping to have a larger attendance for the mission study class.

On the second Sunday night in this month, Rev. H. W. Maier preached for us, in the absence of our pastor.

We were more than pleased to see such a large number at Sunday school last Sunday. There were 189 present. Some one has been working, or it may be that the people are just now seeing their need of the church. Eighty-two of this number stayed for church service. Each Sunday the different classes have charge of the Sunday school. Last Sunday the Young Men's class gave a most interesting program. One of the special features of this program, was the negro quartet which sang a few spirituals.

On last Thursday night the C. E. society held a very interesting social. Around 33 of the 40-some members were present. The biggest "hit" of the evening was the debate. The debaters tried to make every one enjoy himself and I think they succeeded. One man said, "I was sick before I came to this social but I went home feeling better and have been feeling better ever since." So I think it was a complete success. After many interesting games every one sat down to enjoy the apples, oranges and candy that were served.

We are very sorry to hear that some of our church members are sick. Mrs. T. G. Madison and Mrs. Roy Hill are sick but we hope that they will soon be well and out again.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

Mebane.—On the first Monday evening of this month the first quarterly conference was held, the pastor presiding. J. E. Foust was elected secretary, J. E. Barnett was chosen to take the place of R. T. Dunn as parsonage trustee. Reports were read and approved. The pastor's report and recommendations were accepted and cooperation promised.

The Ladies' Aid met the first Monday afternoon with Mrs. P. N. Thompson, Mrs. Ab Smith and Mrs. J. E. Foust at the home of Mrs. Foust, with splendid attendance and very good collection. It was decided at this meeting to bring a shower next month of bed linens and towels to be sent to our Children's home. Last Sunday we enjoyed quite a profitable day. At the 11 o'clock service the president of our conference, Dr. S. W. Taylor, was with us and delivered a most interesting and timely sermon. He read for the scripture lesson a selection from the fifth chapter of Luke using the fourth and fifth verses as the text choosing from that scripture the subject: "Obedience to Jesus." A large congregation was present to enjoy this service. Immediately following the service Dr. Taylor met with the church officials for a short conference concerning some present needs and giving encouragement for our work through the year.

At the morning worship Miss Edna Nicholson sang, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross."

Sunday evening the Woman's auxiliary presented their thank-offering program. Two character sketches were given, "The Old Awakening," and "Old Mother Budget." Again Miss Nicholson pleased the audience with a solo, "Close to Thee." At the monthly meeting of the Woman's auxiliary the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. T. O. Pender; Vice-President, Mrs. A. H. Jobe; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Tyson Smith; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. J. E. Foust, and Treasurer, Miss Mary Jobe.

Attendance for our mid-week service is better than it has been for some time. We wish more of our people were interested. Our Sunday school is moving along in about the usual way.

REPORTER.

Graham.—On Monday evening, February 9, the Ladies' auxiliary met in the hut at which time Miss Clara Hughes was elected president, succeeding Mrs. J. H. McPherson. After the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed by all, delicious refreshments being served by the former president.

Due to the fact that Miss Hughes has been elected president of the auxiliary she has resigned as president of the Christian Endeavor society and Miss Gladys Amick has been elected. Quite a number of the younger folks are taking an interest in this society and we are hoping to have many more.

We are delighted to note that our Sunday school attendance is steadily increasing each Sunday.

On Sunday morning Rev. J. C. Auman called to our attention that balance still owing on the hut. Several plans were discussed as to means of raising the money and liquidating this balance; however, as yet there has been no definite arrangement decided upon.

RUTH RILEY, Reporter.

Bethel, Mocksville Circuit.—We were very sorry that our pastor could not fill his appointment as two of his children have been very ill. We hope that they will soon be well again.

A committee was appointed to visit different churches in the county, which have Sunday school rooms, to see what type would best suit our church.

We have Christian Endeavor every Sunday at 5:45 p. m.

Our young people's program may not be until the latter part of March as we wish to get some helpers from High Point college.

Best wishes to the editor and all the Herald readers.

RUBY MARTIN, Reporter.

Henderson.—For the past few weeks we have had a great deal of sickness among our membership, but Sunday morning there was an unusually large congregation and we were pleased to note that several of the sick ones were able to attend the 11 o'clock hour of worship. Rev. R. A. Hunter brought us a very inspiring sermon and Mrs. Morton Miles sang a lovely solo, "O Come Into My Heart, Lord Jesus."

On Monday afternoon, February 9th, circles number 1, and 3 held their monthly meetings at the church. After separate business sessions, a joint meeting was held to discuss and further plans for the young people's banquet which was held Wednesday evening, February 11th. This banquet was given by the Woman's auxiliary under the leadership of the Secretary of Young People's work, Mrs. R. A. Hunter. Tables were arranged in the class rooms of the S. S. department and over sixty young people enjoyed the occasion.

The program for the evening was composed of songs and short speeches. The chief speakers were Mr. Robert Green and Miss Maxine Taylor. Mr. Green spoke on "Young Men and Their Relations to the Church," and Miss Taylor on, "Young Women and Their Relations to the Church." These talks were very interesting and exactly to the point. During the social hour which followed a number of Valentine games and contests were enjoyed. The Valentine scheme was carried out in both the table decorations and favors.

A special service held by the young people at the evening hour Sunday night, February 15th, brought to a close our observance of young people's week.

A committee composed of Messrs. L. R. Gooch, T. J. Evans, and E. C. Kittrell, for the purpose of increasing the attendance at the mid-week prayer services, is showing results of splendid work. A different leader for these services is appointed by them each week and special music and personal efforts brought a decided increase in these meetings. We hope and pray for larger attendance and greater interest. On Wednesday night, February 4th, Miss Maxine Taylor spoke on "The Three Cases of Leprosy," to a congregation of forty-nine. Mrs. T. R. Harris will have charge of the meeting this Wednesday night, February 18th.

A similar committee for the Sunday school work has also been elected, which is making an effort to increase the attendance for that service.

A banner will be given the class having the best average at the close of the first quarter of the year. Much interest has already been shown among the classes.

The annual thank-offering service will be held at the evening hour next Sunday night, February 22nd. A pageant will be given at this time and a large attendance is hoped for.

MRS. CLYDE FINCH, Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, Cleveland Circuit.—Rev. C. E. Ridge preached yesterday to a very large crowd, all enjoyed the sermon. The program for "Young People's Day" was given Sunday. This was very good and enjoyed by a large congregation.

At the evening service our pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, brought us a very helpful message.

We are glad to report a few over quota for the M. P. Herald.

The pastor presented the financial needs of our college the second Sunday; an offering was taken which amounted to $13.00. The pastor then asked the Sunday school to give $10.00, Brotherhood, $10.00, The Ladies' Aid, $10.00, and the Senior C. E. $8.00, which they all gave, making a total of $51.00.

There are right many of our members on the sick list; some are very sick.

The Brotherhood meets next Saturday evening with Mr. B. E. Payne.

Elwood Carroll, didn't fill his regular appointment this evening on account of so many of his members being on the sick list.

Fairview, Anderson Charge.—On February 15th a large number was present for Sunday school and church services though there are several cases of flu in the community.

Rev. M. C. Henderson preached a good sermon using the incidents from the life of Daniel for illustrations. "Prayer," was his subject and he showed very clearly its importance in the life of a Christian.

Plans for Sunday school rooms are being made. Messrs. T. B. Nalley, D. T. Foster, and Guy Wyatt were appointed and unanimously elected to serve on the Building committee. Every member of the church and Sunday school are enthusiastic and trust that it will not be long before the foundations are laid and the work is well under way.

For several years it has been the custom to observe Home Coming and Mother's Day at Fairview the first Sunday in May. It is always a great day and this year we are again planning and looking forward to the occasion. A program committee has been appointed with Mr. M. C. Henderson as chairman.

South Winston.—Sunday night an attentive congregation enjoyed Rev. R. S. Troxler's sermon very much. We are glad to know that he can preach for us every Sunday night.

The Young People's class held their regular monthly meeting Tuesday night, February 3. The reports given by the different committees were splendid. One hundred and forty-nine visits to the sick were reported, a pounding given to a needy family, one half ton of coal to another, a fruit basket to the patients of the Tubercular hospital, one to a semi-invalid, and one to a sick member of the class.

The foundation of our new church has been laid and all efforts possible are being put forth to hasten the work on.

We have started a thirty-day drive, in which we want to try to raise money for the building, and by the Mighty Hand which guides us we expect to accomplish the work in which we have started.

MABEL BOWERS, Reporter.

Glen Raven.—Our pastor, Rev. A. D. Shelton, preached at Fairview on Sunday morning but was with us Sunday evening and gave us another one of his splendid sermons. All those present were much impressed with the well-delivered sermon.

The attendance at Sunday school last Sunday gave evidence that a number of our people are at work. Our wide-awake, alert Sunday school Superintendent, Mr. P. E. Troxler, is always making new propositions, therefore getting everybody interested in working for the attendance banner and last Sunday Mr. Troxler stated that the class which invited the largest number to Sunday school for the following Sunday would get the banner. The results were awaited with much anticipation and proved to be very favorable. The total number invited to Sunday school amounted to 226 persons who were out of Sunday school. Of course, all of those invited did not attend Sunday school last Sunday, but a large number of them did.

We have 260 members on roll. The attendance for last Sunday was 186, offering $5.05, with the record attendance being 196. Our Sunday school may not be the largest but we some times feel that we have the best superintendent and Sunday school in North Carolina. We are very proud of the willing workers and the good work done in our church, even though we have a long way to go yet before we reach the top of the ladder.

We would like to congratulate our Christian Endeavor President, Mr. J. D. Shelton, Rev. A. D. Shelton's son, who was elected in the monthly business meeting of the society last Tuesday night. We all join in wishing him much happiness and success in his year's work; and are looking forward to this being the best year ever known in Young People's work at Glen Raven. We desire the prayers of the praying people.

The Ladies' Aid and auxiliary held their regular monthly business meeting at the home on Mrs. Mary Rumbly on Monday night, Feb. 9th. They hope, with the assistance of others, to have a basket supper at the Glen Raven school house on Saturday night, February 21st. Every body invited.

REPORTER.

Liberty, Davidson Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham, preached for the third Sunday a very interesting sermon. We are very glad to have Mr. Bingham as our pastor.

Professor Lane from Denton high school accompanied Mr. Bingham. He is a graduate of High Point college. He made a very interesting talk on the youth of today, and the importance of a Christian education.

Death visited our community and claimed one of our number, Mrs. Smith Hill, or Aunt Fize Hill, as we all called her. She professed faith in Christ in her young day and lived a loyal Christian and faithful church member. She was a good friend. All who knew her most loved her best. She was 80 years of age. She leaves one son and eight grandchildren. A large number of relatives and friends mourn their loss.

The Sunday school is still running with a very good attendance considering the rough weather. We welcome all to attend church services. Sunday school at 1:45 p. m.

Preaching the third Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

I close with best wishes for the success of the church work.

ANNIE HILL, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—At the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning the minister delivered the sixth of the series of messages to the seven churches of Asia, from Rev. 2-10, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," the message given to Smyrna. He said in art, "There can be no surcease in Christian service; there are many starters in the Christian life, but fewer are those who reach the goal. The launching like that of a ship, may be a gala day, but as every 'old salt' knows, the test comes after meeting and battling with the stern North-easters, the ship rides safely into port. Prof. Moulton says that Smyrna was the crowning city of Asia, situated on a hill, and next to Constantinople in importance. Dr. Frances E. Clark said that it possessed such a splendid harbor that the navies of the world gathered there. It is the only one of the seven churches yet remaining today, and is the seat of an American university. The only essential requirement of us is that you and I fulfill our duty to God. The reward of constancy is a call to loyalty to the supremest tasks and the highest things of life. The church has stood for twenty centuries, but the task is not finished, and we cannot lie back at ease and complacency. Roosevelt said that there are three kinds of people in the world, honest, dishonest, and honest according to law; just so there are three kinds of people, Christian, non-Christian, and respectable. Plenty of people in High Point are barely respectable enough to keep out of jail. William Williams of Massachusetts, founder of the college bearing his name and signer of the Declaration of Independence, said if Independence failed to be won, he knew what would happen that he would be hanged. One of the group of friends said, "I never signed it!" and Mr. Williams replied, "You deserve to be hanged for not doing your duty." No man or woman is at his best until he turns to Jesus for a pattern. Polverp said just before being burned at the stake, "I have served Christ for six years, and how can I desert Him now?" This church of Smyrna ought to be our example.

"Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow Thee;
Naked, poor, despised, forsaken,
Thou from hence my all shall be.

Perish every fond ambition,
All I've sought or hoped or known;
Yet how rich is my condition,
God and Heaven are still my own."

At the close of the sermon we were much gratified to receive into our fellowship Mrs. S. W. Taylor, wife of President Taylor, their son, John, and daughter, Miss Frances, from Grace church, Greensboro, and Master Henry Ferree, a young son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ferree. We feel that these splendid people are valuable additions to our membership, and they are happily welcomed.

"Behind the Scenes in High Point," will be the theme of six short speeches at the Vesper services, the first having been given Sunday afternoon by Mrs. W. C. Hammond on "The Welfare Board." Mrs. Hammond has been the capable and efficient secretary of Public Welfare work here for several years, and is in close touch with this important phase of civic life. She made a most interesting talk on the subject, and many expressions of approval were voiced on this new feature of Vesper services. The minister spoke on "Jesus and the Disappointed."

Circles of the Woman's auxiliary held their meetings Monday afternoon. Number 1 will meet on Thursday; No. 2 on Tuesday; and No. 3 with the Fellowship Supper meeting on Wednesday evening at the church.

At the Ash Wednesday service the minister will discuss "Lent, Novel or Natural?" Circle No. 8, Mrs. J. G. Snipes, chairman, will be responsible for coffee and tables for the supper.

A chicken supper will be served at the church Thursday evening by the Woman's auxiliary, and a tempting menu is promised; baked chicken in the gravy and dressing, cranberry sauce, creamed potatoes, peas and carrots, candied yams, slaw, coffee, and pie. The price is reasonable, 50 cents per plate.

On Friday evening the four churches of the city, First, Welch Memorial, Lebanon, at Mechanicsville, and English St., will unite in the world wide Day of Prayer with a service beginning at 7:30 at First Church.

Roger Balsom says, "I believe that every Christian man should have a church paper on his library table, not only for inspiration, but for the influence of his children. We should have our children understand that we are just as much interested in religious news as we are in travel news, political news, fashion news, and various other forms of news in which different magazines specialize."

Many friends unite in extending to Mrs. C. L. Gray our love and deepest sympathy in the loss of her mother, Mrs. Annie Virginia Groome Jackson. Her death came as a shocking surprise from angina pectoris at her home in Groometown on February 7th. She was a consecrated Christian, a member of the M. E. church, South, a devoted wife and mother, and was greatly loved by a wide circle of relatives and friends.

We are much pleased to announce that the condition of C. L. Gray Jr., who has been critically ill of pneumonia, is much improved.

Captain A. M. Rankin was missed from church last Sunday, being shut in with a siege of rheumatism, and his numerous friends are hoping that he will be out again in a short time.

Her friends will be gratified to know that Mrs. Geo. T. Penny, who has had influenza, has recovered. She and Mr. Penny had planned to go to Florida last week, but the trip has been postponed.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander M. Rankin Jr., upon the arrival of a little daughter on Saturday, Feb. 14. Mother and baby are at the Baptist hospital, Winston-Salem, N. C.

We are very sorry to learn that Miss Mary Lyndon is suffering from sinus trouble. She is missed at the auxiliary meetings, where she is so faithful in attendance and work.

The music department of High Point college rendered at hour's program of beautiful music over radio from station WBIG, Greensboro, Monday evening from 6:30 to 7:30 o'clock. The college orchestra, college choir, and girls' glee club, joined in this program, which was arranged by Prof. E. B. Stimson. Soloists were Norman Dements, who played on the violin Adagio from Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata;" Miss Alma Andrews, who played "Witches' Dance," by Dowell, on the piano, Miss Margaret Neese who sang "Vale" by Russell, Miss Laura Braswell who sang "Lost Roses," by Ellis, Miss Vancannon, who played a piano solo, "Concert Study," by Wright, Miss Margaret Louise White, who played McDowell's "Hungarian Dance," Miss Virginia Peam who sang "The Star" by Rogers, Miss Mildred Redwine who sang "Estrellita" by Ponce, Miss Helen Lanier who played as a piano solo, "Second Mazurka," by Godard, Hubert Liverman who played Grieg's "Butterfly," and Chopin's "Etude," and Norman Dement, tenor who sang, "Your Love for Me," by Morris. This program was highly creditable, and these young musicians bid fair to become artists.

First Church, Winston.—It's great when everybody works. It seems that every one in our Sunday school is working. Last Sunday we had 189 present; a year ago last Sunday we had 104. You can see for yourself that some one has been suggesting the idea of going to Sunday school. On the Sunday before last there were 163 attending. From one Sunday to another the attendance gained by 26 persons. No doubt most of the Herald readers have watched the reports of the Charlotte-Winston-Salem contest. This contest should be beneficial to both churches; a lot of interest is being shown in First church, Winston, and we know from reports that Charlotte is most enthusiastic.

Church attendance last Sunday was the best we've had this conference year.

In the morning service, Rev. Mr. Pritchard gave us a splendid missionary sermon. In the evening the Woman's auxiliary held their annual thank offering service. This program was very effective.

On Friday evening of this week the Boaster's class, (this class is the Young People's class) will give a play in the Sunday school room of the church. From all we've been able to find out, this will be a presentation worth one's quarter. This class purchased a piano sometime ago and the funds from this play will go to help pay for the piano.

The Girls' auxiliary met Monday evening with Mrs. J. A. Gwyn. She is the leader of this girls' circle, and a wonderful leader she is. She is loved by all the girls; without her what would they do? The Valentine idea was carried out. After the business a social hour was enjoyed. Games were played and later the guests were ushered into the dining room, and delicious salad, sandwiches and coffee was served.

It is with regret that we report the illness of Mrs. J. E. Pritchard; she has had an attack of flu and was unable to attend the services Sunday. We hope she will be well and happy real soon.

Clothing and Other Gifts

The ladies of Rockingham church, 1 quilt.

Mrs. Irene Cole's S. S. class, Youngstown, Ohio, a valentine each for all our children.

We are thankful for all these gifts which make this report possible this week.

Trees and Shrubbery

We are planting a few trees and shrubs today, such as we have. Many of you will be cleaning your premises soon and will dig up and throw away many things which might be useful here. Honeysuckle bushes, lilacs, especially the purple, crepe myrtle and other flowering shrubs and bushes, and also roots for the flower garden. We ought to do much more planting this spring than we will be able to do, unless some good friend shows up who is willing to help us plant the lawn as it should be.

Hymn Books

Our hymn books are completely given out.

Two friends have given a dollar each to buy others. Will you give a dollar? If so, please send it quickly. Thank you.

Sympathy

We, too, can join with Dr. Taylor in sympathy for Rev. C. H. Whitaker in the loss of his hens. We have a fellow feeling since the thieves have stolen more than a hundred hens from the Children's Home within the last two months. We built a good chicken house last summer, and secured the door well with a strong chain and a good lock. One time the thieves broke the lock, stole the chickens and left the chain. The next time they broke the lock and took lock, chain and chickens. We have put another lock and chain to the door, and are trying to catch the thieves. We are trusting the dear Lord to help. We know that stealing is an awful crime, but surely it takes the meanest of the mean to steal from superannuated ministers and orphan children.

Our Sick

Our sick ones are nearly all up and going now, and we are trusting that the flu conditions have cleared for us. Please continue to pray for us, and to give as God may direct.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

not have regular air mail from America to Japan.

Christmas in Yokohama is very different from what it was when I came to Japan in 1902. Then, the only sign of Christmas before the day was the appearance of a very few Christmas cards in some of the stores that catered to foreigners and the rehearsal of Christmas programs in the mission schools and churches. Now, if it were not that the bamboo is seen in the street decorations instead of pine or rather in addition to pine, one could well imagine he was in America. The streets are gay and beautiful with evergreens and electric lights, while Santa Claus beckons from many a store-window, and you are invited to do your Christmas shopping early. Some lament that the commercial Christmas has so far outrun the real Christmas spirit, but evidence was abundant this year that many who have not yet owned Christ as Lord are ready to follow him in giving to the poor, and not few were they, who this year had occasion to rejoice because it was Christmas.

As most of this last term (you know that our school year ends in March and the new year begins in April) is one grand rush to advertise for new students and decide which ones can do the work, give them physical examinations and mental tests, and to finish up the work of the year, and help our students who wish to go to college to prepare for their entrance examinations, it will go very quickly. I have been foolish enough to take the presidency of the Women's Auxiliary of Yokohama Union church for the next six months. It seems a little more work, but I am glad to have the contact with the earnest women who make up that circle. I am hoping that the Auxiliary can do a little more missionary work this year besides doing our share in helping with the finances of the church. The church budget has been very much increased but I think the new pastor and his wife will be able to build up the church so the burden will be no heavier than before.

My furlough is due now but just when it will begin, I cannot say. However, I am hoping to sail for San Francisco about the last of July.

I am eager to go home to see all my friends and I do want to go to school a little to see if I can catch up with the procession in educational matters. I have to depend on my limited supply of books and magazines to keep me informed of the progress of school methods and ideals; and necessarily I miss much. On the other hand, I hate to leave my work here even for a year. Mr. Otake will carry on the school as well or better than I can, but by being away a year I shall miss my usual knowledge of the girls who will graduate next year, and I like to know all the girls who go out from us. Last Sunday I attended the funeral services of one of our graduates. None of her family are Christians but during her months of illness she showed such a beautiful faith and loved her Bible and Hymn Book so that her mother was eager to grant her request to have the funeral in the church. It is encouraging to see how some of the girls who, when in school, seemed to be very ordinary, blossom out into lives of Christian beauty.

OLIVE I. HODGES.

News Notes

Mrs. C. W. Bates, chairman of districts, accompanied by Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk and Mrs. M. H. Greer, went to Sandy Ridge church, Kernersville charge, Sunday morning and spoke about the missionary work. She expects to go back on Friday, February 27, to organize an Auxiliary.

Money is coming in for Mr. Minnis' salary. Reports will start next week in the Herald of money received from Auxiliaries, Sunday schools and C. E. societies. Send in yours to Mrs. Taylor as soon as possible.

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

The Executive Committee meeting of the North Carolina Branch was held January 27, Greensboro, with fine attendance and most departmental secretaries presented reports showing progress.

From corresponding secretary's report: Seven new auxiliaries organized during quarter. This plan was used in presenting the Women's Work at the Annual Conference in November. Since many churches have no auxiliaries but most have active Aid Societies whose contributions remain separate from the auxiliaries, a report was prepared showing as accurately as possible the money raised by the women of this conference during the preceding year for New Century Service, for Branch Budget, and for local work. The amount was $24,417, and copies of this report were presented each preacher and delegate and a copy printed in the conference journal.

The president, treasurer, chairman of districts and corresponding secretary made brief talks during the conference session, explaining various phases of the women's work. The preachers were given slips of paper and urged to write on them the names of key women in churches having no auxiliary, and to return the same to the corresponding secretary. Fifty-two names of women were returned, and efforts are being made to organize auxiliaries or get contributions towards the salary of our missionary, Mr. Minnis, through these women.

Letters have been sent to all Sunday school superintendents and Christian Endeavor society leaders, asking the young people to give a free-will offering towards Mr. Minnis' salary. In this way we hope to interest all of our young people as well as to increase our offerings.

The editor of the missionary column in the Methodist Protestant Herald made a very earnest plea for our women to practice economy and thrift so that our finances may not fall behind during this season of financial depression.

An invitation to hold our branch meeting at First church, High Point, was gratefully accepted, and a committee was appointed to arrange the date and program for the meeting.

Mrs. Nicholson was made custodian of Indian costumes given to our branch by Mrs. Minnis, and we are planning to add costumes of other countries in order that we may help new auxiliaries by lending them costumes for their pageants and plays.

Our branch is helping fifteen students in High Point college this year through our North Carolina Student Loan fund.

The committee voted that our branch continue the payment of ten cents per member annually to the Student Loan Fund, and request that it be used through the Christian Education Department.

A MEMBER.

Attention!

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear"

God has set His signals going:
They fill the air, they traverse space,
Telling eye and ear and feeling
The marvels of His power and grace.

God would rouse us from our stupor,
And He would fill our empty minds,
Showing us in many phases
His greatest work of divers kinds.

God's appeals are never ended,
His calls are heard both day and night;
Trying hard to make us noble,
He warns or woos with all His might.

One by one we hear God calling,
He seeks us out just where we are;
Sending us His loving message,
He tries to lure us from afar.

Shall we close our minds and senses,
And be content to be inane?
Rather may we seek enlargement,
And lift our lives to God's high plane.

Papal Pretension

The Roman papacy has maintained its world-wide influence through the centuries by its brazen pretensions. It is still a pretender; rather it is now a confirmed pretender and by virtue of long continuance in its pretenses it has acquired some of the respect that belongs to legitimate claims. In no other realm than the realm of religion would such claims be tolerated. The kings of the world that claimed to rule by divine right have been deposed. Their pretense became obvious. Their shams ceased to inspire respect. But in the religious realm impositions can longer be perpetuated. Because men are superstitious, ignorant and gullible impostures flourish.

Apologists for Rome point to the good that the Romish church has done. It is not necessary to deny any of its good works to find ground for condemning its evil works and false claims. So far as the Roman church has been Christian in its beliefs, teaching and works it is entitled to commendation. But so far as it has been false and un-Christian in its faith and practice it deserves condemnation.

The acquisition of numbers, wealth and influence does not go any distance in its justification for wrongs committed.

The end does not justify the means any more than it did before Jesuits said that it does.

Had the Roman Catholic Church been thoroughly and consistently Christian in all its dispensations, who can doubt that the world would have been much farther advanced in the ways of righteousness. But it will be said that the same remark might be made of the Protestant church. We admit it. We are not disposed to condemn anything in the Romish church that we would not condemn in every church. Wrong is wrong and cannot be made right by the accidents of circumstance.

No church that pretends to be the only real Christian church can justify its claim. The Mediterranean Sea might claim to be the only body of water on earth, but the Atlantic and Pacific oceans would still appear. Water does not have to be all in one body in order to be water. Christians do not have to be all in one organization in order to be Christians. Separation of Christians into different organizations makes for convenience and harmonious co-operation. What body of Christians shall forbid every other body to exist? What body shall have the presumption to say that all other bodies are devoid of any vital relationship to Christ? What body shall say, Only with us can you find forgiveness of sin? What body shall say, We are the sole inheritors of authority from the days of the Founder of Christianity. Our priests are the only legitimate priests. We hold the keys of destiny.

No church honors itself by making such monstrous claims. It reveals the ugly fact that it possesses a spirit and purpose diametrically opposite to that of the Founder of Christianity. Jesus prescribed no form of organization for His church, but He did very clearly enunciate principles that should guide in every church organization. He condemned the Gentile system of exercising authority. The new Kingdom is not to be like that. The church is to be a Christian brotherhood,—not a series of orders, one above another. Men are to be guided by the light of truth within, not by the edicts of external human authority.

Roman Catholics, you are the "separated brethren." We invite you to come back to the Source of Truth, the Christ and the Holy Spirit He sent to remain with us and guide us into all truth.

—Lawlessness did not originate with the Eighteenth Amendment. There is probably less violation of the liquor law today than we have had in America for one hundred, forty years. Forty-nine fiftieths of all the property that was engaged in the manufacture and sale of liquor is now used for other purposes. Nineteen-twentieth of all the people who used to be engaged in the sale of liquor are now employed in other trades.

THE ARAB AND THE JEW IN PALESTINE

Reasons Back of the Growing Enmity Between the Two Races Living Side by Side in the Holy Land

To understand the feeling of the Arab toward the Jew in Palestine, it is necessary to have some knowledge of Zionism, as its purpose and work are really the cause of the friction that exists between the Jew and the Arab of the Holy Land.

This movement began more than fifty years ago, when there were but very few Jews in the land. About that time a Dr. Leo Pinsker published a book called "Auto-Emancipation" which culminated in the formation of the "Choveve Zion," a world-wide fraternity of Zion-lovers, and the beginning of colonization in Palestine. In the 1880's the first settlements were established—three in Judea, two in Samaria, and two in Galilee. In 1897, through the work of Theodore Herzl a Zionist Congress was held in Basle which was attended by lovers of the Holy Land from many nations. Here the foundation stone of the Zionist Movement was laid. In 1903 the British Government offered the Zionist organization an autonomous Jewish territory in East Africa. This was not accepted, as the Jews felt that Palestine alone could meet their ancestral and religious desire for a National Home.

A little later, two important financial institutions were founded to promote colonization purposes. The first of these was the Jewish Colonial Trust, which with its Palestine branch, the Anglo-Palestine Company, was the Zionists' bank, and the second was the Jewish National Fund, known as the "Keren Kayemeth LeIsrael," the instrument for land purchase. In 1908 the Palestine office of the Zionist organization was established, and Dr. Arthur Ruppin placed at its head—a position that he continues to occupy today. While agricultural colonization has been very largely the main object of the movement and still is, Zionism has also promoted urban colonization, its chief work lately along this line being the new quarters at the north of Jerusalem, and the notable city of Tel Aviv, adjoining Jaffa, and where only Jews live.

During the World War all efforts at colonization came to a standstill, but the Jews in different countries who had been organized as auxiliary to the great movement kept the matter in mind, and did such work as they could to assure the recognition of the historic claim of the Jewish people to Palestine. A result brought about through this work, in which Dr. Chaim Weizmann and Nahum Sokolow were the leaders, was the famous "Balfour Declaration" issued on November 2, 1917, by Lord Balfour, minister for foreign affairs in the British Cabinet, which reads as follows:

His Majesty's Government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a National Home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country.

This declaration was approved by nearly all the leading powers of the world. Later, the Peace Conference received a Zionist delegation, and finally the political status of Palestine was incorporated in the mandate given to Great Britain, with the duty "of placing the country under such political, administrative, and economic conditions as will secure the establishment of the Jewish National Home." The preamble to this mandate recognizes the historic right of the Jews to Palestine, and makes provision for the Zionist organization to be recognized as the Jewish agency, with privilege of advising and co-operating with the government administration.

In the building up of the Jewish National Home, the method employed by the Zionist Movement is that of encouraging and assisting Jews in all parts of the world to immigrate to Palestine, establish homes there on farms or in colonies, and develop new enterprises, and of standing by them until they become self-supporting.

Land bought and owned by the Jewish National Fund, which purchased it with money raised by appeals to Jewish masses for small gifts, amounted to about 5,000 acres at the end of the war, and to 75,000 acres at the beginning of 1930. Reforestation, much needed in Palestine, also is receiving attention, more than 782,000 trees of various sorts having been planted in different parts of the land.

Another organization, called Keren Hayesod, came into being in 1920. This organization supplements the work done by the Jewish National Fund, and assists in the founding and establishing of new industries. It has helped new towns build good roads, and has assisted in many other ways to establish a modern, progressive, and happy Jewish Homeland.

Not the least of the work of the Palestine Foundation Fund has been its educational and health contribution to the betterment of the people. In this work it has been assisted by the woman's organization of Zionism, called Hadassah, after Queen Esther, because she saved her people when they were threatened with destruction, and also by the Workers' Sick Fund. The Hadassah looks after the health of the immigrants and sees to the medical inspection of the schools. It assists in the campaign against malaria and trachoma; it administers four hospitals with 370 beds, and has 50 polyclinics and laboratories. In 1928, 10,369 patients were treated in the hospitals and 120,000 in the polyclinics. These are open to the Arab as well as to the Jew. The Workers' Sick Fund has 14,000 members, and administers two hospitals and two convalescent homes.

The Palestine Foundation Fund also takes care of all the Hebrew educational system, and the advancement of Jewish cultural life in Palestine. In 1929 the Hebrew school system comprised 227 schools with 790 teachers and pupil attendance of 19,419. A university and a technical institute also are maintained. All this work is carried on in the Hebrew language. Many newspapers, books, trade and literary journals, too, are published in Hebrew.

There are 154,330 Jews in Palestine at present, while in 1919 there were but 57,900. There are also 572,443 Moslems, 80,225 Christians, and 9,066 others, making a total of 816,064, besides about 100,000 wandering Bedouins. The industrial census of 1928 revealed a total invested capital of $17,524,430, of which the Jews' share was not less than sixty-five per cent., or $11,500,000. The census also showed that 6,400 Jews were employed in industrial work, while only 5,200 non-Jews were employed in like work. Revenue in that same year amounted to $12,291,275, of which the Jews paid forty-four per cent., or $5,416,975.

Now, it is this great development and growth of Zionism, backed by Jews in all parts of the world, and by most of the Christian governments of the world, that is causing consternation in the minds and hearts of the Arab population and Mohammedan ecclesiastics. The Arabs have looked upon the land of Palestine as their home for thirteen centuries, and have been in possession of it during this time except for about ninety years when it was held by the Crusaders. The country has belonged to the Arabs a much longer time than it was ever possessed by the Jewish people, and besides, they are more than four times as many as are the Jews. They will not admit the Jew's claim that Jehovah gave the land to them through Isaac and Jacob for an endless possession. They hold that they are the children of Abraham through Ishmael, and that the Jews came into possession of the land even as they did, by conquest. They also say that the Jews were driven out of the land because of their faithlessness to Jehovah, and that they crucified the great Teacher and Saviour who came to them from God.

Another grievous thing to the Arab is the part that Great Britain has taken in the Zionist Movement. During the World War, or the latter part of it, the Arabs fought on the side of the Allies and against their former rulers, the Turks, and expected better treatment at the hands of their new rulers. The Arabs would not complain at Great Britain's approving of the Jews' effort to obtain a home in Palestine; but they sternly object to that nation's promising in the Balfour Declaration that "His Majesty's Government will use its best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object," and also to the privilege granted the Zionist party to be an advisory adjunct in the government of the land, in carrying out the program of Zionism.

But the chief thing that stirs up the anger of the Arabs is the great economic pressure that is being brought upon them by the agricultural and industrial projects of Zionism. Not much more than half of Palestine lends itself to cultivation, and nearly all the land that is fit for cultivation is now under the plow. Therefore, the more the Zionists buy the less there is for the Arabs and the less chance there is for them to find employment. The Arabs feel that the Zionist Movement is pressing them to the wall, for no other purpose than to force them out of their native land and home.

More than this, the Mohammedans believe that Zionism has an ultimate secret purpose—to gain possession of the temple area, and again erect there a Jewish temple. This area is one of the two most sacred spots in the world to the Moslem heart, and he would rather die than be forced to vacate it. Of course this purpose to possess the temple area is denied by the Zionists, yet one cannot but feel that a National Home of the Jews in Palestine could not well be all the home they desire, without the spot in it which, above all other spots, is closely and sacredly related to their ancestral home and history.

For these reasons, and others that might be mentioned, there exists today in Palestine a bitter feud between the Arab and the Jew, which would immediately break out into a fearful massacre but for the strong arm of Great Britain, which holds them apart. And Britain is severely criticized and disliked by both Jews and Arabs—by the Jews for not more vigorously and fully keeping her promise to do her utmost to establish them in their ancestral home, and by the Arabs for making any such promise to the Jews, and for favoring the Jew in the land against the Arab in the land. The Arab would like one of two things—either that the mandate over Palestine be transferred to the American government, or else that the people, both Jews and Arabs, be permitted to rule themselves and their land, in an independent government of their own choosing. This, however, would not do, for in that case the Arab would legislate the Jew out of the land, or else utterly defeat his pet project to found a National Home in Palestine. How this vexed dispute can be righteously settled, no one appears to know; but one thing seems sure, that like other moral questions it will never be settled right until the principles and spirit of Him who was born in Bethlehem and died in Jerusalem prevail in the governments concerned and in the people generally.—John E. Durbury in Zion's Herald.

A WASHINGTON LETTER OF 1788

By COL. FRED A. OLDS

A letter, all in the handwriting of George Washington to Richard Dobbs Spaight, Senior, of New Bern, N. C., is one of the latest accessions to the great and growing collection in the North Carolina Hall of History. For a long time this letter was lost sight of. Spaight served as an aide-de-camp to General Richard Caswell in the Revolution and in 1783 was a member of the Continental Congress.

This letter is a matter which lay very close to the heart of General Washington, namely the ratification by all the States of the Constitution of the United States. July 21, 1788, the North Carolina State Convention met, in St. Matthew's Church at Hillsboro. There were present 268 members, out of the total 280. The question was the ratification without any amendments of the Federal Constitution and those who proposed that there should be amendments before such ratification. Willie Jones (pronounced like Wyley) was the leader of the latter faction or group. He had originally been entirely against adoption but when Virginia ratified he saw the new Government would surely be formed so sought to secure amendments before North Carolina agreed to fall in line.

Governor Samuel Johnston a powerful "Federalist" was elected president of the body, in which were the ablest men in the State. Spaight (had Washington's letter) William R. Davie, James Iredell were also ardent for ratification, Davie and Spaight having had a part in the framing of the first Federal Constitution. However, the "Antis" won by a vote of 184 against ratification to 84 in favor of it. So the tremendous question went over to the year 1789, for the Convention adjourned August 4th.

By June 1, 1788, nine other states had ratified the Constitution, which by its provisions was thus made effective. In August, 1789, the North Carolina State election was held and it gave the Anti-Federalists a heavy blow. Willie Jones could not see the "hand-writing on the wall," however, and had the nerve to announce his "plan," this being to "stay out of the Union five or six years." The Legislature met at Fayetteville November 2, 1789, and the State Convention met November 16, with 272 present. Many persons were members of both Legislature and Convention, so the Legislature took a recess during the Convention's session and November 17, it ratified by a vote of 195 to 77, the Constitution and its twelve amendments, which Congress submitted. The Convention adjourned November 22, and North Carolina was again a "member of the Union" but had no part in the election of the first President, George Washington, April 6, 1789, or in the first session of the new Congress, which began that day.

This Washington letter is deposited in the Hall of History by Colonel Charles L. Bryan of New Bern, a member of the noted Stanly, Bryan and Spaight families. It was mailed at Alexandria, Virginia, May 25, 1788, and was received at the New Bern postoffice June 13. It was "franked" (that is carried free) by Washington, who always spelled his name "Go." and not "George."—Prison News.

THE CALL FOR HELP

The call for help is every where today in the U. S. A.
Will this great nation hear that call today?
Our great government called some years ago;
For millions of young men to fight the foe.
It was duty and privilege to make the great sacrifice then.
Thinking we could rid this world of autocracy and sin.
The call for help came from across the sea, to fight for liberty
The call for help came from mountains to sea.
To call for help was all that was necessary then,
To rally millions of red-blooded fighting men.
We answered the call in a spirit of unselfishness.
The fight was cruel and cold-blooded in the war,
Fighting a foe whose ideals were low.
The autocratic men who were fighting us then,
Were steeped in selfish sin.
To the call we did rally and bravely fight;
To end the wickedness of the Hun.
The fight was no fun, listen to the call, O men of today
The call in the rich U. S. A.
The call for food from the hungry and the cold.
The call is the saddest that has ever been told.
The call from the dying children, if you please.
Will you answer the call or will you let them starve and freeze?
The call is so great and the gifts so small.
Will we hold them up or let them fall?
The call comes from the men of the American Legion, too,
Not a selfish call comes from soldiers today.
The call for help is for the people of the U. S. A.
To be helped in a businesslike way.
Ex-soldiers ask not for mercy or a gift of gold,
WE ask for a debt that is old.
A debt that is due us today, for our service to the U. S. A.
The call for help came to the saints in the far east years ago.
To preach the glad tidings of salvation you know.
The call for help from every county in every state in our land,
Is for salvation from hunger and want—currency man—currency man—
Who is the man or men of today; who would deny our little pay.
Then to all mankind the money would go to help the helpless
And banish the foe, of hunger and distress in this land of bountifulness.
Oh, what will the answer be today in the bountiful country of the U. S. A.?
Oh, how can the millionaires of the stung mind sympathize
With the boys who fought on the firing line,
His money and his deceitfulness is as plain as day.
Who can refuse the ex-soldiers' pay?
When he is hungry and cold and blue
The call of today from millions of men is for righteousness,
My friend,
I'm sure I speak the sentiments of millions of ex-service men
The call of today from far and wide is for work to do that Peace may abide.
Ex-service men are idle today looking for work on any side

The call of today to congress does go from the millions that were
Sent by congress to face the foe.
About 80,000 died over there fighting for justice the world to share.
The call of today is as clear to me, as the sky above, as sincere
And as true as it can be.
A call for love and sympathy from the——
Will avarice rule in our country so free?
Will people forget the sacrifice we made?
Will justice fade as a rose while the innocent comrades die?
Will the defenders of our flag be a castaway.
Will those who profited in dollars during the war now deny
Our little dollar a day——
Oh, what price did the soldiers pay for liberty and justice for all
The price of life—thousands did pay.
What will the red-blooded congressman say today?
God forbid that avarice should have the way.
The call for help is not selfishness from men of the ex-soldiers' camp today
It is for the betterment of one and all that prompts us to call.
Not in the soldiers' beat will you find a thing of the selfish line
God forbid—that any shall be so small that will not seek help for one and all.
Buddies, the battle for democracy did not end, when we conquered the foe.
We must fight on and on today, looking forward and upward as we go.
To men of high ideals in congress today, we trust will seize the torch and raise it high.
To lead all the American people to a higher and nobler plane.
To see the light of salvation break upon us all. To see
The great masses comforted and fed.
And not be depression conquered and bled.
The Golden Rule is good enough for all.
The call for help is clear and true.
We need help, do you?
The clouds of depression will disappear if ex-soldiers get their pay this year——
More speed is the need of the hour.
Will congress grant it and give it power——
We have faith in the men from our state to carry the burden of any fight.
Let the air be filled with the echo of the call for help today
And just men will be victorious in the battle against hunger and want and depression.
The power of the omnipotent will be a blessing to all, the world was made better by the shedding of blood.
The shedding of blood that was given so free.
Was it not that gift that made us free?
Will we listen now to the voice that speaks within
The voice of peace and love so great?
What will be the answer to the defenders of the state
Let the burden of sin and depression be rolled away.
Greater ideals are loved by men than avarice, power of money, or political gain.
What should I write, you may say—haven't ex-service men been offended in the U. S. A.?
Not by our greatest leaders are we offended today.
Not by men of highest ideals does trouble come.
But by oppression of the strong do the weak fall.
God give us men great and true, men whose ideals are high and holy.
Then we will see depression fade and pass away as the mist creeps over the hills.
Then comfort and peace and contentment will come to the starving millions of people throughout the world.
And when the mist has rolled away, yonder clouds are but lined with silver, another hour will reveal them mountains of heavenly glory banked up against the sky.

EVANGELISM

"Thy Kingdom Come"

I had no appointment Sunday, and took advantage of the opportunity to worship with the family in the services of the First church, High Point. The Sunday School hour was spent with the Men's Bible class, where I am honored with membership. Dr. P. S. Kennett is the teacher of the class. The men speak highly of his work in this capacity. The 11 o'clock hour was given over to the women for their Thank Offering service for foreign missions. Their speaker for the occasion was their pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer. He spoke on the appropriate theme, "The Promise of Dawning Day," which the message to the church at Thyatira (Rev. 2:18) as the inspiration of the theme. We trust that the offering received for the women's work was generous. Pastor Farmer has announced, in leaflet form, the services of the church, including Wednesday night, and running through Easter. The week leading up to Palm Sunday, is to be devoted to Visitation Evangelism. Palm Sunday and Easter are designated Ingathering Days. Judge Lewis E. Teague is one of the speakers in the Sunday evening vesper services. His subject is, "Six Years in the Municipal Court." The program, covering this period of more than a month, is full and timely. We hope and pray for best results.

Easter

The date is April 5th—only six weeks off. Have you received your Easter program? A card to Dr. Hadaway will bring it at once. We urge pastor and superintendents to push this. With the exception of Christmas, no festive season of the church is so beautiful and meaningful as Easter. The programs for this occasion are always full of hope and happiness, as they should be; for, "He is risen." "The Lord is risen indeed." We should make much of Easter, as an occasion for magnifying our risen Lord. The Easter program of our Board of Missions will help us to do that. Let us get it, and have it rendered in all of our churches.

College Maintenance

One pastor writes today: "I have already been presenting the college maintenance allotment, and have received a little more than fifty dollars so far." Messages like that from 87 charges would be very heartening. Of course, other pastors and charges are at work on this, and it may be that some have received as much as this pastor, though they have not reported it yet. We have full confidence that our pastors and our people will do their best to raise this fund. Our people have shown marked evidence of their interest in the college by actual money that they have given,—over $200,000 to date. And they will continue to give. A payment of $10 was received today on a recent college pledge. There are many friends of the college all over the conference, and we can count on them to support it. So please let us press the matter for every dollar possible now, and for pledges to be paid later for all deferred amounts.

The Promoting Committee has just sent out a letter to all congregations throughout the conference, with the request that pastors read them. We were pleased to hear Brother Farmer read the letter to his congregation Sunday. We urge for the Committee that this letter be read on every charge to every congregation. The Committee will greatly appreciate it, too, if you will let us have reports of your success.

Methodist Protestant Convention

Dr. Straughn says, "I consider this Convention one of the most vital denominational attempts within my life time. The possibilities for good are incalculable, and they can not come too soon." Through personal letters and the church papers, our people are becoming acquainted with the Convention plans, and more and more the interest among us will grow. The oldest conference in the connection will, of course, not fail the church in this great undertaking. Our people will rally to the movement and make every possible contribution to its greatest success. Plans will be made at once to secure the registrations allotted to us, and announcement of this made later. Washington, D. C., is the place of the Convention. May 12-15 is the date.

"Hope Thou in God"

This exhortation of the Psalmist to his own soul, is one that we may well take comfort from. If God is for us, who can be against us? What can be against us? And surely God is for us. For us as a church; for us as congregations; for us as individuals; for our homes; for our children; for our business. For us, and for everything that concerns us, in proportion as we honor Him, and do the work that he has given us to do. Our part is to have the sort of loyalty to Him that inspires confidence in his mercies, and brings Him close to us as our God. Then, in the midst of whatever is confusing or disturbing to us, we can say to our souls, as did the Psalmist, "Hope thou in God." And that hope will not be disappointed.

We hear more about one bootlegger with a single bottle of whiskey in his pocket than we used to hear of hundreds of wide open saloons plying their trade night and day and all through Sundays in violation of the law. The reason is that we have made the sale of liquor news.—C. S.

NOTICE, PASTORS

By order of the Summer Conference of last year it was fixed that the conference this year met at the same time and place as last year. This means that the Pastor's Summer Conference for 1931 will meet at Children's Home on Monday night, June 22, 1931. It is hoped that pastors will keep this in mind when making out schedules and not make other engagements on this date and make all plans to attend the conference that we might have the best yet.

Yours for a great Conference

LINCOLN AND WASHINGTON

In the newspapers there appeared recently a story with reference to an attack on the character and fame of Abraham Lincoln. This news story was based upon a book that has recently been published, which attempts by direct statements and inference to destroy the high reputation of Lincoln and the affection in which his memory is held by the American people. It seeks to cut away the foundations from one of the greatest figures that our country has produced, by denying to him all the virtues and the character and the fine intellectual qualities that he possessed in rare measure.

I have no fear that the purpose of this author will be achieved, because Lincoln has been tried in the fire of time, and his stature has grown greater with the passing years. It is true that Lincoln was human—we would not like him if he had not been. It is probable that he had some human frailties and peculiarities, but they only serve to make his greatness stand out more sublime. No man could put into language the sentiments of nobility which Lincoln expressed, without being noble. No man could put into statecraft so much fine character and lofty sentiment, unless he were a superior being. No man, in the searching analysis of time, could grow to the magnificent stature of Lincoln in the estimation of the civilized world, without having within himself the essential elements of greatness.

It is not that we need to be concerned about the success of these efforts at destruction. The reputation of Lincoln is safe. But we do need to be concerned with the efforts of a cynical minority, of which this is symptomatic, to destroy all sources of our idealism and our inspiration, to tear down all our idols and heroes, around whom we have builded our faith. There are too many destructive forces at work, too many evil things that tend to bear us down and rob us of the things that elevate and ennoble.

We need our heroes. We need every fine character and every inspiring personality that history can give us, round whom our idealism may be developed and our faith may be entwined. These cynical destructionists are guilty of intellectual vandalism, because they paint a distorted, unfair and unbalanced picture of their subject. They are as bad in spirit as one who would wilfully destroy a beautiful painting, or one who would deliberately deface a piece of fine statuary, or one who would maliciously destroy a magnificent garden.

A similar book was published within the last few years by an author who attempted to belittle George Washington and hold up to ridicule the man whom we regard as the father of his country. It is significant that this earlier book, which sought to destroy Washington, has made comparatively little impression, and that relatively few people can remember the name of the author. The record of Washington speaks so eloquently that it cannot be destroyed. His fame is imperishable, like the eternal mountains. Washington and his achievements, as well as his character and intellectual qualities, have been subjected to the critical processes of time, and he stands forth as a truly great man, who measured up in an heroic sense to abnormal responsibilities.

This superb statesman left the world indebted to him not merely for what he did, but more especially for what he was. He gave us an example of courage and faith and devotion. That is a heritage in itself. He showed qualities of leadership and character and intellectual power, that will serve for all time as a fitting goal for those who wish to emulate greatness. The majestic figure of Washington is none-the-less noble and inspiring because he was human. Real greatness is enhanced by the fact that it springs out of the normal qualities of life and is achieved by human beings rather than by unnatural super-men.—Excerpts from speech by Martin L. Davey.

QUITE NATURALLY!

A twenty-three-year-old Harvard graduate recently committed self-destruction following a "big party" at an exclusive Connecticut club.

The youth's farewell note stated that life was "a ghastly joke"—strange words for a boy whose actual experience with hardship must have been limited to a few brief years, as it is understood that he had but recently graduated.

But the most significant feature of the case was that he was a self-confessed atheist, one of those collegiate intellectuals, apparently, to whom the Great Creator is a myth, the Holy Bible a mass of disjointed legends, and moral and civil law the "bunk." Naturally to such a "captain of one's soul" the self-precipitated flight into eternity meant little or nothing at all, the only courage required being the nerve to pull a trigger. But this spurious brand of nerve may be purchased in any quantity according to the affluence of the party desiring the same. After a "big party" at which stimulants of questionable manufacture are consumed in quantity one is not only capable of pulling a trigger, but may also be inclined to hold up a bank, massacre peaceful neighbors, or pay his income tax with a benign smile—all distinctly phenomenal actions.

It is not surprising to learn that to the man without God life is a ghastly joke. Could it be otherwise? Would there be any purpose in living if there were no All-Wise, All-Loving Father to whom man could turn with his manifold problems? Would one be justified in working and striving through the years, enduring the hardships that the world offers in abundance if, at the end of the journey, he found nothing but the moldy tomb and eternal darkness? How any rational man, woman or child can conscientiously believe there is no God is beyond this writer's finite intelligence. How the atheist can derive any joy or comfort from his meaningless and hap-hazard existence is likewise a problem before which we stand dumbfounded.

In the very presence of the Infinite, surrounded on all hands by actual proofs of an Omnipotent God—a Divine Intelligence—ever operating in His universe, how can man doubt?

If this college graduate acquired his disbelief of God in the university, either through biological research or by contact with other smart young men, then indeed "the knowledge of this world is foolishness unto God." Better had the boy given up his scholasticism, pawned his pistol, purchased a Bible and gone out into the world to make an honest livelihood. Had he done so he would now be in the land of the living, working at his profession or trade, a useful citizen doing his share to make the world a better place in which to live.

He may yet learn to his sorrow that suicide does not prove a stepping-stone to eternal happiness—that he will have to work out his salvation on another plane before he can gain the Crown of Life.

The fool hath said in his heart, "There is no God."—L. W. in Supreme Council Bulletin.

SLAVERY IN SOVIET RUSSIA

A high official of the Russian secret police escaped to Helsingfors, Finland, and there has divulged conditions in the Soviet convict camps. In his testimony he said that according to official records, the number of prisoners on May 1, 1930, was 662,200, comprising 569,983 men, 73,285 women and 18,932 young people between 13 and 17. These prisoners, a large proportion of whom are not convicts in the ordinary acceptance of that term, work in the forests, log floating, highway and railroad building, loading and unloading, draining and ditching, fishing and building. Many of them are sold to the timber companies as slaves would be sold. The OGPU has undertaken to provide labor at a fixed rate of 4 1-2 rubles daily, and as this must feed and supervise the prisoners it is not surprising that the rations are inadequate. Last winter there were 72,000 casualties in the camps, many dying of exhaustion, typhoid and scurvy and the rest were killed by guards for attempting escape or inefficient work. Their clothes were rags; their food was rotten fish, soup, and horse-flesh once a week. There is very little medical attention; the barracks in which they live are filthy and crowded. Besides the convicts and the deported persons there are also peasants who have been impressed into forest work and these peasants are virtually slaves. The above recital gives a picture not pleasant to contemplate. And this is the "beneficent" rule of "free" Russia: this is the communist heaven we are urged to enter! The people of whom we have been reading are those confined in the northern camps alone, but there are the same kind of desperate prisoners in concentration camps scattered all over Russia. We need some one with powers not less than that of Dante to adequately describe these vast areas and depths of human woe and to stir a world's pity as it needs to be stirred.—The United Presbyterian.

—The country is shocked by the great number of suicides. Some of them are attributed to financial reverses. No man has learned how to live truly who can not live in poverty. Jesus lived in poverty—He had not where to lay His head. Yet he realized that He was to be the Heir of infinite riches. To cast away life because of untoward circumstances indicates very little faith in God and very little loyalty to the purposes of God. Poverty may be the best condition for us; it is for many people. The number of suicides is an index of the prevalence of atheism or of an inadequate faith in God not much better than atheism. People should learn how to endure hardness as good soldiers of Christ.

A RAINY DAY LESSON

A shabbily dressed, awkward girl of thirteen came into Miss Warner's Sunday School class one summer morning, and gave her name as Sara Jane Jones. After entering she was always present, and on time, although she lived a mile from the church. She never spoke except to answer in monosyllables when asked a question. When the young teacher visited her pupil she found the family was almost destitute and the father out of employment. Sara Jane was the oldest of nine children.

"Sara Jane is a powerful help to me with the babies," the tired looking mother told Miss Warner, "but she's mighty slow to learn in her books. She stays two years in all her grades."

Neighbors could have told that Sara Jane was overworked at home, nursing babies, washing and cooking, but there seemed to be no way to relieve the girl's burdens.

When Miss Warner offered to teach her class of girls basket-making, knitting and embroidery on Saturday afternoons, Sara Jane was the only one who could not learn to do the work. The instructions of one week were forgotten by the next. The teacher was discouraged, and believed that her efforts to help the girl had failed.

One stormy, rainy morning in September, Miss Warner arrived late at the church. When she entered her Sunday School room Sara Jane Jones, somewhat drabbed, but smiling, was the only pupil in attendance. The thought came: "Why waste the lesson period trying to teach this stupid girl, when I could enjoy the lecture of the Bible Class teacher?"

"Would you like to go into a class with other girls, Sara Jane?" Miss Warner asked persuasively.

"No'm. I don't want no teacher but you," the girl replied decidedly.

"Very well, I will teach you."

There came the resolve to give this dull, overworked child her very best efforts in making the lesson simple and easy to understand. Jesus had preached a sermon to the Samaritan woman. She would follow His example. The subject of the lesson was "God's Great Gift to the World." She began by telling of the creation and fall of man, and the need of a Savior; then of how God "so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son" to save the lost. She made plain the necessity of conviction, or realization of sin, the need of repentance, and how the blood of Jesus could cleanse from all sin.

Did Sara Jane want to be saved? There was eager, unhesitating assent. Was she sorry for her sins, willing to turn from them, and trust in Jesus to save her? Would she give her life to Him? The dull face, working with emotion, lighted with joy as she responded:

"Yes'm, I'm sorry for my sins—so sorry I don't want to sin no more. There ain't nothin' else I can do but trust Jesus to save me."

"Then you must confess Him and be baptized. Talk to your parents, though, before you join the church."

"Yes'm, I will."

A few days later Miss Warner went to a neighboring city to visit a friend. Upon her return home she found the family of Jones had moved to a farm in the Mississippi delta. She was unable to learn Sara Jane's address, and as time passed the memory of the quiet, timid girl to whom she had made plain the gospel message that rainy September morning, passed from her mind.

Years passed. Miss Warner married a well-known lay preacher who did great work in Sunday School Institutes all over the state. She accompanied him to an institute held with a small-town delta church in the county Agricultural High School buildings. Soon after her arrival the president of the Woman's Missionary Society, whose guest she was told her of a visit they anticipated from a young woman the members of that Associational District were educating to be a missionary.

"She joined our church when a slip of a girl, and from the first her heart seemed on fire to carry the gospel to the heathen. She was slow to learn in school, and not until she begged the junior superintendent into letting her teach a class of children in Sunday School did we realize she really and truly called to the work. It wasn't long until every child in her class was converted, and as eager to do the Lord's work as their teacher. The women of our different associations made up money and sent her to one of our denominational schools where she did not have so many hindrances from her family. They were very poor, but there were other girls in the home who could help. She did well in that school, and spent her vacations here. She has made over both the town and the county. She visits the worldly, the lawbreakers, the down-and-outs, and talks to them individually. Every word that she says sticks. She knows the Bible and makes it so plain that the simplest can understand. We are going to send her to the Training School in Louisville this fall, and when she has finished the course we will support her to China. She will be a blessing to the heathen as she has been to this once godless community."

"Here she comes now! I am so glad for you to meet her."

A tall young woman with a face aglow with a light that comes only from a Spirit-filled life, entered the room and warmly greeted by the president of the Missionary Society. And then—

Sara Jane Jones clasped her former teacher in a loving embrace.

"At last I can thank you for that blessed lesson!" Sara Jane cried joyfully.

"What do you mean dear?"

"I mean the morning years ago when you took time to make me, a stupid, ignorant child, see the need of a Savior and repentance for sin, and the power of Jesus to save. That lesson was a turning point in my life, and with the Master's help I have made your plan of teaching the means of bringing blessings and salvation to many. Thank you over and over again for that lesson."

"It was a privilege to teach you, Sara Jane. I feel honored to have been the one to lead you to Christ."—Jennie Standifer in the Leader.

A BIT ADDED

He rang in a little sooner
Than the fellows in his shop;
And he stayed a little longer
When the whistle ordered "Stop!"
He worked a little harder
And he talked a little less;
He seemed but little hurried
And he showed but little stress,
For every little movement
His efficiency expressed.
Thus his envelope grew just
A little thicker than the rest.

He saved a little money
In a hundred little ways;
He banked a little extra
When he got a little "raise."
A little "working model!"
Took his little "leisure" time;
He wrought each little part of it
With patience most sublime.
Now it's very little wonder
That he murmurs with a smile,
As he scans his little bank-book:
"Are the little things worth while?"

UNNATURALIZED ALIENS SHOULD NOT BE COUNTED

The U. S. Constitution says: "Representatives shall be apportioned among the several states according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each state, excluding Indians not taxed." That means the 435 Congressmen must be apportioned among the states according to population rather than citizenship.

The United States Constitution also provides that there shall be a re-apportionment of the Congressional districts every ten years, immediately after the Federal Census. There should have been such a re-districting after the Census but, because of the rapid increase of population of the large cities drawing from states which are largely rural and agricultural, it was found, after the Federal Census of 1920, that many states would lose one or more Congressmen by a new apportionment of Congressional districts.

As a result, the Congressmen from those states that would lose one or more representatives voted year after year against re-apportionment, and such a bill failed to pass at every session of Congress until 1929, when Congress passed a bill providing a plan by which new apportionment of Congressional districts shall automatically take place every ten years, immediately after the taking of the Federal Census. Therefore, the Congress to be elected in November, 1932, will be under the new apportionment law.

When the United States Constitution was adopted 140 years ago, and when it was amended about 60 years ago, the alien population was not a serious problem. Most immigrants then coming to this country intended to become and actually did become American citizens just as soon as possible. But in the last 40 years millions of foreigners have come to this country, just as thousands of gold diggers rushed to Alaska some years ago when gold was discovered there—with no intention whatever of becoming citizens of Alaska but went there to spend a few months, get rich and return to their native country.

Now, why should 7,500,000 of greedy, mercenary, unpatriotic, unnaturalized aliens be counted when making up the estimate for apportioning the number of Congressmen for each state, and why should such aliens also be given representation in the Electoral College and in the National Convention of each political party?

Let us illustrate. There are about 50,000 Chinamen in this country, who according to our laws can never become American citizens. Why should they be counted in making up our Congressional apportionment? Yet, the second section of the Fourteenth Amendment to our United States Constitution provides that we must count "the whole number of persons in each state, excluding Indians not taxed." Of course, a Chinaman is a "person" and must be counted, and every unnaturalized foreigner, be he gold digger, criminal, bootlegger or what not, is a "person" and at present must be counted when making the apportionment for Congressional Districts! This must be changed.—The Civic Forum.

THE LOVE OF GOD

The love of God is an ocean, and no line can sound its depths. It is a sky of unknown dimensions, and no flying machine can reach its heights. It is a continent of unexplored distance, and no tape can measure its length. It is a width of unsurpassed country, and no survey can find its boundary. It is a mine of wealth, and no delving of man can estimate or exhaust its riches. It is a pole of attraction, which no explorer can discover, and the love of God is a forest of beauty, and no botanist can find and describe its variety and glory.—Publisher Unknown.

—There is something radically wrong with the ideals of people who think that life is not worth living unless it is supported by wealth. The mad race for wealth in our country, the wrong methods of acquiring wealth in America and elsewhere, are a result of false ideas concerning the value of wealth. Let people come to understand that no amount of money can compensate for the loss of integrity, honor and neighborly kindness. Let people see in its infinite vastness the superiority of moral possessions over material possessions. Let people see what Jesus saw when he said: "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things he possesseth."

—Russia refused to tune in to hear the message of the Pope of Rome last week. But Russia would have refused to hear a Protestant message, we presume. Its attitude is in striking contrast with that of many devout Catholics who reverently kneeled when they heard the tones of the Pope's voice.

To the Leader

The Christian Endeavor society is a part of the church. Its members are members of the church and it must co-ordinate and co-operate with the church. In order to do this we must know what the church is. In this meeting we want to find out just what the church is and how the Christian Endeavor can help the church carry on its program.

The life of God in the earth has its dwelling place in that body of members that make up the church. The life of God works through that body.

Paul tells us that "the church is His body." The church is a body of people who for Christ's sake are trying to be good. It is not a political organization, it has no connection with the state, it is not a social institution or an ecclesiastical machine. If we search the scriptures we will find out what the church is.

For Discussion

1. What is the meaning of the word church?
2. Is it possible for the church to be in the world without the world getting into the church?
3. Why is it that some speak well of Christ but are critical of the church?
4. What features of the church make it similar to a flock of sheep?
5. In what particulars is the church like a school?
6. How is our church like our bodies?
7. Are we as a church committing the task that has been committed to us to commit?
8. How much does our church owe to Peter, to John, to Thomas, to any of the other disciples?

Poetry

Strong Son of God, immortal Love,

Whom we who have not seen Thy face

By faith, and faith alone, embrace,

Believing where we can not prove.

Thine are these orbs of light and shade;

Thou madest life in man and brute;

Thou madest death; and lo, Thy foot

Is on the skull that Thou hast made.

Thou wilt not leave us in the dust;
Thou madest man, he knows not why;
He thinks he was not made to die;
And Thou hast made him: Thou art just.

Thou seemest human and divine,
The highest, holiest manhood Thou;
Our wills are ours we know not how;
Our wills are ours to make them Thine.

—Tennyson.

MOON EVEN AFFECTS CLOCKS

Did you know that the moon shining down can speed up or slow down the clocks on our mantels and tables? This is the conclusion reached by Prof. E. W. Brown and Dirk Brouwer, Yale scientists, who spent four months studying the subject. The accuracy of a clock, they say, is affected by its elevation or distance from the gravity center of the earth.

ROGER BABSON SPEAKS

"I believe that every Christian man should have a church paper on his library table, not only for inspiration, but for the influence on his children. We should have our children understand that we are just as much interested in religious news as we are in travel news, fashion news, financial news, and various other forms of news in which different magazines specialize."

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION RECEIPTS

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

CHILDREN'S HOME

Have we done the things for our Home this missionary year that we should? There are many things that you can do to help. Be sure to put on a program at an auxiliary meeting. In this program give the interesting things about these children, work and workers. If you will acquaint yourself with this great institution you will find many ways to help. Have a linen shower—bed or table linen. Dr. and Mrs. Dixon and a number of the children have had the flu. We are indeed glad they are all well on the way to recovery.

It is encouraging to note that so many contributions are coming from outside N. C. This of course is largely due to the fact that Dr. and Mrs. Dixon are so well known and so well loved. Their friends will like to help where they are working.

April will soon be here; let's do our bit now so that we can have a good report at Branch meeting. Most of all we should want to help these tireless workers to work in a more efficient way, thus saving them to the work for years to come.

MRS. H. C. NICHOLSON,
Sec'y of Children's Home.

CHARLOTTE AUXILIARY

Circles No. 1 and 2 met February 10 with 15 members present; a new member, Mrs. J. C. Penny. Pastor Andrews made a very interesting and inspiring talk on "The Place of Example in Leadership." We used the Question Box, which we always find interesting and helpful. Report on finances included ten subscriptions to McCall's magazine, for which we received five dollars commission; free will offering, $2.41; $16.05 realized from an oyster supper. A plan for raising money for the next month is selling peanuts. Two were appointed to solicit sales for peanuts and each member agreed to make personal sales.

Received three subscriptions to the Missionary Record.

The missionary Day of Prayer service, was held at St. Mark's Lutheran church; Mrs. A. L. Haigler and Mrs. P. C. Carpenter to represent our church in the choir of fifty voices.

The February thank offering service was observed February 15, with contributions on the following subjects:

A concise history of our missionary work; specific and outstanding events and personalities; the work of Miss Alice coats; Miss Olive Hodges and the girls' school at Yokohama; Miss Mattie Long and the work in India; Dr. Roberta Fleagle and Medical Mission work in Kadan, China; outstanding events in boys' school and in girls' school in Japan. Among foreigners in America; "The Opportunity That Sailed Back;" the work of Dr. and Mrs. Dixon at the Children's Home; Rev. Homer Casto at Bethel Home; "Story of a Mountaineer;" the work of Dr. and Mrs.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mt. Hermon, Creswell.—We regret to have lost a number of friends and relatives who died of the flu epidemic. However, God's plan of life is everlasting wherein our plans are as a dream vanishing indefinitely. First quarterly conference convened at this church Wednesday after the first Sunday in March. All of the churches were represented except two. Recommendations from our pastor, Mr. Russell, were indorsed by the officials.

The following Thursday night the Ladies' auxiliary held their meeting at the church. After dispensing with business matters an impressive program was rendered and was enjoyed by all. Our Sunday school is gradually growing with a good attendance. The Sunday school officials for 1931 are: Superintendent, J. A. Edwards; Assistant Superintendent, Robert Davenport; Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Minnie Lee Davenport, pianist also. Teachers are: A. W. Davenport, Mrs. Robert Davenport, Miss Ida S. Ambrose and Miss Mary F. Davenport.

We are hoping to make the new year count 100 per cent in our church.

Best wishes to the editor and all the readers.
IDA S. AMBROSE, Reporter.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Sunday school has been very good for the past few months and we are hoping it will grow more as spring approaches. Our attendance was sixty last Sunday.

Rev. A. L. Hunter filled his appointment the third Sunday morning at 11 o'clock a very splendid message on "Abraham and Lot." Brother Hunter pointed out many helpful thoughts in his sermon.

There were several visitors present. We welcome them and hope they will come again.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
LOLA BARBER, Reporter.

Harmony Grove, West Forsyth.—Our Sunday school and church work is moving along nicely. We were sorry that both our superintendent and assistant superintendent were absent last Sunday on account of illness. Mr. Gurney Craft is our superintendent and Mr. Ed Smith is our assistant. Last Sunday was the first time that both of them had been absent on the same day in a long time. Mr. Charlie Sheets acted as superintendent. We had a good attendance and the offering was also good.

Last Sunday was our preaching day and the pastor brought us an interesting sermon on the subject, "Stewardship." We had several visitors from Pine Grove M. E. church, located three miles from our church, and also other visitors in the service. We give a hearty welcome to all visitors.

Several of our church and Sunday school members have been afflicted with the "flu" for the past few weeks. The families of Mr. Ed Smith, Mr. J. E. Jarvis and Mr. John Jarvis were visited by the prevailing disease. Mrs. Susan Gray, perhaps the oldest member of Harmony Grove church, suffered a stroke of paralysis over three weeks ago and has been confined to her bed during that time. She was slightly improved last week. We hope that all of the sick will soon be well again and back at our services in Sunday school and church.

Last Sunday the pastor and family were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ketner. Mrs. Lula Ketner, a step-mother of Mr. Ketner, and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Moser, and baby were also guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ketner.

As I have been appointed reporter for the Herald, I will try to send a report of our work occasionally. Best wishes to all the readers of the Herald.

MITTIE TODD, Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Pleasant Hill church held their February meeting at the parsonage Friday, February 20, at 7:30 p. m. The attendance was eighteen members and two visitors. The devotional service was led by Mrs. W. B. Speas. The president, Mrs. J. F. Hunter, was the program leader, taking the place of Mrs. B. A. Sprinkle, who could not attend the meeting on account of illness. Mrs. R. J. Whitman conducted the question box. Papers giving facts concerning the missionary work in the foreign fields were read by Miss Treva Long and Mrs. Arzia Davis. At the conclusion of the program and business refreshments were served.

The members of the Woman's Auxiliary continue to remember the pastor and family with useful gifts. Mrs. C. G. Hunter brought with her to the auxiliary meeting Friday night a delicious cake which was presented to us and was greatly appreciated. Mrs. Hunter has always been mindful of her pastor and family and puts into practice the words of the song which says: "Make Somebody Happy Today." Also Mrs. J. F. Hunter is constantly remembering us with nice things, and she brought us an appreciated gift in the form of a large bucket of lard when she came to the meeting Friday night. And still another gift was brought to the parsonage on the night of the auxiliary meeting by some one not known to us. We thank the one who left for us some nice canned corn.

The members of the auxiliary have been missing Mrs. B. A. Sprinkle at the meetings and also at Sunday school and preaching services for several weeks. She has been sick and unable to attend these services. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

MRS. C. B. WAY.

Hebron, Orange Charge.—We are still moving onward. Our Sunday school has been very small for the past month, but as spring approaches we are hoping it will grow more than ever before.

Rev. B. M. Williams filled his appointment the fourth Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He spoke very forcefully and earnestly on the subject: "The Grace of Giving." In this message Brother Williams brought out very plainly the kind of givers that we have in some churches; but "God loveth a cheerful giver." Brother Williams also said that this financial depression "might" be sent upon us for the purpose of testing our souls. If this is true, may the Lord help us meet this test by financing our churches more than we have ever done before since our pastor has been on this charge. May the Lord help us to carry on his work at this church, and when the end of the year comes may we not be ashamed of our record.

REPORTER.

Bellmont Church, Mt. Hermon Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, filled his appointment this morning at the 11 o'clock hour. There was a large crowd out to hear him, and also for Sunday school. The Sunday school is still increasing in number.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Smith, Miss Tula Paul and Miss Nettie Mae Smith, of Burlington, were visitors at the preaching service this morning.

We are planning an Easter program, to be given Easter Sunday night.

REPORTER.

Tabernacle Charge.—One of the largest congregations during the present pastorate was at Tabernacle last Sunday for the preaching service, the large auditorium being almost completely full of apparently interested worshippers. In the afternoon a very interesting meeting of the C. E. society was held with gratifying attendance. At this meeting the society decided to give the Easter pageant prepared by the board of missions on Easter Sunday. The "Lord's Acre Plan" was presented. It now appears that the young men of the society will plant an acre in beans or peas and give the proceeds from the sale of the hay to the church.

On the first Sunday in the month Young People's Day was observed at both churches. Tabernacle in the morning and Julian at night. The Young People who participated rendered their parts well. Offerings were received for the New Century Service.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Coble have the thanks of the pastor for making it possible for him to buy his Ford license the first of the year. We are also grateful to Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coble for canned goods.

H. L. ISLEY.

Asheboro.—The annual thank offering service held Sunday evening, February 15, was well attended. The choir rendered special music, the offering will go toward the support of Rev. J. F. Minnis and family, N. C. missionary in India. Mrs. O. G. Tillman, wife of Dr. Tillman, pastor of the Baptist church, gave a splendid talk on their work as missionaries in Burma. She had a collection of articles from Burma, also some native costumes which were worn by the young ladies on this occasion.

The Philathea class met Monday evening, February 16, with Miss Lollie Jones at her home on Park street, with Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., as associate hostess. In the absence of the president, the vice president, Mrs. Mahel Black, presided. The class decided to furnish the breakfast room in the new parsonage, which we are looking forward to having. After enjoying a social hour, ice cream and cake were served.

Burkhead and Miss Lollie Jones, also a number of friends and neighbors of the family.

Rev. N. Harrison, who has been confined to his home with influenza, attended church services last Sunday.

We had a splendid sermon Sunday morning by our pastor on "Backyard Religion." At the evening hour we had an old hymn service. The congregation joined in with the choir and did splendid singing. The pastor gave a brief history of several of the hymns.

REPORTER.

First Church, Winston.—A surprise we had Sunday! Dr. G. I. Humphreys from High Point College came over and brought us a wonderful message. Three others came with him from the college. Miss Luce played the violin, Miss Sloan sang, and a young man, one of Miss Sloan's pupils, played the piano for us. We were indeed glad to have these splendid people with us, and it was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Humphreys worshipped with us, too. We were glad to have her.

Rev. C. H. Whitaker helped in conducting the worship before the sermon and introduced the speaker.

We are indeed very sorry to report that our pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, is ill. It is hoped that he will soon be restored to health. Mrs. Pritchard has been sick but has gained normal health again. However, she did not worship with us Sunday, due to the illness of Mr. Pritchard.

A wonderful gain was shown in attendance. At Sunday school there were 211 present, and at church worship 155 attended. There was no evening service, due to absence of pastor.

On February 24th the Sunday school conference is to be held in Winston-Salem. These annual conferences of Sunday school workers and young people who are interested in the work are very helpful. There are many things said and done at these conferences that bring higher ideals and thoughts to those under its influence. It is hoped that quite a number of the young people from our church will attend. Miss Helen Voss is registrar for our church and she is anxious to get as many registrations as possible.

PAULINE BRANSON, Reporter.

English Street Church. We noticed a great increase in our Sunday school attendance Sunday, and we were glad to see several of our sick members back. The Philathea and Baraca classes are planning to build a hut for the purpose of Sunday school rooms, suppers, C. E. meetings, and all other outside meetings.

The program at the regular Christian Endeavor meeting Sunday evening was a very unusual and interesting one. A dialogue was given by Misses Annie and Ruth Bonkemeyer. Two new members were taken in at this time also.

Miss Gladys Meredith became the bride of Mr. A. W. M. Bride of this church on February 15 at the home of Rev. G. L. Reynolds on Fourth street.

We regret to learn that Mr. D. Moser, one of the most faithful members of our church, is very ill at his home.

Our hearts are bowed in sorrow, for one of the charter members of our church has been taken away. Mr. G. W. Payne was one of the most loyal members of the church and will be greatly missed, for he was always present at every meeting in the church. We extend to his family our deepest sympathy.

REPORTER.

Oak Grove, Cleveland. We have been silent for some time, yet we would not have you think that nothing has happened worthy to be reported.

Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, brought us a splendid message Sunday morning, using as his subject Exodus 33:15: "And he said unto him, if thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence." I think that all who heard this sermon were greatly helped. Sometimes I fear we do not say enough about our pastors or anyone, for that matter; if we just spoke a word of cheer and encouragement now and then to our pastors and their wives it would help them and us too. If our pastor never hears whether his sermon is liked or not or has helped anyone he will not know whether he is doing any good; so let's smile and speak some words of encouragement to our pastor and our fellow-workers and the world will seem much brighter. I for one will say that I do not think that anyone could do more for our church than Mr. Ridge is doing; his sermons are helpful and inspiring and he is always ready to do anything that he is asked to do. By co-operating with him we can make this one of the best years we have had.

We were delighted to have Bro. Taylor, president of our Conference, with us on Wednesday night before the third Sunday in this month. He brought to us a wonderful message which all enjoyed. We feel honored to have this distinguished Christian gentleman preach for us. There is a welcome awaiting you at Oak Grove at all times, Bro. Taylor. Come again.

The C. E. Society of Friendship, Fallston, came over Sunday evening and rendered an excellent program. Bro. Morgan and Bro. Ridge also made fine talks on Missions, that being the C. E. topic. I think their coming will create more interest in our C. E. at Oak Grove. We have the material for a real society if each one would just take more interest.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
MRS. F. H. GRIGG, Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—Our attendance is beginning to be a little more like normal since the "flu" epidemic is somewhat subsided. We had a good gain in Sunday school attendance last Sunday although quite a number of our folks are still sick.

Our pastor and his family have recovered and are about their many duties again. Mr. Hendry brought us two splendid addresses Sunday and also filled his appointment at Yaddin College.

We were all glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Lemons into church membership Sunday morning. They have been living here about a year and have been attending our church and working with us in a very efficient way, but had not come into church membership until Sunday morning.

Another delightful feature of Sunday morning was a number given on the violin by Miss Virginia Johnson, Mrs. C. L. Koonts accompanying at the piano.

Wednesday night both circles of the Missionary Society will meet at the church for the regular session of devotionals and business and a dramatization of the study book.

Mrs. Harkey has prepared a good program for the Thank-Offering service which will be held at an early date.

We are expecting some more additions to our church roll probably next Sunday. Some who would have come in before now have been kept away because of sickness.

REPORTER.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.—On Saturday, March 21, the second quarterly conference will convene; preaching at 11 a. m., lunch, business of quarterly conference.

On Sunday will be all-day service. Mt. Pleasant wants all her friends to come worship and rejoice with them. The old mortgage will be burned and the church dedicated to Almighty God.

Rev. S. W. Taylor, D. D., will be present and preach the dedicatory sermon and dedicate the church. There will be other interesting speakers for the afternoon.

We greatly rejoice and thank God.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

Piney Grove.—We had very good attendance at church yesterday. Rev. A. Ridge, of Lexington, came with our pastor, Rev. Robert Short, and preached a splendid sermon for us. We had several visitors from High Point, Bro. Lee and Bert Delk and Mr. Greenway and others. We extend a hearty welcome to our old friends to come back and worship with us whenever they can.

We enjoyed the splendid talk by our class-leader, Mr. B. W. Nance.

Aunt Lina Suratt, as we call her, has been on the sick list for some time. She is one of our oldest and most beloved members; glad to say she was a little better yesterday. We pray that she will soon be well and back at church as we miss her very much.

Our niece, Lillie Garner, died two weeks ago, and was buried at old Union church. Rev. Robert Short assisted Rev. Mr. Lowdermilk with the funeral service. She was only 13 years, eight months and 14 days of age. She was a good Christian girl. She left a sweet testimony to her loved ones, saying that Jesus was with her and took care of her through her afflictions and would go all the way with her. She also said she had wanted to let her light shine to the world. While she is gone to reap her reward, I believe her influence will live on and I know it will give me a greater desire to live closer and serve the same Jesus. And I hope to let my light shine so that others may see and serve the true and living God.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
MRS. J. A. GARNER, Reporter.

North Davidson Charge.—Our pantry is groaning under the burden of a large and ample variety of about everything needed to satisfy the physical man. I was never more surprised. After preaching I was detained in the church. When I went out to the car I found it well loaded. These Mt. Pleasant folks are kind and always thoughtful of their pastor, but they tried themselves yesterday. We have names, but the list of names and articles given would be too much for one report. We know them and God knows them, and this lets you know that we are appreciative of this kind deed done to the pastor of this fine people of Mt. Pleasant. May God richly reward them and help us to be of greater service.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

South Lexington Church.—Our work is going along nicely. Our Sunday school is gaining after a small decrease due to the sickness recently.

On last Sunday evening our young people held their program with a large crowd in attendance. Each young person who had a part in the program rendered their part well and all present seemed to enjoy the program very much. The pastor made a very interesting talk to the young people; he also presented the claims of the church on last Sunday.

In our morning service today the pastor again presented the church claims and urged that we make a special effort to raise some money on them at once, and we are going to do our very best to do this.

PHONSE BEAN, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock the annual Thank-Offering service for February was observed by the Woman's Auxiliary. Mrs. S. D. Shelton is chairman, and issued a circular letter to each family of the congregation. Rev. Mr. Farmer delivered an effective missionary sermon on "The Promise of a Dawning Day—Thyatira," which was also the final in the series of messages to the Seven Churches of Asia. His text was from Rev. 2:26, "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations . . . And I will give him the morning star." He said in part: The poet, Keats, has said that there is a budding tomorrow in every midnight. Morning comes in the wake of the morning star. Jesus said, "I am the bright and morning star." It was true because of the truth which He represents; but wherever the gospel of Christ's truth has been proclaimed and lived, either in home lands or foreign mission fields, it transforms life and environment. An evening star would suggest rest and inaction at the close of a day, but the morning star is the harbinger of day, and calls to freshness of action. Milton said:

"Now the bright morning star, the day's harbinger, Comes dancing from the East."

Light awakens the world, both natural and spiritual. Jesus Christ is the dominance of mind over matter, of the spiritual over the material. If Christ is truth and the full splendor of day, it is our business as Christians to reflect the light of the morning star. The conquests of self and the world at large are not yet completed. Both must be taken completely for Christ. The promise of the dawning day for the heathen world lies in the assurance of the Psalmist, "Jehovah will perfect that which concerneth me." The morning star makes possible the overcoming of life. Christ comes into hearts as naturally as music to a Mozart or Beethoven. The darkness of the world awaits and needs this new day, and missionaries carry the Light. This series of sermons which is now concluded, has been intensely interesting and greatly enjoyed by the congregation, a vital lesson having been contained in each one of the seven.

At the 5 o'clock Vesper service the second of the prelude talks was effectively given by Judge Grover H. Jones on "The Juvenile Court," who outlined the origin, purpose, and working of this modern and humane manner of dealing with young delinquents. The minister then brought a brief message on "Jesus and Youth."

The chicken supper given at the church last Thursday evening by the Woman's Auxiliary was a great success, and netted approximately the sum of $55.00. Circle No. 2, Miss Blanche Burgess, chairman, sold the largest number of tickets, and received the first prize of $10.00, while Circle No. 7, Mrs. Lewis Teague, chairman, was winner of the second prize of $5.00, while Circle No. 5, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, chairman, was a close second to No. 7. The thank-offering on Sunday morning amounted to $73.00.

The topic at the C. E. Society's weekly meeting Monday evening was discussed by the leaders, Misses Josephine Ferguson and Annette Pickens, on the subject, "Every Christian a Missionary," a very fruitful theme.

At the Wednesday evening fellowship supper this week, Circle No. 1, Miss Margaret Snipes, chairman, will have charge of the tables and coffee.

We are pained to announce the continued illness of Miss Mary Lyndon, one of our popular and faithful members. Mrs. J. G. Snipes, who has been suffering from influenza and sore throat, is much improved, we are pleased to announce.

Dr. and Mrs. P. S. Kennett were called to Liberty last Wednesday by the illness and death of Mr. H. Kelly Trogdon, pioneer merchant and one of Liberty's best known and beloved citizens, the father of Mrs. Kennett and T. W. Trogdon. He had been ill for two weeks, but developed pneumonia only Tuesday morning. Mr. Trogdon had attained the ripe old age of 86 years, was a charter member of Liberty Christian church, and a member of the board of deacons for a number of years. He moved his family to Liberty in 1886, the same year in which the town was incorporated, and had been an active and influential spirit in its civic life. He leaves one son, Mr. T. W. Trogdon, of High Point; three daughters, Mrs. Estella Ray, of Liberty, Mrs. H. M. Steed, of Candor, and Mrs. Paul S. Kennett, of High Point, and one sister, Mrs. H. A. Guire, of Lenoir, N. C., who is a charter member of First church. There are also six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted from the home in Liberty by Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor of First Christian church of Greensboro, assisted by Rev. J. D. Williams, of the Methodist Protestant church of Liberty. Mrs. Trogdon died five years ago. Our deep sympathy is extended to Mrs. P. S. Kennett, who is one of our most popular members and an efficient worker.

Robert Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Davis, has returned to Chapel Hill after spending the week-end here with his parents.

Albemarle.—A very beautiful and impressive service was rendered in commemoration of Washington's birthday Sunday evening. Several patriotic numbers were sung by the choir. Rev. Mr. Curry asked the men who served in the World War to stand; five men stood—C. S. Moton, John C. Whitlock, C. L. Hatley, Carl Eford, and J. P. Green. He then called for the Confederate soldiers; only one is left in our church, Mr. I. F. Harkey. The congregation recognized these men with reverent respect. We as a people do not appreciate these men as we should. When war is raging and there is fear of our flag being brought down, we praise the men who give their lives to hold it high. But soon, ah, so soon, we forget their bravery, and especially when peace reigns and all is well.

Mr. Curry gave a brief address on our flag and the life of Washington.

Mrs. A. A. Wagner and Mrs. C. S. Moton entertained the Ladies' Auxiliary at a 25-cent social last Tuesday evening. During the social hour the guests were given towels to hem. These were sent to the Methodist Protestant Children's Home. A contest was also enjoyed carrying out the Washington idea. After the social hour ice cream and cake were served to 22 members.

Tabernacle Church.—The third Sunday in February Rev. Mr. Isley preached a wonderful sermon on "Christian Liberty." First Corinthians 8:9: "But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling block to them that are weak."

The fourth Sunday Bro. Isley's subject was "Power of association," using as his text the last clause in Acts 4:13: "And they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus."

Beginning with last Sunday Brother Isley will talk five or ten minutes each Sunday until Easter to the children.

Last Sunday, 22nd, being George Washington's birthday, the story of George Washington was told. These talks to the children are very interesting even to the grown ups.

At the last quarterly conference it was decided that April would be "College Month." We have $169 to raise, and we hope to get every penny of it by the first of May.

Work has already started on Sunday school rooms, hope to see it move steadily along.

Miss Mary Whiteley died February 19 at Mrs. O. R. Cox, in Ashboro, with whom she had made her home for the past few years. Miss Whiteley had been in poor health for some time but her death was unexpected. She had lived in Tabernacle community for the greater part of her life, only in the last few years having gone to Ashboro to live with her sister. Funeral services were conducted Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Tabernacle church by Rev. Mr. Stubbins, of Ashboro, Rev. Mr. Pritchard, of Winston-Salem, and Rev. Mr. Isley. She was laid to rest under a beautiful mound of flowers.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

NOTES FROM BESS CHAPEL AUXILIARY

Our meeting for February was held at the home of Mrs. J. L. Bean, quite a few were present. The topic for discussion being Foreign Fields, was greatly enjoyed by every one present. After the program was rendered, refreshments were served by the hostess, and a social half hour very pleasantly passed.

Our next meeting will be held with Mrs. B. L. Heavner, our much loved president. We are hoping for a large number present as we are planning to discuss some plan by which we might raise a budget to exceed last year's work.

Trusting that every member will be present with us, and that we might enroll many more, to help lift the load.

MRS. D. H. BESS, Cor. Sec'y.

THE GREAT "I AM"

God still lives. You can read about Him in the daily papers.

The report has just been printed of a Home Experience Contest—stories of successful struggles to acquire homes.

The couple whose letter won the first prize at 68 and 63 years of age talked of suicide, because their future looked so dark. "Almighty God saved us," they wrote. "The gloomy day brightened, the clouds in the sky flew away, the sun of December lit up the world again and our cowardice shocked us."

The outstanding feature of the letters, which probably accounted for the success of the writers in achieving home ownership, was that they lived and worked only for this. They suffered actual hardship, but in every case they emerged in the end with the home.

About a hundred years ago our religious forefathers founded a church on the principle of individual freedom in church affairs, carrying on in principle the ideal of the early Americans. Who shall say that God did not lead these earnest souls to this continent?

Now the leaders of our church have purposed to have a college home where they might nurture their young life and preserve their ideal—the word of the Lord that came to them.

Shall we who are named a Christian church deny by our acts (which is the most effective way to deny) that God still lives or is still interested in his people? And shall we let "the lust of other things entering in choke the word" delivered to us?

HOW CONGRESSES ARE NUMBERED

Since the Senate is a continuous body only the House of Representatives is considered in numbering Congresses of the United States. The terms of all the representatives and one-third of the senators expire every two years and consequently a Congress is two years long. The Constitution went into legal effect March 3, 1789, and the first Congress was the Congress between that date and March 4, 1791, when the second Congress came into existence and lasted two years, and so on. A Congress is elected in the even years and takes office in the odd years. For instance, the first Congress was elected in 1788 and took office in 1789; the second Congress was elected in 1790 and took office in 1791. One can easily determine the number of the Congress which takes office in any given odd year by subtracting 1789 from the date of the odd year, dividing by two and adding one. The Constitution provides that "the Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day." Thus there are at least two sessions of each Congress. The first regular session is the so-called long session, beginning in December and lasting until the following spring or summer, depending on when it decides to adjourn. The second regular session is the short one, so-called because it lasts only from December to March 4, when Congress comes to an end. This session is also known as the lame duck session due to the fact that many of its members have been defeated for re-election. The Constitution provides that the president may on extraordinary occasions, "convene both houses or either of them," and accordingly there sometimes are extra or special sessions of Congress.—Pathfinder.

—Dr. John Willis Baer, brilliant lay preacher and a former moderator of the Presbyterian church, died Sunday in Pasadena, Cal., at the age of seventy years.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Sykes

Wm. G. Sykes died February 20, 1931. Funeral services conducted at Chestnut Ridge church, Sunday, February 22, by the writer.

Brother Sykes lived to be about 68 years of age. He was a member of the Junior Order, also a member of Chestnut Ridge church.

A large congregation was present for the funeral services, thus showing the esteem in which the memory of this deceased brother is held.

He leaves his companion, ten children, thirty-one grand children and other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

May God comfort the bereaved ones.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Whiteley

In the passing of this good woman Tabernacle church has lost one of her most consecrated members. Although she lived at Ashboro with her sister, Mrs. O. R. Cox and could not attend often, she never lost interest in the church of her childhood. It was not the pastor's privilege to meet Miss Whiteley, but three times, twice at Tabernacle and once in her home at Ashboro, but he was deeply impressed with her Christian character. For almost three years she was an invalid, unable to walk without aid, yet she bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude, never murmuring or complaining. Perhaps during her long period of confinement she often thought of her heavenly home; she has now gone to occupy that home. She had reached the ripe age of 70 years.

Last Friday, February 20, her funeral was held in Tabernacle church and the body was tenderly laid to rest in the church cemetery.

H. L. ISLEY.

Sides

Ray Alexander Sides, widely known business man of Concord, died at his home on Kerr street at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday night. He had been ill only a week, death resulting from pneumonia. Though he was considered critically ill, his death came none the less as a great shock and has cast a pall of sadness over the community.

Born on February 16, 1902, in Concord, Mr. Sides lived his entire life here. He had been connected with his father in business for many years and was manager of the Sides Lumber company at his death. He had been a faithful and valued member of the Methodist Protestant church since childhood and held office on the church board.

Mr. Sides was married January 6, 1921, to Miss Pearl Crawford, of Statesville, who survives him. To this union were born two sons and two daughters, James Nevin, Harlon, Antha Neal and Macie Pearl Sides. He also leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sides, his paternal and maternal grandmothers, Mrs. B. L. Sides and Mrs. C. L. Thomas; three brothers, J. L., C. D., and H. G. Sides; two sisters, Mrs. Ernest Litaker and Mrs. Grover Honeycutt.

Funeral services were conducted at 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon from the Methodist Protestant church, Rev. G. E. Millaway, the pastor, officiating. Burial was made in Oakwood cemetery.

Bond

It was during the Christmas holidays the summons came to Brother W. H. Bond, one of the most aged of the members of Whitaker's church, to come up higher. For quite a goodly number of years Mr. Bond was connected with the business interests of this community. Notwithstanding his somewhat feeble condition he continued merchandising up to a year or so ago. He kept on when one less industrious would have quit.

Brother Bond was an honest man and a devout worshiper. His religion was the same during the week as it was on Sunday. He attended church when his health would permit. He was fair in his dealings, took no advantage of any one, though others might take advantage of him.

While he was still merchandising my visits were to him in his store. During his lingering illness of some months, he felt that his pastor's visit, in the home now, was not complete until we had prayed together. His devoted wife, who ministered to him so faithfully and tirelessly, seemed also to feel that we three praying together was part of the visit. It was beautiful to see these life-companions so devoted to each other and so trustful in our Heavenly Father.

In the absence of the pastor, the funeral was conducted by Rev. Fred W. Paschall, a former pastor who was visiting in the community, assisted by Revs. Norman Harrison and H. A. Chester, of the M. E. Church, South.

T. M. JOHNSON.

MARRIED

Sides-Edsell

The marriage of Miss Joyce Edsell to Horace G. Sides was solemnized at the home of Rev. G. E. Millaway, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church, on Tuesday afternoon, January 27. The ceremony was performed in the presence of only a few friends.

The bride is the lovely and popular daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Edsell, this city, and has a very large circle of friends here and in neighboring cities.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sides, also of this city, and for the past few years has been connected in business with his father.

Following the ceremony the bride and groom left for a short wedding trip to Lake Waccamaw. Upon their return they will reside in their home on St. John street which is already furnished.—Concord Paper.

HERE AND THERE

I'M THE DOG

I'm the dog
They drag along
Dust-strewn streets,
Through jostling throng.

I'm the dog
All chocolate-fed;
Wonder is
I'm not dead.

I'm the dog
They hourly praise
With honeyed words
My tricks and ways.

I'm the dog
They worry so;
Though often tired
I have to go.

I'm the dog
They pet all day;
From talking bores
Relief I pray.

I'm the dog
That likes night best;
When they're asleep,
I get some rest.

—Grenville Kleiser.

JELLYFISH!

Are you nervous as a cat?

Jellyfish!

Pale, too thin, or ultra-fat?

Jellyfish!

Stop all work and learn to play,

Make today a holiday.

Take the non-resistant way,

Jellyfish!

Are you in a restless mood?

Jellyfish!

Hate the very sight of food?

Jellyfish!

Less your stomach needs a rest,

Try a fast—it may be best—

Doing nothing, is your test,

Jellyfish!

Are you feeling not too bright?

Jellyfish!

Do you lie awake at night?

Jellyfish!

Free the mind from every strain,

Rest today your tired brain,

If you fail, just try again.

Jellyfish!

Be a lazy jellyfish,

Jellyfish!

Give up every whim and wish,

Jellyfish!

Glide supinely on life's sea,

Look at things quite lazily,

Float along complacently.

Jellyfish!

NUMBER 17

March, the Old and the New

The olden March was month of Mars,
When armed men went forth to battle,
When foes were joined in fierce combat
And men fell dead like slaughtered cattle.

In those bad days all men were wrong,
Their hearts were filled with hate and death.
They lived to kill and killed to live
Until at last they lost their breath.

The world has changed, is changing still,
As men now see a better way.
The spirit of Christ has come to earth
And ushered in a grand new day.

The month of March now beckons men
To deeds that help, to lives that bless;
For Christ has shown us how to act,
And marked the way to real success.

The voice of March now cries aloud:
Be planters, growers, builders, all!
And make the world a better place
Before you leave this earthly ball.

Judge Clark Reversed

The young New Jersey judge who decided that the prohibition amendment is invalid because it was not adopted by state conventions instead of legislatures has been reversed by the U. S. Supreme Court without a dissenting voice. Justice Roberts wrote the opinion. The prohibition amendment thus emerges with greater strength than ever. The law is all right. The thing that is wrong is the appetite of the rum-smitten man. He is to be pitied, but he may be cured by a course of total abstinence from alcoholic beverages. At any rate laws are not to be framed to encourage vice but to develop virtue.

—It is good to read that an agreement to terms of peace between India and Great Britain has been reached. The little brown saint, Gandhi, clad in loin-cloth, has exerted a mighty influence. Kirby Page recently said of him: "This man probably has more followers today than any other living man—more than MacDonald, more than Hoover. He is more beloved, admired, and adored than any individual of our age. He is a modern St. Francis of Assisi—a Mazzini, a Jefferson, a George Washington, all combined. There never before lived on earth a man with quite the combination of qualities and abilities of Manhatma Gandhi. Never before in all history was there a man of so wide an influence."

Can You Help Save Some Lives?

We are in receipt of an appeal from David A. Brown, chairman of the board of China Famine Relief. He asks general support of a "program of famine relief and famine prevention that will help the Chinese to help themselves." This program is approved by the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of Churches who urge a generous response to the call for means to carry out the beneficent program. The editor of the HERALD has made a small contribution to this cause because he could not make a large one. People in China will starve if not helped by outsiders. Their government cannot do as ours has at last done for our famine-stricken. The appeal for China says "there is unfinished work to do in famine and war-torn China. Please help us to save many of these lives by sending your contribution at once." Money for this purpose may be sent to China Famine Relief U. S. A., Inc., 205 East 42nd St., New York City.

—We may have a war, gain victory and sign a treaty of peace, and imagine the trouble is over. But that is far from the fact. Wars return to plague those who engage in them for years and decades, if not centuries. Our soldiers in the World War served almost without pay. After peace came there was a feeling that the debt of the nation to the soldiers ought to be recognized and assumed by the Federal government. That was done in an insurance arrangement, as the government did not have the means to pay so large a debt. But this put payday so far into the future that needy soldiers began to press for immediate payment. This resulted in a compromise proposition to lend at a low rate of interest part of what is ultimately coming to them. This was adopted by Congress, vetoed by the President and adopted over the veto. It is just that this war debt be paid as promptly as possible, but in paying it the people of our country will be brought to a keener realization of the costliness of wars. The penalty for wrong doing is sure to come.

—Japan, too, has a great man. His name is Kagawa. He is a graduate of Princeton Theological Seminary. He has long lived in the slums of Tokyo; for fourteen years in one room six by nine feet, and part of the time he and his wife have taken boarders. For fifteen years he has suffered from tuberculosis. He is blind in one eye and almost blind in the other. His heart, kidneys, and throat are badly diseased. Yet Japan is looking to this man to save the country from communism.

SOME THINGS CONCERNING GOD

By REV. LUTHER K. LONG

Many years ago a young man in the second year of his studies in the theological seminary was under examination for license to preach by an association of ministers to which I belonged.

He read a paper in which he made a statement concerning his religious experience, and gave the major items of his theological belief. He had in his creed this statement: "I believe in God, Whose personal habits are the laws of the universe."

In the course of the questioning by members of the association, the young man was asked just what he meant by the "personal habits of God." He replied that he used the expression in a poetical manner, with a somewhat pantheistic implication.

In the Library of Congress I take pleasure in noting from time to time the many interesting quotations and mottoes gathered from various literary sources and effectively used in the decoration of the walls of the lobbies and other parts of this fine building. Lately I have several times stopped before this arresting bit: "Nature is the Art of God."

After some thinking on the matter, I am willing to believe that, if we are justified in thinking of God as a personal Being, we may well concede that He has personal habits. That being so, may well consider the laws of the universe are expressions of His thoughts and purposes—His ways of doing things.

And as to this other statement, "Nature is the art of God." That seems an entirely fitting representation of the fact that God is an artist, and that the beauties of the sunset, mountains, plains, seas, river, bird and flower are evidences and expressions of His artistic taste. God certainly enjoys the beautiful—He has made so much of it.

God is musical. The winds and waves—gentle and fierce—near and distant thunder, the gentle swaying and loud crashing in the tree tops, the humming of the wings of insects, the songs birds, and the murmurs of grass and flowers—all these must be God's voice in differing keys and varying volume.

God also enjoys the humorous and the grotesque. Otherwise, why should he have made the hippopotamus, the crocodile, and Will Rogers and Marie Dressler? He must laugh, as we do, at many birds with their queer bills and legs and the strange forms and colorings of their plumage—with their ridiculous efforts at song.

God is love. We are all conscious of His use of the wooing and winsome manifestations of His love in nature. The gentle winds and the mild warmth woo the buds and the flowers in the spring, and they come forth. Colors in the flowers of the field and in the birds of the air are manifestations of love; and they lead to mating and reproduction. The stirring of the romantic sentiment in the hearts of adolescent boys and girls is co-incident with the awakening of youth to the consciousness of God's love calling to them and offering to them that which will refine and purify all love and all life. When ministers and other Christian leaders have learned how to aid young people in understanding and approaching each other, and how to come into union and fellowship with God, the world and life in it will be on a higher level—richer and more enjoyable.

THE FOOTSTEP ON THE STAIR

(The Rev. William E. Barton, D.D., was an honored Congregational minister. For a good many years he contributed each week a syndicated article, "Parables of Safed the Sage." His wife, "Keturah," died several years ago. Soon after this Dr. Barton wrote the Parable, "The Footstep on the Stair." A few months ago the author himself passed away. We reprint this parable here as a fitting tribute to this couple who lived such a happy and useful life together. We trust they are now happily reunited.)

After that we had circumnavigated the globe, which means, being interpreted, after we had sailed around the world, and had come unto the lovely spot where we spend our summers, we gathered our children about us and were proud and glad. And the children said, Father and Mother have sailed for Forty Thousand Miles upon the Seven Seas, and have seen Strange Continents and Islands, and now are they Home Again. Furthermore, they have sailed for forty years upon the Tempestuous Sea of Matrimony, and have kept their troubles out of the newspapers. Go to, now, and let us give them the time of their sweet young lives, and celebrate their fortieth anniversary. And they did even so. And we feasted and were happy. And we lingered in that lovely spot longer than we had ever done before, until the autumn came, and the leaves turned red and gold, and the forests were glorious. And we enjoyed each day.

And when the day for our departure drew nigh, being but seven days before us, I rose in the morning, and the sun shone radiantly upon the forest. And I said unto Keturah, remain where thou art and take thy superogatory beauty sleep and I will build a fire.

And I went down the stair, and I gathered sticks and laid them on the hearth, and lighted the small wood, so that the logs soon were blazing. And as I rose, I heard the footstep of Keturah, descending the stair, and I stepped forward and greeted her at the foot, and saluted her, and led her to the fire, and said, behold how goodly it is and how pleasantly warm.

And she stood with me, and said, the day is glorious, and the earth is beautiful, and God hath been very good unto us.

So we broke our fast, and began the day with joy. But before that day had ended, an angel passed that way, and cast a shadow as it passed; and the angel beckoned unto Keturah, and she turned and smiled at me in farewell, and she vanished from my sight, and left me bewildered and in sore lamentation.

And that night I rested not, and the dawn broke late and unwelcome. And the sorrowful sun had hidden its face, and the skies wept.

Then I rose, and descended the stair, and gathered sticks, and builded a fire. And as it began to blaze, I rose, and I turned, as it were instinctively, as if I had heard a footstep, even the footstep of Keturah, descending the stair. And there was no sound, but only an agony of silence. And I sat me down in grief and desolation.

Now the footsteps of Keturah while she was yet visibly near made music as they trod the common paths of life, and ministered richly in little deeds of kindness and unselfishness, and the echoes still are to be heard in many places. And I have not lost them forever. For in my better thoughts I hear them before me forgiveness and hope, and I know she is not far away.

Now there will come a day when I also shall ascend the stair that slopeth upward from this mortal world to that which is above. And I know that she will be listening for my coming. Yea, and she will not altogether wait for me inside the Gate; for I shall hear her footstep coming a little way down to meet me, and we shall go in together.

What follows here was taken from the Methodist Protestant-Recorder of last week. It is so interesting and so to the point in church life and church development, that I am asking the Editor if he will give it space here that the readers of the HERALD may have access to it. S. W. TAYLOR.

DOUBLE THE CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

Doubling the church membership in eight years would be a worthy accomplishment but doubling a church membership in eight months seems almost miraculous. And yet such is the accomplishment of the Luther Place Memorial church in Washington, D. C. The church owned a property for which it was offered $800,000 a few years ago and it was practically free of debt, but its membership was only two hundred and eighty-five and it had failed to meet its current expense budget for three years. Many thought that the church should discontinue. Suggestions were made that the $800,000 would be a splendid endowment for Grace college, or it would provide an income for the maintenance of chairs of religious education, or it would pay ministers salaries in home mission congregations, or it would even maintain medical missionaries in foreign fields, but the people were not willing to give up. After a long search and after having been rebuffed by a number of ministers who had been called to the pastorate, they finally found a man who, after much persuasion, was induced to become their pastor. Before the newly called pastor came, the members, in order to prove that they were in earnest, went out in a definite campaign and brought in forty-six new members. Dr. Rassmussen, the new pastor, came to the church on the first Sunday in June, and although the Sundays following were unusually hot, the attendance steadily increased. On July 13 sixty-four members were received and on July 27 twenty-eight joined the church. After the pastor's vacation the work was resumed in September. On October 5, a class of sixty was received and on November 16, a class of sixty-eight. Then on the Sunday before Christmas as a Christmas gift for the King a class of forty-four brought the total enrollment of new members up to three hundred and ten.

What transformed a partially discouraged congregation with an apparently narrow outlook into a mighty soul-winning force? According to the report people within and without Washington unwittingly did a lot to add to their discouragement. Some said that they were "dying of dry rot." Others said that an outstanding minister coming to the church "would be putting his head into a noose." Others said that the church "was dead beyond hope of resurrection."

But here is the secret of their resurrection to a new life. In the words of the people themselves we find the secret of their success,—“So we decided that as a congregation we would try to live up to our songs and to act as if we really meant our prayers. No longer would we sing about being Ambassadors of Christ and then be more indifferent to our office than a janitor in the American Embassy in Peru! No longer would we pray for His Kingdom to come and then spend two dollars for a theatre ticket and give ten cents when the church offering was taken! No longer would we sing about loyal Christian soldiers and then be A. W. O. L. every time the call to duty was sounded! We would no longer sing, ‘Take my life and let it be’ and then prefer an extra nap or a game of golf on Sunday to lending a hand for the success of God’s work in this cross-roads of civilization! No, we would demonstrate the vital, earnest sincerity of our prayers and our songs and our genuine loyalty to our professions! The minute we began thus really to dedicate ourselves to such a genuine devotion to the church, the way began to open up.”

What if all Christians in every Methodist Protestant Church would strive to live up to the ideal adopted by this loyal band of Lutherans? Would it be possible to double the membership of the Methodist Protestant Church in ten years? We have made very little progress numerically in the last thirty years. What is the trouble? Have we failed in our testimony to the Power of the Blood?—The Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

“FREE,” YET “SUBJECT”

It is often just this lack of true balance which brings in disaster upon the path of service. Liberty is claimed and subjection refused, or subjection is pressed and freedom is service disallowed. “Am I not free?” asked the Apostle in I Corinthians 9:1. I am “free from all” (vs. 19), he said, in regard to the work with which he was entrusted, though he made himself servant of all for their good. Nevertheless he was truly subject: “not as without Law to God, but as legitimately subject to Christ” (vs. 21, N. Trans.) No servant enjoyed greater freedom! Indeed, some sought, he tells us, “to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage” (Gal. 2:4); yet he served the Lord in a consistent manner, for he knew that one “is not crowned unless he contend lawfully” (II Tim. 2:5). It is the Son who makes us “really free,” for the Son is free; but He took upon Him the form of a servant, and said Himself, “I love the Father, and as the Father gave Me commandment even so I do.” When we meditate upon both His freedom and His wondrous subjection, we learn what is acceptable to God.—H. J. Vine in Scripture Truth.

—A machine has been invented that will smoke four cigars at once as a method of testing different brands. If tobacco must be smoked this is the ideal way to have it done, thus saving valuable time, lots of money spent for salaries of salesmen, and thousands of lives. Even if the machine should get the habit of inhaling, it would be far better than burning out human lungs and bringing on tuberculosis, heart disease, kidney trouble, hardening of the arteries and some seventy-five other irregularities in the human system. This is an age of machinery—sure, let the smoking be done by machinery.—Will H. Brown,

Funeral

We were called upon last Friday to assist Dr. S. K. Spahr in the funeral of William H. Wills, which was held in Grace church, Greensboro, at 10 a. m. Interment followed in Greenwood cemetery. It seemed fitting, as Dr. Spahr so well said, that he should have gone into the great beyond from the community in which the family to which he belonged is so highly esteemed, and in which his honored and beloved father and mother spent their last days, and that his funeral service should have been in Grace church, where he had been a charter member. The deceased was a son of Rev. R. H. Wills, who was for many years a leading minister in our conference, and a brother of J. Norman, E. S., and Richard Wills of Greensboro, and Prof. George W. Wills, of the faculty of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Maryland. I knew the deceased in our boyhood days, but our lines had not crossed for years. He was a journalist, and had spent much time in New York and Chicago. Death came at the home of his brother, Mr. J. Norman Wills, in Greensboro. Our tenderest sympathies are extended to the surviving brothers, and other members of the family.

Reports for First Quarter

There are 87 charges in the conference, supplied by 77 pastors. One charge is yet unsupplied. Reports for the first quarter have been received from 66 pastors, representing 76 charges. No reports have been received from 11 pastors and 11 charges. The material phase of the church, as revealed in these reports, is not noticeable, though improvements have been made on parsonages and church buildings, and one hut is to be erected. One church was burned during the quarter, but a better one is rising from the ashes. The most interesting thing about these reports is what they show regarding the spiritual condition of the various charges. In this particular there is much that is encouraging. Most pastors report good attendance at Sunday School and church services, and some have cause for marked satisfaction in this particular. One pastor reports an increase of 100 in average attendance at Sunday School. Many pastors report splendid work being done by the women, and by the young people, through their C. E. societies. Some additions have been made to church rolls. One pastor reports 17 accessions, another 15, another 15, another 11. The tone of practically all of these reports, as they deal with this phase of the work, is pleasing and heartening. The economic condition is, of course, reflected in the financial showing. However, some churches are keeping right up with salaries. One pastor reports an improvement over last year in this particular. Quite a number of pastors did not give the amount paid on salary. But those who did report on this, indicate that the average salary received for the quarter is a little less than $200. Many reports show an improved financial plan. Total financial obligations to the churches, and the churches are allotting these amounts to the individual member. "Every Member Contributing Churches," is being emphasized, also, as a goal. A few churches have paid liberally during the quarter on the A. C. B. The reports indicate interest and co-operation in conference and denominational programs. In most instances the outlook for the year is normal, and in some instances, above normal. Upon the whole, the reports are pleasing, and we bid a God-speed to pastors and churches, as they go forward in the work of the second quarter.

Guilford

March 1.—Our appointment for the 11 o'clock hour was with Fairfield church—a Centenarian. We arrived in time for the Sunday School, and participated with one of the adult classes in the study of the lesson. We were impressed with the size and vigor of the school. A good work is being done through this department of the church. The 11 o'clock service was well attended, and we were heard with encouraging interest.

Brother Peeler and his capable wife have the full confidence of the people of this charge, and they are prosecuting the work, with earnestness and confidence, along all lines. The charge has three Auxiliaries, one Aid Society, and two C. E. societies. It will be recalled that one of the churches on the charge—Hickory Grove—was burned last year. It has been rebuilt, and paid for, we understand, though the pews have not yet been installed. Four of the churches can be reached over hard surface road, with the exception of about one-half mile leading into Hickory Grove. This is quite an advantage in serving the charge.

We were glad to be with Pastor Peeler and the Fairfield folks, and to be a dinner guest with Brother and Sister Peeler in the home of Brother Osborn. It is our hope to visit other churches on this charge during the year.

Postponed

Rev. H. W. Maier, chairman of the Central Pastor's Federation, was in High Point today in the interest of the Federation meeting to be held here on the 9th. After conferring with the Secretary of the Federation, Dr. P. S. Kennett, and others, Brother Maier was prompted to postpone the meeting to March 17. This was done in order to give time to make preparation for some features of the program that he could not get ready by next Tuesday. I am sure that the brethren will endorse this change, and will look forward to the meeting on the 17th, Tuesday. The place and hour are the same as formerly agreed upon: First Church, High Point, hour, 10 A. M. Chairman Maier is anxious to make this a very profitable meeting and I bespeak for him the fullest co-operation of the brethren.

Interesting and Suggestive!

The article on the Lutheran Church, Washington, D. C. We are clipping it from last week's Methodist Protestant-Recorder, and asking the Editor of the HERALD to publish it, in order that more of our people may read it. It points the way for every church that will grow, and be strong and useful. God will bless any church with new members—a hundred fold and more—and with spiritual life and joy, that wholeheartedly magnifies the real purposes of the church. Read how this church doubled its membership in eight months.

Monthly Budget Payments

Let's adopt that as a fixed rule, brethren, for the remainder of this year. Whether it is much or little, let's send something on budgets to Dr. Brown every month. By doing that, there will be some funds in hand for annual and general conference necessities, and the work of raising the finances at the end of the year will be greatly lessened. We urge that every charge adopt this as a rule. Do not be deterred because the amount that you can raise may not be large. Many small amounts make up large aggregates. So send your small amounts on, and please see that they go in to Dr. Brown every month. This is it: SOMETHING ON BUDGETS EVERY MONTH.

Hats Off to Winston!

Brother Pritchard and his Winston people are happy. They raised their college maintenance allotment last Sunday, of $200, with a plus of $17. This is the first church to raise the allotment in full. From what we hear, our Winston people, and their optimistic pastor, did this scripturally; they were "hilarious" about it. We most heartily congratulate them, and trust that their good example may be an inspiration to other churches. We shall await with interest, church No. 2. Let us make this a matter of prayer. This is God's cause, and we shall succeed in the measure that we stay close to Him.

PATIENCE

Patience governs the flesh, strengthens the spirit, sweetens the temper, stifles anger, extinguishes envy, subdues pride. She teaches humility; bridles the tongue; restrains the hand; tramples on temptations; endures persecutions; consummates martyrdom. She comforts the poor; moderates the rich; makes us humble in prosperity; cheerful in adversity; unmoved by calumny and reproach. She teaches us to forgive those who have injured us, and to be first in asking forgiveness of those whom we have injured. She delights the faithful; invites the unbelieving; and is beautiful in every sex and age.

IN HIS STEPS

"The road is too rough," I said. "Dear Lord,
There are stones that hurt me so."
And He said: "Dear child, I understand;
I walked it long ago."

"But there's a cool, green path," I said.
"Let me walk there for a time."
"No, child," He gently answered me,
"The green road does not climb."

"My burden," I said, "is far too great;
How can I bear it so?"
"My child," said He, "I remember its weight—
I carried My cross, you know."

"But," I said, "I wish there were friends with me Who would make my way their own."
"Ah! yes," He said, "Gethsemane
Was hard to face alone."

And so I climbed the stony path,
Content at last to know
That where my Master had not gone,
I would not need to go.

And strangely then I found new friends;
The burden grew less sore
As I remembered, long ago
He went that way before.

A FRAGMENT ON LOVE

True love is not merely gratifying my feelings of love, but seeking the joy of the one loved. This has a wondrous bearing on love to God, and reproves me, though, at the same time, refreshes as to His willingness to be delighted, and opens up avenues of privilege, along which His people would long to walk, to His joy. It unveils His love also, for He does not love me for His sake alone (though with Him the ultimate object must be His own glory, since all else would be defect): He loves me, to make me rejoice in His love. He does not desire that I should walk mournfully before Him. The clouds and pain are only when I need them, and for my good. He loves to give me His peace and joy. Is it not wonderful? But it is not only wonderful. God's grace is a reality, a present reality, and He loves with a deep concern for His Blood-bought people. Their true delight is His. He has entwined His interests with them and theirs. He loves, with infinite joy in the joy of the ones He has loved, and loves, and every will love.

Peace with God! How different is the view of peace among men. There may be a holding back from war, and men call it peace. But God's peace has a ground of righteousness, and no bitter feelings. God has no outstanding claims against us. Truly His peace is peace indeed, and believers are meant to have the enjoyment of it, by grace. "Grace be unto you, and peace!"—Tract.

DON'S PET

"Oh, mother, Tom's got a pair of pet mice!"

Don burst excitedly into the kitchen, where his mother was putting the finishing touches to the midday meal.

"They're as tame as can be; and so clean and white! Say, mother—I wish I had a pet. Can't I have some white mice, too?"

"Mice!" she exclaimed, "and the house running alive with them already! It's a cat you should be wanting, not more mice."

Then, catching sight of Don's dejected face, she added, gently, "We'll see what can be done. Maybe Uncle Henry can help find a pet—he knows lots about animals. We'll ask him tonight."

But Uncle Henry was not consulted; for, coming home from school that afternoon, Don again burst into the house, wildly excited.

"Oh, mother, I've got it!" he cried, out of breath.

"Good gracious, got what?" she exclaimed, visioning measles or whooping cough, or something equally dreadful.

"Got a pet!" he exulted, holding up his cupped hands in which a homely naked bird kicked feebly.

"But, Don!" protested his mother, "don't you know you shouldn't take baby birds out of the nest. They'll die without their mother."

"I know that, mother; we learned that at Scout meeting. I didn't take this one out of a nest; I found him on the sidewalk, and there were no mother birds around."

"In that case you did exactly right," she said; "the cat would have eaten him if you had left him where he was. But what'll you do with him?" she added; uncertainly, noting the helpless condition of the young bird.

"I'll make him a nice little house where he'll be safe; then I'll feed him just like his mother would."

Don was rather vague in his mind just how this latter was done; but with the confidence of his age he was ready to try anything.

So when Uncle Henry breezed in at supper time, Don had his pet comfortably installed in a neat wooden box, fitted with a slatted top, and was tempting his appetite with wriggling fish-worms.

"Well, well! what have we here, a young robin?" exclaimed the newcomer jovially. "Going in for bird raising?"

Don and his uncle were the best of chums. Now the boy eagerly told of his desire for a pet and how he had found the helpless waif.

"Well, you sure got the right kind of pet," he declared, when Don had finished. "You couldn't have better friends than the birds. You can train this young robin so that he will follow you around like your shadow. You had better feed him on custard for a few days. Custard without sugar. Then you can vary this diet with a bit of chopped angleworm, or scraped apple or berries. But don't give him grain, that might kill him."

Thereafter Don spent much time with Chip, as he called his pet. True Chip had not much to boast of in the way of beauty. His neck was long; his head flat; his mouth extraordinary wide, and his eyes, as yet, were mere bulbs on his head. They would not open till he was a week old, Uncle Henry had said. But Don didn't mind his appearance; he knew that some day Chip would be as fine a looking a bird as the handsome robins that carolled in the cherry tree.

Chip's appetite was amazing. He was always hungry. The last thing Don did before going to school and the first thing upon returning, was to take the spoon and custard and feed him. But before doing this Don always gave a sharp calling whistle. At first this frightened the bird, but soon he realized it meant something to eat, and would raise his head and open his mouth wide. On the day Chip's eyes were open and tiny feathers were beginning to cover his body he was allowed to leave his box.

"There's no fear of his going away," assured Uncle Henry; "you couldn't lose him now if you tried."

Three days later Don could scarcely recognize Chip as the scrawny, helpless chick he had brought home ten days earlier. He was an attractive little fellow now, with all the characteristic markings of a young robin. His head was black; his throat light; his breast red, mottled above. And he had a tiny feathered tail.

When he was two weeks old he began to fly. The first time he flew up into the apple tree Don cried out in dismay. He thought Chip was leaving him. But at a call from Don the little adventurer sailed down unsteadily, landing on the boy's shoulder. Don was tremendously proud.

Thereafter whenever Don was leaving for school, Chip invariably rode on his shoulder as far as the gate. There he would turn back, with a "chink" of farewell, and upon Don's return he was greeted by the happy cry of his little friend who flew to meet him and rode on his shoulder, chattering noisily.

"How would you like to go fishing today, Don?" inquired Uncle Henry one Saturday at breakfast.

"Fine!" agreed the boy, thinking of the good time they would have on the river.

"Good," replied Uncle Henry; "you dig the worms while I get out the tackle, and we'll try out our luck downstream."

So, as soon as he had finished his meal, he took the spade and hurried out back of the garage to dig the worms. Of course, as usual, Chip followed, and was extremely interested in the operation. No sooner would Don turn up an angleworm than Chip, with lightning speed, would dash forward, seize the wriggling victim, and swallow it with great satisfaction.

At first Don was amused; but when after a considerable time he had failed to secure a single worm for his bait can he became annoyed, and tried to shoo the bird away.

"What's the matter?" inquired his uncle, coming up unannounced.

"Chip's eating all the worms," complained Don; "he's eaten enough already to burst, but he's not satisfied."

Uncle Henry laughed aloud. "Why that insatiable appetite is one reason why young robins, and, in fact, all birds are of such great value to us. Just think of the amount of bugs and worms and insect they must do away with in a single day! If it wasn't for the help of the birds, our crops would be devoured by a horde of insect pests."

Don regarded his pet with new interest. "I've chased Chip out of the strawberry path a number of times." Don spoke soberly. "It's the first year our berries have done so well and I was afraid he might spoil them. But I only caught him pecking at a strawberry once; he was always picking out bugs or worms."

"Yes, and it's just because of his vigilance in the patch that the berries are better and more numerous than ever before."

Chip went with the two fishermen, flying ahead in short excited sweeps, or riding Don's shoulder, as usual.

Luck smiled on the anglers that day. When they returned home, tired and hungry, but well satisfied with their efforts, Don proudly displayed a long string of fish before his mother's eyes. That evening as Don and his mother sat on the pleasant varanda watching the rose and gold of the western sky fade into soft opalescence, Chip perched on the railing before them, preening his sleek coat and chipping conversationally.

"Isn't he handsome, mother? And isn't his breast red?" Pride rang in the boy's voice. "How different he is from the homely little thing I brought home in the spring."

"Yes, he's a fine-looking fellow," she admitted, crisply. "But unless he keeps out of my berry patch, he's going to drop in my esteem. I caught him in there a few moments ago eating a big red strawberry, as bold as you please. I can't allow that."

Don became sober. He recalled what his uncle had said that morning. "But Chip has been helping take care of them, mother," the boy objected. "He has been eating all the bugs and things that hurt the plants. That's why the berries have done so well, Uncle Henry says. Don't you think he's entitled to a few berries for his work?"

Don's mother regarded him in frank surprise. "Why, I hadn't thought of that," she confessed; "but I guess you're right. It's only fair that he should have a share in the harvest. After all, the amount he takes is very small compared with the increase he has helped to bring."

For a while she rocked in silence. When she spoke again her voice was low and dreamy. "That brings to mind a story I once read of why the robin has a red breast."

She gazed off toward the west, where the amethyst shadows were dropping down, like a soft curtain, over the relaxing world.

"The legend claims that when our Saviour was wearily plodding along the road to Calvary, under the heavy burden of the cross, his head bleeding from a crown of thorns, a robin suddenly appeared and plucked a thorn from the Master's brow. As the bird held the blood-drenched thorn in his bill, the blood trickled down his breast, dying it bright red. Ever since that day, so the legend states, robins have had red breasts. It has seemed to me that robins have been doing this very thing all through the ages, removing pricking thorns from our brows."

Don was a serious lad. He was quick to see the deeper meaning in his mother's words. Now he looked thoughtfully at his robin, nodding sleepily on the railing.

"I shall always think of that story when I see the red of a robin's breast," he declared. Then with shining eyes: "That's the badge of his service to man."—Angus Norman MacDonald in Uplift.

WHEN JANET WAS LOST

"There, I forgot to telephone to Mr. Smith to bring out that saw from the store, and I'll have to have it tomorrow," father said. "Can't you run up to the house and ask mother to do it, Janet? She will know what to say."

Janet was sailing boats in the brook while father was mending a fence where the cows had broken through that morning.

"I'll go through the corn; that will be nice and shady," Janet called as she started off.

It was great fun to push the stalks aside and hear them rustle, and Janet skipped along happily. It would have been all right if she had kept straight ahead through one furrow, but she thought she would take a short cut, so she zig-zagged across the rows. On and on she went. Would the field never come to an end? She didn't know it was so big! On and on.

"I don't believe I'll ever get out. I'm lost!" she cried, and she ran one way and then another, getting hotter and more frightened every minute. "Dear Jesus, I can't find the way. Please help me," she breathed between the big sobs that were beginning to come. Then she stood quite still a minute and listened. Hark! What was that? Chop, chop, chop, she heard not so very far off. "That's Andy chopping wood for mother, and he's right off there, I'm sure." She listened again. Yes, there it was—chop, chop, chop.

Janet stopped crying and went slowly toward the sound, waiting to listen every minute or two. She must surely be right, for the chopping was nearer. Now it was very plain, and she started to run for joy and in no time she was out in the sunshine. How good it was! And there was the farmhouse and Andy chopping away, never knowing that he was the answer to Janet's prayer by showing her the way to go. But Janet knew, and she said, "Thank you, dear Jesus, for Andy."—Ina J. Barrows in Apples of Gold.

IN TROUBLE, REACH OUT

In the mountains of North Carolina there is a remarkable tree, to which the guide invariably calls the traveler's attention. It stands, stately and green, on top of a huge bare rock on which there is not an atom of earth. But the roots cling and creep patiently over the face and down the sides of the stone until they reach old mother earth and draw moisture and life from her bosom.

Some human beings, like this wonderful tree, have been condemned to grow in hard and sterile places. The very base of their life is poverty, or grief, or pain. But beneath the hardest rock of circumstances is the throbbing life, the love, the happiness which God has given the world.

All we need to do is to stretch out our roots a little farther, a little deeper, until we reach the water of life. Then, no matter how hard our condition, our lives shall grow and bear fruit.—Christian Witness.

For the Leader

What is our obligation to the church? What is the obligation of the ones who are steadfast and are to be found in the church now?

Of course there are many practical duties the church members must attend to besides those mentioned in the passages used in our study. The church has a right to expect of us a good life. A good life means honest effort to live up to Christian teaching. Some helps to good life would be church attendance, taking part in worship, songs, prayer and associating with others of like mind. Reading the scriptures helps us to keep a good life.

Every church member should be of good report with those who are outside the church. All that a good many know of the church is what they see of the members in every day life.

To Be Discussed

1. Who is Simon Peter that he should be telling church members how to live?
2. Why is it so serious and important a thing to belong to the church?
3. What is the difference between "kingdom building" and carrying out the great commission of Christ?
4. Is the Christian a member of the church in the same sense that the hand or foot is a member of the body?
5. Why is fellowship of such great value in the church? How can we enlarge this fellowship and profit by it?
6. What is the Christian's obligation to the church?

Poetry

Tell me not in mournful numbers.

Life is but an empty dream—
For the soul is dead that slumbers,
And things are not what they seem.

Life is real, life is earnest,
And the grave is not its goal;
Dust thou art—to dust returnest
Was not spoken of the soul.

Not enjoyment, and not sorrow,
Is our destined end, or way;
But to act that each tomorrow
Find us farther than today.

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

Let us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.

—Longfellow.

Why Not Ladies' Aid and Missionary News

January 10 Why Not Ladies Aid met for their monthly meeting. The society voted to take over the piano debt of the church and raise money for that. The regular program was given, after which the hostess brought in a beautiful birthday cake with one lighted candle, celebrating the close of the first year's work of the society. We are all proud of the splendid work our society has accomplished.

February 7 Why Not Ladies' Aid met in Seagrove at the parsonage. The Seagrove Ladies' Aid were invited guests. Since it was near the Valentine season the Valentine idea was carried out. As the guests arrived at the door a red heart was pinned on the Seagrove ladies and gentlemen, while the Why Not members were given a white heart. We were glad to receive five new members: Messrs. J. A. Auman and C. E. Stuart as honorary members, and Misses Lois Gilliland, Yvonne and Alice Hunt as active members for our Junior Aid. A program was given consisting of a reading and a quartet. The treasurer was authorized to write a check for $25 to apply on the piano debt and a check for $2 for the Minnis fund. The entire company then joined in a number of contests, after which everyone was served refreshments. Next meeting will be held with Mrs. C. E. Stuart.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—On the third Sunday Lawyer Jasper Hicks made a splendid address on "Missions;" also our pastor made a brief talk. The collection at this time was for Mr. Minnis. It amounted to $9.00.

We held our Ladies' Auxiliary after Sunday school Sunday because we were rained out on last Friday. Next third Sunday we intend to take our Thank-Offering. We are anxious to raise our budget this year.

The writer, assisted by Miss Doris Cheatham, gave a miscellaneous shower Saturday evening at her home, complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Evans, bridal couple of Durham. Mrs. Evans prior to her marriage was Miss Frances Cheatham, of Oxford, Route 3. Several contests were enjoyed by all present. The guest of honor, Mrs. Evans, received quite a number of nice presents. An ice course was served by the hostesses.

REPORTER.

Eden, Halifax.—We have had good attendance at Sunday school and preaching services since our last report. We are indeed glad to have Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman with us for another year. We think every sermon is the best.

Our Junior Auxiliary is doing just fine. They have been hindered somewhat by bad weather. They are not easily discouraged and on the few occasions when the weather conditions were unfavorable at their appointed meeting time they merely postponed until another time and thus they have carried on their work. They gave us a very inspiring and instructive thank-offering program on Sunday p. m., February 15. At the close of the program Bro. Fogleman made a very interesting talk and offered a most appropriate prayer.

Our Senior Auxiliary has held all its regular monthly meetings for the year so far. We hope to carry on as usual even though we are experiencing financial depression. Some of our members have contributed more flowers, shrubbery, etc., to the cemetery. We have no deaths or serious illness to report at this time. We hope to send in lots of Herald subscriptions soon.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

REPORTER.

Gillburg, Vance.—On the second Sunday afternoon in February a Young People's Day program was carried out. The topic was, "Youth Adventuring in the Christian Quest." There were some very good papers read from the young folks from the Senior and Intermediate classes. Mr. Braxton gave a very good and helpful talk on "Opportunities Along the Way of the Quest."

We have started work on the church yard. One day last week we cleaned the yard and planted shrubbery, and fixed flower beds ready for planting. We are hoping and intend working for greater improvement yet.

Mr. Braxton preached at 11 o'clock Sunday morning a very good sermon which seemed to be appreciated by all. We all feel benefited by the splendid preaching which he is doing.

Our Sunday school is still improving. We had several new members last Sunday and several visitors. We are hoping as spring comes on we will have a larger Sunday school than ever before. We have started work on an Easter program which we hope to make a success.

REPORTER.

Pine Bluff, Midland Charge.—Our pastor, Brother Fred Love, filled his appointment here the first Sunday, March 1. He delivered a very interesting sermon from the text "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me?"

We should render something of value to God; something that He can use. God gave the best that heaven produced; His only begotten Son, Jesus Christ our Lord. David gave his life. We of today are asked to give our lives. Bread satifies hunger, so can Jesus satisfy our souls. Anything will drift, but it takes a man to go against the tide. We so easily drift into bad habits; evil companions and associations; bad conduct in life.

The man who is all for God and His Kingdom is the happy, free man of this day and generation in which we live. Service will free us of care.

Our church plans to do some building this spring. Already some timber on the church ground has been cut for that purpose. It is anticipated that some Sunday school rooms will be built and provision made for the bell to the front of the present building.

The Easter exercise is well under way and promises to be an attractive and inspirational feature.

The ladies organized a Ladies' Aid society at the church last Sunday. Mrs. Love will have this organization in charge. We greatly appreciate her good work with us.

West Forsyth.—Due to muddy roads, the attendance was not as large as usual at our services at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday. Those who were present gave splendid attention to the efforts of the pastor in the services. After the service at Baltimore church the pastor accompanied Brother W. H. Kelly to his home. A good dinner was enjoyed, and from there we hurried to Stony Knoll for the regular service there at 2:30 o'clock. We were sorry to note the absence of two of our leading members at Stony Knoll, Brother P. H. Speas and Brother L. D. Speer. Each of them met with very painful accidents several weeks ago and have not recovered sufficiently to attend services again, having to use crutches in walking. We hope that they will soon be entirely recovered from the injuries.

A very generous donation made to the pastor and family last week was a splendid young pig, which was the gift of Brother W. W. Whitman, of Tabernacle church. The offer of the pig was made some time ago, and we gladly accepted the gift, which is really appreciated. As an additional gift, Mrs. Whitman instructed her father, Brother S. H. Speas, who makes his home with her part of the time, to put a supply of corn in our ear for the pig. These gifts are highly appreciated.

Another kindness shown us during the past week was rendered by Brother A. R. Long, of Pleasant Hill church. He came to the parsonage and ploughed our garden, doing a splendid job, for which we are thankful.

The pastor's wife has had as her guests her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Thomas, of Burlington, since last Saturday night. Little Erma Dell Hargrove, a granddaughter, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, and is an interesting guest of the pastor and family.

The people on West Forsyth charge who have been sick are improving, we are glad to report. Brother W. A. Long and Mrs. Lou Long, of the Pleasant Hill church community, are each improving. Brother R. P. Petree, of Tobaccoville, is reported improving nicely. Mrs. Susan Gray, of Harmony Grove church, is slowly improving from an attack of paralysis. Mrs. W. W. Whitman, of Tabernacle church, who was confined to her bed last week, is also better.

The program is being prepared for the district rally, or conference, to be held at Pleasant Hill church the fifth Sunday in this month. Chairman Gerringer has announced the speakers for the morning program, Dr. S. W. Taylor and Rev. N. M. Harrison. The women will provide the program for the afternoon. The people are asked to bring lunch with them and spend a pleasant and profitable day together. We are looking forward to the day with much interest and anticipation.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be at Tabernacle at 11 a. m. and at Union Hill at 2:30 p. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Calvary, Greensboro.—I think it is safe to say that attendance at Sunday's services was the largest since I have been pastor. No special program, just the regular services.

A couple of weeks ago a visitor remarked that there were more children present at our church service than he had seen in any church in Greensboro. Our statistician checked up on the number present last Sunday. There thirty-two at the morning service and twenty at night. We are glad to see them. The children ought to be in the house of the Lord on the Lord's Day.

We keep improving things about the church and the church grounds. Some of the brethren have been busy cleaning off, trimming the shrubbery, and getting the grounds in shape. We want to keep up Calvary's reputation for having the most beautiful church grounds in the city.

And inside the building, we have raised the choir rail some eight or ten inches, adding greatly to the appearance of that part of the auditorium. We have also placed curtains under the balconies, these to be raised and lowered, so providing enclosed space for two classes. The Baraca class has caught this improvement fever, and are arranging to curtain off their section in the balcony.

The teaching force in the hut are like the old woman who lived in a shoe, they "have so many children they don't know what to do." They brought their problem to the Workers Council last Friday. A committee has been appointed to work out plans for enlarging the assembly space in the hut. We are hoping to get the work done at once.

Another $150 paid last week reduces our $2,000 note to $500. We are making every effort to get this out of the way by the last Sunday in May, which will be the seventh anniversary of the church. We want to make the note-burning the big event of that celebration.

Last Sunday we started a campaign of personal evangelism, leading up to Easter. A fine group of interested folks met at the close of the morning service to perfect the plans, and are now at work. We hope through their effort to see a large number won to Christ and the Church between now and Easter Sunday.

We are glad to see an increasing number of visitors at the church services. You who read this are cordially invited to meet with us if you are in Greensboro on Sunday.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Kennapolis.—It has been some time since there has been any news from our church. We have had a very serious illness in our home. But we are very glad to say that Mr. Cartner is much improved, and was able to attend church services yesterday for the first time in about seven weeks. There is much illness among our church members. The month-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Tilley is very sick. Our beloved pastor's father, Mr. Love, of Concord, N. C., passed away two weeks ago. They all have our deep sympathy. Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Love are the proud parents of a pretty little daughter, which has been named Betty Jean.

Yesterday was a great day at our church; our pastor preached two very interesting sermons. We were glad to have with us at the Sunday night service Brother Fred Love. Our new church is almost complete on the inside, and it makes us so proud to see it almost done. Our Ladies' Aid society will meet tonight, March 2nd, with Mrs. John Lisk. We are hoping for a full attendance. Sunday March 22, will be observed as dollar day at our church. Plans are being made to have a program with some special singing and good music. Everybody is invited to attend.

MRS. D. B. CARTNER, Reporter.

Pine Grove, Kernersville Charge.—On Sunday morning, Rev. Mr. Reed occupied his pulpit and delivered an impressive sermon on "Conscience." The text: "And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offense toward God, and toward men."

Friday evening, February 29, we organized a Christian Endeavor at Pine Grove church.

We held our second weekly meeting last Friday evening. At that time the topic, "Faith," was discussed by the president of the Christian Endeavor and others. We were glad to have our pastor with us, he encouraged us to work faithfully that much good could be accomplished in Christian Endeavor work. There were 24 present at our meeting and we hope that many others will come to our C. E. weekly meetings on Friday evenings beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Winston, First.—We are not trying to monopolize space in the Herald, and perhaps we will not continue to have something in the Herald every week; however, things have been happening so thick and fast here of late that it seems advisable to say something about them.

Our people received a great thrill yesterday morning when we went over the top in the College Maintenance drive. Dr. Humphreys came up a week ago and preached and brought some musicians. Brother B. K. Millaway had helped the cause along by constructing a thermometer about ten feet high with figures running from 0 to 200, with a red tape so constructed that as the pledges were made the red tape would go up. Yesterday morning the pastor preached on "Giving" then presented the matter asking for $200.00. The pledging started and the mercury began to climb and the folks became thrilled and finally the red tape reached the top and would go no further. The pledges at the church amounted to $202.00 but during the afternoon the amount went up to $217.00. And this happened on a morning when the weather was unfavorable and only 33 per cent of our membership was present.

Last evening the Thomasville Choral club rendered a fine programme of music. Dr. R. V. Yokely is president of the club and Mr. D. R. Connell is director. Mr. R. L. Pope, president of the First National bank of Thomasville, came along and delivered a fine short address. It was a great pleasure to have these men. The best congregation we have had yet—157 greeted them. These men do not receive any pay for themselves but an offering was taken which will go to the Children's home.

Next Sunday morning we will observe Family Day. Families are urged to come to church and sit together.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Charge.—We had a very good congregation at church Sunday in spite of the inclement weather. Our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, brought us a splendid message using as his theme, "The Lord's Supper," after which the quarterly communion service was held.

We are glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe and Mr. and Mrs. David Robinson into the membership of our church.

The Sunday school building is progressing very nicely. Most of the outside work is complete and the inside work is now being done. The building committee is still in need of funds to complete the work. We want to thank the membership and friends of the church for the promptness with which pledges have been paid.

The Sunday school has recently pledged $5.00 monthly toward the support of the Methodist Protestant Children's home. This amount will feed or clothe a child for a month. The first Sunday in each month is Children's home day; let us bear that in mind.

The Christian Endeavor meetings are held each Sunday evening at 7:30. The attendance and interest has been unusually good during the winter months. A social was held last Monday night at the home of Misses Margaret and Louise Homewood. Every one present reports a splendid evening.

The Woman's auxiliary of the church met with Mrs. D. I. Offman February 14, and a very helpful and interesting meeting was held. The society has pledged $25.00 toward the S. S. building fund this year. The budget for the year is practically paid and we are hoping to meet all of our obligations before the close of the missionary year. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Herman Isley.

The semi-annual thank offering service will be held on the fourth Sunday afternoon in March, at 3:00 o'clock. Rev. J. Clyde Auman, pastor of the M. P. church of Graham, and a returned missionary who has labored in Japan, will address us at this time. We urge you to be present at this service.

We noted the faces of several of our members who live outside of the community in the congregation Sunday morning and quite a few visitors, also. We are glad to have you worship with us and invite you to come again and again.

MAE PATTERSON, Reporter.

Moriah.—The attendance in Sunday school is going on nicely considering the sickness in the community. As spring opens we are striving for a large attendance in Sunday school and church services. Our pastor brought us a wonderful sermon Sunday on Missions. Subject: "The Supreme Gift." The supreme gift is giving our lives to Christ.

Text: "And this they did, not, as we hoped, but just gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God."

We were also favored with a duet by Miss Rebecca Sharp and Mary Frances Sharp.

We are all very glad to hear that Mr. Mark Witty, Jr., is recovering satisfactorily after being critically ill with pneumonia.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth.—Our Sunday school seems to be getting along very nicely. The attendance is increasing, but very slowly, due to so much sickness among our members. Although the attendance is not as large as we would like to see, we are proud of "the faithful few." A little more than two years ago we started giving attendance pins and new ten of the members have been entitled to the second year pin. This has helped a great deal in keeping up our attendance. We are looking forward to a greater increase in the near future, when spring appears and roads improve.

The Woman's auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. C. B. Way, last Friday at 7:30, to hold the regular monthly meeting. A very interesting and instructive program was given. Mrs. W. B. Speas conducted the devotional exercise. Important parts about China and Japan were given by Mrs. A. L. Davis and Treva Long. Then Mrs. R. A. Whitman had charge of the question box.

The young people's missionary society met with the leader, Mrs. R. J. Whitman, last Saturday afternoon to hold the monthly meeting.

Mr. Frank Grabbs, of King, will talk at this church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. His subject will be "Human Life." Every one is invited to attend this service.

R. LONG, Reporter.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—Our Sunday school attendance is holding up fine. Our preaching services are well attended; the church is full almost every Sunday night. Our pastor announced Sunday that he would start a special meeting the second Sunday in April. We were glad to have Rev. W. F. Ashburn with us Sunday night.

There has been quite a lot of sickness among our church people. Mr. C. O. Kennett has been sick for a week or more and is still in bed.

The young people are getting up a Easter program. Will start learning the special music tonight. The young girls and boys will have charge of the music. We are sorry to report the death of little Frances Wade, the one-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. W. L.

Wade, of Covington, Ky. They brought her little body to Greensbor and it was laid to rest in Green Hill Cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Wade were at one time members of St. Paul church. They left here four years ago. Mr. Wade is connected with the Y. M. C. A. in Covington and they left here Sunday for the trip back home. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wade of our church.

The young men's class will hold a class meeting Friday night at Mr. Craven's home. The two classes of young people are planning to have an oyster supper some time soon.

MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—We were glad to have Rev. T. J. Whitehead preach for us at Efland the third Sunday night in February. His message made a favorable impression. Am glad to see our young men taking up the work of the ministry.

Easter services are being planned as follows: At Hebron, fifth Sunday morning in March; at Union Grove, Easter Sunday morning; at Efland, Easter Sunday night, and at Chestnut Ridge, second Sunday morning in April.

Many of our people are sick. Hope they will soon recover, if it be the Lord's will.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Connelly Spring Charge.—As there hasn't been a report from this charge since Conference, perhaps the readers of the Herald will be interested to know that we are still living and doing something to promote the kingdom.

Our congregations have been good considering the bad weather and muddy roads. Since the weather is beginning to open up the attendance is beginning to increase and with the coming of spring we are hoping to have at least 90 per cent in attendance.

Some of the interesting things just now is starting up the Sunday school at Burks Chapel with an attendance on the first Sunday of 31. We are expecting an increase all along through the spring and summer. The mid-week prayer meeting at Shiloh is a growing feature of the spiritual life of the church; this is the reason that we assign for the large attendance at church and Sunday school—over 100 per cent.

The sick on the charge are slowly improving. The writer has been unable to walk without sticks for over a week with boils on the foot.

Pray for us that we may be able to get on the job again.

L. S. HELMS.

Lexington, State Street.—Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour the sacrament was administered by the pastor. We continue to gain in attendance in Sunday school and are setting a high goal to reach by Easter.

Sunday evening the service was given by the ladies of the Missionary Society. An interesting thank-offering program was prepared by Mrs. Annie Harkey. The service was well attended and was helpful and inspiring to all present.

The pageant given by the two circles of the society on Wednesday night of last week was very good and much favorable comment has been heard from many who attended. By many it has been called the best service the circles have given at their joint meetings.

We are glad to note that nearly all of our number who have been kept from church and other activities are out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Blanton and Master Francis visited at the parsonage Sunday and were with us at church. We are always glad to see them.

REPORTER.

Glen Raven.—Everything is moving along very nicely at our church now. In spite of unfavorable weather we are still having a large attendance at Sunday school, C. E., preaching and other services.

Last Sunday a very inspiring and well delivered sermon was brought to us by our pastor, Rev. Mr. Shelton, taken from a part of the fifth and sixth chapters of Romans. In this sermon, Rev. Mr. Shelton brought out the point that we should not be any man's Man. In that, he meant we should not be dependent on man to the extent that man could mould our lives with his own influence and make us believe that we belonged to man instead of God. But, we ought to be God's man and because we are God's man we will be everybody's man.

We now have 260 members on roll in our Sunday school. Since Christmas our average attendance has been 175. Owing to sickness and unfavorable weather we feel that our average attendance will, in the near future, far exceed that of the past.

The Christian Endeavor held its regular consecration meeting conducted by Rev. Mr. Shelton last Sunday night. Two weeks ago six of the members took part in a camp fire program which was quite interesting. The stage was decorated in green pine, giving the out-door appearance. The only light used was that of red bulbs which imitated an out-door burning fire. The 13th chapter of First Corinthians was used in this program.

Everybody is invited to attend all of our services.

REPORTER.

Why Not Charge.—On the night of February 24 the writer was the recipient of a birthday shower and a pounding combined. Mrs. J. E. King and Mrs. T. E. Cagle sponsored the movement that culminated in the offerings at the parsonage. Seagrove and Fair Grove churches were well represented. The various items of the pounding, as well as the birthday gifts, were generously and wisely selected. The birthday cake was well adorned with candles, and was unsurpassed for beauty and flavor.

The entire family is happier because of this experience.

WM. H. NEESE.

First Church, High Point.—The Junior church convened for worship in the assembly room under the leadership of Mrs. S. S. Coe and Mrs. L. R. Johnston at 11 o'clock. At the same hour the adult congregation in the auditorium upstairs was much pleased to hear a touching message from Major J. Arthur Fynn, regional secretary of the Southern Conference of the Salvation Army, which is holding its session in High Point. Rev. R. I. Farmer said in introducing Major Fynn that it is his conviction that there is more unity among the different churches than ever before, but too large a percentage of our people do not attend church services anywhere, although they are made welcome. It is among these unchurched people that the Salvation Army has rendered such signal service for the past several years, and where they are doing such wonderful work. The local post of the Army has rendered splendid service here in High Point since they have their commodious hall on South Main street, especially during the present winter months, when there has been great need and suffering. Major Fynn chose as his text: "Wherefore he is able also to save to the uttermost those who come to God through Him," which is just another way of saying that a man who is "down and out" may be saved. He said in part: Like all parents I like to hear the accounts of what my children are doing; so the Salvation Army likes to come back to the mother church to render an account of its work. Life's front yard is always beautiful, clean and well kept, but although society does not like to admit it, the world has also a back yard, where misery, poverty, illiteracy, sin, and wretchedness abound. I thank God that He has called some splendid people to work with the Salvation Army. There is an idea prevalent that all the workers have at one time been down and out, but this is not the case. I want to speak to you this morning about the denizens of the back yard, the cast-offs of family and society, the drunkards, gamblers, human derelicts of all kinds, and those who have seen better days. One remarkable instance is that of a man I know; Harry Morris was born and raised on a farm in a Christian home, was educated as a pharmacist, but formed the drug habit; one day he was walking along State street, Chicago, without money or friends, and decided to end it all, but before doing so, went to the office of the Salvation Army to talk to some Christian people. While praying with them, a miracle took place in his heart, and he was happily converted. He has done a wonderful work here in the South, where he owns his own beautiful home, and is highly respected and loved. The Army is the gateway by which thousands pass from the back yard to the front yard. We are vitally interested in the children of the back yard, and are trying to do something for those who are underprivileged. Seventy-five per cent of the workers have come up through young people's organizations. During the past three months a special campaign has been conducted throughout the nation, and almost 60,000 people have knelt at the altar and found Jesus precious to their souls.

At the 5 o'clock vesper service special music was rendered by the High Point College Small Orchestra and College Choir. The vesper prelude was given by Mayor C. A. York on "Behind the Scenes in the City Government." These short addresses by officials of the city government have been interesting and helpful. Rev. Mr. Farmer spoke briefly on "Jesus and Citizenship."

The executive committee of the Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting Monday afternoon with Mrs. June Gray, 308 Lindsay street. This group of women is closing up the year's work and raising the budget preparatory to Branch meeting, which will convene here April 14-15. Despite hard times and the business depression, the financial side is in good shape, and they are planning to meet every obligation in full.

The Young People's C. E. Society has adopted an Efficiency Campaign, in which the first meeting in a series of eight will be held this (Monday) evening, when the leader, Rev. Mr. Farmer, will discuss the topic, "What Jesus Teaches About God the Father." The society has been divided into four groups, which will compete for points.

In Wednesday Evening Fellowship Supper Meetings the minister is discussing "Early American Religious Leadership" during Lent. This week he will talk about "David Brainerd and the Indians."

The minister has issued an attractive leaflet, announcing the subjects of sermons, vesper preludes, and mid-week discussions during the season of Lent from Ash Wednesday, February 18th, to Easter Sunday, April 5th, the week before Palm Sunday will be known as Visitation Evangelism Week; Palm Sunday and Easter will be Ingathering Days. Our congregation will unite with others of the city in a union meeting on Good Friday in the Lutheran church, which will continue for three hours; the program for this annual meeting, which is sponsored by the Ministers' Association of High Point, is now being planned.

Postmaster O. R. York, accompanied by his brother, Mayor C. A. York, and City Manager E. M. Knox, made a trip to Washington last week to try to speed up the construction of the new postoffice building, which is to be located on the present site of the Junior High School on South Main Street. They were assured that early attention will be given to this building, and work is promised to be commenced in late spring or early summer. Ground has already been broken and work begun on a handsome new $350,000 junior high school building opposite the high school, between Jones and Chestnut streets. These two projects will furnish employment for a large number of local laborers. In the awarding of contracts, preference was given to home firms. R. K. Stewart and Son secured the general contract. The new building will be handsome, modern and up-to-date in every detail, and will furnish accommodation for 1,000 pupils.

Mrs. Hal Walker, of Asheboro, attended the meeting of the Salem Alumnae last Wednesday at the beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Idol.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Penny are spending a few weeks in Florida; a card from Mrs. Penny says it is cold enough to have furnace heat on. Her postcard contains a picture of the beautiful Singing Tower at Lake Wales, near Orlando, which was the gift of the late Mr. Edward Bok, noted editor and philanthropist. It became his monument, for under the tower he lies buried. The famous Carillon, which is the finest and largest in the world, has 71 bells, which are rung at stated intervals, and attract thousands of visitors annually.

Much sympathy is extended by friends here to Mr. J. Norman Wills, of Greensboro, in the loss of his brother, Mr. William Henry Wills, whose death occurred on February 25 from pneumonia at his home on West Gaston street. He was one of the five sons of the late Rev. Richard H. Wills, pioneer and consecrated minister of the N. C. Conference, who played an active part in founding the denomination in this state.

Forsyth Charge.—Many interesting things have happened on the Forsyth charge since the pastor last wrote to the Herald. Some of these have been reported perhaps by the church reporters and some have not.

The auxiliaries at Hickory Ridge and Maple Springs have observed their annual thank-offering services. These were held in a rather quiet way, but the women show that they are interested in the work and are making an effort to meet their budgets in full before the Branch meeting in April.

The attendance at the preaching services as well as the Sunday schools is encouraging. Dr. Andrews and Brother Pritchard in their contest have interested me in percentage attendance. For the last month I have kept a record of the attendance and it has been as follows: Hickory Ridge—day service, 61 per cent, night, 56 per cent; Oak Grove—day service, 45 per cent; Union Ridge—day service, 45 per cent, night, 32 per cent; Maple Springs—day service, 79 per cent, night, 58 per cent; Mt. Carmel—day service, failed to count, night, 56 per cent. This will no doubt compare favorably with the attendance in town and city churches.

I feel like saying an extra good word for the Christian Endeavor at Mt. Carmel. Last evening there were 75 present for Christian Endeavor. They have the graded Christian Endeavor. All meet together for an opening worship service and then separate for the different programs. They have the senior, young people, intermediate, and junior divisions. This is the largest Christian Endeavor organization I have ever had the privilege of being associated with, and they are doing splendid work.

The people continue to remember the pastor and his family with many tokens of interest and esteem. I could not name all the good things that have been put into the pastor's car or left at the parsonage. Some of our people do not like for us to mention their names through the paper so we have thus far adopted the policy of not giving names. In the line of good things to eat we have received since our last report all the way from a bushel of sweet potatoes to a dozen eggs. We thank all these good people for their thoughtfulness.

And their thoughtfulness has not stopped with contributing good things to eat. Three of the churches have recently had installed in the parsonage an enameled Eureka kitchen range. The three churches were Maple Springs, Mt. Carmel, and Hickory Ridge. Then Union Ridge purchased a hot water tank to go along with the range. The pastor is donating a lavatory and the necessary pipe, etc., to install tank and lavatory, and Brother Charlie Long is coming today to install the tank and lavatory. The pastor and family are delighted that we are to soon enjoy these conveniences, and we certainly appreciate what the people are doing to make us comfortable. Surely the lines have fallen for us in pleasant places.

Our revival meetings are soon to begin. The Union Ridge meeting was scheduled to begin the second Sunday in May but because of the meeting in Washington, D. C., for that week we have changed the time of meeting to the second Sunday in April. Brother Bethea is to assist in the meeting. Our next meeting will be at Mt. Carmel, beginning the third Sunday in April. Brother Ed Brewer, a lay preacher of the Moravian church, will assist in this meeting. The other meetings will be held later in the spring and summer.

May the blessings of the Lord be upon all our pastors and laymen who labor in His kingdom.

I failed to say that we have raised about $65 on this charge for college running expenses.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Shiloh.—"The Greatest Sin of This Age" was the subject of our pastor's sermon today. He said the greatest sin of this age is not murder, even though the crime of today is appalling. It is not drunkenness, even though the drink question is serious indeed. It is not dishonesty, as much as the world longs for truth and honesty in men. The Book says take not God's name in vain, yet His name is desecrated on every side, but this is not the greatest sin. Lasciviousness has sapped the purity and strength of character from many of our people, both young and older people, and causes many broken hearts and much shame, yet lasciviousness is not the greatest sin of this age. Then what is the greatest sin? It is selfishness. Back of and underneath all murder, drunkenness, dishonesty, cursing and lasciviousness is selfishness. It is causing most of the suffering today. Why are so many hungry today? Is there not enough food? Yes, but selfishness has it cornered and the hungry remain unfed. Yes, selfishness is the greatest sin.

Many of our people who have been sick were able to be out again today and we were glad to see them. However there are some who are yet kept at home by sickness. Mumps and influenza have left few families untouched by one or the other.

Our Woman's Auxiliary has been divided into circles Nos. 1, 2 and 3. We hope every member of the church will catch a new vision of service.

J. R. Berrier and Tom Berrier have visited their father, W. J. Berrier, during the past two weeks. We are always glad to have the boys with us.

MRS. W. L. SHOAF.

Harmony, Yarbrough Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, filled his appointments the fourth Sunday morning and evening, preaching two very helpful sermons.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met the fourth Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Kate Medlock. A thank-offering service was held, the offering being six dollars.

We have had several cases of flu in our community. Among these is a very faithful member of our church, Mrs. G. B. Taylor, who has been sick for some time. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Our Sunday school is doing fairly well. We notice the attendance slightly increasing with the coming of spring.

EDNA HUGHES, Reporter.

Rehoboth, Creswell.—Our pastor, Bro. Russell, gave us a very helpful sermon in January; he spoke of our being on the threshold of the new year; no doubt we'd like to know what the year had in store for us, but God in His wisdom withheld the future; we might be careless, indifferent if we knew; hope in our breast stimulated us on our way.

On the second Sunday in February our morning service was a memorial, very impressive; the Lord's Supper was celebrated. The music was an inspiring feature of this service.

We doubt that some of our readers have heard of the death of Jerry Sawyer; he was a prominent lawyer in Plymouth; married

Mary Spruill, daughter of E. R. Spruill. It was a great shock to his home people to be carried home dead, badly crushed. He lost control of his car crossing a bridge near Raper, ran into the bridge, the car overturned several times. He was hurled many feet in the air. Oh, it was so sad for his dear wife, who was prostrated with grief, and a shock to the county, for he had many friends.

Pray for our little band at Rehoboth. Only six regular attendants at Sunday school since the winter has been so severe. I hope spring will soon open up and our attendance improve. REPORTER.

Asheville.—We have been having our usual Sabbath services, Sunday school with a good number each time, and the 11 o'clock service. Mr. Barnard from the Asheville school, Mr. Luffman and our own Mr. E. C. Fawcett, each layman bringing us wonderful and inspiring messages—so much good food for our souls that we were glad to have been to the house of the Lord.

The Christian Endeavor Society is a live wire. At the monthly business meeting the first Friday evening in February, held at the home of Misses Mildred and Janeth Younginer, plans were made to have a package social the fourth Friday evening, which social was held and a neat sum realized to be applied on the budget. The packages sold rapidly. Everyone seemed to enjoy being blindfolded and snip a package suspended from a line. Candy, cakes, sandwiches and lemonade were sold. The games were in charge of Mrs. Taggart, who is an adept in keeping merriment going. The musical program was in charge of Miss Novella McIntire, who always delights her audience with programs.

In February the Auxiliary held a joint meeting with the Weaverville Auxiliary at the home of Mrs. H. O. Charnock. The program was a most enjoyable one, presided over by Mrs. H. O. Charnock, chairman. Those taking part were Mrs. Everhart, Mrs. J. S. Williams, who gave appropriate readings on the subject of our missionaries and their work. Devotional was conducted by Rev. E. G. Cowan, of Weaverville. The music was rendered by Miss McIntire. The business session was presided over by the president, Mrs. Ralph Beacham. Mrs. L. M. Joyner presented to the ways and means committee a very attractive proposition by which the treasury might be replenished. The election of officers was held, rather a re-election, as our officers of last year were asked to serve this year: President, Mrs. Ralph Beacham, vice-president, Miss Novella McIntire; secretary, Miss Eula Taylor; treasurer, Mrs. E. L. Fawcett. The various chairmen of committees will be appointed for next meeting.

The delegation from Weaverville was as follows: Rev. and Mrs. Cowan, Mrs. Fred Edwards, Mrs. Frank Edwards, Mrs. Holcombe, Mrs. Garrison, Mrs. Burgin, and Mrs. Bishop. From Asheville: Mesdames Joyner, Everhart, Hanner, Fawcett, Williams, McIntire, Pratt, Taylor, Charnock, Bolick, Younginer, Beacham, Teague; Misses McIntire and Taylor.

We enjoyed the fellowship with our sister Auxiliary members. A delightful social hour was enjoyed. Hostesses were Mrs. H. O. Charnock, Miss Taylor and Mrs. Younginer, who served cake, tea and coffee.

Sunday evening, last, our C. E. leader was Miss Novella McIntire. She had the meeting most enjoyably planned and interesting, too—a missionary topic. Quite a number were present and we met around the camp fire. Various features which we have had of late have made the meetings attractive and impressive.

Coming as a great surprise to many friends of the bride was the marriage of Miss Clarice Younginer to Mr. Albert Farr at Edgefield, S. C., at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Thomason, Sunday, February 8th, Mr. Thomason officiating. They will reside in Augusta, Ga., where Mr. Farr is employed in the insurance business. We will miss Mrs. Farr very much. She was especially active in C. E. work.

Mr. G. P. Younginer spent last week-end with his family. We enjoy his helpful talks and suggestions. Unfortunately his work keeps him in Charlotte most of the time lately.

We are glad to have Mrs. W. E. Teague back with us after several weeks' visit with her daughter in Charlotte.

SENATOR TYDINGS GIVES PART OF THE TRUTH

Recently, when Senator Morrison and others were warning Chairman Raskob against the Democratic Party declaring itself wet, Senator Tydings of Maryland, took opportunity to speak of the flaws of the prohibition law, and in particular to point out the conditions of Mr. Morrison's own state, saying: "For we find that in North Carolina, a rather thickly settled state, out of each 10,000 people, sixty-one stills were seized by the Prohibition Bureau in the years from 1923 to 1928. More liquor in the process of manufacture was seized in North Carolina than in any state in the union save one (Georgia)."

Had Senator Tydings gone further into the statistics, he would have found that North Carolina, with such a record for liquor seizures, had an average death rate from alcoholism for the same period, 1923 to 1928, of only 1.5 per 100,000 population. The corresponding rate in Maryland, his own state, which he so nobly defends, is 7.2 deaths per 100,000. The average rate for all registration states is 3.7, for 1923 to 1928.

Evidently the seizures in North Carolina are effective. We need more states to fall in line with North Carolina by destroying stills and saving lives.—Clipsheet.

—The Ashboro Courier, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, editor, was handsomely supplemented last week by a 16-page rotogravure magazine. Asheboro and Randolph county are "done brown" in this profusely illustrated paper. Asheboro is the geographical center of North Carolina and is awake to the value of its advantages. It has three banks and several manufacturing plants of magnitude. It is the county seat of Randolph county, one of the better counties of the state. The spirit of thrift prevails among the people and with industry, economy, and prudent investment Randolph will continue to forge ahead. It has more Methodist Protestant churches, we believe, than any other county in the state. The Courier in this edition has put "Sunday clothes" on Asheboro and other parts of Randolph.

—It should have been "Miss Mary Whiteley" at the head of obituary by Rev. H. L. Isley last week. He wrote it so.

We are very grateful for these gifts of money and produce, and shrubbery. Through the kindness of the many friends we have been able to plant a great many things in our new yard. Thanks already for the donation.

An Open Letter

Because we wish all our people to know just the status of affairs at the Children's Home, and because we are hoping there will not be the letting down in offerings for the Home that there was last spring and summer we are herewith publishing our letter which went to all pastors and Sunday school superintendents in the conference last week. Study it carefully, and you will readily discover that our present deficit is just about the amount of the shortage from churches and Sunday schools during last conference year.

If all our Sunday schools and churches will respond liberally every month this year we can and will come up to conference without a deficit. Please help us to do this.

February 27, 1931.

"My Dear Brother Pastor and Sunday School Superintendent:

"This letter goes today to all our pastors and Sunday school superintendents whose address we have.

"We need the financial help of our people each month in order to take care of the children in this home. Many of the churches and Sunday schools are sending us monthly offerings, and we know they are coming just as sure as the months pass. But many churches and Sunday schools do not send offerings with any regularity at all. Surely if our people knew the conditions here, and knew how we have to struggle to make ends meet in our efforts to support these orphan children they certainly would make a regularly monthly offering to the Children's Home. We need the prayers, the sympathy and the financial support of all our people, and we need this support regularly. We thank all of you who are thus responding, and urge all others to do likewise.

"We seem to catch up a bit occasionally; but since the current expenses were so far behind when we took charge of the work, we have not seen a day since coming here that we were not behind as much as $2,000. And since the Sunday schools and churches of our conference were short at least $4,000 in their offerings to the Home during last conference year, that threw us further behind.

"The Thanksgiving and Christmas offerings this year were good, both from our own people and from people of other conferences, and we appreciate that fact. This money had to be checked out to pay back bills, and when March the first comes there will be bills on our desk to the amount of about $4,000. This amount of money we justly owe to those who have trusted us. They will not forever trust.

"If you have read our reports in the HERALD you have noted a great falling off in the amount of the offerings during February. If this continues through the spring and summer months then we will be in a far worse condition than ever when fall comes. Please keep up your offerings in EACH Sunday school EVERY month. We thank you.

"If we are to continue to serve our church and our conference in this capacity, then we think we have a right to expect every pastor and every Sunday school superintendent to see to it that we have a regular monthly offering from each Sunday school. This is your Children's Home, and these are your children. You have placed us here to care for them, and we can only feed, clothe and educate them as you furnish the means. We simply depend upon our people for their free-will offerings. And, according to Duke report, we are running a bit cheaper than any other similar Home in the state. God help us all to do our best. Thank you and God bless you. Yours in His service,

"A. G. DIXON, Superintendent."

—Mr. William H. Wills, second son of Rev. R. H. Wills, returned to Greensboro a few weeks ago from the North where he had lived since he went out into the world for himself. He was ill when he came and went at once to bed in the home of his brother, Brother J. Norman Wills. A doctor was called who declared that he had pneumonia. He suffered for three weeks and found relief in death. The funeral was conducted in Grace church by Dr. S. K. Spahr. We do not know whether Mr. Wills just happened to return at this time or had a premonition of the approaching end and came that he might spend his last days and hours with relatives and friends. His going so soon seems peculiarly pathetic because he had spent so little of his whole life with his own people. He was for a time a newspaper writer with the Sun and other New York papers. We recall but one contact with him. In that he impressed us as genial, likable and ambitious to succeed. We hoped to meet him again and are sorry that he has passed on. He left no family of his own and was buried in this city's burying ground.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Wood

(Sacred to the memory of mother)

Victoria Addie, daughter of Richard and Mary Cain, and widow of Jasper U. Wood, died very early Wednesday morning, February 11, 1931, aged 85 years, 11 months and 16 days. She was reared in Fayetteville, N. C., and educated at Thomasville Female college. October 12, 1868, at the age of 23, she married Jasper U. Wood, who preceded her in death nearly 18 years. Surviving her are four daughters, Mrs. L. T. Johnston and Miss Daisy Wood of Mebane; Mrs. J. M. Foust, of Snow Camp; and Mrs. C. T. Henley of Greensboro, also nine grand children and seven great grand-children. She is the last of a family of seven sisters. Surviving her is one brother-in-law, Mr. John A. Oates of Fayetteville, N. C., and three nieces, whom she loved dearly, Mrs. W. P. Reed, of Carthage, N. C., and Mrs. W. O. McCorkle and Mrs. H. S. Stokes, of Wiston-Salem. She made her home at Mebane with her daughter, Miss Daisy Wood, who watched over her with loyal devotion and tender care. All that she and sister living near, the Dr. and kind neighbors could do was done for her in her last illness, but God called her to her reward in Heaven, and with a smile on her face, she told her pastor: "If it is God's will, I am ready." She died of pneumonia following flu.

Mother was a good woman, beloved by all who knew her. Her husband's relatives all loved Aunt Addie, and her devotion to them was touching to see. She had many friends. She was one of the best of mothers. As I look back over my childhood days, I recall her loving care, self-denial, and kind counsel. There was nothing she loved better than to help to improve and advance her children and train them for God. I remember as a child, when I would do wrong she would say "Now you ought to pray about that," and I have never forgotten it. As long ago as I can remember, she taught us to pray. All we are, or ever hope to be, we owe to the early training of mother. Mother was of a kind and gentle nature, rarely speaking above an ordinary tone of voice. Always a true Christian her influence lives in the lives of us all.

The last few years of her life are beautiful to remember. She seemed to give up every care. Always pleasant and cheerful. Willing for her will to blend with God's she leaned on the Everlasting arms. Truly she walked and talked with God. We were all with her when she died. She suffered much, but she does not suffer now. Mother has gone home. There is not a doubt about that, for we die as we live. In imagination, we love to picture to our minds the pearly gate swinging wide as mother entered Heaven, to be met by her Savior, parents, husband, sisters and grand children; two of them my own dear boys. We sorrow here, but, oh there was rejoicing in the Home Land. She is not dead, only gone to Father's home, where she has just begun to live. She is so happy there, surrounded by all that is glorious and beautiful. So grand that in our imagination we can not even conceive of it. We would not call her back. Some day we'll meet you, mother dear.

Funeral services were very impressively conducted by her pastor, Rev. A. E. Hamby, in the Baptist church at Mebane, on Thursday, February 12th. Some of her favorite songs were sung: "How Firm a Foundation," "Does Jesus Care?" "Abide With Me," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Interment was in Moore's Chapel cemetery.

Her grand sons and near relatives were pall bearers. Her grand daughters, flower girls. Many beautiful flowers were given by those who loved her. Gently, kind friends laid mother in her last resting place beside her husband, covering both mounds with flowers, as the choir sang Sweetly Asleep in Jesus and Shall We Gather at the River? It all seemed so sacred, so divine, for verily Jesus was there and the ground on which we stood was holy ground.

Her Daughter, MRS. J. M. FOUST.

Dorsett

Allie Juanita Dorsett, daughter of Fletcher S. and Linnie Harris Dorsett, departed this life on February 28, 1931—aged 19 years, three months and 22 days. She professed a hope in Christ, uniting with First Methodist Protestant church, Thomasville, in 1921 where she continued a faithful and loyal member until her death. In her death we have sustained the loss of one of our best church members, a well-loved friend, a kind sister and a most precious daughter. Juanita loved her church and delighted in serving it. She went about her church work with a smile and was always ready to undertake any task which she was asked to do. She was a regular attendant of all the church services, an active member of Christian Endeavor, a member of the choir, leader of the Junior mission band, Sunday school teacher and church reporter. Her last report is in the Herald of February 19. Death came as a result of double pneumonia and pleurisy. She was ill about ten days. The funeral was conducted by the pastor, assisted by six former pastor, viz. J. H. Abernethy, G. L. Reynolds, H. L. Powell, E. O. Peeler, R. S. Troxler, and J. L. Trolinger. Interment was in the cemetery of Fair Grove church. The family has our heartfelt sympathy.

HERE AND THERE

THY WORD IS LIFE

(Tune: Canonbury)

The weaving of our city's life
Is rich with threads of fine spun gold,
From hearts that in thy deathless Word
Have learned the truth through ages told.

Thy Word is Life, O God above,
And grows in power for hearts that know
The beauty of Thy boundless love,
A heavenly kingdom here below.

For those who pass Thy torch along
To souls that blindly grope for light,
We thank Thee, while we pray that all
May see afar Thy vision bright.

O may Thy Word transform and bless
The lives of all who touch our shore,
That brotherhood, and peace, and love
May reign supreme forever more.

TWENTH AMENDMENT ADVANCING!

On February 17 the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives reported out by a large majority the Sparks Stop Alien Representation Amendment, recommending its passage. This amendment provides that hereafter when making up Congressional districts only American citizens shall be counted.

At present the whole population is counted, including unnaturalized aliens of every description. This does an injustice to American citizens, as the 7,500,000 unnaturalized aliens in this country now have about 30 representatives in Congress. This gives great power to the big wet foreignized cities, as some Congressmen come from districts where less than one-fourth of the population are American citizens!

This necessarily robs of proper Congressional representation the rural districts, which are made up overwhelmingly of American citizens. If 30 Congressmen are taken from the big wet foreignized cities of the country and distributed among the rural, agricultural districts, it will be a great blessing to America, helping not only the farm block in Congress but also the dry cause.

Every loyal American, everyone who believes that only Americans should have representation in the United States Congress, all who want to strengthen rather than weaken the farm block and the dry block in Congress, should write or wire immediately to their Congressman, urging his support of this amendment. Send a night letter telegram signed by ten citizens. Here is a good form for such a telegram to your Congressman: "Undersigned urge that you support Sparks Stop Alien Representation Amendment."—Rev. O. R. Miller.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

held at Fairgrove church (Why Not) March 1 at 7:30 p. m. The program was in charge of the Ladies' Aid and was rendered mainly by members of the Junior Aid. The program consisted of songs by the choir; a duet rendered by Misses Lackey and Seaback (teachers of Seagrove High School); a reading, "The Gift of Gold," by Miss Susan Lowdermilk; a play, "Without Spot;" remarks by the pastor; and last, but not least, the offering, which amounted to $11. Prior to the service T. O. boxes were handed out with the request that each one contribute a penny for each year of age.

We were expecting Mrs. William C. Hamner, of Asheboro to give a missionary address, but she failed to get there, and the congregation was much disappointed. Hope to have her later. The offering goes to pay a missionary pledge made by our Ladies' Aid. We are not content to do local work alone, but believe in going farther.

By unanimous consent of the program committee of the association it was thought best to defer the meeting of the Central Ministers' association until March 17. A fine program is being arranged so plan to be present at that meeting in High Point.

I Am My Neighbor's Neighbor

My neighbor lives in far-off land;
He's down and out, I understand;
He knows me not, but him I know,
And I must hear his tale of woe.

I am my neighbor's neighbor.

My neighbor's dumb in all his sorrow,
He does not seek relief to borrow;
I am not asked to take a share,
But I must help his burden bear.

I am my neighbor's neighbor.

Most sad, indeed, my neighbor's plight,
All bruised and broken, a wretched sight;
Sure I must haste with all my breath
To snatch him from the jaws of death.

I am my neighbor's neighbor.

My neighbor's far from way of right,
And may be lost in hopeless night:
I must not fail to give him warning,
To show him life's eternal morning.

I am my neighbor's neighbor.

Things That Matter

Foods matter: they sustain life. Poisons matter: they destroy life. Conduct matters: it affects life. Associations matter: they color life. Habits matter: they shape life.

We can think of few things that do not have their bearing on human life and welfare. The stars may not affect us as the old astrologers believed and taught, but they affect us. Nearly everything we can see and myriads of things too small to be seen, even with the aid of a microscope, have power over us. Some are our friends and others we regard as our enemies—they cause us pain or discomfort. We cannot afford to ignore things that affect keenly our experience and destiny. We ought to know what we eat and drink, what we touch, people we associate with, the character of the books we read. The art of living in this mysterious world requires vigilance and close scrutiny. Life is not so simple as it seems. We must not, child-like, open our mouths to everything that is presented.

Senator Morrison's Stand for Prohibition

Our new United States Senator, ex-Governor Cameron Morrison, deserves commendation for his bold defense of the Prohibition Amendment. He believes the law against alcoholic beverages is just, that it was properly enacted, and that it will never be repealed. He openly opposes the tactics of the wets who try to hold men to their party in a course which their consciences condemn. He makes them understand that the dries cannot be read out of their parties by wet leaders. He says: "We will not 'bolt,' we will not quit the party, but we will defy any such effort to control us." Senator Morrison has the common sense to see the utter folly of trying to carry a pro-liquor election in a country overwhelmingly dry. It seems strange that the wets cannot see how disgusting to the average man their program is. But "whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

Two Armies

In a vision of the night I saw two armies. One of these armies was made up of agile men armed with sharp swords and riding on swift horses. They moved with great speed across the land and drove their enemies before them.

The other army, not so large, was made up of men armed with little popguns and riding hobby-horses. The men were much agitated and rocked very fast, and thought they were making rapid progress, but they were not moving forward at all.

What is the meaning of this vision? The interpretation is this: The men on swift horses are prophets of the Lord, teachers of the truth, armed with the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God. They go about their work with alacrity and they accomplish that whereunto they are sent.

The other army is the army of the hobby-riders. They are riding for the fun of riding. They cannot reasonably hope to accomplish much good. They make a spectacle for men and angels, grieving angels and amusing men. They make a great noise and attract attention, but they give little reward for the attention they receive. The little truth they teach is distorted out of all proportion.

Dr. Ward Moving On

We have repeatedly referred to the great movement initiated by Dr. A. Norman Ward the object of which is the endowment of liberal arts colleges of the United States, about five hundred of them. Dr. Ward is president of our college at Westminster, Md. He is working for all needed colleges without respect to denomination. The first thing to do is to prepare the minds of people for the great enterprise and this Dr. Ward is now doing in a way that promises to be effective. He is depending in part on the effect of an article entitled "The Tenth Generation." He asks help in the distribution of this tract which is so interesting and extraordinary that most readers perhaps read it at one sitting.

SHOCKING BLASPHEMY AND DANGER OF COMMUNISM

By HANS P. FREECE, Attorney, N. Y. City

Here is a sample of the blasphemous, revolting and indecent Communist propaganda that is flooding America from Atheistic Russia:

The front cover of the Red publication "The Atheist at His Bench" deals with Jesus at Cana. It depicts him sitting at the head of the bottle-laden table. His left hand manipulates a miniature still. His right hand directs another reveler, his ugly mouth gaping over the neck of an upturned bottle of rum. Still another bewhiskered guest is vociferously spewing the contents of his sick stomach on the floor. Other revelers are wallowing on the floor or under and near the table, their faces contorted, their ugly mouths wide open making hideous and revolting faces. One particularly sickening appearing creature is sneaking up behind Jesus ready to seize for himself the illicit still.

Jesus is pictured in a red robe, blue sash, generous whiskers, and a halo. At the bottom of this sacrilegious and disgustingly revolting scene are the words, "The very first and wickedest moonshiner is named Jesus Christ."

The cartoon, above described, is a reprint of the cover of the periodical above described. There are available many others of similar trend and tenor. When it first fell under our gaze we were horrified and gasped from the hurt within. The characters are drawn so disgustingly nasty that the whole scene is sickening to a decent intellect. Whether the magazine from which the above described cover is taken is freely circulated among the Reds in America we do not know.

Of late, the daily press has contained ample news concerning the rioting of Reds and the Communists. That the Communist Party plans and hopes to overpower the Christian world is not denied. In fact it is a boast of the Communists. Every opportunity is seized upon to belittle and attack American and Christian institutions.

Even Santa Claus because of his association with the birth of Christ is made the object of ridicule when Christmas comes. The New York Times of December 26th, 1930, describing such a demonstration staged by Communist school children in New York City, states: "1500 in Anti-Religious Circus." * * * "Kid Science" attacks Bible. * * * God "and his harem of angels" were presented dancing around a tree. * * * When it was over the operators said it had been a success, that New York had done its bit in the general campaign to "expose the religious bunk of the bosses."

However, the spirit of Christianity is such that its adherents are unbeatable. Man will fight longer and harder for his religious belief than for any other cause. Well does the Communist Party know that by force of arms it can never overcome the Christian world. Therefore, its preliminary task is to undermine the Christian's beliefs and shake his confidence in the scriptures. Knowing that ridicule is a keen weapon, the Communists are using it as the opening wedge to weaken the confidence of Christians in their religion. Disrespect for Christ and His teachings will do more to undermine Christian conviction than anything else, and do it more quickly. Thus Communists seek first to destroy the faith of American youth in his belief in Christ.

The most patriotic duty a citizen may endeavor now is to root deep the faith of American youth in Christianity. At all costs this Red propaganda must be destroyed. The Constitution of the United States guarantees religious freedom to all; thus, legally, Atheism may be taught as may any form of religion not contrary to the laws of the land. Our youth must be freely fed with Christianity, the antidote for Atheism.

That the Communist Party is sowing seeds of sedition and rebellion against orderly government in the consciousness of its adherents, young and old, is evidenced in their most recent publications. Among answers to a question which the International Bureau of Revolutionary Writers propounded to western Europe and American writers as to what position they would take if the imperialistic powers declared war against the Soviet Union, John Harfield, a revolutionary painter, answered:

"I am a member of the German Communist Party. This defines my attitude toward the coming war between the imperialistic powers and the Soviet union. The transformation of imperialistic war into civil war and the extermination of the bourgeoisie as a class throughout the world, are the only means of saving mankind from a relapse into the complete savagery threatening them."

The Atheist Communist is not passively waiting for the expected and hoped for war against capital, but is offensively carrying it to our very door. Every opportunity is seized. The failure of the Bank of U. S. was a signal for further aggressiveness. Thus we read again in the New York Times of Thursday, December 26th, 1930:

"The Chelsea Bank & Trust Company * * * had succeeded in tracing to Communist sources a run of 1,000 depositors on another bank * * * which was stopped only by the energetic intervention of * * * The State Superintendent of Banks. The run * * * began two hours after information had reached Mr. Broderick (State Superintendent of Banks) that Communists by word of mouth and by canvass from store to store had succeeded in arousing depositors to the idea that the bank in question was insolvent."

The United States as a Nation, its Republican form of government, in like manner is being attacked. The Constitution of the Soviet government is international, that is to say, it divides the world into two classes, the Communist and non-Communist, and seeks to bring under Communist control the rest of the world. In the words of Hon. Martin W. Littleton, speaking at Carnegie Hall, January 9th, 1931:

"In politics we hear statesmen demanding that we recognize Soviet Russia because, they say, it is none of our concern what sort of a government she has if it is stable, overlooking the fact that Soviet Russia refuses to recognize us, with our stable government, but is openly working to overthrow it. If we were to say to Soviet Russia, 'We recognize you and will let you alone,' Soviet Russia is not willing to say to us, 'We, in turn, will recognize you and let you alone.' They demand that we recognize the Soviet Republic and let them alone, in order that they may recognize us and then overthrow us in our own homes."

Also the Federal Court, speaking through Judge Knox, in the case of Martin Abern vs. Wallace (258 Fed.), passing upon the manifesto and program of the Communist Party of America, said:

"I am of the opinion that the manifesto and program of the Communist Party, together with other exhibits in the case, are of such character as to easily lead a reasonable man to conclude that the purpose of the Communist Party is to accomplish its end, namely, the capture and destruction of the State, as now constituted, by force and violence. * * * If those who support the Communist Party in its present declaration of principles hope for success—and I must assume that they have such hope—I can not do otherwise than conclude that they must contemplate the employment of force and violence."

Furthermore, in the case of Englebert Pries, Secretary of Labor under President Wilson in 1920, reviewing his case, declared:

"From these quotations and numerous other statements in the manifesto, not here quoted, it is apparent that the Communist Party of America is not merely a political party seeking the control of affairs of State, but a revolutionary party seeking to conquer and destroy the State in open combat. And the only conclusion is that the Communist Party of America is an organization that believes in, teaches and advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States."

Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., in his address at Carnegie Hall, January 9th, 1931, referring to the investigation carried on by his Committee, stated that the Congressional Committee found in Dutchess County several Communist Camps, composed of about from twelve to fifteen thousand young men and women, who were being taught to hate the flag, to hate the country, to hate the government and to hate every form of established law, order and society in the United States. Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice-president of Georgetown university, speaking at the same meeting, said:

"Soviet authorities while maintaining a pretense of peace with the United States and instructing its agents and friends in this country to agitate unceasingly for diplomatic relations are sponsoring in Moscow a school where American citizens at this moment are being trained in methods for overthrowing the Government of the United States. These future trouble makers are honored guests of the Soviet Government. While undergoing training in the Lenin Institute, they are paid thirty-five dollars a month with additional perquisites of free board, free lodging, medical attention and travel expenses."

Matthew Woll, Vice-President, American Federation of Labor, speaking also at Carnebie Hall, January 9, 1931, said:

"It is a well known fact that Soviet Russia is aiming at world revolution. She is conspiring to undermine the governments of the world by spread of the doctrine of Communism, atheism, economic destruction and violent revolution."

Christian America dares not ignore these warnings of impending attack upon our flag, our Constitution and our principles of religious freedom.

The Atheist is at his Bench and he has thrown down the gauntlet in defiance of our Christian institutions. The Atheists' strongest and greatest ally is the seeming indifference of Christian people. Christian America must take stock and there must be a decided rally around the family altar, the Sunday School and the Church.—The Civic Bulletin.

A FRIEND IN NEED AND INDEED

Our God's promise to His children is that He will be with them always. There is never a need that He will not fill for us when we trust Him. There is never a need that we have that He does not understand. We will never be deceived when we come to Him for aid. He is true from the beginning, and will ever be true, for He is truth. He never forsakes us. There are times in the Christian life when we are allowed to experience a loneliness unspeakable.

As far as earthly friends or helpers are concerned, we have none to stand by us and aid us in the time of need. But there is One in Heaven who is with us though we feel alone. He said He would be with us always, and He means what He says. There is never a trial that we pass through that we are alone. Though we often feel that there is none to stand by us, yet He is near us, about us, to deliver, strengthen and lift our burdens.

He gives us the oil of joy for morning, and beauty for ashes; He gives the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. He gives us a song when we would sorrow. Just when we need Him most, He is with us to supply all our needs. He is an all-sufficient Saviour, able for all things to the glory of God. We would fall down beneath our burdens, for the flesh is weak, but in Him we are strong. When we lean upon the strong One we are able to stand, for He bears the burden for us. He shoulders our cares and responsibilities. He takes them upon Himself that we need not bear them. He lays upon us burdens that He knows we are not able to bear, so we will fall down at His feet in helplessness. This gives Him a chance to show to us and through us the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward. If we were able to bear our burdens He would receive no glory; we would boast of our own strength. How sad would be our lot if, when the heavy burdens came upon us, we would have to bear them alone, if such a thing were possible.

But we know we are not alone. We know we have One who is a Friend in need, and in the time of need He is a Friend indeed. He is on hand at the right time. Our weaknesses, failures and unloveliness do not drive Him away from us but rather draw us nearer to Him, for He is also our great High Priest, He sits at the throne of His Father interceding for us. He enjoys our coming for grace to help in time of need. It is not tiresome to Him to have us come to Him, but it is a joy to help us come to Him, but it is joy to help us and to show us His great love and grace. The fact is, we need Him all the time, but there are times when we realize our need more than other times. It is then, at this time of realization of need, that He almost seems to be standing even against the door of our heart to enter with comfort and aid. He is ever at hand. There is no coaxing to come to Him. His resources never give out. It seems the more we draw from them, the more they increase. I am glad I have learned to trust God in every way. He has never failed me, and my desire is to work more for Him.—Enoch S. Khan in Gospel Truth.

EVANGELISM

"Thy Kingdom Come"

Haw River

March 8.—The day was given to this charge, in visits with three churches. The first service was with Fair Grove, at 11 a. m. This church is passing through a deep sorrow, caused by the tragic death of Miss Myrtle Richardson in an unavoidable automobile accident. She was a beloved member of the church, and the daughter of Bro. and Sister Turner Richardson. We extend to them, and to all concerned in this sorrow, our tenderest sympathy and the assurance of our prayers. May the God of all comfort make grace abound for this need.

The Sunday School at this church has just been reorganized, and resumed, after a lapse of a few months. The enrollment is not large, but gratifying; and the interest appears good. Brother William Fogleman is the superintendent. He has been a faithful member of the church for many years. The pastor and others expressed appreciation of the general increase of interest at this place. This is one of our century-old churches. Plans are now in the making for the celebration of this event some time during the summer.

At 3 o'clock, we had an appointment at Midway. This church is located in a prosperous farming community, and is one of the strongest churches on the charge. It, too, has a long history of invaluable usefulness, being about 75 years old. This is the home church of one of our honored ministers, Dr. A. G. Dixon. We wrote last year of the attractive and commodious new church just erected here. It makes a pleasing appearance on this holy ground, and the people are enjoying it.

The night appointment was at Brown Summit. Here we departed from our usual custom of preaching on our visits with the various churches, and talked conference programs. We trust that the emphasis thus given to these matters may be fruitful of good results. Perhaps the conference executive should take more time to deal with these programs, as he goes in and out among the churches. Ours is the only church in this immediate community, and has, therefore, both the opportunity and the responsibility of ministering to all the people. The C. E. Society was closing its program just as we arrived for the 7 o'clock service. There is also a mid-week prayer service held in this church.

We were pleased with the services of the day, and hope to be able to visit the other churches of the charge at another time. Pastor Trollinger was urging subscriptions to the HERALD at each appointment. The subscription allotment to the charge is 48; more than half of the number has been secured. The charge has 20 honor roll recognitions for last year, every church being on some honor roll, and one—Friendship—has eight places. This speaks well for the work. The one need of the charge at this time seems to be the organization of the women. There is no Auxiliary on the charge, and yet many women who are capable and interested in their church. The pastor will give this attention, and he hopes to effect a circuit Auxiliary in the near future. We were sorry to learn that Brother Trollinger has had sickness in his immediate family, and serious illness among his close relatives. He will have our prayers. We found a pleasing spirit existing between pastor and people, and the work in general seems promising. Mrs. Taylor enjoyed the day with me. This charge is home to her. She is always glad to go back and renew old friendships. We are indebted to Brother Trollinger and his people for their thoughtfulness of our comfort during the day.

Dr. Haddaway Appeals

"Please urge your pastors, churches, and Sunday Schools to prepare for a great Easter, and do so by ordering the Easter supplies at once."

We continue to urge. APRIL FIFTH is the date. Not too late yet to get the program and prepare for the observance of this day. All that is needed is to send a card to Dr. Haddaway, and the supplies will come at once. All together now in one happy, united purpose for a great Easter.

College Maintenance

We trust that every charge is pushing this matter, and that good results are being obtained. We are now in the remaining month set for raising this fund. The plan is to raise as much cash as possible now, and get any deficit covered by pledges to be paid later during the year. We urge that charges do not hold back any money that may be in hand for this purpose until more can be raised. Send in at once all that is available, and more, as it is paid in. And let us call attention again to this: Take credit on college maintenance allotments for payments on college pledges. We trust that every church will push this matter to a successful and happy conclusion during the remainder of the time that is set for this purpose.

Children's Home

Superintendent Dixon is appealing for a more generous support of this institution. The offerings from Sunday Schools and churches fell short last year nearly $4,000. The Home, like all other church causes, is feeling the pinch of economic depression. But it must be maintained, and will be. Our people have never failed to support the Home. They will not fail now. But what is needed is more regular support on the part of more churches and Sunday Schools. We urge pastors and superintendents of every church in the conference to take this matter up with the people, and insist that they adopt the rule of monthly giving to the Home. Many churches do this through their Sunday Schools; others do it at a regular preaching service. If this were universal, the Home would have worthwhile increase in receipts, and the churches that give it would not miss it. On the other hand, they would get the reflex blessing that comes from sharing in a worthy and necessary work. Pastors and superintendents, if your Sunday Schools are not already giving to the Home, please urge them to do it, and urge again, if necessary, until they do give.

Produce Day

A large part of our people are rural. They are not on pay rolls, and do not get their money weekly or monthly. But they have the equivalent of money in the produce of their farms, poultry yards, and dairies. Why not, then, have on our rural charges, "Produce Day" for the church? This is the idea: The people will assemble their marketable produce at some place agreed upon and it will be carried from there to market and sold. Each person will be credited on church dues with the market price of what they put in the sale. This is sufficient to indicate what "Produce Day" means. There are other details, of course, that will have to be worked out where the plan is tried. We pass the idea on for whatever it may be worth.

The Prayer League

Nearly 100 persons are enrolled in our prayer league. Of course, we expect that this will be many times multiplied. If you have it in your heart to join in this purpose, we shall be glad to have your name direct, or through your pastor. This is to be purely a voluntary matter, and we are not, therefore, resorting to any pressure methods. But if you have it in your heart, please send on your name. The purpose of this league is united and persisting prayer for the blessings of God upon our conference this year. "Prayer changes things." If the conference could be set to praying, many of our problems would be solved.

Central Pastor's Federation

This will be held at First church, High Point, next Tuesday, March 17. Dr. J. H. Straughn will address the meeting, and it is greatly desired that all ministers possible be present, both of the Central Federation and those of the two other Federations. It is desired also that laymen attend. Pastors are asked to invite their laymen, and to urge their presence. In addition to the address of Dr. Straughn there will be other interesting and helpful phases of the program. We anticipate a good meeting and are anxious for a large attendance. The hour of meeting is 10 a. m. Dinner will be served at the church.

TWO WAYS OF SINNING

Most of us know that it is a sin to do something wrong. We know when Satan tempts us to do something that does not seem right for us to do. And if we do that thing we feel terribly bad and ashamed about it. We are sorry, then, that we did it.

But there is something else that is a sin, which many people do not think is a sin. That is to fail to do that which is right. When we sin this kind of a sin, we can say that we did not do anything wrong. In one sense this is true, but in another sense it is not true, for we have done wrong in not doing right.

The Word of God says, "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin" (James 4:17). Do we not find that there were times when we could have done something to make others happy, and we did not do it? We just did not feel like it. Perhaps it was something that we knew the Lord had asked us to do, but we thought we would put it off till some other time. Then when another time came we still did not do it. At last we thought it was too late now, or it was of no use to do it any more, and we did not do it at all. This was just as much a sin in the Lord's eyes, as if we had done something wrong.

You see, if Satan cannot get us to do wrong in one way, he will try another. The best way for us to do is to let the Word of God tell us what to do, and we will try another. The best way for us to do is to let the Word of God tell us what to do, and we will always be safe. This is the Lord Himself speaking to us, as well as when He speaks to us in our hearts by His Holy Spirit.—Selected.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER WEEK

May 10-17, 1931

Mother and daughter events have been effectively used in a large number of churches, church schools, and Y. W. C. A.'s throughout the continent for a number of years. These events usually include a mother and daughter banquet, which is a happy, hilarious, and character-building affair; sometimes a worship service for the church or the church school is held; and often a mother and daughter class or club party or social takes place.

Mother and daughter week comes each year during the week following Mother's Day and is frequently linked up with the observance of this special day.

Leaders of youth and young people themselves should make this emphasis a vital part of their program this coming spring. It is not too early to make plans. Materials will be available and can be secured from the state or provincial councils of Religious Education, the Denominational Board of Religious Education, or the International Council of Religious Education, 203 North Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill. These materials will include:

General Descriptive Folder, including banquet suggestions, each 2c; per 100, $1.50.

Mother's Day Mother and Daughter Worship Program, each 1c; per 100, 75c.

Mother and Daughter Song Sheet for Banquets, etc., each 1c; per 100, 75c.

After Mother and Daughter Week—What?, each 1 1-2c; per 100, $1.25.

Sample set, 10c.

Cash must accompany all orders. All prices postpaid.

Orders may be had either from the Department of Religious Education, Seminary building, Westminster, Md., or the International Council of Religious Education, 203 North Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill.

HARRIET'S TURKEYS

"Oh, Harriet!" exclaimed Lora, entering the farm kitchen where her younger sister was putting away the noon dishes. "Father has sent word for me to drive over with some gasoline to the Bannock's farm where they are threshing. It will take at least two hours, and I intended to spend the whole afternoon finishing my new dress to wear to Dora's party. Won't you go for me, please?"

"It is too bad," replied Harriet. "I would go in a minute but there are my turkeys. I am keeping them close at home now for fear something will happen to them. The buyer comes for them at any time now."

"I will take care of them, Harriet. I can do that and sew, too. Please go, like a dear," pleaded Lora. "You know how terribly disappointed I will be if I don't have the dress to wear tonight."

"Well," assented Harriet reluctantly, "the turkeys are in the rye stubble. Don't let them wander in the woods—they will sure get lost if you do."

After Harriet drove away, Lora took her sewing into the sun porch where she could look out and watch the turkeys who were quietly feeding in plain sight from the window. At first she watched them closely, but as the dress came nearer and nearer to completion and there was still a great deal to be done, she became so absorbed in her work that it was not until she heard the clock strike four that she thought of the turkeys again.

"Where has the afternoon gone?" she cried. "I must feed the turkeys. Dear me, it is almost dark already." She ran out to the rye field and searched and called, but not a sight or sound from the turkeys. "I wonder if they have gone into the woods?" she thought in consternation.

"It is no use," she sighed at last, "they must have wandered into the woods and roosted in the trees. I will help Harriet look them up in the morning if they do not appear."

With this good resolution, Lora hurried away to dress and drove away with her friends just as Harriet, tired from her long ride, came into the yard.

It was the middle of the next afternoon when Lora, who had unexpectedly decided to spend the night with her chum, Dora, came home eager to tell the family of the delightful time she had enjoyed.

"I will make up to Harriet for leaving her so much to do," she thought as she hurried into the house. "I hope she found the turkeys all right, and that the dealer came for them. Harriet is so anxious to get the money for a radio for mother. I suppose the minute he pays her she will be off to town to get it."

But no busy Harriet could Lora find in the kitchen as she entered, nor was she upstairs in the room which they shared together. Running down to the living room, her mother, just recovering from a severe illness, smiled at her a little anxiously from the couch.

"Harriet is out hunting for her turkeys," she said. "She could not find them anywhere about the house or lot." Lora, conscience-stricken, started on a search for Harriet, fear and remorse urging her on. "Harriet must have gone into the woods," she thought as she crossed the open fields and plunged into the deep woods that bordered them.

She plunged here and there, tripping every now and then over dead branches. It was dark and more than once she was glad she had brought her flashlight as she stumbled around calling Harriet over and over again.

She was far in the woods when she heard a faint answer to her call.

"That's Harriet," rejoiced Lora as she called again and stumbled toward the answer.

In a few minutes Harriet, disheveled, red-eyed and blue with cold and hunger, came in sight.

Lora hastened to her. "Oh, Harriet, I am so sorry!" she cried. "It was all my fault. You trusted me to look after them and then I didn't." She made Harriet sit down on a fallen log while she hurriedly poured out some hot coffee and forced it between her chattering teeth. She opened the package of sandwiches and Harriet, a little strengthened by the hot coffee, managed to eat several of them and then, by leaning more or less on Lora, managed to make her way out of the forest, through the fields home, only to collapse in the friendly shelter of their room.

Lora never forgot the days that followed when Harriet, suffering and delirious, fought for her life, nor the weeks after when her mother, too, had given way under the strain, and another life hung in the balance.

It was six weeks later when two pale, thin invalids came slowly down the stairs to the living room, where the first thing they saw was a beautiful new radio standing in the bay window.

"It's ours," explained Lora in answer to their look of surprise. "And you don't need to worry about nurse and doctors' bills, either. I paid them all from the money Aunt Sylvia left me that I was saving for a trip to Europe."

"And, Harriet, next spring I shall see you have more turkeys to take the place of those I lost. I'll help you raise them, too, and next time I won't forget, for I have learned my lesson once and for all."—Emma Florence Bush in Junior Girl.

SYLVIA MAKES A DISCOVERY

"I'm going home, Mary. Aren't you?" Sylvia Gray walked to the door of the little club's room and looked back at her chum.

"Not quite yet," replied Mary. "There are all these dishes to do, and the food must be put away and"—

"Well, why can't the other girls do it?" interrupted Sylvia impatiently. "You and I planned the supper and did the biggest share of the work in getting it ready. Let the others do the cleaning up."

"The others helped a good deal, too," reminded Mary. "Anyway, I won't want to leave until everything is completely finished."

"I'm going," said Sylvia. "I think I've done my share, and there isn't any use in letting other people think they can shirk their share. You're foolish, Mary." And the door closed behind her with a bang.

Eileen Hunter had entered as Sylvia made her last speech, and now she remarked: "Sometimes I wonder how you two girls can be chums. You're so different! Sylvia always seems afraid that she is going to be asked to do more than her share, and you are just the opposite."

"Oh, no, I'm not," said Mary flushing. "I do wish, though, that Sylvia weren't quite so afraid some one was going to impose on her. She's such a dear girl in other ways! We all like her."

"Yes, she is," agreed Eileen. "She's clever and efficient, too. Our Nominating Committee was thinking of asking her to be club president for the coming year. But it would never do to have a president who was always afraid she'd do too much. We've decided, Mary, to ask you if you would take that job."

"I?" gasped Mary. "Why, do you think I could? I don't see what I've done to deserve it!"

"Nothing much!" laughed Eileen. "Only plunged right in and worked from start to finish on whatever we have had to do, so willingly and enthusiastically that you've inspired most of us to follow your example!"

As Mary walked home, she was surprised to find a very flushed and embarrassed Sylvia waiting for her at the corner. "I heard you and Eileen talking," Sylvia began at once. "I waited at the door a minute, hoping you'd come, and when I heard my name mentioned, I couldn't seem to move. They say listeners never hear anything good of themselves, but I'm glad, anyway, that I overheard you. I've always thought people had to look out for their rights, and be careful not to do more than their share, and all that. But I've come to the conclusion that it's much better to do more than your share than to slide out of things as I've been doing. I'm so glad, Mary, that you are to be president. You certainly deserve it."

"And you are going to be my right-hand man," said Mary, "for you are clever and efficient, as Eileen said, and have ever so many other good qualities besides."—Alice Saunders, in Queen's Gardens.

ENDURANCE

"He that endureth to the end shall be saved." Seven times in the second and third chapters of the book of Revelation, God gives special promise "to him that overcometh." "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good"; "endure hardness as a good soldier"; and "think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you." From these quotations we see that endurance is one of the basic principles of the Christian life. But what are we to endure? The answer is simple—the trials and tests which befall us continually. There is nothing strange in trials; they are part of God's plan for us. God wants the very best for Himself and His glory, and He is seeking to develop those enduring qualities in us that will enable us to triumph in every circumstance and situation here, and enable us to outshine the very angels in glory.

The mystery in the operation of God's plan is greatly diminished when we rid ourselves of the fog of our own unwillingness to understand His way. God's ways are not our ways, and we make them hard to understand because we generally want our own way. But God finds a way to train us if our hearts are sincere toward Him. Presently we find ourselves in what to us is a very tight corner. A network of circumstances from which we can effect no escape enmeshes our lives. We pray and cry for deliverance but the heavens seem brass. Perhaps the situation we are in means to live and work among those who are continually misjudging us, saying hard things about us, and in many other ways are making life hard and miserable. Vainly beating against the barriers we are wont to give way to a spirit of fault-finding and questioning. We criticise those about us; we retaliate against their conduct towards us; we forget to forgive and pray for them; we find fault with the way in which God has placed us; and if we are not careful, we begin to slip. But God!

There is nothing like every-day, workaday trials to expose us to ourselves and let us see just what we really are—then how mean we do feel over the picture. Of course when we make the discovery we promptly seek to lay all blame for the condition at some other door. If we could only see that this very exposure is but the revelation of the secret, hidden, oft unconscious faults of our own lives, then the buffeting of hardships would become blessing, and would work a miracle for us. "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." We all love to dream of great victories, triumphs, and achievements; but after all, if we would win, we will have to endure our little afflictions, take each little fox, carefully weed between rows and endure to the end in all things. Discovery, acceptance, endurance, triumph—"He that endureth to the end shall be saved."—The Pent. Ev.

FUSSING

A dear old lady from the country went for the first time on a railway journey of about fifty miles through an interesting, beautiful region. She had looked forward to this trip with great pleasure.

She was to see so much, but it took her so long to get her baskets and parcels right, to get her skirt adjusted, her seat comfortably arranged, the shades and shutters right, the anxious questions about all the things she had left behind answered, that she was just settling down to enjoy the trip when they called out the name of her station and she had to get up and hustle out.

"Oh, my!" she said, "if I had only known that we would have been there so soon I wouldn't have wasted my time in fussing."

Dear friend, the wheel of time is flying; the last station is at hand; these things are so trifling. Get your mind on the main business of life; live as you would wish to have lived when we hear the call of the last station, and don't waste any more time "fussing."—The Presbyterian.

MARCH 22: IMPORTANT IDEAS IN JOHN 3:16

Scripture Text: John 3:1-21

Daily Bible Readings

Monday: God. John 4:24.

Tuesday: Loved. 1 John 3:8-11.

Wednesday: Whosoever. Romans 10:15.

Thursday: Believe. John 5:24.

Friday: Perish. 1 Cor. 1:18.

Saturday: Everlasting Life. John 6:27.

For the Leader

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Let us read this verse, believe it, practice it, experience it, sing it, and tell it everywhere we go, not only by our tongues but by our deeds and actions. Many of us cannot preach sermons and write books but we can all live lives and after all that influences the world more than anything else.

The love of God should be called "the equator of love," for it has encircled the world many times and is still on its rapid journey. God's love for us is more wonderful than anything that we can think of. We think of the love of husband and wife for each other, the love of other members of the family for one another, but the love commended in John 3:16 is stronger than any of these. It reaches out to those not related to us; yes to those that might be called our enemies. We naturally love the lovely. But this divine love we are thinking about does not stop there. It is the lost sheep and coin, the straying boy, the sin smirched and ruined that needs love most.

To Be Discussed

1. What is Love?
2. How does the Divine love differ from what we usually regard as love?
3. What God offers; what the world offers.
4. Wherein and in what ways is the love of God shown in the gospel abound?

Suitable Songs

"Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Love Lifted Me," "I Love Him Because He First Loved Me," "More Love to Thee," and "My Jesus, I Love Thee."

Poetry

I see the wrong that round me lies,
I feel the guilt within;
I hear, with groan and travail cries,
The world confess its sin.

Yet in the maddening maze of things,
And tossed by storm and flood,
To one fixed trust my spirit clings—
I know that God is good.

And if my heart and flesh are weak
To bear an untried pain,
The bruised reed He will not break,
But strengthen and sustain.

No offering of my own I have,
Nor works my faith to prove;
I can but give the gifts He gave,
And plead His love for love.
—Whittier.

The Old People's Home at West LaFayette, Ohio, is located on a beautiful highway on an elevation overlooking the valley of the Tuscarawas river. The Home is a modern building of 20 rooms. There are 12 single rooms and two double rooms for the inmates.

Both men and women are received, the admittance fee being $500. The Home is owned by the M. P. Conference and is governed by a board of trustees and is supported by different conferences and by donations. The inmates care for their own rooms, and do their own ironing when able. They read and sew. Different M. P. churches, the Y. W. C. A. and Missionary Societies hold services and serve refreshments. These services are very much enjoyed by the inmates of the Home. Any contribution you make for these dear old people will be highly appreciated.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE NEWS

EXPLANATION

This is the first of a series of articles about the different activities of High Point college, and cuts of individuals or scenes about the college, which will appear weekly on the High Point college page of the Herald. These articles are prepared by the students, and will set forth the different activities of the institution, with which the Methodist Protestants over the state, I find, are not very well informed. Wonderful records have been made by the college, in its brief history, and the membership of the church should be informed as to these facts. Read this page every week.

N. M. HARRISON,
Promotional Secretary.

Clyde Pugh and Ralph Mulligan who are due most of the credit for the introduction and development of track at High Point college and among the smaller colleges of the state.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE LEADS IN TRACK AND TENNIS

Two spring sports that are rapidly gaining in favor among the colleges of the North State conference owe their origin in the form of meets, where all the schools get together to determine the champion, to High Point college.

Track history at the college is largely built around Ralph Mulligan and Clyde Pugh. Ralph was the dynamo that went around convincing all and sundry others that the college should have a track team. Clyde was the business manager and like Morris of American history fame succeeded in raising money where none was thought to exist.

The two together first started working on a high school girls' track meet. For three successive years, girls' track meets were held on the college field. The silver loving cup offered as a prize was won by High Point high school.

From this branch Mulligan and Pugh turned to bigger fields and undertook to put on a meet in what was then known as the "Little Six." The two went into the proposition unaided either by finance or material cooperation from any of the other schools. The first annual "Little Six" track championship was judged an overwhelming success. Incidentally it is not amiss to state that Ralph Mulligan was the individual star of the meet. He established records in the dashes and broad jump that should stand untouched for a long time.

The history of the track team at the college is one of a humble beginning but it has worked up to the point where the High Point college team will enter the meet this year as defending champions. Last year the team won without much struggle, scoring more than twice the number of points of the nearest competitor.

Tennis is a sport that is gaining in favor in a mighty way. A brief history of this sport should prove interesting. When the college was first organized two courts were laid off back of the women's dormitory. Those most interested in the sport in those days were Professors Yarborough and Allred and Charlie Brooks. These three managed to play quite frequently together and thus kept the courts in at least playable shape.

Charlie retired from school for a year and Professor Allred got married and as a result there was a short lull. Frank Walter entered school that year and in the spring when the students noticed Yarborough and Walter going over there regularly, decided that there must be something in the game for anybody to spend as much time with it as they did. Interest became a little more general.

Next year those who had played a little came back for more and brought along with them a number of students that wanted to know what it was all about. In the spring a tournament was held and 32 boys and 16 girls entered. Tennis had grown since the days when the two profs. and Brooks used to bat them around over there.

The year of 1930 brought a still more enthusiastic response. The leaders were getting ambitious to take on other "Little Six" schools. A team was formed and games were scheduled with several other colleges. Frank Walters arranged for an elimination tournament over at the Greensboro stadium. Every member of the "Little Six" responded by sending a team.

This year the college is laying out two new courts because of the interest shown in this sport. Every indication points to a continual growth in tennis.

The college is taking over both sports this year which attests to the popularity to which they have risen. Thus two sports that were sponsored by students, initiative alone rose to such a point that the college now backs them both.

Walters and Yarborough were to tennis what Mulligan and Pugh were to track. Walters furnished the ideas and Professor helped put them through. Walters promoted the first tournament at the college and also the first team to represent it. The faculty member was the chief promulgator of new tennis courts. Through his influence the athletic council voted an appropriation for two new courts. The college Y. M. C. A. and Clay Madison aided materially in the construction of these courts.

These two sports have come to stay. At the start both were weak but each year has seen them add to their strength and it may be only a question of time till they will rival football and basketball in importance.

The newly formed North State conference, composed of former members of the "Little Six" and the addition of Appalachian, has now taken over the responsibility for continuing these annual track and tennis tournaments so nobly started by students of High Point college.

PLEASANT GROVE LADIES' AID

The society for February met in the home of Mrs. J. C. Newby and Mrs. Percy Smith in High Point.

Eighteen members were present and collection amounted to $22.17.

We were glad to have with us the Spring Hill Ladies' Aid as visitors, also Mrs. Vina Cecil.

The society was glad to have Mrs. Maynard Kennedy as a new member.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Newby and Mrs. Smith.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Lebanon, Spring Church Charge.—We are having better attendance at Sunday school than we have had for some time. The people like the change of appointments. We have all of our services in the morning instead of the p. m. Brother Lowdermilk always gives us a good sermon. Our people are enjoying his visits, he is trying to get in every home. The Sunday school is planning to have an Easter program.

The contract has been let to have the parsonage repaired, and work is to begin this week.

Mr. Grady Ingram died last Sunday morning at his home near Roanoke Rapids; his funeral was conducted by Brother Lowdermilk at Lebanon where his body was laid to rest, by the members of his society. The floral offerings and the large crowd that attended in spite of the snow, spoke of his many friends.

His wife and two small children have the sympathy of the church.

Albemarle Tidings.—Judging from reports the Charlotte and Winston churches are meeting with desired results from the contest which is being conducted. Comments from other pastors indicate that the reports are making interesting reading among a number of our people over the state. Such contests are helpful if properly conducted and if conditions are such that they can be made fair. The size of the churches, the environments and various other conditions should enter into such a contest. The two churches mentioned seem to have these various conditions to make the contest very fair and interesting. Albemarle is in no contest with any other church, but it has challenged itself for a contest. Records are being kept and reports are to be made and compared. The February report showed that there had been made 755 points in Sunday school and 88 per cent perfect attendance. The morning church services made 435 points and 60 per cent attendance. The evening church services scored 327 points with a 53 per cent average. The total of both morning and evening services made 822 points with an average of 56 per cent. It was interesting to note that at the February communion there was 72 communicants, the same number as at the January communion.

Those who attended the conference in November will doubtless recall that our lawn had just been sown in grass but that the grass had scarcely made its appearance. It is now a thing of beauty. The grass has made such growth that it is necessary to mow it today, March 6. This is about as early as lawns are ever mowed in this country.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Allegheny, Davidson Charge.—Second Sunday in March our pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham preached us another splendid sermon, which I think all enjoyed. The pastor, wife and children were there for Sunday school. Mr. Bingham gave an explanation on the lesson which helped out. We are always glad to have them with us for Sunday school.

We have learned to like our new pastor and family fine. We hope that more will come out to hear him; it will do him good and you too if you will heed his preaching.

There is some sickness around here. Let us all look on the bright side and do the best that we can to help others.

Preaching again the fourth Sunday in this month. Pray for all.

ABIGAIL COGGIN.

Roberta Station.—Our Sunday school fell short March 8, on account of the bad weather. Our pastor, Rev. C. H. Hill, delivered another fine sermon Sunday morning. We enjoy hearing him more and more each Sunday.

Members of the Sunday school are at work preparing a pageant which will be given Easter Sunday night.

Mrs. Julia Ann Garmon was laid to rest in Roberta Methodist church cemetery Sunday March 1, following funeral services at the church by Rev. G. F. Millaway of the Concord church, assisted by Rev. C. H. Hill.

Mrs. Emma Dulin, well known and beloved woman of Roberta community, died February 23 in a Charlotte hospital. She was a member of the Roberta Baptist church, but was loved by all who knew her. Last rites for Mrs. Dulin were conducted in Roberta Baptist church by Rev. Mr. Heilig, the pastor, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hill and Rev. Robert Short of Denton. She was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

MISS ELMA MILLER, Reporter.

Shoals, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Sunday school is doing very well considering the attendance. There are several of our members sick, but there are lots of folks in our community that do not go to church at all, and if every member would try to get at least one more member we would have lots better Sunday school.

Miss Maggie Brown, a former member of our church and Sunday school, has moved back to our community after living away for several years. We gladly welcome her back and hope she will feel free to come back and take part in our church worship. She has been missed very much in the church since she has been away.

Mrs. R. E. Barker has been very sick, but we are very glad to report that she is well enough to come back to church again.

We have lately experienced two very sad occasions, they being the death of two of our little ones. One Miss Ida Mae Edwards, nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Edwards who died Saturday, February 14, 1931, and the other Miss Edna Harvey, ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Harvey, who died Saturday, February 21, 1931. Our hearts are made sad to think of these two bright little girls whose lives were taken just when it seemed sweetest to them, but we know that God knows best, and we hope that the families will still look to Him for support in the bereavement.

REPORTER.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—The March weather and roads were rough here yesterday, but a good congregation attended both services. At the closing of the morning hour the Lord's Supper was administered in a very beautiful way.

The young people met at the home of Mr.

and Mrs. Glenn McClimon Saturday evening, and enjoyed a supper furnished by the girls as they were the losing side in a Sunday school contest. The pastor and family were present.

The Fairview church on this charge has challenged this church for the largest Sunday school attendance ending the last of July, or two weeks before our revival meeting begins. We are going to do our best, but if we fail we will then do our best to give them a day of real enjoyment.

Second quarterly conference to be held at this church the 21st of March at 2:30 o'clock.

MRS. JEWELL HARRISON, Reporter.

Oak Grove, Forsyth.—Our Sunday school seems to be getting along very nicely. The attendance is increasing but slowly, due to bad weather and sickness. We are expecting to see our Sunday school pick up in the future.

Rev. L. W. Gerringer was with us Sunday and preached a great and inspiring sermon.

We were glad to have with us visitors from the nearby churches and some of our old members from Winston-Salem.

Mrs. A. J. Long is recovering from a spell of illness.

We regret the loss of three of our members, Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and daughter, Miss Permelia Smith, who have moved their membership by letter to the Methodist Episcopal church of Rural Hall which is right near their home. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been members of Oak Grove church for about thirty-two years.

MRS. R. M. WARREN, Reporter.

Baltimore, West Forsyth.—Our faithful pastor, Rev. C. B. Way, on March 1 delivered a very interesting sermon. This was a sermon that should improve the lives of all present. The attendance was very good considering the bad roads and sickness.

Our Sunday school closed December 14, due to rough weather and muddy roads, some thought best to close for a while. Hope they see fit to re-organize soon, and get the good work going again. We feel there is much work to be done, and with the co-operation of the church and Sunday school may we accomplish much. Our time, strength, and means are God's and should be given to His service.

Our church has been supplied with one hundred new song books. We feel sure they will help out very much. We all believe in spiritual singing.

We are sorry to report the illness of Miss Leona Lakey, one of our church members. We hope she will be restored to health.

Mr. Evan Doub who has been confined to his bed for some few days, is improving.

Mr. James North of Winston-Salem spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. North, and was with us in the service Sunday.

Miss Thelma Shore, who is teaching school, is spending a short vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Shore. Her school is closed on account of an epidemic of whooping cough and measles.

INEZ DOUB, Reporter.

Bethesda, North Davidson.—Brother Powell was with us Sunday morning and preached a very able sermon on "The Good Samaritan." At this service we took up our collection for young people's work, which amounted to $3.00.

Our Sunday school gives all second Sunday collections to the Children's Home. The collection for this month amounted to $4.70.

We have had Sunday school every Sunday this year, but have not been able to reach our goal of 200 members yet. We have had such rough weather, bad roads, and sickness, that many have not been able to come.

We hope that with the arrival of spring that we may have a full school. Two new rooms to our church have just been completed, which we were in great need of. The men's and women's classes occupy them. These are our two largest classes, having between 30 and 45 members each.

Our young people are planning to organize a Christian Endeavor society at an early date. We feel that this work is needed in our church, and are very anxious for them to organize.

Brother Powell accompanied our superintendent and wife, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Wagoner, to their home in Winston-Salem, Sunday, to be their guest for dinner. Brother Wagner lives quite a distance from church, still he is present every Sunday and almost the first to reach the church.

Since Christmas we have lost two of our little Sunday school members, Mary Helen McCrary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCrary, and Eugene Lanier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips Lanier.

Mrs. C. M. Yokely's class won the banner for the month of February, having made a perfect attendance record. We have a number of members in our school that hardly ever miss a Sunday. For the year 1930, we had 20 making a perfect attendance record. These received a nice pin at the close of the year.

Mr. Arlie Essick has returned from Morganton, much improved in health. We are glad to have him back with us.

Mr. I. L. Clodfelter is spending some time here at his old home; we are always glad for him to come home and worship with us.

MRS. E. A. CLODFELTER, Reporter.

Spring Church, Spring Church Charge.—

Brother Lowdermilk brought us another good message today, using these words as a text: "Have Faith In God." His next sermon will be on prayer. His sermons are so practical, just what we need. He is putting forth every effort to get the budget raised. At our last preaching service the offering went toward the A. C. B. Today our offering was thirty-one dollars. This will go to the H. P. college. At each preaching service an offering will be taken and will be placed on some part of the budget.

We have begun to practice on our Easter program. I believe it will be good. For we think we have some of the finest children and young people in the conference. We hope many will come and enjoy it, and that our offering will be the largest in the history of the church.

We are planning to celebrate our one-hundredth anniversary some time this summer (the date hasn't been set). All of our former pastors will be urged to come with their families.

While a few of our members have had flu, I believe they are well at this writing.

REPORTER.

Graham.—At the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning, March 1, we were much pleased to have Dr. G. I. Humphreys, president of High Point college, with us. Dr. Humphreys delivered a most interesting sermon which was greatly enjoyed by all those present. We hope to have him with us again soon.

During the week beginning March 1, special effort was made to get some of our old members back to Sunday school, and from the attendance Sunday we certainly feel our efforts were worthwhile. Three prizes were given, first prize, given the couple present having been married highest number of years, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Riley. Second prize given to the largest family present, Mr. Harvey Linens and family, and third prize being won by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cheek, the youngest married couple present.

RUTH RILEY, Reporter.

First Church, Winston.—Snow! Snow! Do you like to see it snow? Sunday morning it snowed some in Winston-Salem. There was quite a good attendance at both Sabbath school and church worship, but we still have an idea that somebody stayed home, afraid it would snow on them and wouldn't melt. If they could have heard the wonderful and inspiring message that was delivered by our pastor there wouldn't be any doubt but that the snow would have been forgotten.

"Family Day" was observed in our midst last Sunday. All of the members of each family were asked to sit together. Mr. Pritchard asked the 100 per cent families to stand before he started his sermon of the morning. By the 100 per cent he meant all the members present in the family that resided at home at the present time. Next he asked for those that had as many members present as possible. This is something that has not been enjoyed in Winston church before, I think. It was a success because quite a few families registered 100 per cent.

We were very much pleased to have been church number 1 to go over the top in our College campaign, we are glad for ourselves and for High Point college also. Our pastor knows how to do things. (And he does them in a big way.)

It's nearly Easter already, isn't it? Since Winston-Salem has so many Moravians within its limits one feels Easter before it comes. The Moravian bands begin their practice for the lovely Easter service that is held from year to year in the Moravian cemetery. We always think of Christmas as being a very sacred season of the year, wonder if Easter isn't quite as sacred and important to the welfare of mankind. If it were not that Christ rose again, no doubt Christmas would have been forgotten ages ago. The Birth and Resurrection, as we think of these two great events in sacred history, it should help us to be so inspired as to do what we know we should do and to help those about us to also do this.

PAULINE L. BRANSON, Reporter.

South Lexington.—Work is going along nicely. Our Sunday school is holding up well considering the sickness in our community.

On last Sunday evening we were delighted to have Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Moser of Burlington, who were visiting Rev. Mr. Isley and his mother, to worship with us.

Our preaching services are also being well attended. At our morning service the pastor preached a very forceful sermon and the large crowd seemed to enjoy it very much. In our evening service we were very much delighted to have the Sunshine quartet sing for us.

We are planning on starting our revival meeting the fourth Sunday in April and we are hoping that we may have a great meeting. Rev. Mr. Pegg, pastor of Flat Rock circuit, will be the pulpit help.

Our pastor and his mother moved during the past week to W. 8th Ave., which makes them closer to the church.

We have started on our Easter program, and we are hoping to have a good exercise for this occasion.

REPORTER.

Bethel, Mocksville Charge.—We are very enthusiastic over the building of our Sunday school rooms. We have decided on definite plans, and have already started work.

Several members of our Sunday school have been out with the flu. Bad weather has also lowered our attendance; however, with the coming of spring we feel sure that our number will be greatly increased.

RUBY MARTIN, Reporter.

Fountain Place.—Young people's day was celebrated at Fountain Place January 25, and February 1. The first service was held on the morning of January 25 and the other the following Sunday night. On the first of these two days our pastor made a splendid talk on the duty of the older people to the younger ones. Both services were well attended and the young people did their part well.

The Thank-Offering meeting was held March 1, at the evening hour. This too was an interesting and impressive service as Rev. Mr. Bethen gave an account of his experiences in Jerusalem. The offering was $12.87.

The workers council of our church meets after the evening service the third Sunday of each month. In the last meeting of the council plans to increase the attendance of members at the church services were discussed. One plan which is now in use is for some young person to record the attendance at each church service so the pastor may have a better chance to keep check on the missing ones.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Dewy Hargrove grieve with them in the recent loss of their infant son.

After three weeks of illness from influenza Mrs. Egbert Greeson is still confined to her bed.

Our special meeting begins the fifth Sunday of this month. Mr. T. J. Whitehead is to do the preaching and we are hoping for a real revival. Christian people, remember us in your prayers.

MRS. A. V. AMICK, Reporter.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman.—By the calendar only a few more days until spring begins. To some spring will only bring sad memories, but to many, many people, especially that vast number of unemployed, who have suffered from cold and hunger and sickness during the past winter, spring and summer will be greeted with profound thanksgiving.

We are moving onward at Mt. Lebanon, in the midst of, and in spite of the present depression. Perhaps times like these only bring us closer together.

Our pastor has ably filled his pulpit at all of his appointments.

The young people gave their program three weeks ago with a large crowd attending. All on the program rendered their part well.

Later we will announce our Easter sunrise prayer meeting. REPORTER.

Kisler's, Cleveland Charge.—The attendance in Sunday school is as good as common, considering sickness, bad weather, and extra bad country roads.

Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, came to us the first Sunday in March, and delivered a very helpful sermon. We are very proud of Brother Ridge and his family, and think he is doing a great work. I am sure if we all as member, would work as hard as our pastor, we would have a larger attendance, and a more heart-felt religion in all our churches.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers. REPORTER.

First Church, High Point.—On Sunday morning at the hour for worship, Rev. R. I. Farmer, spoke on "God's Middlemen," the text being, "There was a man sent from God, whose name was John." He said in part: "In the business world a middleman buys goods and distributes them to others, wholesale, or retail. John the Baptist was a middleman announcing the coming of Christ. Jesus said of him: 'Of all born of women, there is none greater than John the Baptist.' God's middleman in this world is a layman, man or woman. Every Christian is a middleman, and a man's place in the world is among people, and he must be a 'living epistle, known and read of all men.' I say to the laymen of this church, you are sent to the world to show your colors. You can't 'hold with the hare and run with the hounds.' God's middlemen must not be a mannikin, clump, mollycoddle, dwarf, pigmy, or an animal, but a man with a spirit. In a great convention of railroad men, a brakeman prayed, 'Oh, let us not be a disappointment to our ladies.' For if a normal, red-blooded boy is asked, 'Who is the greatest man in the world?' He will answer, 'My daddy.' The greatest difference among men is not from without but something from within. Earl K. Dean, when asked what was the greatest discovery he ever made, replied that it was when he found Christ. What we must do is to be loyal to the religion of Christ Jesus. During the American Revolution a North Carolinian was stationed on sentry duty near the ocean; a few hours later his captain asked him what he was doing in water nearly to his neck, when he replied that he was holding his post, regardless of the tide.

At the vesper service Sunday afternoon the men's chorus of the Dargen class sang very effectively, "The Church in the Wilderness," and a quartet composed of Messrs. E. B. Stinson, Norman Dement, J. H. Mourave, and Arnold J. Koorce sang "Day is Dying in the West." As the prelude, Supt. T. Wingate Andrews spoke in his interesting and effective manner of "Our City Schools." He showed that the aims of the church and school are the same, although pursued on different lines. The minister closed with a brief address on "Jesus and the Intellect."

A delightful meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on Monday afternoon with Mrs. C. C. Robbins. There was a splendid attendance of 55 members. After devotionals a well-rendered program led by Mrs. F. R. Auman was given, the theme being, "Speak unto the Children of Israel that they go forward." Mrs. S. S. Coe read an article on Home Missionary work by Dr. Haddaway, and Mrs. J. S. Pickett read one on Foreign Missionary work by Mrs. Marie Thompson. The business session was then held with Mrs. S. S. Coe in the chair. The treasurer, Mrs. J. S. Pickett, made a fine report; the work of the year is being closed up, and by March 31st our budget of $2,600 will have been raised in full, of which the sum of $1,200 will be paid to the building fund, $1,050 to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer, for New Century Service and N. C. Work, approximately $300 for silverware and equipment in the church kitchen, flowers, etc.

Plans for Branch Meeting, the date for which has been changed to April 16-17 on account of meeting of N. C. Federation of Women's Clubs at Greensboro on April 14-15, are being made, and delegates from the local Auxiliary will be the following: Mrs. P. S. Kennett and Mrs. John H. Walker by virtue of office as president and corresponding secretary, Mrs. P. E. Lindley and Mrs. Edward Suits; alternates, Mesdames Pickens, Douglas, Rankin, and Diffe. Mrs. J. G. Snipes and Mrs. E. L. Douglas are asked to obtain homes for the visitors, and Mrs. H. U. Oakes and Mrs. H. A. Moffitt are asked to serve as chairmen for the mid-day luncheons.

Friends of Rev. E. Lester Ballard will be interested to learn that he is a member of the Choral Arts Society in the School of Religious Education of Boston University, which took part in the presentation of "The Dream of Mary," an oratorio and mystery play on Wednesday, March 4th, at Central Congregational church in Boston, Mass. This society is directed by Prof. H. A. Augustine Smith, author of "Hymnal for American Youth." The pageant depicted 12 scenes from the life of Christ, and the cast included more than 100 singers and actors. This interesting presentation was attended by 700 persons from different parts of New England.

Kent Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas, received on Monday last his private pilot's license from Fred Lauter, inpector for the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce. Kent made the required tests and passed the written examination.

Dr. and Mrs. P. S. Kennett, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, and others, attended funeral services for Mr. John B. Ogburn. Loving sympathy is extended to Mrs. Ogburn and her daughter, Mrs. R. L. Blackburn, of this city, who is one of our much loved members. They have been doubly bereaved, the only son and brother, Richard Ogburn, having met a tragic death last October in his father's mill.

Dr. and Mrs. G. I. Humphreys and two younger children are in Wilmington, Del., visiting friends. He is delivering a series of addresses.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Miss Mollie Wheelis, 1 wash cloth and 2 pillow cases, Mrs. A. A. Watkins, Manson, N. C., 1 quilt.

We appreciate these gifts of money and substance very much. We are just thankful to everybody for the help they give.

Octagon Coupons

Quite a few Octagon coupons have been coming in recently. We do appreciate that also for they help more than you know. Mrs. Dixon has recently put in 16 new beds and springs besides the large refrigerator last summer. She has a goodly number of coupons for another refrigerator for the boys' building. Please keep them coming.

Notes Last Week

Please look up our notes in last week's Herald and read again. However, our aim there was to impress the necessity for every Sunday school in the conference to make a monthly offering to the home.

All our people who read our notes know our needs here.

"Before they call I will answer; and while they are yet speaking I will hear."

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

S. S. ATTENDANCE

Brother B. K. Millaway, of Winston, thinks it would be interesting to have in the Herald each week a report of attendance at Sunday schools the Sunday before. It doubtless would be if enough schools would enter in. How many schools will agree to report the attendance each week? Let us hear.

—A carload of Irish potatoes will be shipped this year by farmers of the Old Fort section of McDowell county, County Agent W. L. Smarr says.

MAGNETISM NEXT TO INSPIRATION

Near 46 years ago the president of the North Carolina Methodist Protestant Conference, Rev. T. J. Ogburn, had occasion to be at Dalton depot at a set time to travel in Forsyth, and beyond the river also. It fell to my lot to serve as travel help. It being a very muddy time, mud too deep to venture in a buggy trip, my father told me to take Jim and Sam, two good horses; but while Jim was a fine-looking horse he was rather lazy, but Sam was rather pert. However, Jim had a very peculiar trait, or a way of economy. Usually he would eat but four ears of corn and then a small amount of "rough feed"; but the peculiarity, or the "economy" was that, after he ate the corn from a cob he would eat the cob.

Soon as the president landed from the train we went up to the horses; I had thought to tell the president that, perhaps, Jim was too lazy and slow for him to ride, I thinking that I could handle a switch and whip him up. However, Brother Ogburn at once hastily mounted Jim. To my surprise Jim at once started up at a fast gait, and continued at a pert gait during the whole trip and I was the one to whip up. The case was certainly a surprise.

The reminder was, and is, one to help us to think of the evangelical expression, "next to inspiration."

Animals and people have something of the "magnetic" and "Jim" was moved right much by a peculiar power that was greater than his corn and cobs, and his old lazy speed.

NOTICE TO PASTORS OF CONFERENCE

Dr. James H. Straughn, promotional secretary and treasurer of our denomination, will be present at the Central Ministers association meeting to be held in the High Point church March 17, 10:00 a. m. At this meeting Dr. Straughn will tell of the Washington convention to be held in May. It is the desire of the officers of the association and the president of our conference that the invitation to this meeting be extended to include all the pastors of the conference and as many laymen as desire to come. We hope that a large number will be present.

Besides the foregoing program Dr. Spahr will speak on "My Message to the Ministers of Today." You will want to hear Dr. Spahr. The president of the conference and the president of High Point college will each have fifteen minutes also. We desire that some time also be used in worship and prayer. We expect it to be a great day.

Rev. R. I. Farmer informs me that the good ladies of his church will serve a chicken dinner, and all that goes with it for 50 cents. He asks that all who are planning to be present drop him a line.

Don't forget the time and place. March 17—10:00, High Point.

H. W. MATER, Pres. of Asso.

RALLIES FOR THIRD DISTRICT

For this district, we are trying a series of circuit rallies, instead of trying to get the whole district together for a single rally except for the closing session, which will be held at Mebane the fifth Sunday night in March.

Each pastor and people to work out these rallies for the best interest of their respective charges.

Mebane and Orange are to have theirs the fifth Sunday in March at Hebron church, beginning at 2 p. m.

Then we want each charge in the district to unite with us at the Mebane church the fifth Sunday night in March. This session to be for the entire district. Rev. N. M. Harrison will be with us for this session. The following charges compose this district: Orange, Mebane, Alamance, Saxapahaw, and Mt. Hermon.

B. M. WILLIAMS, Chairman.

NINTH DISTRICT MEETING

Rally Day for the Ninth District will be held at Elkhaville church on Mocksville charge, the fifth Sunday in March. The program will begin at 11:30 a. m., giving time for most of the Sunday schools of the district to hold their regular sessions and then come in a full body. Lunch will be served on the grounds. The program will deal with vital matters. Let each pastor of the district announce the meeting at once. See this paper next week.

G. H. HENDRY, Chairman.

—Senator Lawrence, of Herford county, introduced a bill into the General Assembly of North Carolina which is designed to prevent lynchings. The proposed law would require officers to incarcerate prisoners charged with capital crime or with attempt to ravish a woman, in the state prison or in the jail of a county other than that of the crime. "Such a law," he said, "would have prevented North Carolina's first lynching in nine years which occurred near Tarboro last summer."

—"Behind the Scenes in High Point" is the theme of six vesper preludes (ten minutes each) beginning February 18, with Mrs. C. Hammond on "The Welfare Board." Those to follow in order will be Attorney Grover H. Jones, "The Juvenile Court"; Mayor C. A. York, "The City Government"; Supt. T. Wingate Andrews, "The City Schools"; Mr. Edgar Hartley, "Our Recreations," and Judge Lewis Teague, "My Six Years in the Municipal Court."

—Brother M. P. Eland and family of Eland, are in deep sorrow. They recently lost their daughter, Miss Christine, who died in a Durham hospital. The funeral service was conducted by their pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams.

—Mr. Vance Trollinger, for 30 years engineer for the Proximity Mill company, has suffered a stroke of paralysis on one side and is in serious condition. He is a brother of Rev. J. L. Trollinger.

HERE AND THERE

W. C. HAMMER MEMORIAL SERVICE

Some things happen so seldom that we must take notice of them when they do happen or we will never have another chance. On February 19 it was my privilege to sit in the House of Representatives of the United States and listen to the memorial service for the Hon. W. C. Hammer of N. C., and other deceased members of Congress. Knowing that the same thing cannot happen again and having a feeling that there will never be a similar occasion in which I would have as much right to be present, I think I would be justified in writing briefly about the service.

In the first place the service had been carefully planned. It did not just happen. When Congress sets out to do a thing of this kind, it seems that it leaves no stone unturned. The orchestra of the army band was seated to one side of the Speaker's platform and while the audience assembled this orchestra played soft music. Mrs. Hammer and the immediate family connections and the writer as her former pastor were seated immediately in front of the Speaker of the House. The more distant relatives and friends of the family were given reserved seats in the gallery. The relatives of other deceased members were seated more to the side of the Speaker's platform.

The Chaplain of the House recited from memory a number of beautiful and comforting passages of scripture and led in a beautiful prayer. One of the finest musical numbers the writer ever heard was a quartet, "Abide With Me," accompanied by the delicate instruments in the Army band.

The Clerk of the House then called the names of the deceased members and as the names were called an American Beauty rose was placed in tall vase on the table. Then a brief history of each member was read. Following this the Speaker of the House arose, lifted his hands and every one stood in two minutes of silence. There were two vocal solos and another quartet during the service and two fine addresses, one by Representative Meade of New York, in which he spoke largely of the work of these men in the House and how much they would be missed. The other address was by Representative Luce of Mass., who dwelt more on the deeper things of the Spirit and of the Resurrection and Immortality. One statement of his impressed me much: "We may not be able to prove in the laboratory that there is a Resurrection, but where proof fails, Faith steps in and says it must be." His address was comforting and stimulating. Following the benediction by the Chaplain a good many members of the House came down to speak to the relatives, showing that it was not a mere formal affair but that they really did appreciate the men while they were alive and sorrowed with the families of the deceased.

As I sat there in the Capitol of the nation the fires burned within my heart. It was a good place to meditate. My mind ran back to that humble preacher's home in Randolph county where this man whom the nation was honoring first saw the light of day. I could fancy that this preacher and his devoted wife were both there and that the nation was honoring them also. But my thoughts did not stop there. Somehow I felt that the nation that day was honoring my church, the church that had produced this illustrious son. And even beyond that I felt that the nation was paying tribute to two Methodist Protestant institutions of learning, Yaddin college, and Western Maryland, for our deceased Congressman went to both of these. And even going a step further, were they not honoring those men and women who had given of their small incomes to establish and support these institutions that were to prepare men and women for useful careers? And so, where shall we ever stop. It is great to live and it is great to help others to live and it's great to help institutions to live. This day was a day of days in my life.

GOSSIP AND GLOOM

(For Children and Grownups)

Gossip and Gloom
Are brothers-in-voc,
Whatever they say
Know it's not so.

Gossip and Gloom
On mischief are bent,
Their foolish opinions
Are not worth a cent.

Gossip and Gloom
Are in a bad way,
Pray do not believe
A word that they say.

Gossip and Gloom
Do things on the sly,
They secretly whisper
And most often lie.

Gossip and Gloom
Are not good for you,
With such busybodies
Have nothing to do.
—Grenville Kleiser.

CORN MOST VALUABLE LIVE-AT-HOME CROP

Not only does a full corn crib keep the sheriff away but it furnishes feed for all kinds of livestock and food for the family. More should be grown this season and acre yields should be higher.

This is the opinion of C. R. Hudson, veteran demonstration worker at State college and a successful corn grower in his own right. Mr. Hudson believes that every acre planted should be made to yield at least 35 bushels and 50 is more profitable. This can be done very easily by following a few common-sense practices. Mr. Hudson says that 80 farmers of Greene county grew an average of 52 bushels an acre last season at a cost of 39 cents a bushel. The stover produced was worth $10 a ton for feeding purposes and allowing $5 a ton for harvesting, the corn was still reduced to about 18 cents a bushel in total cost of production.

The business-like way of a landowner to prepare for growing corn is to calculate his probable needs for the entire year; figure his probable yield per acre and then put in enough acreage to produce that corn that will be needed for 12 months. Some allowance should be made for poor season and for increase in the number of animals to be fed.

It is best to grow the corn following a legume crop turned but if this is not possible this spring, the land should still be well prepared, fertilizer used under the corn and arrangements made for a suitable top-dressing of quickly available nitrogen fertilizer. Small acre yields are not profitable and every grower in the state should set his mark for at least 35 bushels an acre, says Mr. Hudson.

—The difference between the full and the empty tomb is set out thus by Louise Webster: "Egyptian tombs hold priceless things, Sceptres and crowns and rings, And ornaments of cunning skill To humor the imperial will Of mummied potentates. Full tombs, Great Corridors and rooms, To tell of ancient powers and high estates.

And has an empty tomb no glory shed?
'He is not here; He is risen,' angels said."

—The Bible Lands Sunday School Union issues a monthly news bulletin, printed separately in English and Arabic. The last number to reach the office of the World's Sunday school association, at their headquarters in New York City, contains unusually interesting information.

Our church in North Carolina lost one of its most noble laymen in the death of Brother J. B. Ogburn, of Flat Rock church, Guilford county. He died of pneumonia and was buried last Sunday afternoon. Rev. J. P. Pegg, his pastor, assisted by Rev. J. R. Hutton, conducted the funeral service. Brother Ogburn was a quiet man, but when he spoke he had something to say. He was faithful and loyal to the church and to his friends. His only son lost his life by accident a few months ago. He leaves his wife and one daughter who will have the sympathy of many friends in their great bereavement.

—One of the major acts of our State Legislature now in session was that of combining under one management the State university at Chapel Hill, the State Teachers' college in Greensboro, and the State College at Raleigh. These three schools will comprise the State university. Economy it is claimed will result from the merger.

Dorsett

In sad but loving remembrance of Juanita Dorsett, who passed away Saturday, February 28, 1931.

Dearest Juanita, thou hast left me,
And my loss I deeply feel.
But it's God's will that you have gone,
He can all our sorrows heal.
Juanita, you have left this world
Left me, yes, forevermore,
But I hope to meet you on that bright
And happy shore.
Juanita, you were a dear treasure
In our church and community,
And you were loved dearly, by every one.

A Friend,
Ruby Pearson.

Pegram

Robert Dwiggins Pegram, son of the late J. H. and Julia Shaw Pegram, was born at Oak Ridge, N. C., July 22, 1861, and departed this life in Winston-Salem, N. C., February 9, 1931.

In young manhood he was united in marriage to Miss Arrena Joyce of Stokes county who survives him. About thirty-seven years ago he moved to Winston-Salem and spent the remainder of his days there. He was a member of the First Methodist Protestant church in Winston-Salem for many years, and even though for some years had not been able to attend church yet he was still interested in its welfare. About two years ago his health became such that he was incapacitated for any work. This long period of ill health was a severe strain upon him, but he met it bravely. The past several weeks of his life the end was expected almost daily.

The funeral service was conducted by his pastor in the home at noon on February 11, and burial was in the Joyce family burying ground in the Sandy Ridge community in Stokes county. He is survived by his wife, by one son, Dewey Pegram, and one sister, Mrs. Flora Hunt, all of Winston-Salem.

Finch

Mr. Henry A. Finch departed this life January 29, 1931, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. M. Edwards, near Gill's Siding, N. C.

At the time of his death he was chairman of the Parsonage Trustees, an office that he had faithfully held for many years.

Mr. Finch had been in declining health for the past few years. He celebrated his 80th birthday some time last year. We have visited him several times. It was a source of inspiration to visit and talk with him. He loved to talk about the church, and Heaven. He talked about dying, and his preparation to meet God. He spoke of his loved ones that had gone on before to the glory world and said he was ready to go when it was God's will.

He was married in 1873 to Laura A. Hedgespeth who died several years ago. He was later married to Kate M. Hight who preceded him to the grave a few years ago. ### Dorsett

On February 28, God called unto Himself our beloved and most cherished friend, Juanita Dorsett, aged 19 years and three months. In her early life she identified herself with the work of her church and her pride for its greatness never waned. She was one of the prettiest girls I have ever known and always had a smile for every one. It has been my pleasure to know her two years and I have never heard her utter a word of complaint, but always gentle, kind, and pure. What a sincere friend, so simple, so dear, so unselfish. Whenever the interest of the Kingdom of God was involved, she never counted the consequences to herself, went on her way without fear or faltering. She had many admirable qualities as a Sunday school teacher and Christian Endeavor leader.

She was devout in temper, clean and consistent in life. There was one quality of her teaching that stood out prominently, she never led her children into mist, or fog or even twilight. There was simplicity that marked all her teaching, and even the tiniest child could understand. It is hard to understand why one so pure and sweet should be taken from our midst, but perhaps some day we'll understand. She was sick only a week and her death came as a shock. Her mother watched over her faithfully with unremitting care. Her heart was in her church work, and particularly the training of little children. She leaves a mother, father, one sister, and three brothers, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

One of the members of the First church has been called to her Heavenly Home to receive her reward, to be with Him. How beautiful for her who has been called to be at the time giving the best she has in the Master's service, as this dear girl has. We shall miss her and feel keenly the loss, but her influence will continue through ages and her devotion and consecration to the work of the Kingdom, will abide forever, and will be an influence to those who are chosen to take their task and go forward with the work she loved. And now with bowed heads we will honor this dear girl as her name is engraved upon our hearts and feel that she is at rest. These few words are not intended to portray her beautiful character, but are a simple expression of love, and appreciation I had in my heart to say them.

The One Thing Needful

In little town of Bethany
A famous story had its start
In which appear two sisters rare
And each acts out her chosen part.

Their Prophet friend there sits at meat,
Much loved and highly honored Guest;
The sisters with each other vie
To see which one can serve Him best.

The fitting thing to Martha seems
Providing viands rich and rare,
To please the palate of her Guest
With dainty dishes in the fare.

She feels no doubt this course is right,
Indeed she has no other thought.
To help work out her favored scheme
Her sister Mary must be brought.

But Mary sees a better course—
Is just to hear the Prophet's word,
To learn from Him the way of life,
As she before has never heard.

Both sisters go their chosen ways
And bring about unhappy state:
The troubled Martha cries aloud
And casts the blame upon her mate.

The Prophet speaks and clears the air
For souls distressed with worldly cares:
The needful thing is word of God,
To guide in all of life's affairs.

The Proposed Washington Convention

Dr. J. H. Straughan addressed the Central Ministers' Association in High Point last Tuesday, indicating his conception of the M. P. Church Convention called to meet in May in Washington, D. C. The need of such a meeting has been felt by him for some years. Several organizations of the church have their annual meetings to survey their fields and plan for their work. Why not the whole church have a meeting of its representatives once in a while to take stock and plan for the future? Dr. Straughan believes that great good to the denomination might come out of it and he has conferred with other officials of the church and found them of the same mind. The sanction of the Executive Committee of the General Conference has been obtained, a date set (May 12-15) and appointed committees are busy with the necessary preparations. It is hoped to get enough Methodist Protestants together to require a larger room than any church auditorium, and the splendid D. A. R. Memorial building in Washington, D. C., has been engaged.

There will of course be some prepared addresses (one is hoped for from President Hoover), but it is expected to be a working convention. It is to be a great workers' council. It will not be a law-making body. The main object will not be the generating of enthusiasm, but the development of intelligence. The church needs to know its problems. Through a common understanding of our denominational tasks all of us will be better prepared for our part in the performance of them. Few of us realize the strategic advantages we possess as a denomination. Therefore few of us are keenly aware of the responsibility that rests upon us to bear our testimony effectively. It is for us to take a leading part in showing to the world the Christian Way. The Methodist Protestant Church is a much larger church than its numbers would indicate.

There is important work for this convention to do. It should be a most serious meeting. I can imagine the founders of a hundred years ago looking on with great interest and perhaps with some anxiety. And of course the great and only Head of the Church will be present to guide and restrain. May His will be done!

A Shocking Revelation

Last week the report came from Raleigh that our legislature has passed a bill legalizing betting on races in Buncombe county. This was startling indeed. It was enough to arouse the resistance of every citizen who has conviction as to the immorality of gambling. It was shocking to find that North Carolinians entrusted with the high office of legislators would fall so far below what was justly expected of them in legislating on such a subject. In some half-civilized state it might not have been surprising if some lottery legislation should be —One of the leading features in the program of the Ministers' meeting in High Point on Tuesday was an address on The Minister's Work by Dr. S. K. Spahr. He never fails to be interesting. He has a vast store of experiences which he knows how to turn to account in illustrating his thought. But back of his experiences there is a warm heart, an honest soul, and a well-balanced mind. He was cut out for a preacher, and there was cloth enough for a large pattern. There are few better-loved men than Dr. S. K. Spahr. We are honored in having him as an honorary member of our Annual Conference.

AN AUSTRALIAN LOOKS AT PROHIBITION

After thorough personal investigation of the prohibition situation in the United States, Mr. Frank A. Russell, LL. B., an Australian Barrister, said "I have come back to Australia with my mind made up on the subject of prohibition. It is not only a success, but a shining success." He did not enter upon his enquiries as a supporter of prohibition. The following extracts from the statement of Mr. Russell are taken from the Alliance News, London, February, 1931:

"Exaggeration is hurting both causes but in the case of ordinary visitors who have neither the time nor the opportunity to go beneath the surface, the far-fetched statements of the anti-Prohibitionists are generally believed.

"If they stay in America long enough to get out of the visitor class, they begin to find what I found as soon as I had paid my tribute to courtesy and began to dig for my own facts; that is, that though wealthy people can get liquor with comparative ease, at a high price and sometimes of extremely doubtful quality, it is becoming an increasingly difficult job to keep the cellar full at a cost suitable to the purse of the average man.

"They will find, too, that though a certain small percentage of the general population brews a species of beer, and another small percentage allows home-grown wines to ferment, aided by peripatetic individuals who drop some form of alcohol into it, the great mass of the population is already indifferent to drink, and swallows orange juice and fruit decoctions with far more gusto than it does its very occasional jorum of dubious spirits.

"Briefly put, my investigations revealed the unassailable fact that Prohibition is observed by that enormous and important mass of middle-class artisans and workmen, tradesmen and small commercial folk which is really the backbone of every country.

"At either end of the social scale were people who broke the law. At the top were the wealthy classes who have never yet kept any sumptuary law that clashed with inclination; at the bottom were the criminal and part-criminal class that had an ill-founded idea that breaking laws paid better than keeping them.

* * *

"I have come back to Australia with my mind made up on the subject of Prohibition. It is not only a success, but a shining success. Had I, however, passed through America as an ordinary traveler, with his limited means of knowing only what he saw, I should have still believed that Prohibition was a farce.

"To think that in little more than a decade, such a radical alteration has been made in the ingrained habits of a nation; of a nation, too, so undisciplined, so heterogeneous, so unasimilated racially, dancing with such a devil of a Frankenstein as is its subornable legal machinery, makes the result astonishing.

"This success has come from work people emancipated from slavery, able to use the intricate machinery prepared for them in such a way as to create an industrial revolution.

"It has come in the face of organized opposition that controls press and broadcasting and other forms of advertising.

"It may be a great exaggeration to attribute the whole of the prosperity of the United States to the abolition of drink; I think it is, but you would find it difficult to persuade bankers, manufacturers, mass producers, master builders and insurance companies that, in overwhelming measure, this was not the prime cause.

"Against my will, I was brought to believe that Prohibition was a splendid economic achievement, whose significance cannot be drowned by the shouting derision of the 'antis'. In subsequent chapters I will traverse the salient facts which demonstrate the truth.

* * *

"I have said that exaggeration was the cardinal fault of both the great protagonists in the Prohibition fight. It was the discovery by me of the failure of anti-Prohibition statements to bear investigation that first began the process whereby I was led to see the very real success of the movement that was hidden under masses of interested propaganda of enemies to the 18th Amendment.

"Let me take as an illustration of this gross exaggeration a statement that was published only a few weeks ago by the Association against Prohibition. A cable was published here to the effect that liquor to the value of £500,000,000 was consumed in the United States during the last financial year.

"Now, in the first place, there is absolutely no means of knowing what amount of liquor is brought into the country, what is made in the country, and certainly no method of computing how much is consumed.

* * *

"How is it possible to make more than the roughest guess at the amount of illegal liquor that escapes seizure? Even traceable liquor may have changed hands a dozen times and have crept into a dozen 'lists' of amateur statisticians.

"Still, assuming that the amount of £500,000,000 is correctly guessed, let us link that statement with the other most common declaration in the mouths of liquor advocates, namely, that there is as much liquor consumed in the United States today as when there was no Prohibition, and that, as a corollary, Prohibition ought to be repealed as farcical and useless.

"The figure given means that for every person in the U. S. A. 21 dollars (£4 4s. Od.) was spent on drink last year.

"Now we do happen to know what drink was consumed in the U. S. A. before Prohibition. In 1919, when Prohibition was already beginning to operate, 9.34 gallons of liquor of all kinds was consumed per head of the population. Of this just over eight gallons was malt liquor, which cost four dollars a head. The rest, 1 1-2 gallons, was mainly spirit, with a little wine. This cost $12 a head, or $16 in all.

"In 1917, when there were 20.20 gallons of all kinds consumed, with a similar large proportion of malt liquor, the cost a head was $25 (£5). Now then for the argument!

"The price of liquor today is at least five times what it was in pre-Prohibition days. Thus, at present prices, the 1919 consumption would have cost the people $80 (£16) a head, and the 1917 consumption $125 (£25) a head. Since even the anti-Prohibitionists do not dare say that the national drink bill in Prohibition America is £3,000,000,000, but only £500,000,000 it follows that, instead of the amount of drink consumed today being the same as in happier years, it must be only one-sixth of the total, not a bad showing for a law which has so radically dealt with the habits of a nation. The 'antis' thus admit that five-sixths of the nation have stopped drinking in effect.

"Such statements as the one I have just dealt with are thrown out pell-mell by individual enemies of Prohibition and by newspapers functioning in their interests. The trouble is that the 'antis' do not add up their statements.

"One of their great leaders told me indignantly that the position of affairs was terrible, 'Almost a billion dollars (1,000 million) is going into the pockets of bootleggers,' he declared, having previously repeated the parrot cry, 'There is more liquor consumed today than ever before in the history of the United States.'

"I led him along the path of exaggeration by my artless wonder, and then presented him with the colossal figure which, at five times old liquor prices, would really be going into bootlegging pockets if he was correct.

"He had hit on 'almost a billion' as a round, fat sum: when he heard that it would be over 15 billion (15,000,000,000 dollars) if his facts were right he was dumb-founded. And it is worth remembering that even that enormous sum would be greatly added to if I cared to stress the well-recognized fact that instead of malt liquor being in the proportion of over 18 to 2 gallons of the whole, as in 1917, the proportions had about changed places, for obviously it does not pay to bootleg the comparatively cheap beer that home brewers make.

"The result has been to place spirits as the staple drink of those who can afford it.

"Now it needs no argument to break down the contention that Americans are spending £500,000,000 at least on the drink they feel they must have. Yet we are led to this striking absurdity if we believe the statements of the 'wets' that Prohibition has not stopped drinking at all, but rather increased it. It is with rather a spirit of relief that we turn to the modest figure of £500,000,000 announced in the cables.

"Personally I am convinced that even this is exaggerated, for it is based on mere guess work, and experience has shown me that anti-Prohibitionists always over-guess, as I shall show a little later.

"The next abstract argument most in favor deals with personal liberty.

" 'How dare they dictate to me what I shall eat and drink' asked one very important man, head of a great railway system.

"He was echoing hundreds of others. It was an argument I was fond of using myself. I discussed it with the railway chief. He was bitter. Suddenly I asked him what about his system's 96,000 employees. Was their work not the better for Prohibition?

" 'Not a bit,' he answered hotly. 'For 20 years every railway system has worked on Rule G, which absolutely forbids all employees to use alcohol. If we smell booze on a man's breath we fire him,' he said.

" 'You thought of it 20 years before Volstead did,' I retorted. 'How dare you interfere with the personal liberty of those men?'

" 'They have the lives of millions in their keeping,' he explained.

" 'So have the drivers of the countless millions of cars in this country,' I pointed out. 'Every man in a car has a lethal weapon of unaccountable danger. If he is even 'sozzled,' let alone intoxicated, the split second which calls for a man's best judgment will almost certainly find him unprepared. Would you distinguish between a man at a throttle and one at a steering wheel?'

" 'Well, no; come to think of it, I guess there's a good case against a man with an automobile,' he admitted. And that covers about a fifth of the population of the United States.

" 'With regard to the common and vociferous charge that drink is debauching youth, I investigated this very carefully. I was told certain enormities that went on in colleges, schools, and at young people's parties.

" 'I found precisely the same things that are reported in Melbourne, where they have been the subject of investigation.

" 'In other words, Prohibition is assigned as the cause of high spirits and occasional moral lapses in America. In Australia, in London, in Paris, in Berlin, in Timbuctoo, everywhere else, in fact, the same conduct is put down to the loosening of standards—(1) after the war, (2) because of lack of parental control, (3) because of the emancipation of women and the early earning capacity of young girls, and to causes that vary with the ingenuity of social reformers or behaviourists.

" 'At certain of the big universities and colleges strict investigations have been undertaken. The Ohio State University, for example, was required to undertake such an investigation, with the result that it was reported that 'The situation here today is better than it has ever been known to be.'

" 'This is the conclusion to which I was brought after questioning educationists and young people themselves. Particularly I inquired into a statement that practically every student carries a hip flask.

" 'I made wide inquiries in Los Angeles, Detroit, Kansas City, Salt Lake City, and Chicago from those most competent to know, and I was forced to realize that once more gross exaggeration had been made to do duty for weak argument on the part of those who believe America would be better 'wet.'

" 'Students themselves told me that, though flasks appear at young people's parties, it is still rare enough to be noticeable, and set apart those who swank in this way. At many big colleges it is growing to be bad form for a fellow to make this once grand gesture. Mr. Hoover's appeal at his inauguration had a tremendous effect on American hero-worshippers, and hero-worship is a very widespread American trait.'—

No report appears in the Journal in 1929 for Bess Chapel, Bessemer City, Pageland, and Caroleen. Changes in boundaries explains why some other charges do not have credits in both columns. The grand total for Graham does not appear in the 1930 Journal, owing to the fact that this church was without a pastor for the last two months of last year. We could not, therefore, give the per capita payment for that year in this report. It should be said of Weaverville and Democrat that these two charges had pastors for only a part of the year. That, of course, affected their per capita payments.

I have given careful attention to what goes into these totals, and the only additions that seems to appear in the totals of 1930 that were not carried in the totals of 1929, are Special for Superannuates, and the amount raised by the women for North Carolina work.

The average membership payment of the conference for each of these years is $9.61 for 1929, and $8.80 for 1930. The average for the two years is $9.20.

The facts set forth here should at least be informing, and we should like to hope that in some cases this may be stimulating to a more generous support of our conference and denominational programs.

"OF COURSE, I AM A METHODIST PROTESTANT—BUT"

A busy pastor had given an hour of his time with his ear to a new prospective member for his church, a new Methodist Protestant who had come to town. When separating the pastor said, "We want you to be at home with us to join the organizations and to go to work, for two reasons—first, we need you; second, you need to do it." The reply which has become a classic in its age and a joy-killer in its persistence was: "I am sorry, but I have made other arrangements for next Sunday, and I promised myself when I came here I would let up on church work." But looking into the pastor's face, "Oh, I am a Methodist Protestant," was spoken as answer to what was revealed there.

That same pastor had spent a pleasant hour with another person who was reared in different denominational groups but who had been attending his church for several weeks; and as they were separating, this party said to the pastor, "I would like to join your church, I think I will feel just as much at home there as I would in my own."

These two incidents occurring in close proximity has started a train of thoughts. One of which is, What is a Methodist Protestant worth to his denomination after he leaves his local church? In so many instances, he may as well be dropped from the church register whenever he leaves the community. There are a few who remain faithful to the home church and yet stay away from it, and a few who go into a new community where the M. P. church is more influential than the other denominations, join it, but the majority do not. They are social climbers, weary of the church in which they were converted; or they want to escape the expenses of active membership in order that they can spend the money on themselves which under normal conditions would go into the church envelope.

I have no railing accusation against all such, for they will not read this nor hear of it from those who shall read it, but the question of momentous concern to the church is, What is the matter with the denomination that produces such a flimsy, undependable type of people? A full answer to the questions I have started would take entirely too much space in the HERALD to set forth. But there is one answer, very evident—well-known to every experienced pastor; it is the lack of loyalty to the church. The past generation has bred a breed of members who hold office in the M. P. church and who are flagrantly disloyal to it. By word of mouth, by deeds and silent treatment they have taught the youth whom they have brought up in their homes that the M. P. church is being tolerated by them with the hope that they may live long enough to see it expire when they may be free from the alliance and go where their social desires may lead them. The above is not written to offend any one, but to reveal a condition which is fast destroying our church and which if continued will really unfit us to do passably good service in any denomination, if they would take us into their fold.

WHAT IS HOME?

Eight hundred replies came to a London magazine which asked the question, "What is home?" Some of the answers are printed below:

"Home—A world of strife shut out, a world of love shut in."

"Home—The place where the small are great and the great are small."

"Home—The Father's kingdom, the mother's world, and the child's paradise."

"Home—The place where we grumble the most and are treated the best."

"Home—The center of our affections, round which our heart's best wishes twine."

"Home—The place where our stomachs get three square meals daily and our hearts a thousand."

"Home—The only place on earth where the faults and failings of humanity are hidden under the sweet mantle of charity."—Light and Life Evangel.

enacted, but such a thing is not to be thought of in a state with numerous Christian churches and schools.

Fortunately for our State an outburst of indignation against the measure prevented its final passage. But the incident proves that we should be much more careful in selecting men to represent us in Raleigh.

BETTER MACHINES AND TOOLS MAKE BETTER TIMES FOR WORKERS

By REV. LUTHER K. LONG

When business depression, and unemployment, and hard times strike the country, all sorts of explanations are given.

A favorite theory is this: Improved tools and machinery have decreased the number of jobs for men, thrown many workers out of employment, curtailed the buying power of the people, and precipitated a period of hard times. But investigations by experts have proved the falsity of this theory.

Franklyn Hobbs, director of research for the Central Trust Company, of Illinois, uttered some ringing words in an address before the Machine and Tool Distributors of Chicago, at the Union League club, the 9th of last January. Here they are:

"Gentlemen: The machine age increased employment, made work easier, saved lives and limbs, and enabled the working man to live in such comfort as was unknown to any man on earth when some of us were born."

It is customary with considerable sections of our people, when passing through such experiences as have been ours during the past one or two years, to complain that labor receives only a small and diminishing part of the increased value of the production that has come to the country through the introduction of well-adapted and powerful machines. The truth seems to be that labor is getting fully as large a proportion of the returns as at any previous time; and that the total of wages going to each workman is very much larger than ever before. Hear Mr. Hobbs again:

"The fact is, the introduction of automatic and labor-saving tools and appliances into the manufacturing industry has not reduced the amount of money paid to labor by that industry and has not been able to displace workers in certain industries as rapidly as avenues of employment have opened to them in other industries. That, gentlemen, is a fact which industry and labor would do well to contemplate. Had there been no time and labor-saving tools introduced into factories during these last forty years, there could have been no electrical appliances, no telephone, no automobile, no moving pictures, no radio, no airplane."

No doubt a small proportion of men suffer some inconvenience, and hardship, and lack of employment due to the changes caused by the introduction of labor-saving machinery—the age and lack of adaptability of these men being against them. But the vast majority of workmen get better jobs, and very much better paid jobs, when the shift has been made.

Three suggestions should be of value:

1. Every workman should cultivate the ability to do more than one thing. That is, he should not allow himself to lose entirely that wide variety of skill that used to be of such great advantage to every worker in industry before the arrival of the machine age. This would enable him to make needful adjustments with much less discomfort and loss.

2. It is a good idea to hold on to a considerable per cent of the wages received in good times. One will thus be prepared for the unemployment periods resulting from shifts in occupation, or from business depression. Corporations that conserve their resources are likely to succeed in weathering the storms when hard times come—most of those that live up to the limit of their earnings may be found, sooner or later, in the list of failures.

Of course, the plea is made that the working man cannot do otherwise in these times than use up his wages from pay-day to pay-day—especially when consideration is given to the number of persons composing his family. Wisdom is now saying that the sensible thing to do is to limit the size of the family. And wisdom's voice, we believe, will eventually be heard and heeded.

3. Unemployment is not so serious a matter as it has been painted. It must be admitted, of course, that there is much unemployment and considerable suffering. However, the indications are that vast numbers have been enrolled who hadn't been employed hitherto, who don't want employment, and who don't know what to do with a job when it is offered. Politics, and fraud, and maudlin sentiment have been playing their parts. This whole subject is having an airing, and much good will doubtless result. The regularization of employment is one of the next great achievements before the American people. Isaac F. Marcossion's discriminating article, "Guaranteeing the Job," in the February 28th issue of the Saturday Evening Post, is a notable contribution toward that end. His investigations reveal the fact that a good many business firms have been attacking and mastering the problem for several years, and that these companies and their employes are in unusually good condition now as they meet the stress of the present times.

OVERSUPPLY OF MINISTERS

Speaking before the institute held for ministers at Garrett Seminary, President C. F. Eislén predicted that the oversupply of ministers would compel theological seminaries in the near future to strictly limit admissions. The present enrollment at Garrett, he said, was too large for current demands, and this fall admission will be greatly reduced. Two factors are cited by the president as causes of the oversupply of ministers. First, the merging of smaller churches in rural districts, and the second, the return of foreign missionaries who seek pastorates at home. He might have added a third, which is the number of short-cut seminary courses and the admission of ministers to fields of service without adequate preparation.—The Christian Sun.

—The Sunday School Times publishes the latest Sunday School statistics: "Number of Sunday Schools in North America, 159,817; number of officers and teachers, 2,179,312; number of pupils, 21,851,027." This is for North America only. Numbers enrolled in other countries are: Central America, 20,930; South America, 170,855; West Indies, 188,694; Europe, 9,317,750; Asia, 1,567,382; Africa, 789,658; Malaysia, 108,624; Oceania, 880,430. There has been an increase in Sunday School enrollment since 1924 of 4,594,213 pupils. Surely the lines of the Sunday School have gone out to all parts and are binding the youth of the world to Him, who said: "Suffer the children to come unto me."

"BEFORE HONOUR IS HUMILITY"

In the spiritual life, those who would rise must first stoop. It was and is true of our Lord. He has the highest place in Glory, not only as God but also as man. Why has He the highest place? Because He took the lowest place. He descended to the depths—now He has risen to the heights. He took the lowest place of humility—now He has taken the highest place of honor beside His Father.

Honor and humility are inseparably connected in the Kingdom of God. The deeper the root descends, the higher the branches ascend. It is the foundation that goes lowest that can bear the tower that rises highest. Men of the world often get the world's highest places by bounce, push, and presumption. But there is no such thing as that in the Kingdom of God. We have to kneel before we can reach the throne of influence.—The Elm Evangel.

OUR STORY PAGE

A BRAVE AMERICAN BOY

"I am going to tell you about a brave little boy that I heard about," said Aunt Jane, as she came to tell the twins their bedtime story.

"Where did he live, and what is his name?" asked Gilbert.

"He lived in far-away Africa and his name is Abo, he and his sister are orphans. As Abo is the older he feels that he must take care of his sister. He is so good to her that once when she was very sick, he carried her twelve miles to a doctor, who gave her medicine to make her well again.

When Abo's father died of overwork, the little fellow went to the mission and begged the teacher to allow him and his sister to live in some place on the mission grounds, as he did not wish to be a slave or to beg for a living.

The kind-hearted teacher felt very sorry for Abo, for he has only one good leg, the other being lame and useless, in fact it is so withered he would be far better without it.

"I know how cruelly orphans are treated here so I will find some place on the grounds where you and your sister can stay and be protected," said the kind teacher.

So a place was found and the children lived there while Abo supports them both by hunting in the woods for berries, nuts and roots which he sells so as to buy food.

"It must be hard for him to do it when he is lame," said Betty.

"It certainly is and he even climbs trees to get the nuts which he has to carry about five miles to market to sell."

"I do not see how he can do it," said Gilbert in an awed tone.

"He loves Jesus, whom he learned about at the mission and He gives him strength to do all he does. Both he and his sister study hard at school and are getting along finely with their lessons. They pass the examinations with good marks and both attend the church services. Abo is very anxious to do this because the aim of his life is to become an evangelist, so that he may win souls for Jesus.

"He is a good brave boy. I just wish that we could help him," said Betty.

"The missionary who told about him says that he is one of the most heroic persons he has ever known. He has a poor body but a great soul and is a pattern to all who know him."

"Could we send him some money from our banks," asked Gilbert.

"I will find out if I can. I am sure the teacher at the mission would be glad to give the money to Abo and his sister if we can get her address."

"I'll send them all the money I have in my bank," said Betty.

"And so will I, for I would just love to help them," added Gilbert.

Then the twins went to sleep feeling very happy because they had planned to do a good kind deed.—Selected.

HOW A BOY HELPED

During the American Revolution, when every Vermont man and boy able to march and carry a gun had left home and gone to join General Stark at Bennington, one boy, Luke Varnum, fifteen years old, was lame and was left behind, much to his disappointment.

The party from Luke's village had been gone a little over an hour when three men galloped up on horseback and asked:

"Is there anybody here?"

"Yes," said Luke, "I am here."

"I see that," said the first man laughing. "What I mean is, is there anybody here who can set a shoe?"

"I think I can," said Luke, "I often tend fire for Jonas. I can blow the bellows, and I can hold a horse's foot. Anyway, I will start up the fire."

So Luke went into the forge, took down the tinder box, and struck a light. He built a fire, and hunted up half a dozen nails which Jonas had left, unintentionally, and he even made two more, when a fourth horseman came slowly down on a walk.

"What luck," said he, "to find a forge with a fire lighted!"

"We found one," said one of the three men, "with a boy who knew how to light it."

The other speaker threw himself off the horse, and Luke pared the hoof of the dainty creature, and measured the shoe, which was too big for her. He heated it white, and bent it to the proper size.

"It's a poor fit," he said, "but it will do."

"It will do very well," said her rider. "But she is very tender-footed, and I dare not trust her five miles unshod."

And for pride's sake the first two nails Luke drove were those he had made himself. When the shoe was fast, he said: "Tell Jonas that I lit up the forge, and put on the shoe."

"We will tell him," said the colonel, laughing, and he rode on.

But one of the other horsemen stayed behind a minute and said:

"Boy, no ten men who left you today have served your country as you have. That is Colonel Warner."

And when you read in history how Colonel Warner led up his regiment just in time to save the day at Bennington, you may hereafter think of Luke Varnum, not as a lonely lame boy, but as a faithful worker, who bravely helped his country.

"For the want of a nail a shoe was lost.

For the want of a shoe a horse was lost.

For the want of a horse a rider was lost.

For the want of a rider a battle was lost.

And all for the want of a horseshoe nail."

—The Common People.

—A learned atheist once met a plain countryman going to Church. He asked, "Where are you going?" "I am going to Church, sir, to worship God." "Pray, is your God a great or a little God?" "He is both, sir. He is so great, sir, that the heaven of heavens cannot contain Him, and so little that He can dwell in my poor heart."—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By J. T. BOWMAN

President High Point Christian Endeavor
March 29: WHY CHRIST IS A WORTHY MASTER

Scripture Text—Phil. 2:5-11.

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Because He is the Son of God.
 John 1:14-18.

Tuesday—He has supreme knowledge. John 3:10-13.

Wednesday—He seeks our good. John 10:27-30.

Thursday—He works with us. John 15:4,5.

Friday—He sympathizes with us. Heb.
 4:14-16.

Saturday—He has conquered the world.
 John 16:28-33.

For the Leader

Every one makes the choice of serving or of choosing a master and we are servants of the one we follow. "Paul said (Rom. 6:16): 'Know ye not that to whom ye present yourselves as servants, in obedience, his servants ye are whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death or obedience unto righteousness?'" We either serve sin or obey Christ. Which is better? "The wages of sin is death; but the free gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord." If we are to be led and we will be, let it be by the One who will lead aright. Jesus is the greatest leader we may have. Lead on, O King Eternal.

Jesus is the worthiest of all masters and we will not have to go far to discover the results of serving Him. Sin degrades, mars, debases, and puts wrinkles in the face, but the servant of the Lord has the best of this life, and the life to come besides.

For Discussion

1. Why was or is Christ a worthy master?
2. What gave rise to the washing of feet by Jesus at the gathering in the upper room?
3. Tell of the incident of Peter not wanting Jesus to wash his feet.
4. Was the washing of feet an example or ordinance?
5. What was Jesus' rule for promotion?
6. The spirit of willing service is always in demand.
7. How may we be worthy servants of Christ?

Poetry

Lord, it belongs not to my care,
 Whether I die or live;
 To love and serve Thee is my share,
 And this Thy grace must give.

If life be long, I will be glad,
 That I may long obey;
 If short—yet, why should I be sad
 To soar to endless day?

Christ leads me through no darker rooms
 Than He went through before;
 He that unto God's Kingdom comes,
 Must enter by this door.

My knowledge of that life is small,
 The eye of faith is dim;
 But 'tis enough that Christ knows all,
 And I shall be with Him.

—Richard Baxter.

The inspirational meetings will all be held together in the D. A. R. Memorial hall, and separate sessions held for business and promotional work of the women's organization.

Speakers of note have been secured and everything possible is being done to make this convention a great event in our denominational life. As one means to this end is a large attendance, and as our leaders recognize the fact that Methodist Protestant women can put things across, the corresponding secretaries of branches have been asked to enlist the interest and energy of the women in their branches in making the convention a success.

Our branch is requested to send not only their four voting delegates to this convention, but to send four alternates in order to enlarge the attendance. If the branch has not enough funds to pay the expenses of eight, women who are willing to pay a part or all of their own expenses should be elected. Last year North Carolina had two women in attendance who did this. The expense will be greater this year as no free rooms and breakfast will be provided delegates, but the

HIGH POINT COLLEGE ENTERTAINS N. C. C. P. A. DELEGATES

High Point college proved herself very capable as a host when she entertained over one hundred delegates at the semi-annual meeting of the North Carolina Collegiate Press association last spring, April 24-26, 1930. Representatives from nearly every college publication in the state were present as guests of the college and college enthusiasts at the three day session, and true hospitality was shown them in the heart of the Piedmont.

The young journalists began arriving early Thursday afternoon, and as they came in they were welcomed by the reception committee and served tea and sandwiches. By 6 o'clock registration was finished and every one was comfortably situated in High Point homes.

The convention began in a big way Thursday evening when the High Point Enterprise entertained with a dinner at the country club. Other social functions were held at the Sheraton hotel, Sedgefield manor, and Elwood hotel. Capable speakers addressed the members at these dinners and luncheons. Among them were: President R. M. Andrews, O. Arthur Kirkman Jr., C. M. Waynick and Prof. T. C. Johnson. Appreciable gifts furnished by High Point manufacturers, were given at every social affair.

One of the most enjoyable parts of the entire convention was the visit to the industrial plants and points of interest in the city. This tour, led by Secretary Frank Sizemore of the Chamber of Commerce, ended at the elaborate Furniture Exposition building. The guests enjoyed theater parties at the Broadhurst and American theaters in the afternoons.

Discussion and business sessions were held in the college auditorium and at the First M. P. church. These meetings proved to be very helpful, and all were given numerous hints and suggestions as to how they might improve their own publications. At the last of these sessions it was announced that the Hi-Po had been adjudged the best college newspaper in the state. This is considered one of the greatest honors, in the realm of student activities, that has ever been won by High Point College. In the ten years of the press association, this was the first time that a smaller college had ever had the honor of having the best college paper. Another distinction was won by the college when the delegation elected Clyde Pugh as vice-president of the association.

Every delegation of the semi-annual gathering emphatically affirmed that the meeting held here was the best and most profitable ever convened. Everyone enjoyed himself to the utmost and went away singing praise of the hospitality of High Point College and community.

THE ZENITH

Each year, since 1927, the senior class sponsors the Zenith, containing pictures of the students, organizations, and carrying a record of all activities. The book, this year is being handled entirely by the students, under the supervision of Professor N. P. Yarbrough. From present indications the Zenith will be one of the most handsome annuals ever produced at High Point College. The theme running through the book is "Natural Beauty" spots in North Carolina, and the editors have collected pictures of the leading nature spots, including mountain, lake, and ocean scenes.

It is being printed in a blue tint border, with special arrangement of the senior section and the superlative types elected by the student body as being the most representative students. The cover is equally as beautiful as the inside of the book, with a deep blue base color and raised bronze lettering. The book is now in the hands of the printer and should be ready for distribution near the last of May.

DELEGATES AT N. C. C. P. A. GATHERING

More than 100 delegates attended the semi-annual gathering of the North Carolina Collegiate Press Association held at High Point college last spring.

AN EXPLANATION

There seems to be a bit of confusion as to just what is included in the "Received" column in the Subscription Campaign. It means just that. There seems to be no way of indicating how many subscribers there are on each charge. So only those are counted that are new or renewal subscriptions since the beginning of the conference year. Your charge may have a quota of 25 and you may have 20 who are now taking the paper but whose subscriptions may expire at intervals up to the meeting of Conference this fall. They will not be counted in this list of "Received" to offset your quota until they are renewed. The only way to get as many in the second column as your charge has in the first is to get new subscriptions or renewals. We hope you will make an earnest effort to do so. There are not nearly enough now taking the Herald, and whose subscriptions may be renewed during the year, to reach our goal of 3,000 subscribers. Keep all the old ones; get all the new ones.

We think that an unnecessary expense, as we believe the report would reach us in time without this expense. We have known the special delivery stamp actually to delay delivery of a letter. We suggest that this reporter try leaving off the special delivery stamp, but mailing report at same time.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford.—The Woman's auxiliary held a very interesting call meeting with Mrs. R. V. Beck during the month of February. At the close of the business period refreshments were served. This group of women are helping to take care of some of the local church needs and they are expecting to be able soon to broaden out in their missionary work.

On February 15, the third Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock, the Christian Endeavor society of High Point college gave a well prepared program at the church. We hope that Mr. J. T. Bowman, president of the society, can arrange to visit us again with another good program.

The Sunday school is moving on with good attendance each Sunday under the leadership of Mr. Daniel Kersy, Sunday school superintendent, and the faithful teachers.

REPORTER.

First Church, Charlotte.—In the "Balance Sheet" which was published last week we left out one of the most gratifying and significant facts in our report for the third of the year which the report covered; the average attendance for the period was as follows: November 90; December 112; January 135; February 173—in the Sunday school. And last Sunday we reached our highest peak, 203 in attendance. Our goal for attendance at Sunday school was set in January at 200 by Easter, so we rejoice at having attained it three Sundays in advance.

Our revival begins the 29th instant, with Dr. J. D. Williams preaching for us. We are hopeful of good results from this meeting.

These people have been uniformly kind in their treatment of us and I am hopeful of a good year. Really, there is the opportunity for a church of twice the present membership. The people are close to us and many of them not identified with any religious organization.

Charlotte people have had the rare privilege of hearing Dr. George Truett in a revival series. He is a master preacher, simple, evangelical, warm as a flame and never sensational. Tremendous congregations greeted him at every service. The meeting was sponsored by the Baptist Churches of the city but were attended by hundreds of others.

Cordially.

R. M. ANDREWS.

Winston, First.—Winston also, like Charlotte, has some figures to present. The average attendance of our Sunday school by months, since conference is: November 116; December 119; January 147; February 181, and for the first three Sundays in March 182. We did not begin counting noses at the church services until the middle of January when the contest with Charlotte started. Since then the attendance has been: Mornings, 90, 78, 87, 104, 115, 155, 88, 124, and 116. Evenings, 36, 62, 35, 35, 94, 157, 52, and 118.

Yesterday we had 195 in Sunday school, giving us 76 more than the December average of 119 or 760 points. You will see by the above figures that on yesterday we had just two more at the evening service than we had at the morning service, 116, 118. At the evening hour some singers from the Friedburg Moravian church out in the country came in and helped out the music wonderfully. Next Sunday afternoon we are to have a community singing, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. We are expecting several choirs to be present. There will be no evening service and the afternoon service will not count in the contest.

After some discussion it has been decided for us to have our regular morning service here on the fifth Sunday and in the afternoon go out to the District Rally.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Elbaville, Mocksville.—Since the spring days are now opening up, our attendance at church and Sunday school is increasing rapidly. The sick of our community are improving right much. We were very glad to have the P. O. S. of A. brothers to worship with us in church service yesterday in the remembrance of their deceased brother, who died a little more than one year ago.

The C. E. society is progressing nicely and are giving an Easter pageant Easter Sunday night. We were very glad to have the C. E. society of Friendship to meet with us last night; they rendered a very interesting program and we welcome all who wish to come. We are hoping to return the visit before long.

The ninth district conference Rally Day will be held here March 29. Dinner on the grounds. Every body come.

The second quarterly meeting will be held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 here.

STELLA BAILEY, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—Last Sunday was a beautiful, pleasant day, and we had a good attendance at the service at Pleasant Hill. The congregation was much larger than usual, and we had a number of visitors present. We were glad to have one of our members present who is residing away from the community, Brother Elwood Hunter, of Chapel Hill. He spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hunter. Their other son, A. B. Hunter, also a member of Pleasant Hill, who is teaching at Alamance school, near Greensboro, visited his parents Sunday afternoon, being accompanied by Mrs. Welker and son, of the Alamance school community.

The people of West Forsyth charge who have been sick are improving, we are glad to report. Mrs. B. A. Sprinkle is much better, and able to be out again. Mrs. Permelia Reed, of Tabernacle church, who has been confined to her bed for over two weeks, is slightly improved. Mrs. Lula Long, of the Pleasant Hill community, has recovered sufficiently to be up again. Others who have been sick are either better or have recovered.

Announcement has been made that the second quarterly conference for the West Forsyth charge will be held at Union Hill church on Saturday, April 18, 1931, beginning with preaching at 11 o'clock. Dinner will be enjoyed at the church and the business will be transacted in the afternoon. Rev. J. O. Fry, pastor of a group of Methodist Episcopal churches in Yadkin county, will be present and preach the sermon.

Pleasant Hill Sunday school is preparing an Easter program which will be rendered on Easter Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Our appointment for next Sunday morning will be at Harmony Grove church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Fallston.—Saturday, March 14 at 2 o'clock, the Shelby, Cleveland, and Fallston charges met in Friendship church, Fallston, with Dr. Taylor presiding. They decided to have a teacher training school beginning July 6. The school is to be held in the Friendship church. Mrs. Frank Glenn was elected chairman and several other committees were elected.

Sunday, March 15, we held our regular preaching service, Pastor Morgan delivering us a wonderful sermon on "Temptation." To show the high esteem in which our pastor is held in the community, we had a good attendance from other churches besides our large congregation.

The fifth Sunday in this month, the Fallston charge, with several other charges, are going to have a Rally at Hebron church. There are to be services Saturday afternoon and night and all day Sunday. The Friendship Christian Endeavor society is to have charge of the Christian Endeavor Sunday night, after which will be preaching.

We are planning to give a program Easter Sunday. Visitors are cordially invited.

MRS. F. B. TONEY, Reporter.

Union Grove.—It seems that the flu is visiting most every home and a few cases of pneumonia. We should all be thankful that this is not the most dangerous disease of all. This disease is "Sin."

The pastor could not be present on last Sunday morning. He sent Mr. George Berrier of Canaan to fill his place. This was a splendid sermon. I think it was enjoyed by every one present.

The attendance of the church is still not so large and you know we need the prayers of all you Christian people.

REPORTER.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson.—The Mt. Pleasant M. P. church will be dedicated to the Lord's services on the fourth Sunday in this month. We are looking forward to a grand day. We urge every body that can to come.

The second quarterly conference will be held at this same church on Saturday before the fourth Sunday. We urge all the officials to be present. Our president, Brother S. W. Taylor, will be with us on both days. Bless us!

RUTH PAYNE, Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—On Sunday evening the annual thank offering service was observed by the Woman's auxiliary. A very interesting program was rendered. The program consisted of songs by the choir; a solo by Miss Thelia Bowden, (a member of the Hollister school faculty); an exercise, "Praise Offerings," by four of the junior girls; A play, "Without Spot," was given very effectively. Pastor Fogleman gave a short talk on "The Purpose of the Thank Offering Service," after which the offering was taken. The offering was out as large as we had hoped for, there being so many of our members absent.

At the February meeting of the Woman's auxiliary, the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Williams; Vice-President, Mrs. W. D. Wood; Secretary, Kathleen Shearin; Treasurer, Mrs. E. T. Ellington. The various secretaries will be elected at the March meeting.

There is so much sickness among our members now. The flu is just raging. Some of the sick ones are Mrs. Rosa Knight, Mrs. E. T. Ellington, Mrs. E. W. Crawley and Mrs. W. D. Wood. We wish for each one a speedy recovery.

Lloyd Pulley, little three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard, died at Park View hospital, Rocky Mount, N. C., Monday, February 23, 1931. He had been sick only four days with meningitis. His body was brought to the home of his grandfather, Mr. Pulley, where the funeral service was conducted by Rev. H. F. Fogleman. Interment was made in the family cemetery. We extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

English Street Church.—We were delighted to have with us at the Sunday evening service Mr. N. M. Harrison, promotional secretary of High Point college. He brought to us a very inspiring sermon, taking his text from Matthew, 23:19-20. He said that the whole program of the church is to fit people for Heavenly citizenship and Kingly fellowship. The first requirement is to teach the facts of things, how things operate, why, source of power, relate facts back to God. Another requirement is to teach to observe and another to teach how to become perfect. A rose may become beautiful by conforming to the laws of God. The closing thought was to teach people how to live. We hope that we will have the pleasure of hearing Mr. Harrison again, who is at all times welcome at our church.

Since our last report two people from our church have been taken away. Mr. D. J. Moser died Thursday, February 26, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Bertie Bowers, this city. Mr. Moser was one of the charter members of the church and one of the most loyal members. The funeral was held at English Street church on Saturday, February 28. A large number of relatives and friends were present to pay their last respects.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Hulin died Saturday, March 7. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. D. L. Reynolds at Lovejoy church. We extend to the relatives and friends of these two loved ones our heartfelt sympathy.

Burlington, First Church.—Today was a very good day with us. Sunday school attendance registered 343, showing an increase of 54 over last Sunday's record. The offering amounted to $27.48. This being the time for Annual Baraca Day, this class of men had charge of the program. Special music was furnished by the junior quartette of four young lady members of the school, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Our pastor, Dr. Paschall, taught the Baraca class in the absence of brother C. C. Lindley, and the message was timely and helpful and appreciated by the class.

Brother C. C. Lindley's little daughter had the misfortune to get scalded while visiting with her father and mother at her grandparents at Fayetteville, N. C., ten days ago. Last reports were that she is getting along very nicely now and injuries are not as serious as first thought to be.

It was decided at the regular monthly meeting of the church last Wednesday evening to accept the invitation of the First Baptist church to hold a series of joint meetings with them the week preceding Easter Sunday. The first three services to be held in Baptist church and the following evenings to be at First church. The closing service, of course, will be at each respective church, which service will be the Easter services.

Mrs. F. W. Paschal, wife of our pastor, who has been in ill health for some weeks, is improving now and he is going to visit her at her mother's in Eastern Carolina this week. He plans to bring her home with him Wednesday.

We regret to have to report that Mr. and Mrs. Dave DeMoss and family have moved to Asheboro, N. C. These splendid people were active in the work of First church and we will feel keenly their going away. But we hope for them much success in their new home and know that the Asheboro church will gain some faithful workers.

The annual Young People's banquet of First church was held in the hut Tuesday evening, March 10, at 8 o'clock with approximately 110 people present.

The tables were beautifully decorated with white carnations and green and white ruffled crepe paper extended from one end to the other. Green and white candles were burning at each table. A candle pedestal with seven burning candles sat at the piano. Green and white were used as color schemes in honor of St. Patrick's Day.

The program was as follows: Invocation, Dr. F. W. Paschall; welcome, Tula Paul; vocal selections, Little Miss Fadine Piper; toast to visitors, Elizabeth Rogers; response, Pete Oldham; toast to girls, Charles Ephland; toast to boys, Margaret Rogers; toast to cooks and waitresses, Nettie Mae Smith; musical selections, Junior Girls' Quartette, accompanied at the piano by Lula Riddle; pep songs, directed by Elizabeth Nicholson with Doris Malone at the piano; "the mellerdrummer," a pantomime given by members of C. E. society; talk, Dr. F. W. Paschall.

Benediction.

The banquet as a whole was very successful. Little Miss Fadine Piper, four years old, charmed the people with her sweet melodies. It was the spice of the program. Much fun and laughter was created when the toastmistress, Tula Paul, introduced each speaker of the evening with a funny joke.

The Junior Girls' quartet was very appreciative and enjoyed by all. They deserve much credit in making the banquet successful. A pantomime, "The Mellerdrummer" was a very funny item on the program. A story was read aloud while the characters, each being a cardboard with their supposed names printed upon it, acted the part of the play.

Then last but not least by any means, Dr. F. W. Paschall gave a very interesting and helpful talk especially for the young people.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.—Brother Bingham brought us another good message today, using these words as a text "And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple and departed and went and hanged himself." We were glad to see so many out today. We were glad to have friends from other churches. Let us all work together for good.

If we get to heaven we have all got something to do. If we can't preach we can pray.

Mrs. W. D. Reed, let us hear from you through the Herald.

Let us pray that many souls may be saved.

Fairfield Church, Guilford Circuit.—The first Sunday in March, the president of the Annual Conference paid us a visit. He first entertained the children with some stories and a short talk. Then he read from the 6th chapter of the Gospel of St. John and used as his text the 5th and 6th verses. He showed how the Master tested Philip's faith in Him when a problem or obstacle confronts him with reference to Christ being near. He pointed out several lessons derived from the miracle of Christ's feeding the five thousand, and he also explained just how the multitude of people happened to be on the southwest side of the sea of Galilee, and how there happened to be so many baskets there at that particular time. After he had finished his eloquent discourse on the text and subject, he called their attention to what the circuit had done on the previous year and what their obligations were for the coming year. He expressed much optimism concerning the problems confronting the conference and felt sure that they would either be solved or removed. He also read some of the goals which they were striving for and made a few helpful suggestions.

Mr. Peeler and President Bowman, of the College C. E., brought over a group of young folk from the college and gave an inspiring program the first Sunday evening in March. They chose for their topic, "Loyalty." Different students made short talks on the various phases and different fields while loyalty played an important role. For special music, the pianist rendered a solo, and Mrs. Bowman sang "My Task." A large crowd was present; there being a goodly number present from the Mitchell's Grove C. E. also some visitors from the Oak Hill C. E., besides the other visitors from this immediate community. Some of the Allen Joy school teachers were also present.

The Christian Endeavor held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Levellyn on Friday, the 6th. After the business was transacted, several games were played and the hostess served delicious refreshments.

The stewards of the church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Suits Thursday, the 5th, for a short business meeting. Each steward was assigned his territory to work in for the meeting of the church budget obligations.

Mr. Orville Bails paid us a visit last Sunday and announced the meeting of the Jamestown Sunday school convention of Mitchell Grove church the fifth Sunday at 2:30 o'clock. He urged them to send a good delegation to this convention. He also asked them to take a collection for the State Sunday school work.

After Rev. Mr. Peeler's message last Sunday, the Women's Auxiliary had a short meeting.

J. VAN CASHATT, Reporter.

Siler City Church.—At the February meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary new officers were elected as follows: Mrs. L. L. Woody, president; Mrs. Duncan Welch, secretary; Mrs. D. L. Johnson, treasurer. We are about to finish up with the old year and feel sure we have accomplished much good in many ways. All dues have been paid and we enter into the new year with a good bank account. We are few in number but all have a mind to work.

Dr. Williams was with us again yesterday and delivered two more of his good sermons just like he always does. We are glad to say our congregations are growing rapidly, especially at the night service.

The C. E. society has good congregations and they stay for preaching which helps to swell the attendance and is another step in the right direction for them.

Circle No. 1 will have charge of the Wednesday evening mid-week prayer service hour and will present a Temperance play.

The Philathea class will have a business meeting Thursday night. At this meeting a miscellaneous shower will be given to Mrs. Victor Duncan, one of our members, who was married one week ago. Before her marriage she was Miss Hettie McLaughlin.

We are glad to have Mrs. D. L. Johnson home again after spending some weeks with her sister in Greensboro. We are also glad to see her so much improved in health after taking this much-needed rest.

Mrs. J. E. Fox, our beloved Sunday school teacher, was absent yesterday on account of her eyes. She is under the care of a specialist and he finds her eyes are in a critical condition. We hope and pray her eyes may speedily be restored. We miss her so much and hope she may soon be back in her accustomed place.

Mrs. Ben White, one of our oldest members, was called to her reward in February. She had been a faithful member of our church for the past ten years and attended when able. For the past few years she seldom went any place on account of ill health, but she was always true to her church. She was a good Christian woman, one of the saints in Israel. No doubt she is over on the other shore with all her loved ones gone before, enjoying the fruits of her well spent life here on earth. Those who knew her best loved her most. An obituary will appear later.

We have had extra good attendance at Sunday school all through the winter months. Yesterday we had 124 present. We hope when spring opens up every room may be filled.

MRS. J. A. COOPER, Reporter.

Graham.—Last Wednesday night the primary and junior departments of the Sunday school gave a most delightful banquet having as their guest the entire Sunday school. The meeting was held in the hut which was very pretty with its decorations, suggestive of St. Patrick's day. Special music was furnished during the evening and on departing all present declared the occasion a successful one.

On Sunday morning Rev. J. A. Burgess, pastor of Bethel church, and our pastor, J. C. Auman exchanged pulpits. Mr. Burgess brought us a very interesting message and we were indeed pleased to have him come over and worship with us.

Sunday morning, March 22, we are to observe what is known as Woman's day. We are to have with us Mrs. W. C. Hammer, president of North Carolina Women's Auxiliary, who will deliver the message at that time. We are looking forward to Mrs. Hammer's presence with great anticipation and especially want to urge the young ladies and the women of the church to come out and hear her as we feel sure Mrs. Hammer's message will be both helpful and inspiring.

Preparations are being made for a special program on Easter Sunday morning, and Rev. J. C. Auman has advised that at that time the doors of the church will be open to all those wishing to join.

South Lexington Church.—We had 211 in Sunday school today.

At our morning service we were very fortunate in having a male quartet from High Point College to sing for us. The quartet is composed of Messrs. Lyons, Moser, Howard and Lindley. All of these young men are good singers, and the large crowd which was present seemed to enjoy the service very much.

In the evening service the church was almost filled to its capacity again. The Sunshine quartet rendered good music for us also. Brother Isley preached a very forceful sermon. He used as a subject, "Is the world getting better or worse?" The scripture lesson was found in 2nd Timothy, third chapter verses 2nd and 3rd. He presented some facts to show how negligent the people are becoming concerning the church and its work and urged each one to strive harder than ever before for the upbuilding of the kingdom.

Our Ladies' Aid are getting active again; they have started to work on another quilt which we hope will be a great success. They are also planning for another supper Saturday, March 21; that we also hope to make good from. We ask the prayers from all that our church may grow and all working may continue on.

PHONSE BEAN, Reporter.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—A few women have have done some foundation planting around the church, using native shrubs with a few donated from their own yards. They have only begun, but they are hoping to make the church grounds attractive.

The Woman's Auxiliary meets regularly and carries out the program. Those who attend are reaping the benefits, but they will gladly share with others. Come to the next meeting and see. The Thanksgiving program will be given Sunday, March 22nd, at 7:30 p. m. We hope to have a full church.

The third Sunday was a pretty day and people who had not been coming to church regularly were present. The pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, talked on the Lord's Supper, after which quite a number communed.

REPORTER.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—Rev. P. E. Bingham is still filling his appointments the first Sunday night and second Sunday a. m. with his wonderful messages.

If nothing prevents we will have an Easter program the first Sunday night.

Brother C. F. Hawkins holds prayer service the first and third Sunday a. m. Be glad to have you come.

Since my last report Mrs. Berta Hawkins welcomed the C. E. society in her home for a social; games were played and later refreshments were served. They also gave a play at South Rosemary last Friday night.

Our community is having right much "flu."

Mr. Jack Hawkins' mule threw him and he has been suffering with a dislocated arm.

I have been very ill for a long time now. I hardly can appreciate the kindness of the people and Drs. Justice and Palmer and especially Dr. Justice, but God knew best and took our little babe.

He went to live with the angels,
Our babe so sweet;
There to stay with Jesus,
And await us to meet.

REPORTER.

Mt. Pleasant.—"God's Providential Care for His Followers" was the subject of Rev. J. R. Hutton's sermon to an interested congregation on the first Sunday of this month.

We were given a panoramic view of the lives of a number of the most interesting characters in the Old and New Testaments.

Samson first appeared, flaunting his God given strength before the Philistines in a manner that ended so disastrously. Flirting with sin; courting it, and at last being overcome by it, the Nazirite was forsaken by God; taken into custody by the Philistines, and reduced to the state of a horse.

Compared to this character was a man of the opposite calibre. Sold into Egyptian captivity by his jealous brothers, the noble Joseph remained true to his Christian teachings and to his God; meeting his great temptation with the question, "Whf should I yield to this weakness and sin against God?" Proving thereby that he was a gentleman. "Doing what it takes to get by with man is a hypocrite—not a gentleman," declared Mr. Hutton, who then sketched the results of Joseph's steadfastness to God: the elevation of the simple, unknown slave to the position of business manager in the land of his captivity.

In short, dramatic sketches, the lives of Jonah, Abraham, Lot, Daniel and his three friends, Paul and Silas were reviewed. A search light was thrown upon them in the hours of their temptation, and their attitude towards God, when on trial, was observed.

In conclusion our pastor forcefully revealed the fact that God is taking account of his children when on trial, and if they remain true to Him He will make their enemies to leave them alone. "All things will work together for good to them that love God. His providence, His mercy is extended to all of those who love Him. Let us be true, staunch, and all shall be well if we love God."

The members of the Missionary Societies of our church are making the late Mrs. Rebecca Causey a memorial member of the society, Mrs. J. A. Burgess being the chairman of the committee appointed to raise the necessary funds.

The three circles of our Missionary society are finishing up one of the most successful years ever. They are beginning to unfurl banners of victory as they are marching to the end of their year with a "Paid Up" sign greeting them.

Our Ladies' Aid, whose president is Mrs. J. A. Burgess, is planning to buy new gutters for the church; new shrubbery for the church grounds and is going to begin a general spring cleaning program for the improvement and beautifying of our picturesque old church grounds.

Mr. W. G. Causey read to the Sunday school Sunday morning, a portion of the will of the late Mrs. Sara Poole in which she bequeathed $100 to the Mt. Pleasant church; the interest of which is to go each year towards the upkeep of the graves of her mother and sister, Rachel and Barbara May, who are buried in the Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

The Young People's C. E. society of our church went in a body to Pleasant Hill Sunday evening to render a program before the C. E. society of that community. We are expecting the Pleasant Hill society to repay the visit and the program at an early date.

There has been a lot of sickness in the neighborhood, but all seem to be improving nicely.

Mrs. Ada Amick who has spent the winter with her son, Prof. Clyde Amick who is a member of the faculty at the University of Tennessee, in Knoxville, has returned home for the summer.

Mr. Raymond Amick, who is in from Massachusetts, was a visitor at the home of his aunt, Mrs. W. F. Amick, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Bowman were business visitors in Durham last Saturday.

Miss Edith Causey, who is a member of Eli Whitney school faculty, spent the week-end with her parents and visited our church Sunday.

Mrs. S. A. Alexander, who has been suffering from slight injuries sustained in a fall, was able to attend our church services again Sunday.

English St. Church.—Our Sunday school continues to grow. Our young people have plans well on way for a hut to accommodate their increasing numbers. Over $100 has already been raised for this purpose.

The Ladies' Aid society and the Brotherhood will hold a joint meeting at the home of Mrs. L. R. Gibson on Tuesday evening.

We are much pleased with our Young People's society. Recently at a meeting of the High Point C. E. union, our society won the shield for doing the best work in the past three months. They are planning a pageant entitled, "Joy Greets the Dawning," which will be given at the evening service on Easter Sunday.

First Church, High Point.—The usual Sunday services were held; the church school with Prof. C. R. Hinshaw, superintendent, met at 9:45 o'clock, and the Junior church with the leaders, Mesdames S. S. Coe and L. R. Johnston, worshipped in the assembly room at 11 o'clock. At the same hour the adult congregation in the main auditorium, after listening to a pretty vocal solo, "Peace Be Still," by Miss Vera Smith, and an anthem, "Move Love to Thee" by the choir, heard an eloquent sermon by Rev. R. I. Farmer, on "Women and the Kingdom of God." He said in part, after choosing his text from II Kings 4:8, "And it fell on a day that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman," that it seems fitting to speak on this theme in this church where the women are doing so many fine things, and to encourage them to go forward in service and perform even greater tasks for the Master, who has sent forth woman with God-given queenliness. Till Christ came, she had no rights before the law. Husbands could beat, sell or kill their wives almost at pleasure. Jesus came to teach that men cannot defame womanhood without defaming himself. His most revolutionary attitude was that of his teaching toward women, because she has been lifted from lower depths of regard. Christian women have signally honored Christ. Somebody said, "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," but she must be careful what she holds in the other hand. She must know what kind of pictures she hangs on her walls, what books are on the shelves to influence the minds of her young children, what music they hear, and what they will see at the movies. This great Shunamite woman who was nameless, had a keen insight and discernment of true values and could judge people. She opened her home to the prophet Elisha. Women of the First church, let me say to you, let your discernment be of true values; do not follow the line of least resistance. Take great pleasure and contentment in your own homes. Martin Luther said to his wife, "You make me what you will, you reign supreme." I believe that the reason for so much infidelity to marriage vows is that the women are desirous of being stars in the social world. All-night dances and bridge parties are not conducive to spiritual life, and such mothers seldom give sons to the ministry or daughters to Christian service. I say to fathers and mothers today to take an open, determined stand for God and let your children know it. O women for whom Christ died, the twentieth century is the opening door of recognition for you. Do not fail in your opportunity of loyalty to your Savior.

At the vesper service at 5 o'clock the prelude was given in an interesting manner by Edgar Hartley, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. on "High Point Recreations." Miss Miriam Sloan played a flute solo, "Idyll." The minister delivered a brief talk on "Jesus and Health."

On Monday afternoon the five circles of the Women's Auxiliary held their final meeting before being disbanded. At the home of Mrs. J. C. Welch, after the business was finished the hostess, assisted by her daughters, Mesdames Penny and Foister, Misses Ruth and Elizabeth Welch, served delicious refreshments, ice cream, cake, and mints in green and white, colors symbolic of St. Patrick's day. Circle No. 9 plans to hold a food sale next Saturday morning at the store of Mr. W. C. Beavans on S. Main St. Cakes, chess pies, chicken salad, doughnuts, and other delicacies will be offered for sale.

The membership of the Woman's Auxiliary will be rearranged in circles next month for the new administration under the leadership of Mrs. Paul S. Kennett, president. At the last general meeting, held last week at the home of Mrs. C. C. Robbins, a beautiful pewter tea set of three pieces was presented to the retiring president, Mrs. S. S. Coe, in a graceful speech by Mrs. R. I. Farmer on behalf of the members of the auxiliary as a token of love, esteem, and appreciation of loyal and untiring service for ten years as president of Ladies' Aid society and for the past two years as president of the three merged societies, now known as the auxiliary.

The Central District Ministers' conference held its meeting in First church Tuesday with a fine attendance of 50 members present, besides several laymen and women. Dr. J. H. Straughn was present, and made an address; Dr. S. K. Spahr, of Greensboro, who served this church as pastor for one year, and who is most pleasantly remembered by our people for his consecrated, uplifting sermons and beautiful prayers, was also present and delivered an address to the ministers. A delicious chicken dinner was served to them and several friends by the Woman's Auxiliary at 12:30 o'clock. The convention at Washington, May 12-14, was stressed at this meeting and the ministers were urged to attend.

The Wednesday evening Fellowship supper will be the final one before Easter. The topic for the minister's talk will be "Roger Williams and Liberty of Conscience."

Mrs. C. C. Robbins attended the State D. A. R. conference at Statesville last week as a delegate from the Alexander Martin chapter and in April will go to Washington, D. C., to attend the National conference.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Penny returned last Friday from a delightful trip to Orlando, Florida.

We are much pleased to see Miss Mary Lyndon out again after a illness of a few weeks.

The C. E. society held its weekly meeting Monday evening, which was followed by a pleasant social. Miss Margaret Snipes was leader on the topic, "My Responsibility to the Church."

The Young Girls' Circle No. 1 of the Auxiliary will meet Thursday evening with Miss Grace Koontz, 309 Fourth street; Nos. 2 and 3 will meet in the church after the Fellowship supper Wednesday evening.

First Church, Albemarle.—The Ladies' auxiliary met last Tuesday afternoon in the ladies' parlor. After the business hour the Kani Snotherly circle served tuna fish salad, coffee and cake.

Mrs. Jap Hatley and Mrs. Ira Smart will be joint hostesses, in the home of the former, to the Ladies' auxiliary at a quarter social Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The ladies will serve a supper in the church dining hall Saturday evening, beginning at 5 o'clock and continuing through eight. Every one is cordially invited.

Family day will be observed in our church next Sunday. All families are urged to be present and sit together for services.

Mrs. George L. Curry, who has been confined to her bed for several weeks is improving.

Mrs. Dan Hatley, a teacher in our Sunday school, who has been ill for several weeks, was able to be with us again last Sunday.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—We have had good attendance at S. S. and preaching services since our last report. On the fourth Sunday in February Brother Trollinger filled his appointment with a very impressive sermon. The second Sunday afternoon we had with us our president, Dr. S. W. Taylor, who preached to an attentive congregation. Dr. Taylor's text was from Luke 5:4-5. He showed that our difficulties could be overcome by "Obedience to Christ." He was well received here and we were also glad to have Mrs. Taylor in our congregation. In this community is her old home and she is much loved by all who remember her.

An Easter pageant is being planned; which will be given Easter Sunday night at 7:30. We hope that many will come and enjoy it, and that our offering will be the largest in the history of the church. Pray for us.

use of automobiles would save traveling expenses.

This is not only an opportunity for the women of our church to learn more about the great missionary work in which they are interested, but it will be an opportunity for them to learn more about every department of the general work of our denomination, hear splendid inspirational addresses, and see some of the beautiful and historical spots in and around our National Capitol.

The branch is also urged to request each auxiliary to send one or more women, and help to pay their expenses if possible.

When the women of our organization co-operate in doing a big piece of work it seldom fails of success. Each member of every auxiliary in our branch is asked to co-operate in this work. Will you do so?

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, Cor. Sec.

We are always glad to print the names of the new Auxiliary officers with whom the branch officers wish to keep in touch, provided the person sending them in sends also their complete mail addresses. This we do for the benefit of the general work. These officers are: President, corresponding secretary, treasurer, and the secretaries of departments.

ASHEBORO AUXILIARY

The executive committee of the Woman's Auxiliary held its March meeting with Mrs. J. T. Pugh. Much business was transacted, finishing up the year's work and planning for the new year; the circles were re-arranged and chairmen selected. They are as follows: No. 1 Mrs. D. D. Allmond, No. 2 Mrs. L. F. Ross, No. 3 Mrs. J. S. Lewis, No. 4 Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., No. 5 Mrs. Talton Lowdermilk.

The annual meeting of the Auxiliary was held in the social room of the church Monday evening, March 9, with a large attendance. A program had been prepared and was splendidly carried out, being one of the best meetings ever held. The president, Mrs. Esther Ross, presided. She read a paper on "Yesterday and Tomorrow In Today." In this she gave a report of work undertaken and accomplished the past year, opportunities of today and plans for the coming year with the co-operation of all.

Reports were then given by the other officers, chairmen of circles and secretaries of the various causes. These reports showed circle chairmen had good reports, each circle paying their budget in full. The treasurer gave a report of receipts and disbursements of the year, both local and missionary budgets being met. Two new funds have been started for the new year. A parsonage fund and a pipe organ fund; the auxiliary is also taking out five more shares in the Building and Loan. Following the business which closed the year's work, the officers for the new year were installed, with Rev. R. C. Stubbins in charge; this was a very beautiful and impressive service.

The glee club, orchestra and choir, consisting of fifty students from High Point college, will give a program at the local high school auditorium, Thursday, March 26th, at 7:30 p. m. They are coming to Asheboro upon the invitation of circle No. 3 of the M. P. church.

Clothing and Other Gifts

In last week's Herald we meant to give Miss Mollie Wheelis credit for 2 dress patterns. Mrs. Walter Dunn, Enfield, 2 towels and 3 wash cloths.

Mrs. J. E. Foust, Mebane, for the Ladies' Aid society and for the William Nicholson Mission band, a shower of new and useful articles for the Home.

We thank all of you helped to make the above report.

The Hymn Books

We have been calling for a bit of money to help us buy some new hymnals for our chapel. The old ones had given out. We had previously received $2.00. This morning a kind and generous young lady of First Church, High Point, handed us $15.00 for the hymnals. It will take $24.00 to pay for 60 copies @40 cents per copy. Seven dollars more will pay for the books. Who will help?

Don't Get Too Far Behind the Wagon

We are so thankful to Dr. S. W. Taylor for the urgent appeal for the Home in his notes last week in the Herald, and we appreciate and believe fully his statement when he says, "It must be maintained and it will be, our people have never failed the Home. They will not fail it now."

Richardson

Lillian Myrtle Richardson, daughter of J. Turner Richardson and his wife, Maggie, was born January 9, 1908. She was converted when about 10 years of age, and joined Fair Grove Methodist Protestant church on Haw River circuit, and so far as we are able to learn, we believe that she was a consistent member of that church until her death during the early hours of February 9, 1931, being 22 years, and one month of age.

After graduating from the Reidsville high school, she entered Guilford college, graduating from that institution with the class of 1928. She stood high in her classes, and in the admiration and respect, not only of the student body, but of the faculty as well. The annual of 1927 said of her: "She is a mathematical genius, and the department is yet to be found where she cannot make an 'A'."

Upon her graduation from Guilford at the age of 20, she became a member of the Alamance high school faculty, as a teacher of mathematics and science, which position she held with distinction and honor until her death.

Myrtle was loved by all who knew her. Her sunny smile, and cheerful disposition made many friends for her, and those who came under the influence of her lovely personality will not soon forget. She seemed to be happiest when making some one else happy. This was especially shown in her attitude toward the children who chanced to be long in her presence. In order to make a child farm, and the wagon was on the road, we liked to get out and walk occasionally. Father did not mind, and his caution usually was, don't get too far behind the wagon; for it will be harder to catch up than you think."

And if we dared to get behind we would run like young Indians to catch up, even though the mules just kept walking.

The difficulty with this Home is that it got behind, and has been running that way all through this depression. The Home has been supported well since we have been here; but somehow nobody seems to rally to the call to help catch it up.

So I am now urging that our people all heed the next sentence in Dr. Taylor's reference to the Home, "But what is needed is more regular support on the part of more churches and Sunday schools. We urge pastors and superintendents of every church in the conference to take this matter up with the people, and insist that they adopt the rule of monthly giving."

Our Farm

We are getting many things planted in the gardens, so as soon as growing weather comes we will soon be getting some food supplies from our own farm. The dairy and the poultry yards are yielding good supplies now. All will be well if all of us stand together steadily for a long, strong, and steady pull. God bless all of you.

Your in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

happier and contented she often denied herself the association of older people visiting in the home, spending her time helping that child enjoy his visit, for no child could ever feel lonely or unwanted when in her company. It is quite significant that one of the last acts of her life was that of sending a post card to one of her many child friends.

Myrtle Richardson had a large place in her heart and love for the many girls and boys to whom she ministered daily in the school room. Many times she has spoken of these children to her pastor, always saying something that convinced him of her love for them, and of her desire to give them something not found in books and mathematics and science, but of the finer and better things of life.

She loved Fair Grove church. When at home over the week-end she never failed to be in her place in the services. Her presence was always an inspiration and encouragement to her minister, showing by her attitude her appreciation of services rendered, and often speaking words of encouragement that helped make the cares of a large parish easier to carry. Her home will miss her cheerful presence, her mother will miss her helping hand in sharing with her burdens of the home, and we at the church will miss her faithfulness and co-operation.

Death lies on her like an untimely frost

Upon the fairest flower of the field,— and we must sing

A dirge for her, the doubly dead,

In that she died so young.

From the statement of those in the home, and those who have known her over a period of years, and from our own personal knowledge, we are persuaded that she has found her place in that fair land of which the poet sang—

There is a land where beauty cannot fade,
Nor sorrow dim the eye;

Where true love shall not droop nor be dismayed,

And none shall ever die.

Her body sleeps quietly beneath the beautiful oaks of Fair Grove cemetery, awaiting the resurrection, when all the mysteries of life and death will be revealed.

A Man Who Overlooked God

The story comes from far away
And from a time before our day
And tells about a man so odd
That he forsooth forgot his God.

And God his business partner, too,
With whom he daily had to do!
Without God's help the firm would fail
And all be advertised for sale.

This man and God—they tilled the earth
And helped to save the land from dearth;
From God came soil and rain and snow
And gentle warmth to make things grow.

The man supplied a little work
And even this did often shirk.
But when the harvest time came on
The man was up at early dawn.

The crop was large, for rain and sun
Their vital parts had both well done.
But this strange man now claimed the whole—
Begrudged his God a single dole!

His bumper crop gave hope of ease
And all the things that men do please.
For many years he thought to feast
With nought to hinder in the least.

God saw a very different sight
With better eyes and better light:
He saw that man quite soon depart
From all on which he'd set his heart.

The Gideons

The Gideons is an organization that we do not hear much about, but they are doing a great work, especially in the way of circulating the Bible. Their aim is to place a Bible in every room of every hotel. Their statistics indicate great progress toward that end. Up to January 31, 1931, they had placed 1,114,911 Bibles. Some of these were sent to foreign countries. North Carolina received 13,606. These Bibles cost one dollar each. The organization holds many state conventions. One was held for North Carolina in Greensboro last Saturday and Sunday. The retiring president, Mr. E. F. Craven, came to Calvary church Sunday morning and made a brief address in the interest of the work. The organization publishes a magazine now in its 31st volume. The movement was started by two Christian men who chanced to meet in the same hotel room, each more or less suspicious of the other. One of them went to bed without any show of religious devotion. The other took out a Bible, saying, "It is my habit to read and pray before retiring: I trust you will excuse me." The man in bed then confessed that he usually followed the same practice but was prevented by timidity that night. Thus began the important Gideon movement.

What Is the Matter With the World?

The whole world seems to be out of order. There is trouble everywhere. It might be and ought to be otherwise. The world might be contented and happy. Surely God would have it so. Why is it not so? There have been many diagnoses of the world's present troubles, and most of them have been superficial. Few of them have traced the trouble to its roots.

The main trouble is not economic, though that is most complained of. Hunger outside of famine-stricken China has not cut a wide swath. There are worse symptoms than hunger. We read of monstrous crimes in the cities and country places as well. There is evidence of a serious moral malady. It is epidemic in all countries and among all races of men. It manifests itself in India, in Africa, in Europe, in our own America. Plenty will not cure this ailment. There is a cure for it, and it is a specific. It will not fail if thoroughly tried and nothing else will succeed. The infallible remedy is—"Get right with God."

—The article we reprint from the Mission Herald was written by a colored man who seems to understand quite well the situation in Liberia, the Negro republic. The situation if as represented is deplorable. The Negro race is on trial in this political experiment and it is unfortunate for the race to make a serious failure in self-government.

—Many deaths are being reported as is usual at this season of the year, and our space for obituaries is overtaxed. We ask all to be patient.

—Our state legislature is having an agonizing time in providing revenue to meet expenses assumed. The difficulty is in finding any class of people willing to bear the brunt. The landowners do not want it, the merchants do not want it, nobody will volunteer to take it.

LIBERIA'S PLIGHT

Liberia, the Negro republic on the west coast of Africa, is now passing through the most serious crisis in her history. Many are doubtful of her retaining her position as a self-governing nation. Every negro in America ought to be deeply concerned over her plight.

The civilized nations of the world have considered this Negro republic as a real experiment in Negro government and self-determination. There on the west coast of Africa is a tract of land about the size of Ohio, where the Negro has been undisturbed in forming his own government, drafting his own constitution to govern the same. He elected his own president and government officials, all of whom were of the Negro race. From president down, including the judges, police, the court officials, the soldiers, all were black people. The white man came into the picture only when these colored officials requested him to do so. There the Negro had the opportunity of his life to demonstrate to the world what the Negro can do if given a fair chance. There unhampered, undisturbed, he has had liberty to show the world how well he can work out his own salvation, and the contribution he can make to civilization. For a number of years complaints have been made to the civilized world that the few Americo-Liberians, who constitute the government of the republic, were oppressing and even enslaving the masses of aboriginal people who inhabit the republic. These complaints and charges recently led to a Commission being sent to Liberia to inquire into the grave charges. The Liberian government agreed to the appointing of the Commission. In fact, one of the members of the Commission of Inquiry was appointed by the Liberian government, a second one being an American negro, our own Dr. Charles S. Johnson, representing the United States government; the third and last member of the Commission being a white man appointed by the League of Nations. This Commission has finished its inquiry and reported its findings—the same has been published—a copy of which may be secured from our State department at Washington.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" could not furnish more sad reading than this report. The acts of some of the government officials of Liberia as revealed in this report are more horrible and disgraceful than one could begin to imagine. They took liberty for license. They seemed to have felt that the poor natives had no redress. According to the report they subjected the poor, defenseless aborigines to the cruelest treatment. They forced them to labor on their farms without pay; the most extortionate fines were placed on them when no offense had been committed. They were imprisoned, mercilessly beaten until some died. When the able-bodied men ran from the villages to escape forced labor and enslavement, the old men, the wives and children were caught and carried away in most inhuman manner. Ofttimes they were hung up in the huts and smoked. In other cases their villages were burned outright. Invariably large fines were imposed that led to men having to pawn their wives and daughters, which meant slavery in order that funds might be secured to pay such fines. The report further showed that all of these inhuman methods were resorted to in order that certain Liberian officials, who were also labor agents, might get large numbers of laborers to ship out of the country to the Spanish island, Fernando Poo, and to other places. The report also revealed that these poor people were treated cruelly, paid improperly, and many died from the cruel treatment. In addition to receiving fifteen dollars a head for supplying this labor, the agents also got a large part of their pay. Further still, the chiefs and people of the villages that always resented such methods of securing such labor were illegally fined hundreds of dollars, while their cattle, fowl, rice and food supply were often taken, all of which benefited the labor agents. The report showed that the natives were forced to supply laborers for the making of roads through Liberia. These laborers had to furnish their own tools and food and also work without pay. For a laborer to come late to work or not bring his tools for road-making meant a fine, which was kept by the superintendent in charge, who recruited such labor and directed the road-making. We have printed enough to give only a faint idea of the sad, inhuman conditions revealed in this report as existing in the Republic of Liberia.

After the Commission made its report to the League of Nations and our State Department, and the same was properly filed with the Liberian government, two months elapsed without one thing being done by the Liberian officials to show regret of existing conditions, or to express any intention of remedying same. Herein lies Liberia's greater sin and failure. This indifference seems to have been the straw that broke the camel's back. Because of this America threatened to break off diplomatic relations. Other nations assumed a similar attitude. This led to a crisis, and the president of Liberia had to resign, also the vice-president, who it is alleged, was the principal actor in many of the atrocities committed as revealed in the report. It is hard to tell just yet what the outcome will be. It seems that Liberia may have to request outside help to come in and organize her affairs, and see to it that the recommendations of the Commission of Inquiry be carried out. This may affect her autonomy as a self-governing nation. No one knows what it will lead to. The white people have taken all the rest of Africa. Only this little spot left to Negroes. This is the only place where they can send missionaries without having trouble with getting them into the continent. Let us pray that this door will be left open.

May Liberia's fate be a lesson to us. When complaints are made about the affairs we manage, let us make the necessary investigations and accordingly put our houses in order. This includes our church work, our conventions, our lodges—whatever affairs we may manage. As Negroes, may the love of graft not wreck our whole group.—The Mission Herald.

WHEN CHILDREN MAKE THE APPLICATION

By REV. JAMES L. ELDERDICE

Children often show surprising adroitness in making such application of Biblical teaching as best suits their own desires or purposes. A small boy teased his father for a watch till he was forbidden to mention the matter again. At family prayers the next morning, when asked for his Scripture verse, the youngster quoted, "What I say unto you I say unto all—watch."

Some of these applications are very diverting. A father gave his boy a dime and a quarter and told him he might put one of them in the collection. After church the father asked "Son, which did you give?" "I thought at first I would give the quarter, but just as the plate came along I remembered the verse 'God loveth a cheerful giver.' So I gave the dime. I could give that cheerfully."

This same verse served a good purpose upon another occasion. The three-year-old son of a Methodist minister went with his mother to a gathering of ladies. At the proper time he was given a cookie. He ate it in short order and asked for another. The hostess said "I'll give you another if you will sing for us."

"Can't sing," was his reply, "but I know something I can say."

"That will do all right," the lady answered, expecting to hear "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," or some other nursery classic. But the little fellow drew himself up in real Sunday School fashion, and said in its place:

"God loveth a cheerful giver."

The lady gave him the cookie, and the whole company seemed to be very cheerful about it.

The favorite granddaughter of W. E. Gladstone one morning refused to get up, and all other means failing, Mr. Gladstone was called to her, "Why don't you get up, my child?" he asked. "Why, grandpa, didn't you tell me to do what the Bible says?" replied Dorothy. "Yes, certainly." "Well, it disapproves of any early rising—says it's a waste of time," rejoined the child. Mr. Gladstone was unable to agree, but Dorothy was sure of her ground. "You listen, then," she said, in reply to his exclamation of astonishment, and taking up her Bible, she read Ps. 127:2, laying great emphasis on the words, "It is vain for you to rise up early."

The Sunday School teacher had read the day's Scripture lesson to the class, and she began asking questions to see how attentively the young girls had followed her. "And what," she asked, "is the lesson taught us in the parable of the five wise virgins?"

Eleven-year-old Ruth held up her hand. "That we should always be on the lookout for a bridegroom."

Sometimes the applications made by children are rather disconcerting. "If you wish to be good looking when you grow up, you should go to bed early," was the advice of a lady teacher to her class in hygiene. Isabel rather rudely ventured to say in reply, "I spect you set up late when you was a girl." The Sunday School teacher who inquired of her class, "What do you understand by the vanities of the world?" must have been somewhat taken aback by the prompt reply, "Them feathers in your hat."

A minister was once addressing a Sunday School of little children. He desired to compare himself to a shepherd, and his congregation to the shepherd's flock.

"What are these beautiful animals?" he said, pointing to a drawing on the blackboard.

"Sheep! sheep!" chorused the children.

"And the cloaked figure in the foreground—what is he?"

"A shepherd!" the children cried. "And now, dear children," agreed the minister, beaming with satisfaction, "can you tell me what it is that the shepherd does for the sheep?"

A score of little mouths opened wide, and a score of treble voices cried shrilly, "He shears 'em!"

A noted Sunday School worker in Kansas was asked to talk to children of a Sunday School on the subject of temperance. He was very earnest in the cause, and wore a blue ribbon as a badge of his principles. Rising before the school, and pointing to his blue ribbon, he said: "Now can any of you children give me a reason why I am not a drunkard?" There was no reply for a moment; then a childish voice piped out: "Cause this is a prohibition town."

Sometimes an application is made that "gets back" at one against whom there may be held a grievance. Tommy, for some offence, as a punishment, was not permitted to eat at the family table, but was assigned to a solitary place in the corner. He bowed his head, and pronounced what he, no doubt, considered a very appropriate grace: "They prepared a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."

Another boy became very angry with his mother. He had been duly impressed by the fact that he must never "call names," but his Sunday School lesson supplied him with a way to obey rules, and yet "let-off steam." Pointing a severely condemning finger at his mother he quoted fiercely, stressing the first two words till they became good English phrases of contempt: "Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin!"

Little Johnnie quarreled with his sister, and would not kiss and be friends. His aunt said: "Oh, don't you remember what papa read at family prayers this morning, that we were to forgive seventy times seven?" "Yes," replied Johnny, "but I ticklerly noticed it was to your brother, not sister."

"Now, boys," said a Sunday School teacher, "I want each of you to subscribe something toward the mission of the Caribboos. I shall hand the box around, and as each of you will contribute, you will, I hope, say some appropriate text. Now Charlie, show a good example."

A ruddy-faced urchin stepped forward, dropped in his penny and observed: "It is better to give than to receive."

Then another contributed a copper saying, "Waste not, want not."

This was ruled somewhat out of order but it was fairly capped by a third youngster, who evidently parted with his penny with reluctance, for as he dropped it into the box he murmured: "A fool and his money are soon parted."

A GOOD PRESCRIPTION FOR DAILY USE

Don't worry. Don't hurry "Too-swift" arrives as tardily as "Too-slow." Sleep and rest abundantly. Spend less nervous energy each day than you make. Be cheerful. "A light heart lives long." Think only healthful thoughts. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." "Seek peace and pursue it." "Work like a man, but don't be worked to death." Avoid passion and excitement; a moment's anger may be fatal. Associate with healthy people; health is contagious as well as disease. Don't carry the whole world on your shoulders, far less the universe; trust the good Lord. Never despair. "Lost hope is a fatal disease." Trust the Master, and go forward.—Selected.

Fallston

March 14, Saturday.—At the request of Brother Harrison, I went to Fallston on this date to meet an appointment for him in the interest of his work. He could not go because of pressing duties at the college. The Fallston Center was organized according to Brother Harrison's plan of work, and arrangements made for a Leadership Training School to be held there during the week following the sixth of July—Monday to Friday. This Center is well located for a splendid school. Pastors Morgan, Morris and Ridge were present, and participated in the organization.

Kannapolis and Concord

March 15, Sunday.—I had the pleasure of being with each of these churches on this date, in the order mentioned. The Kannapolis church has made marked progress during the past twelve months. Since my last visit there during last conference year the church has been ceiled. This has made, of course, a decided improvement in the appearance and the comfort of the building. The increase in the congregation is quite noticeable also. The church gives promise of growth and usefulness. Brother Love is working hard, and is being supported well by his people. He has the handicap, though of a too small financial support. We trust that there may be improvement in this particular. A church debt is hampering some, but the brethren are working at this faithfully, and will ultimately pay it off. We were greatly pleased to find such marked improvement in our work at this place. We learned from pastor Love that he had just lost his father by death. We tender to him the tender sympathy of the brethren.

The Concord appointment was at night. A goodly number were present, and earnest attention encouraged our effort. This church has a great opportunity, and it will no doubt continue to service in increasing measure as the years come and go. Since conference the Sunday School enrollment has increased by one hundred. The Baraca class has an enrollment of 124. New pews have just been installed in the room occupied by this class. There seems to be good interest in this organization. The women of the church are bestirring themselves in an effort to raise as much as possible on their budget before the branch meeting. The church has recently suffered a great loss in the passing of one of its most splendid and consecrated young men, Brother Ray Sides, son of Brother and Sister L. H. Sides. We extend tender sympathy to his loved ones, and to the church. Heaven is richer, no doubt, by his going. Sister Milloway has had a protracted illness, but was out again when I was there. Brother Milloway is giving his usual earnestness to his work, and is having the support of his people.

Pastor's Federation

March 17, Tuesday.—The meeting of the Central Federation was held on this date, as scheduled, in First church, High Point, with Chairman H. W. Maier presiding. The attendance, which was not limited to the Central Federation, was most gratifying. Dr. S. K. Spahr and Dr. J. H. Straughn were the principal speakers of the occasion, and each was heard with deep interest and appreciation. Dr. Spahr spoke on, "My Message to the Ministers of Today." Dr. Straughn dealt with the Washington Convention to be held in May. At the luncheon, which followed in the basement of the church, Dr. Straughn spoke again. Mr. Harrison spoke at this time also, in the interest of High Point College. It was a regret to us not to have Dr. Humphreys present. He was kept away because of another engagement. It was gratifying to have a number of laymen present at the luncheon hour. The luncheon was served by the women of the church in their usual good way. The meeting was pleasing and helpful from every standpoint.

North Davidson

March 21-22.—The appointments on this charge for this date were only partly kept. The 11 o'clock service was held at Mt. Pleasant on Saturday, according to plan, and the quarterly conference was convened in the afternoon. But I had to leave that in charge of the pastor. An automobile accident, involving my two sons and badly damaging my car, called me home. My eldest son and a neighbor boy received painful cuts but no serious damage. On Sunday morning I returned to Mt. Pleasant for the dedication service, arriving in time to participate in the Sunday School. Considering the rain and muddy roads, quite a number were present, but the brethren thought best to postpone the dedication of the church until the fourth Sunday in May — Memorial Day at this church. We observed the Communion service at the 11 o'clock hour, but held no afternoon service. Owing to the rain and slick roads, we did not go to Bethesda for the night appointment. I do not like to fail to keep an appointment, but the bad weather seemed to justify it this time. This charge was second from the top last year in the number of professions, and led in the number of accessions. The list of HERALD subscribers seems much too small for a strong charge like this one. The pastor is interested, and will continue his efforts to increase subscriptions. Since we are to be on the charge again in May, we will not write more at this time. We enjoyed a brief stay with the pastor and his family in their home before returning to High Point Sunday night.

Easter

Just two more Sundays and this significant and happy festive season will be here. Of course all Sunday Schools that are planning to hold the Easter program already have supplies, and are getting ready for the day. We earnestly desire that these occasions may be worshipful, and full of the hope and joy that Easter signifies. And let us urge again a generous offering. The Budget Council and the New Century Service Commission are urging each school to set an Easter offering goal. We know of one of our churches that is doing that, making $50 the amount. We trust that generous goals may be set by many schools, and that earnest effort may be made to realize them. But whether you have a goal or not, please make the offering liberal. Last year we raised through this offering $669. Let's do better than that this year. The Board of Missions is badly in need of money, and is counting much on the Easter offering. Let's do our best to meet this need. Take credit on the N. C. S. budget of the local church for the amount. Let the offering go promptly to Dr. Brown. The Lord bless us with a happy Easter day throughout the conference.

The Washington Convention

This is to be the one big, outstanding denominational event of the year, and of course our conference will want to join forces whole-heartedly with the rest of the church for the success of the undertaking. The general church officials who are leading the movement are hopeful that great good will come of the convention. It is easy to see that such a gathering of the church does have splendid potential possibilities. Whatever helps us to a better understanding of our problems, our responsibilities, and our opportunities, is certainly worthy and necessary. This, the convention hopes to do, and doing this, it will justify itself, and prove a denominational blessing.

The plan of financing the convention is through registrations. Our conference is asked to secure 500. The registration fee is $1.00. The slogan is, "Everybody Register." Of course this does not mean that everyone who registers will attend the convention. But it does mean that everyone who registers will help support the convention. And that is very important. We hope that it will mean, too, that many who register will attend. Our conference should be well represented at this gathering of the church. The names of all who register, together with the fee of $1.00, should be sent to Dr. J. H. Straughn, 516 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

See the registration allotment for each charge at another place in this issue of the HERALD.

All together, now, for a quick and large registration! Let's do this in a good way.

OUR CHURCH SCHOOLS

The Christian churches of America are in the field of education. They have been so from the very beginning. The Roman Catholic church has its parochial schools. It takes children from kindergarten and holds them until they graduate from their own universities. The great majority of their young people never have an opportunity to get a Protestant or secular interpretation of life. They even do not have opportunity to learn the prevailing interpretation of American history.

The Protestant church has a great system of education. Almost every denomination has its own schools. These are supposed to be dominated by a motive of religious education. However, these same schools are not distinctively denominational. A visitor would not know that they belonged to any church. Indeed, he might not discover that they were under the control of Protestant religion. Some of them have become so secular in their atmosphere that little difference can be seen between them and a State institution. This is not true of all of them. There is a type of Protestant denominational schools that carry strong markings of religious and spiritual and intellectual culture. These are the ones that justify the Protestant system of education. They furnish an atmosphere of idealism and of intellectual culture. They develop a type of American citizenship to be found in all of the communities of the nation. These college graduates go into the professions with their Christian idealism, or at least with their cultural ideas which enable them to stand for the best American ideals. They are not altogether secular, while they may appear to be so. No man can go through a denominational school without carrying into life the point of view of Protestantism, with its special interpretation of citizenship and its cultural values of a high-grade personal life.

One of the most encouraging phenomena for observation today in American life is the cultural contribution being made to the life of the nation through the functioning of the denominational schools.—The Christian Sun.

DEPENDENCE ON GOD

Christians often depend on God only partially, while leaning at the same time on some mercy of His hand to them, as children walk by the assistance of go-carts. To walk without any seen thing to lean on is a new and peculiar path, and as a child pauses and fears ere he attempts it, though desiring it, and glad when he has succeeded in ever so small a way, so with us; we see we ought to depend on God, we feel we may, we pause, we fear, we attempt, we succeed, we are glad! God's sufficiency is known to our souls. The first time a child walks by himself is a new era in his life, and though the mere beginning of it may be forgotten, the fact and nature of the act is known to him all his life long; and if it be interrupted, either by accident or infirmity, he feels it sadly.

When we have learned to walk in simple dependence on God we can never happily substitute anything else for it. If failure or loss of communion deprive us of it for a season, there is always the craving of the new nature to return to an order of strength so normal to it, and so natural to us as being children of God.—Scripture Truth.

—We highly appreciate a contribution this week from our esteemed brother, Rev. J. L. Elderdice, of Oxford, Md. He is a brother of President H. L. Elderdice and seems to have inherited with him a keen and strong sense of humor. We thank him heartily in behalf of our readers for this rich collection with parts so fittingly joined together.

OUR STORY PAGE

ANNIE LAURIE'S VALENTINE OPPORTUNITY

Annie Laurie Kent walked slowly along the homeward road from school, pondering over the situation. It was not a pleasant one at all. She and her dearest friend, Barbara Neville, had quarrelled two weeks ago. It had been a foolish little quarrel in its beginning; but one thing had led on to another; well-meaning friends had helped to widen the rift by repeating remarks and making excuses that were worse than the offense; and so it had come to pass that Annie Laurie and Barbara, who had been inseparable from their babyhood, now passed each other without speaking. And there seemed to be no hope of their ever making up, because each was sure that she was right, and determined not to make the first advance toward a reconciliation.

Annie Laurie tried, as she walked along the lonely path which she and Barbara used to tread so happily together, to remember what all the trouble had been about. Barbara had said—or some one had said that Barbara had said—that Annie Laurie's brother must have written her composition which had taken the prize. And some one else had said that Barbara was jealous because her composition had not even received honorable mention. Annie Laurie had been angry, too angry to ask Barbara for an explanation. And Barbara had been hurt that Annie Laurie should believe such a charge.

And now matters were at a standstill because each was waiting for the other to say the first word; and Annie Laurie had vowed she would never speak to Barbara again till she took back her accusation, and Barbara had declared she would never speak to Annie Laurie as long as Annie could believe such mean things of her.

But Annie Laurie was growing very tired of the estrangement, and she would gladly have made friends; only Barbara was stubborn, and would not give her an opportunity. When they met in school or on the playground, there were averted looks and an assumed ignorance of her existence on Barbara's part, which made a first step very difficult to take.

"If I could only get an opportunity," sighed Annie Laurie as she came in from school on this day of early February, feeling lonely and depressed. At this time last year she and Barbara had been having such fun choosing their valentines and deciding where to send them. And it was no fun at all doing such things all by yourself.

"Make an opportunity," said her mother, who felt sorry for her.

"There isn't any way to make one. Barbara won't give me a chance. She never seems to know I am there at all. The other girls can't help laughing, but it's no laughing-matter to me. It's partly their fault, anyway. I don't really believe Barbara said some of the things they said she did."

"They say, What say they? Let them say," quoted mother. "Why don't you go straight up to Barbara and have it out with her?"

Annie Laurie looked troubled and doubtful.

"You don't know Barbara, mother. She simply will not let me."

"I wouldn't be afraid of her," said her mother quietly. "But since direct means will not answer, you will have to think of some other way. Look out for an opportunity to do her a kindness or to show in some way that you still care for her. I believe she wants to make up, in her heart. You two have always been so much to each other, it seems a pity to let a foolish misunderstanding come between you in this way. And besides, little daughter, it is not Christian; and I thought you were trying to walk in the path our Lord bids us follow. How often are we to forgive the brother who sins against us?"

"Until seventy times seven," said Annie Laurie. "But, mother, I do forgive her for saying that Jack must have written my composition. I really tried to do that, I think I have. And I am sorry I said I wouldn't speak to her until she took it back. It's just a tangle, and if she would only meet me half-way—"

"It is a pity you ever let the sun go down upon your wrath. Quarrels once begun are hard to stop. But watch for your opportunity—or make one."

Mother said no more, and for several days longer things went on in the same monotonous course. Valentine's Day was drawing near, and the girls were busy over their plans for it. Annie Laurie went with a group of her classmates one afternoon to buy some valentines. The counter of Mr. Green's general store was spread with a display of the pretty cards, and a group of chattering girls gathered 'round them criticising and choosing.

Annie Laurie looked on silently and indifferently. If only Barbara had been beside her, how good a time they would have had! But she had just seen Barbara come to the door, look in, and, catching sight of her, pass on and cross the street. All the pleasure of buying valentines were gone for Annie Laurie—and for Barbara, too, if the truth were known.

Lily King came to her side. "What are you dreaming about, Annie Laurie? You haven't chosen a single valentine. Don't you mean to send any this year?"

"O, yes," Annie Laurie roused herself. "I guess so; but they are all so much alike. Have you chosen yours? May I see?"

"Sure." Lilly good-naturedly spread out a sheaf of pretty cards adorned with doves, roses and verses. "I'm going to send my prettiest one to my cousin in New York. We weren't specially good friends when she visited me last summer; but I don't want her to think I'm mad with her, and a valentine is a nice way to show you feel friendly, don't you think?"

"Yes," agreed Annie Laurie absently; and then, "O Lilly, you gave me an idea. Don't want on me if you are in a hurry to go. I want to choose a valentine very carefully."

She had forgotten Lilly's cards, spread out for her to examine; she turned eagerly to the counter again, and Lilly only smiled as she put them back into their envelope and followed the others out of the store.

It was an inspiration, no less, that Lilly had unconsciously given Annie Laurie. Her hands shook with excitement as she turned over the cards again. Here was one with a message that might do.

It was wreathed with forget-me-nots, tied with a true-love knot of blue ribbon, and within the wreath was a verse which ran:

"On this, the day of loving thoughts,
Let us forget all other.
For love will last, and so we two Must still love one another."

Not very good poetry, perhaps; but it said what Annie Laurie wanted it to say, and she took it and paid for it without looking further. As she left the store she saw Barbara still on the other side of the street, a white envelope in her hand. So she, too, had been buying valentines. Annie Laurie would have waved to her; but Barbara persistently looked the other way, and what was the use of waving to a shoulder and the back of a bobbed brown head?

It was Valentine's Day, and the schoolroom fairly rustled with valentine cards and whispers and conjectures as to their source. At length Miss Morrison in despair ordered every valentine put away until recess, threatening confiscation if she saw another one during school hours. Annie Laurie, glancing across to Barbara's desk, saw her putting away a certain blue envelope with especial care, and her heart jumped. She had placed her forget-me-not valentine in a square blue envelope, to distinguish it from the ordinary ones. She herself had one with roses and lilies, and a verse about love; and she strongly suspected it came from Barbara, but there was no chance to find out until recess. Then, as she walked across the playground, wondering if her olive-branch would be accepted, she heard a breathless call. It was so faint that she was not sure she had really heard it until she looked back. Barbara stood there, hesitating.

"Nan"—it was the old loving little name—"did you send me that valentine? And did you really mean what it says?"

For answer Annie Laurie's arms opened wide, as they had always done to Barbara, and the quarrel ended then and there.

"But what did you really say about my composition?" asked Annie Laurie a little later, as they sat talking it all over. "Somebody told me you said Jack must have written it."

"Why, I never," answered Barbara indignantly. "I said it was as goo das anything Jack could have written, and he is in college. That's quite a different thing."

"Of course it is, and I wouldn't have been made over that. Somebody misunderstood what you said. If I had only asked you about it myself."

But Barbara, too, had her grievance. "Somebody told me that you said I was just jealous of your success, because mine wasn't even honorably mentioned. I don't believe now that you would think I could be jealous of you. I never was, once in my life, Nan. Why did you say it?"

"I didn't," protested Annie Laurie. "That was just made out of whole cloth. Why, Bab, you couldn't have thought that of me!"

"It was very stupid of me," confessed Barbara. "And I wanted to make up all the time; only you wouldn't give me a chance."

"O, Bab! When I tried so hard to get you to look at me, even! I guess we would be still misunderstanding other if Lilly hadn't given me the idea of a valentine apology—or whatever you might call it—anyway, a chance to make friends again."

"I sent you one, too," Barbara said, almost shyly; for it had been very hard for her to overcome her pride so far.

"I guessed it came from you. And, Barbara dear, I've learned this much from our stupid quarrel, that if we had just been frank and open with each other, we need never have quarreled at all. It was all caused by listening to what the other girls said to each of us about the other. I might have known better than to believe you would think such things of me. And you know me better, Bab."

"I do now, at any rate," said Barbara; "and I don't care what anybody ever says to me again; I'll never believe anything but good of my dear old Nan. Come along, let's celebrate by studying our algebra together again. I've been so lonesome for you, Nan!"

"Me too," agreed Annie Laurie happily.—Christian Endeavor World.

JUST KEEP ON

Just keep on a-livin',
An' keep on a-givin',
An' keep on a-tryin' to smile;
Just keep on a-singin',
A-trustin' an' a-clingin'
To the promise of an after while.
For the sun comes up,
An' the sun goes down,
An' the morning follows night.
There's a place to rest
Like a mother's breast,
An' a time when things come right.

Just keep on believin',
An' a hidin' all your grievin',
An' keep on a tryin' to cheer!
Just keep on a-prayin',
A-lovin' an' a a-sayin'
The things that we love to hear.
For the tide comes in,
An' the tide goes out,
An' the dark will all turn bright;
There's rest from the load,
An' an end to the road,
An' a place where things come right.

Some Thought About Easter

Near the hill of Golgotha was a garden and in this garden was a tomb owned by Joseph of Arimathea. When Jesus was crucified Joseph asked Pilate that the body be given to him. He wrapped it carefully and placed it in the tomb and no doubt supposed that it would always remain there. (Read Col. 3:1-3). One of those women who loved Jesus so much wept when she found that their dearest friend was not there. (Read John 20:11-16). Her sadness was soon turned to joy when she looked into His dear face and heard Him say, "Mary." We are glad at Easter time because our Master rose from the grave and lives for us. He is our friend. Just as He arose so shall we rise in beauty and loveliness. This is the great thing we have to give to others, this trust and hope in the risen Saviour.

Easter should be a day of joyful worship when we take a new grip on life and strive with renewed strength to live victorious lives.

Through His resurrection Christ calls us to rise to higher ideals of living. So often Jesus comes to us—as a beggar, as a friend in need, as a great opportunity—and finds Himself unrecognized. Can we not truly observe Easter by serving Christ at every opportunity throughout the year?

For Consideration

1. What must the universal yearning for a life beyond mean?
2. How may we as a society observe Easter?
3. What does Easter mean to you?
4. How do you suppose the disciples felt after the crucifixion? What did Easter mean to them?
5. If a man die, shall he live again?

Poetry

"But all lost things are in the angels' keeping,
Love;
No past is dead for us, but only sleeping,
Love;
The years of Heaven will all earth's little pain
Make good;
Together there we can begin again
In babyhood."—Helen Hunt Jackson.

"A sacred spark created by His breath,
The immortal mind of man His image bears;
A spirit living 'mid the forms of death,
Oppressed but not subdued by mortal cares."
—Sir Humphrey Davy.

"Of all the words that sway the heart,
And pluck from doubt its poisoned dart,
None are like three the angel said
To women come to mourn the dead;
And 'He is risen' rings today
Fresh as if uttered yesterday."
—Alma Adams Wiley.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

BRANCH REPORTS

Last week I mailed report blanks and efficiency blanks to all auxiliaries whose names have been reported to me—seventy-seven in all. I know some of these auxiliaries are inactive, but perhaps they have all sent something to Mrs. S. W. Taylor during the year, if so they ought to make some kind of report. If any auxiliary fails to get a blank, please write me as they might go astray or get into the hands of one who is no longer an officer.

I am hoping to have all blanks returned and a larger per cent of auxiliaries on the honor roll or standard roll this year.

We are emphasizing the slogan: "Go Forward In Our Missionary Work," but we must first know in what direction we are facing, and our annual Branch meeting is the time when we as auxiliaries and individuals check up our work and find out whether we are facing right or not. If not, we do not want to take another step until we have faced about and are ready to march forward with the great army of women who are following the command of our Captain whose orders are to "go and teach all nations."

Send delegates to the Branch meeting at First church, High Point, April 16-17, and let us discuss our work and plan to go forward. Mrs. Armstrong says one-half hour of presentation and discussion of methods is of far more value than an inspirational address. What is the use of being inspired if we let the inspiration ooze out of our systems before we find a way to use it? "Inspiration, aspiration, perspiration," may not be the way some of you have heard this slogan, but it will do just now, for it takes them all to accomplish anything.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN,

Corresponding Secretary.

Lord, bless the missionaries in far-away lands, as they labor for Thee. Are they lonely? Give them a sense of Thy presence. Grant them the desire of their hearts in bringing many souls to the blessed light of Thy truth.

TWO IMPORTANT MEETINGS

The Branch meeting which is to be held in High Point April 16-17 promises to be the best in the history of our organization and prospects are bright for a large attendance. The committee is arranging an interesting and helpful program, one which will feature different phases of the work. The young people will have an important part, and from this it is hoped increased interest in our state will follow. They have heretofore manifested a desire to enter more fully into the general plan of church work and in addition to a special session a luncheon conference has been arranged. Luncheon conferences have also been planned for the various officers and secretaries at which times problems may be discussed and plans formulated. Another feature of the meeting will be a model circuit auxiliary, sponsored by Mrs. C. W. Bates, district chairman.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE NEWS

THE MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

The ministerial association of High Point college is as old as the college itself. It was organized to foster fellowship within the group and to develop professional mindedness. It has served a real purpose, for it has been one of the greatest factors in developing the life of the ministerial students while at this institution.

In my opinion, the Ministerial association has contained more than average boys: there has been a splendid type of students in the organization, and each one has proved himself a worthy candidate for the Christian ministry. A large proportion of the college debaters have been ministerial students, and a great number of officers of the various organizations have come from them.

The Ministerial association is composed of any students taking a ministerial course and desiring to align themselves with the group. There have been several boys, especially day students, who were not members of the organization. The minutes of the organization were misplaced last year and so the figures given are somewhat rough. There were in 1927 twelve members of the Ministerial association, in 1928 fifteen members, in 1929 nine, in 1930 twelve, and in 1931 twenty. The increase of ministerial students bespeaks the growing popularity of High Point college, because of its Religious Education department. The present students represent five denominations. In addition to the student members of this association, there are three members of the faculty, who are ministers, connected as honorary members. Dr. P. E. Lindley, Dean of the college, has served as faculty adviser during the life of the organization.

Each Wednesday there is a devotional meeting held and once a month a business meeting. At the devotional meetings, twice a month different members of the association speak, at the other meetings active ministers are invited to speak. These meetings are spiritual and instructive. It is in this association that many of our members get their first experiences in making constructive speeches.

The greatest movement ever undertaken by the Ministerial association of High Point and one of the most noteworthy movements launched by High Point college was the organization of a State Ministerial association. This was conceived and launched by members of this organization. Rev. E. O. Peeler, a member of the organization and a student pastor, had the distinctive honor of being the first president of the State association. The meeting was held at the First Methodist Protestant church, High Point, N. C., and was attended by a number of representatives of five colleges. The meeting this year is scheduled for Saturday, March 28, at Elon college. Much richer fellowship and denominational understanding is expected to grow out of this organization.

There are a number of products of this organization who are active ministers in this state and some without, there are some others who are taking graduate work in other institutions. It is interesting to note that High Point college ranks high in sending ministerial students to Duke university. This astounding fact appeared in a recent issue of the Christian Advocate. The Ministerial association has served a vital part in the life of young ministers while here. Its work has been signal in the spiritual culture and appreciation of the ministerial students while in High Point college.

—Miss Margaret Osborne, member of the faculty of the Rockingham city schools, suffered a broken ankle in a fall Monday.

MINISTERIAL GROUP OF 1929-1930

Above are the members of the Ministerial Association at High Point college of last school year. They are: top row, J. Walden Tysinger, Talton J. Whitehead, Kenneth G. Holt, Edgar O. Peeler, James T. Bowman, and J. Taft White; bottom row, Vernon Morton, Hoy Whitlow, Clay Madison, W. M. Howard, and Clarence Morris. It was through the sponsorship of this group that the State Ministerial Students Association was organized.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Laurel Hill.—Our Sunday school attendance is improving since spring days are approaching. Our teachers as well as the members of the Sunday school are very much interested in the school.

Sunday, March 8, our pastor delivered us an effective sermon on the parable of the "Seed sower," the three kinds of seeds.

We are planning on giving an Easter program Easter Sunday. The program is being prepared.

We are very glad that Mrs. J. W. Allan is improving after having been confined to bed for quite a while due to severe illness.

We were glad to have several visiting members to worship with us at our regular preaching service Sunday.

REPORTER.

Mt. Hermon, Creswell Circuit.—Sunday was a record-breaking day for us. We had the largest number in Sunday school present that has been in quite a while. We were very proud to have won the Sunday school banner at the convention Sunday p. m., held at Mt. Tabor church. Our attendance was one hundred per cent. The convention meets with us Third Sunday in June.

The Ladies' Aid of our church is progressing splendidly with good attendance, and fine programs and everything seems to be a success in itself. Last Friday p. m. the Misses Mary and Ardee Davenport entertained the Ladies' Aid members, which consisted of Misses Selma Elma, Mary and Ida Ambrose, Louise Davenport, Mary, Pearl, Fida, Anne and Mrs. Malinda Davenport and Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Davenport, Misses Elsie, Pauline and Verna and Murline Phelps, Elizabeth Furlough, Mr. and Mrs. George Sawyer, Messrs. Monroe and Windell Ambrose, Steve, Hillie, Chester, Winton, Linwood and Aaron Davenport, Mack Oliver and Garland Phelps.

After a delightful hour of games, the hostess served a delicious sweet course which was immensely enjoyed by all. Our church is giving an Easter programme and an egg-hunt, Saturday before first Sunday for the benefit of our Sunday school pupils.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

IDA S. AMBROSE, Reporter.

Thomasville.—The work of our church is progressing very nicely. Our regular meetings are as follows: Prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, choir practice on Friday evening, Sunday school at 9:45, preaching at 11, Christian Endeavor at 6:30 and preaching at 7:30.

At our regular morning services our pastor is preaching a series of pro-Easter sermons on the different phases in the life of Christ leading up to his death and resurrection. On Sunday, March 8, he preached a very helpful and inspiring sermon on the subject "The Lost Christ," and on last Sunday, March 15, he preached another on "The Rejected Christ."

Although we were having interesting and helpful discussions on the Sunday school lessons at our prayer meeting, we decided that the study of foreign missions would help us and bring us closer to our Christian work. On Wednesday evening, March 11, we started the course which will last six weeks, with our pastor as teacher. As a text we are using Elsie Singmaster's book entitled "A Cloud of Witnesses." We feel sure that the course will be interesting to all who attend the meetings.

Our attendance is growing both in church services and in Sunday school. A contest between the Men's Bible class and Young Men's class is producing an increase in attendance. The two classes are racing in airplanes from Thomasville to San Francisco. The main object of the contest is to gain new members, and to increase the attendance at the church services. Both classes are very interested and are working hard to increase attendance at our services. When the contest is over we expect to have some interesting talks by one or two members of the contest. On March 8 our attendance was 224 and on last Sunday it was 245.

On last Sunday evening we were glad to have Rev. N. M. Harrison, promotional secretary of High Point college, to speak for us. He preached a very helpful sermon which was in harmony with our missionary study course. His text was taken from Mat. 28:19—"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and the Son and the Holy Ghost."

Dr. Ira Landrith, Citizenship Superintendent of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, will speak at the First Presbyterian church of Thomasville on Thursday, March 26 at 7:30 p. m. This meeting is under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor City Union. It will be a mass meeting to which all, both young and old, are invited.

(Received too late for publication last week.—Editor.)

Gibsonville, Fountain Place.—Things have been taking place here notwithstanding our silence. Gibsonville has recently put up one of the most creditable bulletin boards which adds much to appearance of the church grounds in addition to its usefulness in making announcements. Other improvements are planned that will add to the efficiency of this already working force.

Our special meeting for this place is tentatively set for the fourth Sunday in May. The different organizations are functioning well here and we are hopeful of a good year's work. Finances of course are behind as in all industrial towns, but we are hoping to pay up everything. Our paper campaign has been a success and while our names are not capitalized, we have our quota up and paid for. This pastor is of the opinion that a better plan could be worked out which would give charges credit for what they have done with out the discouraging thing of holding them back until they think that it cannot be done. Why not credit the charge as being out when the quota has been reached and all are paid for? More about this later.

We are planning to begin our special services at Fountain Place next Sunday morning. Brother Whitehead will do the preaching. We are planning the services so as to be of help to all that attend. Will you who read offer a prayer just now that Spirit of God may be poured out upon us in abundance? Our congregations here are more encouraging than last year. We have quite a number of visitors in every service now. These special services will continue over Easter and the week following if the interest demands.

We have received substantial gifts from the following persons since our last report: J. G. Meachum, H. E. Gibbs, Mrs. W. A. Shoffner, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Stewart, Newton Glenn, Gibsonville auxiliary, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hornaday, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Wade, pounding from the Gibsonville church, no names, Mrs. J. P. Huffman, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Amick, Mrs. Hugh Lucas, Mrs. C. B. Amick, Mrs. T. A. Amick, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Amick, and while the others were poundings, D. M. Davidson and J. T. Roundtree "tonned" me with a ton of coal. This is the first time I have ever been tonned. But it helps to be "tonned" as well as pounded. Thank you one and all for the timely gifts. If any have overlooked it was not intentional.

These are days that many are having their faith tried. So many with out work. Those of us who have something to do and are making a living, though we may have to live close, should be thankful and show our appreciation by being more diligent in our work. Our prayer should be that all of these experiences through which we are passing, should cause us to have a closer walk with God.

With prayers for our beloved church, and that every one may meet the full measure of faith is doing His work.

Sincerely,

N. G. BETHEA.

(Brother Bethea will pardon a brief comment on what he says about the Herald goals and the report of them by the Campaign Committee. The Campaign Committee adopted the plan of reporting, but the editor is the book-keeper for the plan. If we have failed to credit any payments, we would be glad to be informed, that we may make correction. You say "we have our quota up and paid for." Then your charge's name should appear in capital letters. But are you not mistaken in saying that? Are you not counting some subscriptions paid for last Conference year? They were counted last year and cannot be counted this year, though their renewals will be counted this year. The miller cannot grind with water that has already passed his mill. That column of quotas does not mean the number of families receiving the Herald; it means the number of subscriptions the charges are asked to pay for this Conference year. The second column of figures means the number already paid for this year. If Brother Bethea is not laboring under a misconception of the matter, we do not see the point he is making and would thank him for further elucidation.—Editor.)

Denton.—That the world has a troubled heart today, I suppose no one has any disposition to deny. Don't you want to get away from the all-absorbing thought of depression and hard times, just for a little bit? I think I can almost hear a thousand voices saying, "Yes, if it was only for a few hours, that would be worth a lot; but where may I find such a place?" Well, the place is at Denton Methodist Protestant church, and the time is next Sunday, March 29, at 10:30 a. m. If you are in quest of cheer for your depressed heart and inspiration for your discouraged hopes, we are having a program that gives promise of relief that may be the very thing you have been looking for.

The program is to last all day. Roberta church choir from Concord is to be here, and the Community church singers from Thomasville, several quartets and duets, together with the local music talent of Denton, are the ones to make your heart glad with sweet Gospel songs and soul-stirring melodies. Don't miss this, then when you hear about it, wish you had come—it will be too late then. Brush up that old hat, and iron out the wrinkles in that old last year's dress and come right on, there will be others who have not got the new one they hoped to get.

All good singers are especially invited to take part.

ROBERT SHORT, Pastor.

West Forsyth.—Owing to the hail, snow, rain and cold wind last Sunday morning the attendance at Harmony Grove church was small. There were a faithful few present for the preaching service who thus exhibited their interest in the work of the church. Plans are being worked at this church for raising their apportionment for High Point college maintenance. Already a part of the money has been paid in, and the stewards are hopeful of securing the entire amount of the apportionment.

The eleventh district rally, or conference, will be the big event on West Forsyth charge next Sunday. The program will be rendered at Pleasant Hill church, beginning about 10:30. The Sunday school of Pleasant Hill will meet at 10 o'clock and get the record of attendance and offering and then be ready for the rally program to follow. Chairman Gerringer and the leaders of the women's work in the district have prepared a very interesting program for the event. The program is expected to appear elsewhere in this issue of the Herald. We are expecting a large attendance from the various churches on the four charges in the district, First Church, Winston, Forsyth charge, Pinnacle charge and West Forsyth charge. The musical feature of the occasion is expected to be an added attraction. The doors of Pleasant Hill church will open next Sunday to all Methodist Protestants in the eleventh district, so every one come and enjoy a feast of good things pertaining to the further progress of our Master's Kingdom.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Pleasant Grove.—Mr. Charlie R. Kennedy, one of our faithful members, was called to his reward March 11th. He had been a member of our church for many years, always present and ready to do his part. Mr. Kennedy was a gentle father, a kind husband and a friend to all, always rendering every service possible with a smile. His almost sudden death gave the church and community a shock, he being sick only a few days.

Rev. D. R. Williams, his pastor, conducted the funeral. The body was laid to rest in the church cemetery under a beautiful mound of flowers. The family have our heartfelt sympathy.

The Sunday school and church work is moving along very well.

We are planning to have an Easter exercise Easter Sunday.

There are some of our number on the sick list. Hope they may soon recover, if it be the Lord's will.

The Brotherhood will hold their meeting Saturday night with Mr. J. E. Veach.

REPORTER.

Kannapolis Church.—Sunday, March 22, was a very cold and rainy day. But we were very happy to have almost a full church at our 11 o'clock service. The stewards had charge of the program, which was called dollar day. The Kannapolis string band gave several beautiful sacred numbers. Also the Kannapolis quartet gave several beautiful and impressive songs. Miss Nannie Tilley and sister gave two lovely numbers, and Miss Newton and Miss Williams from Concord, sang very beautifully "The Church By the Side of the Road," and "Follow the Gleam." Our pastor's topic was very appropriate for the occasion. Brother John Lisk and Uncle Bob Sides as everyone calls him stood by the table and string band played "Life's Railway to Heaven," the congregation came forward and laid their offering on the table, to the amount of $33.60; then the Kannapolis quartet sang, "Unload," as the regular offering was taken, after which we were dismissed with prayer by our pastor.

Fred Love from Midland preached for us. A very interesting sermon which was enjoyed by all. We are always glad to have Brother Fred with us. On Sunday morning our president, Dr. Taylor, preached for us a very interesting sermon on "Feeding the Five Thousand." We are always glad to have Dr. Taylor with us. On Easter Sunday night our revival will begin. Brother C. H. Hill will conduct the services for us. We ask the prayers of all the Christian people that we may have a wonderful meeting and that many souls may be saved. There is much sickness yet among our people. Much improvement is shown in the condition of Baby Tilley.

REPORTER.

Harmony Grove, West Forsyth.—Sunday morning, March 22, Pastor Way filled his appointment. His text was First Peter, 2:9. Our attendance was very small on account of bad weather and illness, but I am sure that everybody received a blessing from the message.

Our Sunday school has been very good, but am hoping that it will improve when spring opens up more.

Mrs. Warner, one of our members who suffered a stroke of paralysis some time ago, has been worse but is improving, and Mr. W. S. Bodsford is improving some. Others have been away from church on account of sickness. We hope they all will soon be able to come back to church.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Union Grove, Mocksville Charge.—This community is having quite an epidemic of scarlet fever. On Thursday, March 12, Gilmer White, the little seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank White, passed away, death resulting from complications, following scarlet fever. The funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, and Rev. G. D. White. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. Gilmer was a bright, loveable little fellow. The joy and pet of the family. The heartfelt sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved parents, in this their dark hour. May God comfort them.

Our church has suffered the loss of one of its most faithful members in the death of Gwyn Cash, aged 26 years, which occurred March 21. He had not missed a church service in several years, until the last two Sundays. And then he was absent on account of being sick. It seemed very fitting that one, who was so faithful to spend the Sabbath at church, should be brought there to his final resting place, on the Holy Sabbath day.

The general sentiment of all who knew Gwyn was that he always did his best. What more can a man do? He was always at his post and was never known to shirk a duty, however hard it might be, you could always depend on him. And I feel sure he is now enjoying the reward of the faithful.

Funeral services were conducted by our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree. Although it was snowing, a large crowd of people paid their silent tribute of respect to his remains. He leaves a mother and feeble father to mourn his loss. Also several brothers and sisters.

REPORTER.

Spring Valley, Vance Circuit.—We are still at work, if we do not report each week. Our Sunday school is doing nicely. Very good attendance, but not as good as we would like to have it. The weather was so bad yesterday that it cut down the attendance a lot, but we had Sunday school just the same, though "few" in number.

Our Christian Endeavor society is doing splendid work. Lots of interest shown in the work. We feel very proud of our society and hope to be able to accomplish lots of work through it this year. We held our first social since we organized with our neighbor church, Flat Rock, on last Friday night, at the home of Mrs. A. E. White. Lots of interesting games and contests were held and I think each one had a good time.

Brother Braxton filled his regular appointment on the third Sunday afternoon, with a good congregation. He gave us a splendid sermon.

We are planning to hold our Easter program on the first Sunday night in April. This will take the place of our regular service for that night.

The Woman's Home Missionary held its regular monthly meeting on last Thursday night, at the home of Mrs. E. B. Wiggins with twenty members present.

A very interesting program was carried out, and we had reports from committees on what we had paid on our budget for the year. We lack only a little, and we expect to have that before the books close. We are going to have a service on Friday night for that purpose. Rev. W. C. Cummings from Henderson Presbyterian church will make a talk for us.

We have lots of sick people in our community, but I think most of them are better now. We wish for each of them a speedy recovery.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Asheboro.—No great revolutions are going on in Asheboro but a few things of interest are taking place.

An Easter cantata is being prepared by the choir under the direction of Mrs. Harriet H.

Walker. Palm Sunday will be observed with special music.

Next Thursday night the High Point college glee club and orchestra will give a program at Asheboro school auditorium. The evening's entertainment will be sponsored by circle number three of the Woman's auxiliary.

Friday evening of this week there will be a church and Sunday school "birthday party," in the social room of the church.

The Philathea class held its monthly business meeting last Monday night with Mrs. L. S. Lewis and Miss Callie Way as joint hostesses.

The pastor and wife continue to be the recipients of the thoughtful members. One of the best things is the parsonage is kept furnished with the finest grade of flour and meal from the Southern Crown mills run by W. F. Redding, Sr., and W. F., Jr., this is free of charge.

Our church seems to be very well organized throughout. The Woman's Auxiliary has all the women and girls classified and organized in the proper groups.

The Sunday school is also very well systematized and the stewards are perhaps better organized than they have ever been.

Boy Rangers are now being organized to care for those from 8 to 12 years of age.

Other things are expected to be done in the near future that will be of special interest, but we will leave that for our reporter to tell about later.

R. C. STUBBINS.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving along nicely for the time of year. Last Sunday there were 116 present. Brother Powell was with us at 11 o'clock and preached a very forceful sermon.

The C. E. society met today at 11 o'clock and gave a good program on, "Why Christ is a Worthy Master."

Mrs. Henry Byerly is our class leader this year and is having unusually good meetings. She holds her service once a month for the time being.

Since our last report, we have lost one of our oldest church members, Mr. T. J. Jones. For many years he was faithful in church work and especially in prayer meetings. But for the last few years he had been unable to attend church services. He will long be remembered by the people of this community for his kindness and his faithful work.

Dora Glascoe, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Glascoe, also passed from this life March 6. Dora will not only be missed in her home, but in the school room as well. Both funerals were conducted the same day, Mr. Jones' at Spring Hill by the pastor, H. L. Powell, and Dora's at Abbot's Creek Baptist church, by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Mumford.

The Ladies' Aid held its last meeting at Mrs. Henry Byerly's. They had a good meeting and the secretary gave a good report of the results of the work that had been done.

Henderson.—The Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting on Monday night, February 23, at the home of Mrs. F. R. Harris, with Mesdames Edison T. Hicks and L. R. Gooch associate hostesses.

The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Clyde Finch, secretary of Spiritual Life, and consisted of responsive scripture readings, hymns and prayer.

The business period was presided over by Mrs. Edison T. Hicks. Reports from the secretary, treasurer and all circle leaders were given in order. Mrs. F. R. Harris, chairman of the nominating committee, submitted the following report which was accepted as given. President: Mrs. R. A. Hunter; vice-president, Mrs. Edison T. Hicks; secretary, Mrs. J. B. Fox; treasurer, Mrs. F. R. Harris; local treasurer, Mrs. Henry T. Powell, Sr.

A committee was appointed to select a leader for the Christian Endeavor for the coming year. The meeting closed with the Lord's Prayer. During the social hour the hostesses served a delicious ice course.

On Sunday night, February 22, the annual thank offering service was held. A special feature of this program was the pageant, "Old Mother Budget" which was well presented. A reading by Mrs. L. R. Gooch and several songs by the choir concluded the service.

Thursday night, March 12th, circle number 4 gave a get-together supper at the church. The Sunday school rooms were used and the table appointments and color scheme were of the St. Patrick's motif. Mr. Hunter presided over the program in a very witty and pleasing manner. The following numbers were greatly enjoyed. A solo by Master Thomas Hunter Powell. Speech by Mr. J. B. Hicks, solo by Miss Rudisell. A toast to "Women" by Professor William D. Payne. A solo by Mr. Clyde Finch; a toast to "Men" by Miss Maxine Taylor; a solo by Mrs. Hubert Howard. This was our first supper for the entire church and about sixty guests were present. We are hoping for others in the future, as it brings us together in a social and more friendly relationship with each other.

The Philathea class was delightfully entertained last month at the home of Mrs. Clifton H. Finch, with Mesdames T. T. Powell and T. D. Beckham joint hostesses. The meeting was presided over by the new president, Mrs. T. T. Powell, Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh had charge of the devotionals. The general business of the class was transacted and reports given from all standing and special committees.

As a means of raising extra funds for the class a calendar was given each member with a place for depositing dimes on holidays. About thirty of these were given out and a committee appointed to see the absentees.

The program leader, Mrs. Clyde Finch, distributed chewing gum and card boards to all and asked each one to make a silhouette of George Washington. Miss Elizabeth Fox's was selected as the best and a pair of hand-painted candles were presented her.

During the social hour the hostesses served chicken salad, pickle, saltines and coffee, nuts and mints.

Plans are being made by the Sunday school with Mrs. J. M. Baity in charge to rearrange and equip the basement for Sunday school rooms and a suitable hall and kitchen for social gatherings.

A contribution was solicited during the Sunday school hour and due to the splendid response it is hoped that these new quarters will be completed by Easter Sunday.

It is with deepest regrets that we report the death of Mr. W. C. Hight. He was at Duke hospital for treatment and died there last Saturday night, March 14th. Funeral services were held at the home on Monday afternoon, March 16th with Rev. R. A. Hunter and Rev. I. W. Hughes in charge. Although having been in ill health for some time, Mr. Hight's death came as a shock to his many friends.

A sad incident has befallen one of our most loved and faithful members, Mrs. S. R. Harris. She is now in Richmond for treatment for her eyes which became infected last Saturday week. Reports are that she is getting along as well as can be expected. We are praying for her recovery and trust that it will be soon.

Mr. T. R. Nichols was operated on at Maria Parham hospital here last Wednesday and is reported getting along nicely.

Kernersville.—Our second quarterly conference will be held at Pine Grove church on Saturday before the third Sunday in April at 1:30 o'clock. Let every official be on hand as there will be matters of vital interest to the church transacted.

W. D. REID.

First Church, High Point.—At the Sunday morning service we were pleased to hear Mr. Arthur Fidler play a very popular number on his violin, the choir rendered a beautiful selection. Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered a very timely and effective discourse on "The Christian Family." He said in part that the Bible is full of references to the sanctity of the home and family life. The family is the basic unit of civilization, and as go the homes of the nation, so goes the world. The beginning of every good influence comes from the Christian home. Not only Jesus, but Paul, stressed the fact that the Christian home is the basis of all human institutions. Not every house is a home in the true sense of the word. There were lax ideas about the institution of marriage in those days as well as today, and Jesus and Paul lifted their voices against those low ideals. The exigencies of this day make it necessary to support the sacredness of home life. When anything strikes at the root of the family, it behooves the Christian people to be alert and at attention, for Christian home life is the greatest asset of any nation. The family relationship is the most sacred in the world except our relationship to God. If Christ's ideals are ever to be realized in this world, they must be practiced by the family. Heaven is a place where God the Father and all the redeemed are children. Jesus, who had no place to lay His head often went into Christian homes, especially that of Mary, Martha, and Lazarus at Bethany. He loved little children, and taught the sacredness of marriage and the family. A breaking down of the family altar is one of the causes of dissension in family life, selfishness is another factor that undermines the stability of the home. A desire to keep up with our neighbors, to have things like the Joneses and the "Four Hundred," is another factor that makes for the disruption of the home. Then I am quite sure that movie screen and suggestive stories in newspapers have a tendency to discredit the sanctity of home life. One of the difficulties about people of High Point is that they lay aside their religion as soon as they leave the church. We must maintain the sacredness of the home through our boys and girls and teach them the great moral sin of impurity as well as its physical dangers. The remedy comes from God, and lies in keeping the spiritual tide high.

The 5 o'clock Vesper service was the last before Easter, and as a prelude Judge Lewis E. Teague made a splendid talk on "My Six Years In the Municipal Court." The minister made a brief address on "Jeus and Justice." On next Sunday evening, March 29th the first of a series of Community Holy Communion services, in which First Church will join, will be held in the First Presbyterian church.

The Sunshine circle, Mrs. Ross Davis, leader, is meeting in the church this (Monday) afternoon.

The topic for Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening at 7:45 o'clock is John 3:16, and Miss Selma Clapp is leader. An efficiency campaign is being waged by this group of young people.

This week is known as Friendly Visitation and Evangelism week, and calls will be made by members of each organization, especially on the inactive membership. Decisions for Christ will be sought.

On Friday evening at 8 o'clock, Dr. Ira Landrith of Chicago and Texas, who is one of the greatest platform orators in America today, will speak in First Church under the auspices of the City Christian Endeavor Union.

We are much pleased to learn that John Taylor, son of Dr. and Mrs. S. W. Taylor, who had the misfortune to meet with an automobile accident last Saturday afternoon, was not seriously injured, and is attending his classes at the college today.

Wilbur Pritchard, son of Mrs. and Mrs. J. H. Pritchard, a student at State college, Raleigh, is spending the spring holidays at home.

Mrs. and Mrs. Geo. T. Penney went to Charlotte Saturday to attend the funeral of a friend, Mr. Joe Wadsworth.

Mangum Harrell, a junior in State college Raleigh, will return today after spending the spring vacation here with his mother, Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell.

Walter F. McCannless, professor of mathematics in High Point college, who teaches the Aunt Lizzie Welch class of women in our Sabbath school, a week ago wrote a splendid explanation of the lesson, and had it published in our local newspaper "The Enterprise," for the benefit of those who could not be present at the morning period. This was a very unusual and thoughtful act on the part of Prof. McCannless, and it is greatly appreciated by the members of this class. Although a member of Wesley Memorial M. E. church, he renders this fine service in our Sabbath school.

Yarboroughs Chapel.—Our faithful pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, brought to us a very interesting sermon last Sunday. The attendance was very good considering the sickness among the members.

Our Sunday school seems to be getting along very nicely; the attendance is increasing, but slowly, due to bad weather and sickness. We are expecting both our church and Sunday school attendance to pick up in the near future.

We are very much pleased with our Christian Endeavor society which meets each Sunday evening. It is made up mostly of the young people of the community.

On every fourth Sunday, Rev. D. D. Broome goes to Harmony church to do his regular preaching there.

Glen Raven Charge.—Woman's auxiliary circle No. 1 met with Miss Gladys Newlin, twelve members were present, and two visitors, Miss Espa Bullard presiding; after devotionals, business discussions; decided to give in three weeks the play: "Old Maid's Convention." Our next meeting we will meet with Mrs. Joe Clayton, which will be in April.

Quarterly conference will be held at Fair View, Sunday, March 29, at 2:30. We especially urge all officials to be present. Sunday's sermon was grand, centering around this little but meaningful poem by Omar:

Four things that come not back, Sped arrow; the spoken word; time past, and the neglected opportunity.

"Are we neglecting our opportunities? We one and all asked ourselves, it impressed me very much, reminding me of a man who coming to his deathbed, when asked concerning his soul, remarked: "Not afraid to die, but oh, ashamed to die."

On Friday night before Easter Sunday we have a Communion service. Every one is cordially invited also to the pageant given the following night.

REPORTER.

Randolph Charge.—Since taking up the work on this charge all of the appointments have been met. The attendance has been good considering the unfavorable weather and bad roads. The Sunday schools have been running with very good attendance all the winter and now that the weather is improving we hope the attendance at all the services will be better.

Saturday, March 21, the second quarterly conference convened at Bethany. The attendance was good. All of the churches were represented. The reports gave evidence of progress. Brothers C. N. Nixon, of Gray's Chapel, and John Julian of Bethany, were elected nominees for delegates to the next Annual Conference.

Last Sunday the pastor was somewhat surprised when he went to his car and found that some parties had left quite a supply of groceries. These tokens of kindness came from the good people of Shiloh church and were placed in the car without the pastor having even a hint of what was going on. To say we appreciate this act of kindness is to put it very mildly. Of course we appreciate every article, but we appreciate the spirit which prompted these good people thus to remember their pastor. This is not the first time we have received tokens of kindness since coming among this people. May God abundantly bless every one of them and may the pastor be so led as to minister unto them of things in the Lord.

The president's report of the year's work and from the different circles was very encouraging and we were especially delighted to know we had gone over the top with our budget. The auxiliary raised during the year $365.79. The program for this meeting was given by Circle No. 4. At the close of the program the pastor presented to Mrs. Nicholson a necklace, a gift from the auxiliary expressing their appreciation of her splendid work and leadership in this organization. In a few well chosen words Mrs. Nicholson thanked the auxiliary for the gift and for their cooperation during the years that she served as president. The circle chairmen for the new year are as follows: Circle No. 1, Mrs. M. P. English Street Church.—At the 11 o'clock service Sunday the sacrament was administered by the pastor.

Sunday evening Mr. Reynolds brought to us a very interesting message. He took for his text 2 Cor. 3:2, "Ye are Our Epistle Read of all men." He spoke of the inconsistency of church members and stated that Christianity needs practical object lessons. We as Christians are objects that illustrated Christ's life to the world. He stressed the fact that by living a consistent life we may win the world to Christ. We must prove the Gospel that we teach and preach by living it.

We had a very interesting program at the regular C. E. meeting Sunday evening, with Miss Iris Caudle as leader. The topic was "Important Ideas in John 3:16."

Our church is building Sunday school rooms which we hope to have completed soon. We feel they will prove a great benefit to our Sunday school.

We have a faithful superintendent, and with spring coming and more room we hope to see our Sunday school have a larger attendance.

We are planning to paint our church soon and make some improvements inside.

The stewards are working faithfully and their reports are encouraging. We are hoping our church will reach the honor roll.

While the people here seem pleased with Brother Suits, we do not forget our former pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, who served us so faithfully two years; his sermons were uplifting; it was a pleasure to have him in our Sunday school class, Christian Endeavor, and in our homes.

REPORTER.

Gillburg, Vance.—On Sunday afternoon, March 8, our pastor preached an inspiring sermon. His subject was "The Awakening Youth." Text Luke 15:17-18, "I will arise and go to My Father and will say unto Him, 'Father, I have sinned against heaven and before Thee, and am no more worthy to be called Thy Son; make me as one of Thy hired servants.'" Our service attendance is small, but much interest is shown in the small group by their faithful attendance each Sunday. We notice that members who have not been attending, also visitors, are showing more interest in the services recently. We appreciate the presence of each one, and extend to you a hearty welcome to come again.

Miss Alma Poythress and Warren Duke were united in marriage at the parsonage Saturday, March 14, by Rev. R. A. Hunter. Mrs. Duke is an active member of this church of which she is pianist. Their many friends wish for them a long and happy life.

We are very sorry to report that Mrs. Finch, one of our good Sunday school members continues quite ill and is unable to attend church and has been for the past year. She has our best wishes for a speedy recovery.

PATIENTS IN WINSTON HOSPITALS

As many hospitals as we have here and as many Methodist Protestants as there are in this section of the state, it is likely that there are many who come here for hospital treatment that I never know anything about. I shall be very glad to be of any assistance possible to Methodist Protestants in the hospitals here. If you have relatives who come here just drop me a card or call me and I will do my best for them. My phone is 606.

Yours to serve,

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Winston-Salem, N. C.

—Revival meeting begins at Midway Church on Haw River Circuit the third Sunday night in June. The pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, will do the preaching, and Prof. T. O. Pender of Mebane, will have charge of the music.

—Some unknown persons honored Mr. Purvis Neese by a call in the night in which they further paid him their compliments by carrying off several gallons of his "long sweetening." They left no identifying cards.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

TRIBUTE OF THANKS

We take this method of thanking our many friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness during the sickness and death of our beloved father and for the many beautiful floral designs.

The Children of the late W. A. Amick.

Roberts

Mrs. Susie Christiana Roberts departed this life February 26, 1931, aged 72 years, 2 months and 19 days.

She was preceded to the grave by two sons, Clyde and Thomas, both dying in childhood.

Sister Roberts had been a member of the church for possibly more than fifty years, having united with the church in girlhood and she has been a member of this church for about 35 years.

She was a very faithful and very consistent member of the church, ever striving to live up to its precepts and teachings. It is said of her that she was always happiest when working for the church and for her Master.

She leaves to mourn her going in addition to her husband, Zebulon Vance Roberts, two sons, Joseph Ervin, and Alfred Fulton Roberts and six grandchildren, all of Weaverville; one brother, Joseph Eller, of Old Fort, N. C., and a number of nephews and nieces, as well as a great host of friends. In the passing of Sister Roberts the home loses a faithful, loving and devoted wife and mother.

The church which she loved loses one of its most faithful and consecrated members, and the community a loving friend and neighbor.

The funeral was held from Clarks Chapel M. P. church on Friday afternoon, February 27, 1931, by her pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, assisted by Rev. H. B. Dendy, of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. Wesley Sprinkle, of the Flat Creek Baptist church.

The great host of friends which overflowed the church attested the esteem and love in which she was held.

The music for the service was furnished by the Tomberlin Quartette. Her body was laid to rest in the church burying grounds underneath a great mound of beautiful flowers, to await the resurrection morn.

Truly Clarks Chapel M. P. church has lost a mother in Israel. Our hearts go out in tenderest sympathy to the bereaved ones.

E. G. COWAN, Pastor.

Edwards

We the members of the Christian Endeavor society of the Methodist Protestant church of Weaverville, are called upon to record with sorrow and regret, the death on January 24, 1931, of our dear friend and fellow member, Lucius Edwards.

And we pause just here to pay respect to his memory.

Although God in His wisdom has seen fit to call him over there at the early age of 17 years, we in our association with him in the various activities of the work, ever found him a faithful worker, ever ready to lend a helping hand. Our society has benefited greatly by his earnest and untiring service. Words fail us when we attempt to express the esteem in which he was held by the society. We feel, "They needed an angel in heaven," so they sent for a pal, (or friend) like Lucius. Therefore be it resolved,

First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of Him whom we love and obey.

Second, That our hearts go out in tender solicitude and sympathy to his dear mother, step-father, brothers, and sister, and we recommend them to the One who doeth all things well.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be placed upon our minutes or records here, and a copy be given to his dear mother and family.

By the Members of the Christian Endeavor Society of Weaverville M. P. Church.

E. G. COWAN, Pastor.

Holt

Mrs. Mary Ellen Holt passed away March 4, 1931, being 85 years, 5 months and 18 days old. She was the wife of Oliver Holt, who several years ago preceded her to the spirit world. She is survived by four daughters: Mrs. Lizzie Reams, Mrs. C. L. Moser, Mrs. D. L. McPherson, and Mrs. J. C. McPherson. Also by two sons: J. G. Holt and A. T. Holt. She was a faithful member of Rock Creek church. Her body was laid to rest in Rock Creek cemetery. The funeral conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. J. Elwood Carroll. To her death was the end of great suffering and the realization of the perfect life.

J. A. BURGESS.

Amick

William Arlando Amick died March 11, 1931; aged 80 years and 23 days.

On December 16, 1875, Mr. Amick was married to Mary E. Kime who passed to her reward on December 5, 1925. To this union seven children were born: C. L., of Edenton; G. A., of Liberty; W. C., of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. William H. Neese, of Seagrove; Miss Sallie R., Mrs. Thomas Brown and H. Floyd, all of Liberty, route 2. All of whom survive. There are 15 grandchildren living and three dead; two great-grandchildren living and two dead.

Mr. Amick joined the church while young and has lived a consistent Christian life. He was of a very quiet, retiring disposition, a kind father, and husband and always considerate of every one and will be sadly missed by his children, his church and his community.

A great deal of praise and commendation is due his daughter, Miss Sallie, who has so faithfully cared for him since the death of his beloved wife. He had suffered greatly and expressed himself as ready and willing to go. In the early morning hours he slipped away quietly to be with his Saviour.

J. A. BURGESS.

Gill

On Sunday, March 8, God came and took from us the soul of our dear loved one, Kathleen Gill. Kathleen was only 16 years of age. She joined Hebron M. P. church in early life and remained a faithful member until death, always ready and willing to do anything she could for her church and Sunday school. She was a junior in Effland high school, and her sweet disposition had won a warm place in the hearts of her school mates.

It is hard to understand why one so young, so good, and so pure, should be taken from us, but we know God who is too good, and too wise to make a mistake, doeth all things well, and may He help us to live so when we, too, are called from this world we may be prepared to meet Kathleen again where there will be no more parting, no more sorrow, and no more pain.

We miss her, oh, so much, in our Sunday school, but most of all in the home. But we sorrow not as those who have no hope. We hope the influence of her sweet life may be the means of guiding some other young lives in the right path. May we ever strive to live as she did.

Kathleen was sick about ten days, pneumonia being the cause of her death. She bore her suffering with such gentle patience, never complaining. All that doctors, nurses, and loved ones could do was done, but it was not God's will for her to stay in this world.

She leaves a broken-hearted mother, two sisters, besides a host of relatives and friends.

The funeral services were conducted at Hebron church Monday, March 9, by her pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, and her body tenderly laid to rest in the church cemetery, beside that of her father who preceded her to the grave several years.

The large crowd that attended the funeral, and the many floral designs proved the love in which her memory is held.

MRS. P. N. THOMPSON.

Gill

The home, community, church and school were sadly stricken March 9, when God called unto Himself the beloved and most cherished friend, Margaret Kathleen Gill, the oldest daughter of Mrs. Lelia Gill of Mcbane, Route 2.

Kathleen lived 16 years and five months. She was a member of Hebron M. P. church, and was considered an efficient member both in Sunday school and church.

She was a member of the junior class of Effland high school, where she stood as one of the most popular member of the class. There will be a vacant place in this class which causes much sorrowing among her class mates, but "Kate" will never be forgotten.

The large congregation and many floral designs were evidence of the high esteem in which she was held.

And now with bowed heads we feel this girl is at rest. May the blessing of our All-Wise Father rest abundantly upon the lonely mother and sisters, and may the Divine Comforter guide them through life's pathway.

NANNIE McADAMS.

—Some of our pastors in the church paper campaign have set themselves goals beyond their goals. Brother Pritchard aims to double his goal. Brothers Madison and D. R. Williams have already gone ahead of their goals. Brother Trollinger of Haw River charge gives us to understand that he is going to reach his goal and then some. We thank all for their efforts and for the subscriptions that result. There is an art in selling church papers as in selling other articles. It seems to be natural to some, while others have to study it in order to succeed.

The Lesson of Easter

He walked the earth as Son of Man
And challenged all to understand:
They guessed and guessed and guessed again,
Were never sure, the sons of men.

"A prophet great in deed and word,"
Said some who saw and also heard.
"He brings God's truth to human ears
And of his foes he has no fears."

"Iconoclast' would better name
Destructive seeker after fame;
He'd rob us of our sacred past
And leave us nought in view at last."

"A dreamer of fantastic dreams
To whom the world's not what it seems:
He'd make man's life a thing of ages
With glowing pictures filling pages."

"With false pretense he discounts wealth,
And gathers men to him by stealth;
He'd set the many 'gainst the few
If not restrained in what he'd do."

Men talked themselves to furious rage
And brought to death the gentle sage,
Not knowing at all the thing they did
Because the truth from them was hid.

In three brief days it came about
That minds of men were freed from doubt:
The gentle sage at chosen hour
Came forth from death in mighty power.

For darkest night comes brightest morn!
The rose has lost its dreadful thorn!
We turn at once from saddest story
To vision of eternal glory!

A Man With a Noble Hobby

We print in this issue a sketch of a writer whose hobby is said to be sending without charge original poems to newspapers and magazines. For about three years it has been the good fortune of the HERALD to be permitted to print some of these poems, and readers will agree with us in the verdict that this author has a noble hobby. His productions breathe a spirit of optimism and he has the power to communicate to his readers the same spirit. He is the champion of the "unsuccessful and the discouraged." His manifest sympathy gives him access to your heart and soon he brings your spirits

"Forgiveness With Thee That Thou Mayst Be Feared"

This passage found in Psalm 130:4 has been pronounced "unintelligible" by a distinguished Bible commentator. It is puzzling to many Bible readers. If there were no forgiveness with God, then He would be to be greatly feared by those who have even once offended Him. If He delighted in vengeance, how terrible would be the fate of the sinner. If God were careful to mark our imperfections that He might have ground on which to punish us, who could stand His scrutiny? Who could endure God's righteous indignation?

We might have expected the psalmist to say, With Thee there is forgiveness that men may be relieved of fear. Because God is gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy, men may stand or at least bow down before Him in hope. But why is God's forgiving disposition a ground for human fear?

The key to the passage is in the meaning of that word feared. It does not have our ordinary English meaning. It does not mean a shrinking dread; it means rather a trusting reverence, a filial regard. God forgives us that we may be His children again. It is not a satisfactory relationship to God when we stand in the ranks of sinners, offenders. He wants us to be His grateful and obedient children. Hence there is forgiveness with Him. But this does not remove the necessity for repentance on our part. God's forgiveness is not arbitrary.

—We would add our plea to that of President Taylor for the asked-for support for High Point College. There were pessimists who said we couldn't build the college and now there are those who say we can't support it. But both have looked through blue glasses. We need the college as the state needs the Methodist Protestant church. Let our people say, We can and we will. God has put it in our power to provide for our own young people and it would be untrue to them to fail. A dollar per member is a small sum for the support of a great institution like our college.

DEAN KELLEY MILLER, HOWARD UNIVERSITY

By LUTHER K. LONG

The Lincoln Memorial Congregational church, colored, of Washington, D. C., has been celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of its organization by a week's special gatherings. I attended the evening when the subject was "The School and the Church." The Girls' Glee Club of Howard University furnished the music, and Professor Kelley Miller, dean of men at Howard University, gave the address.

It was a rare treat to hear the singing of these girls. Their voices are clear, and sweet, and fine. The leading soprano singer, a very dark girl, I had heard in a solo at the university chapel about a year ago, and had been impressed with her splendid voice and her attractive personality. As a group of girls they made a good appearance in the matter of intelligence, and conduct, and character—judged as we would judge girls of any race.

For years I had been interested in reading from time to time, in various magazines and papers, some excellent articles by Professor Miller but I had never seen or heard him until on this occasion. I knew, of course, that he was a colored man; but my impression had been that he must be a very light colored man. Perhaps that was because there was nothing in his language, the quality of his thought, or his modes of expression to distinguish him from an intelligent and forceful writer of any race—unless it was the accuracy of his thinking and the clearness of his expression. Professor Miller is a real black man, and it never seems to have occurred to him to apologize for that fact.

Kelley Miller has been in Washington a little more than fifty years. He has thus seen the greater part of the growth of the city. He has lived through the entire history of the church now celebrating its silver anniversary. He recounted some of its history—its intimate relations with the First Congregational church, white, and with Howard University, the largest and most distinguished colored educational institution in the world. He has known all the ministers of the Lincoln church, and appreciates the ability and faithfulness of their service.

I can refer here to only a single line of thought, a line that indicates, however, the spirit and discernment of Professor Miller:

It requires a noble institution of learning, he said in substance, to give real culture and distinction to any city or community. No one would speak of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and New Haven, Connecticut, with such feelings as multitudes do—nor would these communities have so many cultured people—were it not for Harvard and Yale Universities. Buffalo, New York, and Detroit, Michigan, are large and prosperous commercial cities, but they have no outstanding Universities—and their culture and fame suffer. Oberlin, Ohio, and Ann Arbor, Michigan, are small country towns; but the college in the former was a pioneer in co-educational work, and it has poured its sons and daughters by the hundreds and thousands into the teaching profession, missionary work, and the Christian ministry. The latter has gathered from all the world students for its classes and has sent them back to their homes and to other places well prepared for service. This is why the names of Oberlin and Ann Arbor sound so good all over the world.

Atlanta, Georgia, and Nashville, Tennessee, have institutions of learning for colored people that add greatly to the culture of their people living there and give an air of distinction to those cities. The colored people of Washington are especially fortunate. There are colored people on the city public school board, there is a colored superintendent of their schools, and colored principals. Howard University heads up the colored educational work in the city of Washington. But it does more. It, in a sense, heads up the colored educational work throughout the country, and throughout the world. And it also inspires in the minds of colored people everywhere confidence that they will rise and do their share in enlightening, civilizing, and Christianizing the world.

CANDLES IN CONNECTION WITH RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS

By REV. JAMES L. ELDERDICE

Candles were early introduced, with symbolical meaning, into Christian worship, and are still so employed in the Roman Catholic church. The numerous observances connected with candles and other lights had their remote origin in the once universally prevalent worship of the sun and of fire.

One of the festivals very strictly kept by the Roman Catholic church is known as Candelmas. There is a procession with many lighted candles, and those required for the service of the ensuing year are also on that occasion consecrated, hence the name, Candelmas. An old document of the time of Henry VIII, preserved in the archives of the Society of Antiquaries, London, speaks thus of the custom of carrying candles:

"On Candelmas Daye it shall be declared that the bearing of candles is done in the memorie of Christe, the spiritual lyghte whom Simeon dyd propheeye. ('A light to lighten the Gentiles'), as it is redde in churche that daye." But an older and heathen origin is ascribed to the practice. The Romans were in the habit of burning candles on this day to the goddess Februa, the mother of Mars, and Pope Sergius, seeing it would be useless to prohibit a practice of so long standing turned it to Christian account by enjoying a similar offering of candles to the Virgin Mary.

Long before the birth of Christ the Jews observed every December one of their great festivals, which is still observed, called Chanuka, or "Feast of Lights," at which time Jewish homes and synagogues are brilliantly illuminated. This feast celebrates the anniversary of the victories of the Maccabees and the rededication of the Temple which had been so long desecrated and polluted by the heathen.

As the Feast of Lights antedates the day of the Nativity of Christ, and as lighted candles were a prominent feature of the occasion, it is likely that in every Jewish home in Bethlehem and Judea, lights were twinkling at the very time the new star appeared that led the Magi to the place where slept the Infant Saviour.

The fact remains that the illumination of the Chanuka festival and the candles on the Christmas tree are both of un-Jewish and un-Christian origin. They are memories, developments, and expressions of the ancient festivals in celebration of the Son's rebirth, kept in the childhood of the race. Long before Christ was born, or before Maccabees won his brilliant victories, man paid tribute to the sun, who gave him light and food, warmth and cheer.

In old times every house holder put out his fire on Easter Eve, previous to the kindling of a huge fire in the market place or public square. This new fire was blessed by the clergy, and the blazing brands were carried home by the congregation to light anew their extinguished hearth-fires. On the following morning embers from the sacred bonfire served to light the Easter candle, which thenceforth throughout the year was illuminated at every important service.

Elaborate ceremonies take place at Easter in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem. Until a few years ago the Patriarch of the Greek Church even perpetrated a pious fraud on the faithful. In this church, as in so many others, it was customary to light candles which had been extinguished on Good Friday, and speak the words "The light of Christ." The Patriarch presented from the sacred tomb a lighted candle or torch which he claimed had been miraculously lighted without human aid. The spectators would struggle to reach it, and from it light their own little candles. Broken heads were often the result of the struggle.

In Greece, the Saturday night preceding Easter the people assemble at the Cathedral a few minutes before midnight. Just at 12:00 o'clock the chief priest lights the altar flame. From this flame the other priests light candles, and then pass in and out among the crowd, lighting the candles of the others until each is provided with a light. When the candles are all lighted the procession, led by the priests, forms and marches like the Good Friday procession, from church to church.

In the homes in Armenia on Christmas Eve a dozen candles are lighted, and the father tells Christmas stories and legends until the candles are burned out.

In recent years foreign candles, stained red, have been imported to aid in filling the demand at what is, perhaps, the world's greatest candle burning event—the China New Year. Those of plain white take their place in funeral ceremonies at the death of elderly persons, and those of light blue or green are to be seen at funeral services for younger persons.

A GRIEVOUS ERROR

I have just read a news item saying the Federal Council of Churches representing 27 Protestant denominations and 23 million members, had gone on record favoring birth control.

I just wonder if this council of churchmen really represent the sentiment of these 27 denominations and 23 million members. If they do, these churches are in a deplorable condition. It is generally conceded that all protestant churches believe that the Bible is the Word of God, and it is supposed to be the object of these churches to advance the teaching of the Bible. The Word of God is not silent on this subject.

This council of churchmen are either ignorant of the Bible teaching on this subject or they disregard this Biblical injunction that carries with it the death penalty. It is shocking beyond measure to think that a council of churchmen representing as they pretend to the principal parts of the moral and spiritual forces of the country should fall so far from what should be expected of them as to indorse a course that has been the cause of so much moral turpitude and social abortion. A course that common decency forbids, not mentioning morality or spirituality. A course that makes it possible for men and women to indulge in that awful blighting, damning sin of prostitution without the fear of discovery. In indorsing this course this council of churchmen indorses one of the most nefarious traffics in the world—the sale of birth control devices.

It is the opinion of the writer that the sale of these devices should be prohibited or taxed out of existence.

SPIRITUALLY DISCERNED

A sculptor wrought a beautiful statue, and a man who saw it said, "I do not understand your statue. You can carve, I know, but your statue is all out of proportion. Can't you see it?" "You cannot see it as I see it," remarked the sculptor. "You will find at the foot of the statue a place to kneel, and when you kneel at the foot of my image of Christ, you will see it in its true proportion." The man knelt there, and saw at once the statue in its true proportion and glory. There are things in Christ which you can never learn or see until you have knelt at His feet.—Harrington C. Lees in Judson Baptist Review.

Treasurer's Report

The readers of the HERALD have noticed, of course, the report of Dr. Brown in last week's issue. His report covers the first four months of the conference year, and includes total amounts received for all purposes during that time.

A little study of the report will be informing, and perhaps embarrassing. On the A. C. B., 35 charges have credits; 52 have none. The New Century Service budget has credits by 49 charges, divided as follows: from women's work, 37 charges; independent of women's work, 12 charges. On the maintenance allotment for High Point college, 13 charges have credits; 74 have no credits.

One noticeable fact about the report is the number of prominent charges that have no credits at all, or very small credits, if any. The total number of charges that have credits is 63; this leaves 24 charges with no credits.

The report shows the total receipts as follows: A. C. B., $733; New Century Service, $1,398. Of this amount, $1,210 is a credit from the women's work. College, $209.50; superannuates, (from four charges), $1.76; gratitude gift deficit, (from two charges), $5.50; Golden Rule Sunday (from two charges), $7.27. Grand total for all purposes, $2,361.21.

I suppose that we shall all have to admit that this report does not make a very good showing, though it should be said that there are some charges that do have generous credits. Up to this time last year we had raised for the college $4,500, as against less than $300 this year. Tighter money conditions may explain this. I am inclined to think, though, that it is due more to the intense effort that was put on "Dollar a Member" during the first months of last year. But we are not complaining, though the report is not flattering. We wish, of course, that it were better; so do pastors and charges. What we must do now is gird up our loins and determine to make the results of this quarter stepping stones to better things in the next. And this will do it: SOMETHING ON BUDGETS EVERY MONTH. If every charge will adopt this slogan, the results will be different when we take stock again. And remember this, brethren: God will not let a money panic defeat the purposes of his church.

On to Washington!

The date is May 12-15. Just a month and a half now in which to get ready. But that's time enough, we trust, for a great many of our folks to get ready. We want North Carolina well represented at this Convention. Great interests of the church are involved, and whatever involves the church involves us. Most of our people who go will no doubt travel by automobile. The expense can be greatly reduced by going in clubs. And we are told that good lodging places, with clean beds, can be had at the Washington tourist camp at a cost of only twenty-five cents a night. By this accommodation the expense during the stay in Washington can be reduced to the minimum. In addition to attending the convention, there will be time for sight-seeing. Persons who have not been to the Capital of the nation will find much of interest there; and those who have been will be glad to go again. The convention is a great opportunity to combine business and pleasure.

The plan of financing the Convention is through registrations, at $1.00 each. We are asking our pastors to handle this. They may choose their own way of doing it. If they prefer, they may get some one at each church to handle it; or if they think best, they will handle it themselves. But however it is done, we urge that it be presented to our people, and that they be asked to register and to attend the Convention. If they can't attend, they are asked to register just the same. By doing this, they will give financial support to the Convention, and thus share in a necessary part of it.

Send names and registration fee to Rev. J. H. Straughn, D. D., Baltimore, Md., 516 North Charles street.

Every Month

"Something on Budgets Every Month," that's the slogan. This was adopted at a recent meeting of the Conference Budget Council and New Century Service Commission. It seems to us to be both reasonable and possible. If charges will work this, we are confident that a different story will be told at the end of the year. Small amounts, regularly contributed, make the large aggregates in the end. It is noticeable that at the end of the first four months of the conference year, 52 charges have no credits on the A. C. B., and, independent of the women's work, 75 charges have no credits on the New Century Service budget.

This is so far below what would seem possible for us, that it is difficult to think we should be content with it. Our proposal is an easy way of changing it. Try it, brethren, try it. Give us your hearty co-operation in this undertaking, and every charge will have a credit when the next report is made. Now, "SOMETHING ON BUDGETS EVERY MONTH."

The Offering

Your Easter offering will, of course, be taken next Sunday. Please do not hold it back. The Board of Missions needs it now, and is waiting anxiously for it. Get your check off to Dr. Brown early next week, so he can hurry it to headquarters. And please make the offering generous.

April

By action of the Annual Conference, April was designated "Stewardship and Pay-up Month." We suggest that pastors preach on Stewardship, and that all tithers possible be enrolled. We urge stewards to give special attention to pastors' needs, and that salaries be brought up to date just as far as this is possible. Another pressing need is the college allotment. Among other goals for this month, we urge that prominence be given to this, and that every available dollar for this purpose be raised. The need is urgent. Let us do all possible to carry out this order of the conference. Set some goal for the month, and work to it.

"Lest We Forget"

Over and over we should remind ourselves of the real purpose of the church, and its source of power. So many worthy and necessary things go into the set-up of our church programs that we are in danger of over-valuing them, and of coming to think of them as ends in themselves. The very working machinery of the church as necessary as it is, may become a snare to us. The fact that a church is equipped with working tools is not evidence that it is empowered for its mission. "Things" do not make a church, however important and necessary they are. The church is more than its buildings, its budgets, its organizations. These things are necessary, but they do not make the church. It is spirit that makes the church. Wherever this is lacking, the church is shorn of its power, whatever else it may have. Did the great Head not say, "Without me ye can do nothing?" We need to keep ourselves reminded of this over and over again, and strive to keep the church so close to him that always it may be fitted for its work by the energizing power of our risen Lord.

"Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove,
With all thy quickening power,
Come, shed abroad a Saviour's love,
And that shall kindle ours."

"CHARLEY, WOULD YOU BE WILLING TO GIVE OUR COTTAGE?"

Dr. George W. Truett tells of an occasion when he was raising money to dedicate a church building. The amount to be obtained was $6,500. After what he calls the slowest, and most reluctant, most Christ-shaming effort to raise money he ever witnessed, they stopped at three thousand dollars.

After a long pause, Dr. Truett said, "What do you expect of me? I am your guest. I do not happen to have the other $3,500. What do you expect of me?"

Then there arose a little woman back in the audience, plainly clad. "There was a surpassing pathos in her voice," says Dr. Truett, "as looking past me to the young man at the desk who was taking the names—her husband—she said: 'Charley, I have wondered if you would be willing for us to give our little cottage, just out of debt. We were offered $3,500 in cash for it yesterday. We were told we could get it at the bank any time in ten days, if we chose to make the trade. Charley, I have wondered if you would be willing for us to give our little house to Christ that His house may be free. When we remember, Charley, that Christ gave His life for us, I wonder if we ought not to give this little house to Him.'

"The fine fellow responded in the same high spirit with a sob in his voice, saying: 'Jennie, dear, I was thinking of the same thing.' Then looking up at me with his face covered with tears, he said, 'We will give $3,500.'

"Then there followed a scene beggaring all description. Silence reigned for a minute, and then men sobbed aloud, and gentle women and men standing around the walls, who a dozen minutes before had shut their lips with scorn and contempt for a church halting and defeated, sobbed aloud, and almost in a moment provided the $3,500."

The foregoing incident (quoted by Dr. Conant in "Every-Member Evangelism") illustrates what God is able to do when the Christ of the Cross is really lifted up and crucified lives. How long would it take to evangelize America, or the world, if this were the spirit of all Christ's followers?

"I gave My life for thee,
My precious blood I shed,
That thou might'st ransom'd be
And quickened from the dead.
I gave, I gave My life for thee,
What hast thou given for Me?"

LIFE'S LOOM

Spin cheerfully, not tearfully,
Though wearily you plod;
Spin carefully, spin prayerfully,
But leave the thread with God.
The shuttles of His purpose move
To weave out His design.
Seek not too soon to disapprove
His work, nor yet assign
Dark motives, when, with silent dread,
You view each somber fold;
For lo! within each darker thread
There twines a thread of gold.

LINCOLN'S ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN

Let every American, every lover of liberty, every well-wisher to his posterity, swear by the blood of the Revolution, never to violate in the least particular the laws of the country, and never to tolerate their violation in others. As the patriots of '76 did to the support of the Declaration of Independence, so to the support of the Constitution and laws let every American pledge his life, his property and his sacred honor—let every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his fathers, and to tear the charter of his own and his children's liberty.

Let reverence for the laws be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap; let it be taught in schools, in seminaries and in colleges; let it be written in primers, spelling books and in almanacs; let it be preached from the pulpit, proclaimed in legislative halls and enforced in courts of justice. And, in short, let it become the political religion of the nation; and let the old and the young, the rich and the poor, the grave and the gay of all sexes and tongues and colors and conditions, sacrifice unceasingly upon its altars.—Abraham Lincoln, in an Address at Springfield, Illinois, before the Young Men's Lyceum, January 27, 1837.

SALLY'S SACRIFICE

"Dad, whatever is the matter? You have hardly said a word all day, aren't you feeling well?" Mrs. Finlay looked anxiously at her husband as she spoke, and the quiver in her voice revealed her concern over the behaviour of the one who was usually so talkative.

"Well, Ethel, I might just as well tell you; you know that lately everything seems to have been going against us. The last six months have been the hardest I have spent since we came on the place, and now, when I go to town to sell my produce I find that some one has cut my prices. Naturally people will buy where they can get things the cheapest, and I cannot possibly cut my prices any lower. So, good wife, I'm afraid that we will have to sell our stock of poultry. I have had a fairly decent offer for the whole flock of birds, and I think that the only thing to do is sell while we have the chance." The words were muttered in the tone of a man who, after years of industrious toil, sees his dreams of prosperity vanish into thin air.

The loving wife said nothing; all too easily she realized the bitter disappointment of the man who sat across the table from her, and she knew also that there was nothing she could say that would help matters much. There are times when a disappointed or distressed mind appreciates silence more than any spoken expression of sympathy, and Mrs. Finlay wisely knew that this was one of the times for silence.

The solemn stillness was broken, at last, however, by a half stifled sob, and the two looked at a little person who had been forgotten for the moment.

"Grandpa, dear Grandpa, will you have to sell William and Thomas?"

And although the moment was fraught with sadness, the faint glimmer of a smile played upon the face of the old gentleman.

William and Thomas were always a source of amusement to the old couple; while to Sally they were the 'bestest pets in all the whole, wide world.' And why shouldn't she love those two little chickens? Hadn't she taken care of them ever since they were little balls of black fluff? And didn't they follow her around the yard like a pair of affectionate puppies? She had even given them the names they bore, and what better names could two fine, healthy cockerels be called than William and Thomas?

So this was the cause of Sally's sorrow and Grandpa's amusement.

Sally's big blue eyes were swimming with tears as her grandmother put a sympathetic arm around the little shoulders.

"No, Sally, Grandma wouldn't let Grandpa sell your pets even if he wanted to. So you just dry those big tears and don't ever worry any more about losing William and Thomas." The soothing words had their desired effect, and Sally was soon out in the yard excitedly telling the two faithful pets that all the other chickens were to be sold, but that Grandpa had promised never, never to sell them. Of course the cockerels couldn't understand a word she said, but Sally always got a certain amount of satisfaction out of telling them all her troubles and joys as they followed her from place to place in the yard, ever on the lookout for some tasty morsel from the little child.

A short distance down the road from where Sally lived with her grandparents there was a dilapidated looking house with a poorly attended garden in front. The shabby appearance of things could not be blamed upon Mrs. Burton, however, for she had more of her share of work in looking after her flock of noisy little youngsters, who were always getting into some sort of childish mischief. Vera was the oldest girl in the Burton family, and Sally was her best friend. Whenever Vera could be spared from the house she used to scurry away to Sally's, and the two spent many a happy hour in the innocent pastimes of childhood.

But there came one sad day when the hard work of helping to care for the younger children wore the girl to such a state of weakness that she was forced to take to her bed; and week after week she lay, fighting with what little strength she had the power of a sickness that was gradually wearing her little frame to the semblance of a skeleton.

Daily, nay sometimes twice a day, a timid knock would be heard at the door, and a gentle little Miss would enter; always with the same sober countenance and the same serious question, "Is Vera any better now?"

And then the worried mother would tiptoe to the door of the room where the sufferer lay, and if Vera was awake, Sally would steal silently over to the bedside and place some small love token in the thin hand. It was never very much that she brought; perhaps a pansy from her garden, or a picture from her own bedroom, or a plaything from among her own toys; never very much, but always something that revealed her love and thoughtfulness.

Of course they used to talk of the many games that they were going to play when Vera recovered, and the many places they were going to visit; but usually the main topic of conversation was, William and Thomas. For since Vera had taken sick they had been Sally's only playmates, and the sick child was always interested in hearing of the way they were growing up, and of their cute way of following Sally around.

But one day when the little hands knocked on the door it was opened by a tall man who had a black mustache, and carried a queer telephone thing in his large hand.

"Oh!" stammered Sally, "Oh, is anything wrong?"

But she didn't wait to hear an answer, for already she was on her way to the weary, weeping mother whose head was buried in her arms on the kitchen table.

"Mrs. Burton! Oh, please, Mrs. Burton, tell me! Has that bad man done something to Vera?" her excitement had made her brave in the presence of the strange man whom she suspected of being the cause of the trouble.

Between sobs Mrs. Burton told Sally that this was the doctor who had come to examine the sick friend, and that he had told her unless Vera could be given more nourishing food there was very little hope of her ever getting better.

"But how can I give her better food, when I find it hard enough to get along with the plain things that we have now? My poor husband has even gone to the city to try and find work, but so far he has found nothing, and there is no hope of me buying all the things the doctor says Vera must have. Chicken broth! However does he think I can afford to get the child such luxuries? Gladly would I get them if possible, but there is nothing left in the home worth selling, and I simply cannot leave the other children and go out to work, even if I could find it to do," and in a frenzy of despair the woman turned to the little child.

"Sally!" and her eyes stared wildly, "Sally, whatever can I do?"

Straightening herself up to her full four feet of height, and in her most serious tone of voice, the little one said soothingly,

"Don't you worry, Mrs. Burton, we'll fix things up somehow," but even as she spoke Sally felt a large lump rising in her throat, and she excused herself as she hastened out of the humble home.

"Grandpa, do you think that William and Thomas would make good chicken broth?" asked Sally that night at the dinner table.

"My dear child, whatever put such a coldblooded idea into your head?" the grandfather was reasonably surprised at the question.

"Well, you see, Grandpa, my friend Vera is very, very ill, and we, that is Mrs. Burton and I, have got to get her better by feeding her with the best food we can get. And the doctor said she needed lots of chicken broth and stuff like that. So I have been thinking that if Mrs. Burton can't afford to buy any chicken, and I know she is too poor to do that; then, then I will have to let my pets be made into broth for my friend Vera."

By this time the great big tears were trickling fast down the little one's rosy cheeks, for although she spoke in such an apparently reckless manner, the thought of losing her two pets was a sore trial to her. As a matter of fact she had been debating with herself all afternoon whether she loved Vera more than she did William and Thomas. And when at last she had decided to make the great sacrifice she comforted herself in the thought that at least the pets could not come to a more heroic end.

So it was finally agreed that on the morrow the sorrowful deed would be carried out, and that Grandmother Findlay was to make the broth which was to help the failing Vera along the road to recovery.

Quite early next morning little Sally was out in the yard having a last loving talk with the pets who were soon to be removed from her.

"You see, my pretty birdies," she sobbed to them, "I love you both very much, but when I heard that you could help save my friend Vera, well I thought it would be awfully selfish of me to keep you. I promise never to forget you, for I will keep some of your feathers in a special bag as long as I live. Oh! here comes Grandpa . . . and now—dear William and Thomas, let me—pick you both up—for the—last time. Let me—stroke your beautiful feathers . . . Good-by, my pets! Good-by!" and the heartbroken child fled into the house, where she buried her head in a pillow and sobbed out her grief. And after a while a merciful slumber sent her off into the land of peaceful dreams, where she saw Vera all better, and able once again to be out playing the games they loved so well.

The broth was made; and at the door of the Burton home the little maid called to be let in with her big mowl. And as the wan and weary young invalid supped the strengthening nourishment Sally told, with a sad, far-away voice, the story of the sacrifice she had made for the recovery of the chum she loved so dearly. When she had finished, however, there was a light of gladness on her face as she said,

"But, Vera dear, it was well worth while, for Grandpa says that when you have had all the broth that was made with William and Thomas, he will make a sacrifice too, and get you some more good food, so that soon my dear friend will be as strong as ever."

"You are a very good child," said the grateful mother, "and you must love my little daughter very much."

"Yes," answered Sally, "I loved my precious pets, William and Thomas," a little sigh; then, "but I loved Vera best—I loved Vera too."

"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us. * * * for God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—Arthur R. Scarr.

SIN AND ITS RESULTS

Sin—the results of sin have always been, and will always be, what they have always been: a dark, disgraceful stain in man's soul: a blighting curse in man's dwelling place, and a destroyer of man's future prospects. Sin leaves in its path eternal ruin and wreckage. It does pull down a character from its nobleness and will never lift it to a state of Godliness.

Sin's wages can never be anything else but death. It is the root of all the misery in this world and affects man in every part of his being. Pain, suffering and misery it brings into the soul: fear, depression and heaviness it brings to the spirit.

What a wearisome burden sin puts upon man! How we have longed to be delivered from its degrading influence! Is it possible to be freed from this burden? Yes, in Jesus is to be found a deliverance—a rest for our troubled souls. "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light" (Matt. 11:28-30).—T. H. Atkinson.

—"Wake up, Drys!" cries Judge A. A. Bruce, of Chicago. He thinks the Drys constitute a great majority of our citizens, but many are suffering from what he calls a "Fools' paradise complex." "It is time the friends of prohibition everywhere came out of their trance. We are living in a Democracy and not a Fools' paradise," he says.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By J. T. BOWMAN

President High Point College Christian Endeavor Society

April 12: HOW FAR DARE WE PRACTICE BROTHERHOOD OF MAN?

Scripture Text—Mtt. 23:8-12.

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—One Father, One Family. Acts 17:24-31.

Tuesday—Brothers. Luke 10:30-37.

Wednesday—Human Kindness. Acts 28:1-6.

Thursday—Brotherhood Spiritualized. Mark 3:31-31.

Friday—Thoughtfulness of Others. Romans 14:13-21.

Saturday—Generosity. Matt. 7:12.

To the Leader

Since we are living in a day when no one cares to be "kept," there seems to be much dissatisfaction with the idea of being my brother's keeper. We do not want to feel superior to any about us. Lordship is something which no one should feel over another. The only one who is worthy of being our true Master is God of the universe and His Divine Son Jesus Christ, for They are perfect. Humility is a true test of worth. Even Christ, the Master, was humble. We have a responsibility to all that we come in contact with and if we are Christlike we will be glad to do a brotherly deed for them.

In a little volume entitled "Prayer Changes Things," Mr. S. D. Gordon imagines a conversation between Christ and the angel Gabriel. Jesus has just returned from earth and the angel is asking Him what arrangements He has made for the carrying on of His work, now that He can no longer be present to carry it on Himself. Jesus is made to answer: "I asked Peter and James and John and some more of them down there just to go and make it the business of their lives to tell others. And the others to tell others, and still others beyond, till the last man in the farthest reach has heard the story and has been caught, thrilled and thrilled by the power of it." But Gabriel, sensing a weakness in the Master's plan, replies: "Yes, Master; suppose after a while Peter forgets. Suppose John loses his enthusiasm and simply doesn't tell the others. Suppose their successors away down there in the twentieth century get so busy about things, some of them good things—church things maybe—suppose they get so busy that they do not tell the others. What then?" The reply of the Christ is simple, direct and calm: "Gabriel, I haven't made any other plans. I am counting on them." Jesus is counting on us. What if we fail Him? Are we failing in the promotion of this Gospel of brotherhood by our own indifference and selfishness? What then? The Lord has made no other plans. The success of His cause depends upon us.

For Discussion

1. What is your brotherly duty toward the man who pays heavily toward the finance of the church, but cheats his customers during the week?
2. What is your church doing to help the unfortunate brothers of your town? Of your nation? Of the world?

3. Does brotherhood always mean being kind? Explain.

4. Is the spirit of brotherhood essential to our being children of God? Why?

5. What rewards may we expect for being brotherly?

CALVARY'S COOKS

The Ladies' Auxiliary trembled with fright, As they went to sup on a Saturday night. At six-thirty they arrived at the hut, To a supper that was nothing else but.

Cooked and served by men cooks, The kind you read about in story books. We feared we all would have indigestion, But this diseases was out of the question.

Since the food was so nutritious, So well served, simply delicious. We all admit 'twas quite a treat, For Calvary's chefs are hard to beat.

For baking hams and cakes, our Mr. Glass, Ranks among cooks of the first class. For salads and cakes we congratulate Mr. Coe, We'll say Mr. Bates knows his dough.

For ice cream making of the best, Glass, Caudle, Curtis and Dixon stood the test.

When dressed up in his Sunday duds, Mr. Williams peels a mean pile of spuds.

The waiters in their aprons were quite a scream,

As they rushed out in a steady stream. Carrying the food to and fro, Saying, "take this, don't ask for mo'."

Your kindness will always be expected, Your suppers never rejected. We Calvary women are proud of our men, If you wish us to sup again, say when!

MARGARET A. OVERCASH.

ENGLISH "PHONETICS"

William W. Wheeler, advertising manager of the local telephone company, tells about the Londoner speaking over the phone: "Yaws, this is Mr. 'Arrison speaking. Cawn't yer 'ear? 'Arrison! 'Arrison! Haiteh, hay, two hars, a hi, a hess, a ho, and a hen!"—Pathfinder.

Taylor, Treas., 909 West College Drive, High Point, N. C., telling her what organization, and charge is, sending it.

MRS. C. W. BATES,

Chairman of Districts.

OUR SKILL

(Read Psalm 144.)

David wrote, "Blessed be the Lord my rock, which teacheth my lands to war, and my fingers to fight."

God is the author and founder of our skill. We can say, "Blessed be the Lord my rock, which teacheth my hands to cook and my fingers to sew—or whatever we try to do. Practical occupations belong to the Divine plan. Moses was told, "The place whereon thou standest is Holy ground." Our occupations are surely Holy ground. Let us put our hope in God our rock and "serve Him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before Him all our days."

OVER THE TOP

Here is a list of more auxiliaries paying both budgets in full: Bethel (Ala.), Mebane, Hickory Ridge (For.), Maple Springs (For.), Winston-Salem, Mt. Carmel (Gran.) Weaver-ville, Spring Valley (Vance), Charlotte, State Street, Julian, Burlington, Moriah, Haw River. MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treas.

BRANCH MEETING DATE CHANGED

Because of so many conflicts, which we cannot control, it seems wisest that dates for the Branch meeting should be changed to Wednesday and Thursday, April 22nd and 23rd. Please note this change in dates and plan to be in High Point for those two full days. The officers of the Branch are anxious that every auxiliary should have its full representation besides others from the auxiliaries; and the High Point church is anxious to have you there.

Remember the dates—April 22 and 23, and the place—First Church, High Point.

MRS. W. C. HAMMER,

President N. C. Branch.

MRS. S. S. COE,

Chairman Program Com.

—Messrs. Burrow and Lamb are to build Randolph hospital in Asheboro and finish it in about seven months. Consideration $82,000.

DON'T FOOL YOURSELF!

Do you play a boastful part?
Don't fool yourself!
Claim that you are very smart?
Don't fool yourself!
Strut about as handsome, tall?
Think you really know it all?
Pride oft goes before a fall—
Don't fool yourself!

Do you speculate in stocks?
Don't fool yourself!
Be prepared for tragic shocks,
Don't fool yourself!
Little lambs are easily shorn,
Innocents are daily born,
Money gone and all forlorn—
Don't fool yourself!

Long to be a millionaire?
Don't fool yourself!
Saddled with a load of care?
Don't fool yourself!
Money is not everything,
It may suddenly take wing,
Better far to smile and sing—
Don't fool yourself!

Do you covet worldly fame?
Don't fool yourself!
Wish to make a public name?
Don't fool yourself!
Quiet things are best, they say,
Ostentation does not pay,
Live the simple life today—
Don't fool yourself!

—GRENVILLE KLEISER.

HELP NEEDY NAMESAKES

Hundreds of Union county farmers are donating seed corn, cowpeas, soybeans, and seed cane for the relief of needy farmers in the drought stricken areas of Union county, Arkansas, according to a recent report from County Agent Tom Broom. Many of the Union county, Arkansas, farmers were originally from Union county, North Carolina, having migrated about 40 year ago. The older residents in Mr. Broom's county remember these men and started the movement to aid them by donating a car of seed corn. Every section of the county is responding to the appeal for help and the donations are generous, says Mr. Broom.—Extension Farm News.

WALL STREET

(A Warning to the Gullible)
Oh, yes!
Humpty Dumpty had a great fall,
His tumble upset the finances of all.
All Morgan's millions and keen Wall Street men
Couldn't put Humpty together again.
Men were despoiled of their stocks and their cash,
Widows lost all in the terrible crash.
Brokers and bankers were in a bad way,
For millions of lambskins it was a black day.
They suddenly found, slack and alas,
That Humpty was principally water and gas.
The moral this teaches is now quite plain:
Never trust Humpty Dumpty again!

—Grenville Kleiser.

TO A SOCIETY WOMAN

Is your aim mere pleasure-seeking?
Can you find naught else to do?
Something of unselfish service,
To make life worthwhile and true.

Is there real satisfaction,
Rushing madly here and there?
With no time for meditation,
Or another's load to share?

Worldly pleasures are alluring,
But should have a minor part;
They are fleeting as a shadow,
Impotent to heal the heart.

Bridge and dancing, theatre-going,
Do not gratify for long;
Life is sacred and too precious
To be bartered for a song.

Think about it just a little,
Ask yourself what you will say,
When your whirling hours are over
And you face that final day.

—Grenville Kleiser.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

West Forsyth.—Last Sunday was spent at Pleasant Hill in the annual district rally for the eleventh district. The attendance was very good and the program interesting and helpful. A fuller report of the rally is given elsewhere in the Herald and by Dr. Taylor, our president.

Pleasant Hill church is busy this week with the preparation of the Easter service provided by our Board of Missions, and the service will be held next Sunday night. An offering on the General Conference Budget, according to the understanding of this writer. No other churches on the charge are preparing an Easter service.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be at Baltimore church at 11 a. m., and Stony Knoll church at 2:30 p. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Charlotte.—March 29 was "Baby Day" in the First Methodist Protestant Sunday school. Twenty-one of the sixty members of the Cradle Roll were present. Twelve mothers were present with their babies. After a short session in the Cradle Roll classroom the babies and their mothers marched into the church auditorium for the closing session of the Sunday school.

Membership certificates were presented to the following new members: Betty Irene King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. King; Donnie James Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Brown; Donald Watson Fuller, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Fuller; James A. Stikeleather, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Stikeleather; David Eugene Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Jackson, and Kenneth Eugene DeBerry, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. DeBerry.

After the presentation of certificates, Miss Mary Shaw sang very sweetly and impressively, "These Babies God Trusted to You."

Each baby was presented a lovely flower—a pink sweetpea, by Mr. C. H. Daughtry, supt. of the adult department, who spoke a few words of welcome to the babies and their mothers.

First Church, High Point.—On last Sunday, which was Palm Sunday, the usual services were held; the Sabbath school convened at 9:45 o'clock, and the junior church met in the assembly room at 11 o'clock with Mesdames S. S. Coe, and L. R. Johnston leading the two groups of children. At the same hour the adult congregation, after listening to a vocal solo, "Hosanna," by Mr. Arthur Fidler, and the well known and popular anthem, "The Palms," by the church choir, heard a very timely and practical discourse by the minister, on an important and absorbing question, "Is the World Growing Worse?" He said in part: "One of the common gossips heard on the street corners today is that the world is growing worse, and every time I hear it I think it is uttered by some troubled soul who is pessimistic. A despairing Christian said, 'The church is a junk-pile and an ash-heap; 50 per cent of the membership never or rarely darkens the doors; 25 per cent do not contribute; 5 per cent cannot even be found, and 90 per cent never won a soul to Christ. What is the use of it all?' Sin is more noisy than righteousness. A visitor to a prison said to the warden, 'You have a big job here,' and he answered, 'these folks are not here on account of their Christianity, but because of their lack of it.' Would you go to the hospitals to find out whether a town is healthy? You can't measure the sweetness of the Christian religion by the impurity of street corner gossip. You can better answer the question, 'Is the World Growing Better?' A messenger boy may make $100,000, but it does not make him better. They who say the world is growing worse are strangers to the past. I do not want you to lose sight of the numberless good men and women in the world. I remember that Lyman Abbott said that in his life of 83 years' duration that he saw a revolution in every country. We in America have outlawed liquor. Dr. Ira Landrith in his address in this church last Friday night said that if this is God's world, then liquor must be ruled out. The status of our manhood and children has been changed for the better. Justice is gaining; there are more reformatories, juvenile courts, and more investigation of human suffering now than ever before in the history of mankind. Education of the masses is becoming universal; charity has progressed farther, the acid test of human kindness and of self-restraint is being used as never before. No longer does this country levy a tax on white slavery to pay for our schools. America has set the pace for all the nations in every kind of humane, philanthropic work. Would you go back to the old days? The world is growing better on account of Christianity and the influence it exerts. Christ reigns, God lives and receives sinful men."

In the interdenominational community observance of the Holy Communion, which was held at the First Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Mr. Farmer assisted and made an address. At the evening service in the First church at 8 o'clock the minister spoke very earnestly on the topic, "To Be or Not To Be Christian." In the future these services will be held at 8 o'clock instead of the Vesper service at 5 p. m.

A number of High Point people last Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock were delighted to hear Dr. S. K. Spahr make a Holy Week address over radio from Greensboro. Dr. Spahr is very popular and greatly beloved by our membership, whom he served for a year previous to Dr. Farmer's ministry. Rev. J. S. Williams of Asheville is another ex-pastor, who speaks to the shut-ins over radio every Tuesday at 11 a. m. He was the minister here for two years soon after the church was established in High Point, and has many warm and admiring friends in our congregation. His service in Asheville is unique and remarkable.

Holy Week services will be held each evening this week, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, and closing at 8:15. The topics are as follows: For Monday, "The Old Cross In a New World"; Tuesday, "The Drama of Calvary"; Wednesday, "The Sob of a Broken Heart"; Thursday, "From the Passover to Holy Communion"; on Friday a three-hour service from noon until 3 o'clock will be conducted in Emanuel Lutheran church in which our congregation is invited to join, and Friday evening the church choir will sing, "The Crucifixion," by Nevin. On next Sunday evening a pageant, "The Resurrection Way," will be presented by members of the Sabbath school.

On Monday evening at 7 o'clock the Christian Endeavor society will hold its regular weekly meeting, and Miss Esther Pritchard will lead the discussion of the topic, "Why Christ Is a Worthy Master."

The Easter vacation of High Point college will begin next Thursday at 1 o'clock, and classes will be resumed Wednesday morning, April 8.

Garland McPherson of Burlington, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. McPherson, spent the week-end here.

Miss Elizabeth Humphreys, who is a student at Western Maryland college, is spending the spring holidays with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. I. Humphreys on West College drive.

Ralph Vance who teaches in Yanceyville high school, spent the past week-end with his mother, Mrs. C. W. Vance, on Montlieu Ave.

Dr. Humphreys, president of High Point college, left last Friday for Cincinnati, Ohio, where he will deliver a series of addresses. He expects to return home next Thursday.

Lexington.—South Lexington work is going along nicely. We had a large Sunday school today. We had no service at 11 o'clock it being the fifth Sunday.

In our evening service we were very much delighted to have Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Isley, of Tabernacle charge, with us. He preached for us and delivered a very interesting sermon to the large congregation.

One of our faithful members, Brother Charlie Cross, is very ill with pneumonia at his home on South Main street. We are very hopeful and prayerful for an early recovery for Brother Cross.

On next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock we will hold our Easter exercise and a very good program has been prepared for the occasion and we are expecting a large number present.

PHONSE BEAN, Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—Sunday was a full day for us.

We were especially proud of our bulletin board—or rather the power behind it—when it recorded 203 in Sunday school. Up to that time we had only 202 on roll, and to see the attendance exceed the number on roll was a most delightful sight.

We went from Sunday school to Elbaville church for a program of much interest, that of the ninth district rally.

Our pastor is chairman of this district and under his direction a very splendid program was given.

The first address before noon was given by Mr. Hendry, his subject being, "A Day With Jesus." Following this fine address was the lunch and fellowship period. A delicious lunch was spread on a large table on the church grounds and was one of the pleasing features of the day.

In the afternoon Mrs. C. L. Koonts had charge of the part of the program prepared on missions.

Mrs. H. C. Rodgers conducted the devotionals. There were short addresses on the subject of Missions at home and abroad by Mrs. Wiley Shoaf and Mrs. Leatherman of Shiloh church, and Mrs. A. H. Evans of State Street. Following this was some very fine singing by the Bethel quartet and a chorus of singers from Shiloh, and by the Junior quartet of Bethel.

An address of unusual interest was given by Mr. Wm. Widenhouse of Concord. Mr. Widenhouse's subject was motives and methods for building up a Sunday school. He told of the success his own class had had in the way of growth and interest since he has been teaching the men's Bible class of Concord M. P. Sunday school.

Mr. Waddell, superintendent of Concord Sunday school, spoke briefly of the work also. Rev. Mr. Ferree spoke in behalf of the Methodist Protestant Herald.

Sunday evening our pastor gave us another good address and thus closed one more profitable and delightful Sabbath day of our history.

An Easter program will be given Sunday evening under the direction of Mrs. H. C. Rodgers and Mrs. C. L. Koons.

There will be a joint meeting of the circles of the auxiliary Wednesday evening at the church.

Among the visitors with us for Sunday's services were Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Blanton and their friend, Miss Motsinger of Salisbury, North Carolina.

REPORTER.

Salem, Saxapahaw Circuit.—There has been a decline in S. S. attendance during the winter, but now that spring is here we are hoping for a large attendance in the future.

We are planning to have our Easter services Sunday morning, April 5th. Mr. Lacy Thompson is to be with us at this time and make an address. Mr. Thompson has been with us on former occasion and we know what to expect, for we are invited to hear him.

On Sunday, April 12th, the charge rally is to be held at Salem. President Taylor is to preach at 11 o'clock and Rev. J. Clyde Auman is the speaker for the afternoon. We are glad to have Mr. Auman, for he is our ex-pastor and we are always pleased to have our former pastors visit us. This is to be an all day service with dinner on the grounds; every body is invited to be present.

We have just purchased fifty Cokesbury Hymnals. These hymnals were very much needed.

On March the 20th as the angels were gathering up their precious jewels, they entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Durham and claimed their own darling, Eva Blanch. She had brightened their home for five months. She had only been sick with whooping cough about three weeks.

Funeral services were conducted in the home March 21 by Rev. T. J. Whitehead and her little body was laid to rest in the church cemetery, under a mound of beautiful flowers.

We can imagine Blanch to be a bright little angel and would say to her parents, sister and grandparents, "Weep not for your darling, for she is safe in the arms of Jesus."

Bethesda, Halifax Charge.—Yesterday was a great day with us, when the fifth district rally was held at this church. The attendance was good, and there were some interesting talks. Four visiting pastors were present and took part in the services—Dr. Johnson, Mr. Hethcox, Mr. Spencer, and Mr. Bingham—the principal talk being given by Dr. Johnson. He made an earnest appeal in behalf of Christian education, presenting especially the cause of High Point college. His remarks were varied at times with the gentle and pleasing humor characteristic of him.

In the afternoon, we had an interesting talk by Mrs. J. H. Cutchin, head of the woman's missionary auxiliaries in this district. Several representatives from the local churches were called upon and made a few remarks regarding the work of their auxiliaries.

The School of Religious Training was also discussed and explained; and Miss Ethel Harrison reported what had been done in the five-day session held at Aurelian Springs school near here last summer, where another session is to be held during the coming summer.

Mrs. Cutchin served as pianist for us, and we had some special music in the afternoon. A solo by Miss Sexton, and a duet by two young ladies from Eden church.

Mr. Hethcox and Mrs. Varser gave an invitation for the next rally to be held at Spring church, fifth Sunday in May. This will be in connection with the celebration of the hundred anniversary of that church.

A bountiful dinner was served on the grounds, and the social part of the occasion was much enjoyed.

Mr. Fogleman continues to give us good sermons. At last appointment, second Sunday we were glad to have with us six teachers from our high school at Aurelian Springs, and to have the music teacher, Miss Crabtree, play the piano for the services.

Mr. Fogleman has a gift for analysis and gets a great deal of meaning out of a text. He has something to say and the words to express himself.

When the weather gets better, we hope to have better attendance at the services.

MRS. L. B. S. Reporter.

Forsyth, Oak Grove.—Our Sunday school is still having very good attendance for a little country church. We are hoping to see our Sunday school pick up in the near future. Our attendance has been lowered by some moving, we feel this has been a great loss to the church.

We will have our regular monthly service on the second Sunday evening at 3 o'clock; Sunday school at 2 o'clock on second Sundays.

Everybody is cordially invited to worship with us.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Kiger, of Lenoir, are spending the week-end with us.

We ask the prayers of all God's people in behalf of our church and community.

MRS. R. M. WARREN, Reporter.

First Church, Albemarle.—Last Sunday evening the regular fifth Sunday union service was held in our church. The West Albemarle Baptist church furnished the music. Several very beautiful numbers were rendered, among which the men's quartet sang. Their pastor, Rev. M. L. Dortan, read the scripture lesson. Rev. Mr. Staugh of the Tabernacle M. E. church was the speaker of the evening. He took for his subject, "With a Whole Heart." He said in part: "There is only one road to eternity; this is the heart road. Man so often expects to enter the promised land by paying to his church and donating to charity funds, but this alone cannot assure him of his soul's salvation. He must be born again. The trouble with the majority of the people today is their hearts are in the wrong place; by that I do not mean that it is located on the right side instead of the left; but they have let their hearts become so engrossed in worldly pleasure they are powerless to change them. 'Where your possessions are there will your heart be also.' Therefore lay up your treasure in heaven where moths nor rust will corrupt."

Next Sunday morning there will be a sunrise service held on the lawn of our church. This service will be in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ. A special program will be given. All denominations are invited to attend. At eleven o'clock a special program will be given. Mr. Curry will speak from the subject, "The First Easter Message," and the choir will furnish special Easter music. Sunday evening the choir will give its regular Easter cantata, with several added selections by the children.

MRS. A. A. WAGNER.

First Church, Thomasville.—As a result of the faithful attendance and enthusiastic work of the members of our Sunday school contest the attendance is still growing. On Sunday, March 22, despite the rainy weather, our attendance was 223 and the majority of them stayed for preaching service. On last Sunday, March 29, we had an attendance of 368 at Sunday school. I notice that some pastors have been reporting their church attendance on a church-membership percentage basis, and I would like to say that we had on last Sunday an attendance of 124 per cent of church membership.

On Sunday evening, March 22, the Alice Coates' Mission band presented a pageant at the hour of the regular preaching service after which the thank offering was received. On the following Thursday evening, Dr. Ira Landrith gave a very helpful and inspiring lecture at the Presbyterian church. Dr. Landrith was brought to us by the Thomasville Christian Endeavor union of which Mrs. T. Glenn Madison is president.

An Easter program has been planned by the committee and is now under way. The 11 o'clock hour will be given over to a decision service and reception of members followed by Holy Communion. All who are not Christians will be invited to take a stand for Christ and unite with the church. An Easter pageant entitled "The Resurrection Way," and a brief exercise by the smaller children will be given at the regular evening hour. The public is cordially invited to attend. All the participants of this exercise have been practicing and endeavoring faithfully to make it a success.

Although the attendance is not very large at our mid-week Mission Study course, I think it is very interesting and helpful to those who do attend.

Now that spring is at our door, we hope that your church and ours will grow not only in attendance but in spiritual life also.

ISHMAEL DORSETT.

First Church, Winston.—F—Fi Fo—Fum, what do you think First Church, Winston has done? 275? Yes, of course, that's the number attending Sunday school last Sabbath morning. Our pastor said this was the best for our Sunday school in the last thousand years, there's probably no one reading this that remembers further back than that. It was a real thrill to have our church overflowing, it seemed. Some might say that we are dead, but the way things are happening up our way you'll soon find it differently.

The church worship of the morning was very inspiring. Palms were used in the pulpit; they were beautiful and very appropriate for the occasion of Palm Sunday. Rev. J. E. Pritchard preached a short sermon, his theme being "Jesus' Triumphant Entry Into Jerusalem." Mr. Pritchard's sermons are always fine, but this one was exceedingly so. The Communion service was held on this Sunday instead of the first Sunday. There was splendid attendance for church services, also.

The district rally was held at Pleasant Hill church; as many as possibly could do so, went in the afternoon. The meeting was very successful and enjoyable, and much was learned from the things that were said. Miss Mary E. Young gave a very interesting and helpful talk; Mrs. S. W. Taylor explained about the way the money is used that is turned in by the auxiliaries, which was also helpful. The splendid music contributed by students from High Point college was thoroughly enjoyed.

We were indeed glad to have with us Sunday night, Dr. S. W. Taylor. Dr. Taylor delivered the address of the evening worship and told us something of the conference work. All of those who have had the privilege of knowing Dr. Taylor, no doubt, feel that his life, as well as his sermons, is an inspiration to those who observe his Godly deeds.

On Thursday night a Communion service will be held at the church, "On the same night He was betrayed He did institute this ordinance and commanded His followers to do this in commemoration of His death until He come again." It is not fitting then to do it on the same night, these many years after His betrayal?

Next Sunday night the Easter program will be given. An impressive pageant is being prepared, and quite a bit of Easter music, also. May we say that we wish all the readers a pleasant and a happy Easter, one that will be a fitting remembrance of the Resurrection of our Master.

THE BOARD OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Realizing the need of more religious experience among the young people, especially of our church, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, Rev. C. W. Bates and others organized a Board of Young People's Work to help meet the needs. This was something like 16 years ago. At first the only thing the Board did was to hold an annual Young People's Conference which was more of an inspirational nature than an instructive one. For several years these conference were held at Weaverville in the mountains of N. C. Some class work was undertaken from the first but requirements both as to faculty and students were very few. In the summer of 1925 the meeting place was changed from Weaverville to High Point college since it was nearer the center of the state.

From the first the work has grown and yearly more young people and adults have shared these inspirational and instructive conferences. The work has grown to such an extent that the leaders of our church have seen a need for more than just a young people's school of methods. They saw that the leaders of individual churches needed more instruction along the line of better methods of doing church work especially as it relates to the development of childhood and youth. Realizing these needs and the few reached by the Board of Young People's Work, the Board of Religious Education was organized two years ago which took the place of the Young People's work and the field was broadened so that the instructive as well as the inspirational side was and is yet emphasized.

For the past two years the Board of Religious Education has held summer conferences at High Point college for the purpose of instructing not only young people but old as well, in methods, history, programs, and other phases of church work. On completion of a prescribed number of courses a diploma is awarded. Through training and instruction in these courses the Board of Religious Education leaders hope this year to train a larger number of our church leaders than ever before.

Since standard Religious Education courses are being offered, the requirements for teachers and students have become more rigid and a higher standard of work is being urged. Teachers of the standard courses must meet the following requirements: They must have realized within their own lives a real religious experience; they must be interested and experienced in the phase in which they are to teach, they must have an educational background equal to a college education, and finally the must have done special work both in study and practice in the department of work in which they instruct, and must submit to the General Board of Religious Education a course plan, a bibliography, and outline of book study of the course they plan to teach.

Realizing that Annual Conference at the college reached only a few of our people, the college launched a program last year in an effort to reach more of our people. In addition to holding a six-day conference at the college, conferences were held in Graham, Greensboro, Asheboro, and one or two other towns at night, having of course competent instructors. This year they are launching even a greater movement. The N. C. conference has been divided into 23 centers and it is hoped that a conference shall be held in each center. These conferences will be conducted at night, two periods each night, with a devotional period, for five nights. It will be impossible for one person to take more than one course since they have to take two lessons per night in the subject they are taking. Credit given for these courses will be of the same value as that given at the regular conference at the college. Some of the same instructors will be at these center schools as at the college. A registration fee of $1.00 will be charged to take care of expenses.

The council of Religious Education also offers extension courses in any phase of church work which people may take at home and get the same credit as in the conferences, or schools. Other phases of our Religious Education board are carried on by our different schools, colleges and the Theological Seminary at Westminster, through class and extension work.

May I say in conclusion that in this center, composed of Mebane, Alamance, Saxapahaw, Orange, and Mt. Hermon charges, we are planning to have one of these conferences. The place and date to be announced later. We urge you to be there! Meet the leaders of our church, enjoy the religious experience these conferences afford and better prepare yourself to help carry on this great movement of training Christian youth.

LILLIE MAE BRAXTON.

FIRST DISTRICT RALLY

The rally for the first district was held at Bethesda church on Halifax charge on Sunday, March 29. The chairman, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, conducted the devotional services. Several interesting and inspiring talks were made. Dr. T. M. Johnson gave a very interesting address concerning the work of High Point college. We are proud of High Point college and for the work it has done and is still doing. We hope High Point college will soon be relieved of its financial depression. Rev. P. E. Bingham gave a short talk on High Point college. He gave several reasons why he was proud of High Point college and for having received his college education there. One of the reasons he gave for being proud he attended High Point college was for the Religious Education taught there. I think this is one of the greatest subjects to be taught in any school or college. The Bible should be the main subject taught in any school. The people need Religious instructions especially the younger people.

We were very glad indeed to have our former pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Spencer, worship with us in the service Sunday.

Mrs. J. H. Cutchin, our district chairman of the Woman's auxiliary, gave an interesting talk on the work of the Woman's auxiliary. Mrs. Cutchin hopes to be able to have district missionary rallies or conferences.

I believe it would be very helpful to each auxiliary to have these district rallies for the auxiliaries.

The following ministers were present Sunday: Fogleman, Spencer, Johnson, Hethcox, and Bingham. We were very sorry Brother Lowdermilk could not be with us on account of the Sunday school convention, meeting at one of his churches.

I think these rally services are very helpful. Perhaps the Reporter from Bethesda church or the chairman of the district will give a better and a more comprehensible report of the rally than I have given. I just felt impressed to say these words about the rally.

Our next rally will be held at Spring church on Spring church charge the fifth Sunday in May.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN.

NOTICE

The annual Leadership Training school will be held in High Point college, High Point, N. C., June 22-29. You will notice that the school is earlier this year than in previous years. We are very anxious that a large group of young people and leaders of young people attend this school. We are planning a splendid program. All necessary information will be given at a later date. Plan now to attend the school. Do not forget the date-- June 22-29.

FROM BROTHER BETHEA

Brother McCulloch:

My contention in the matter of counting subscriptions to the Herald as it is now done is not much encouragement to those who would like to have proper credit. I may not be able to "elucidate" as requested, but is is perfectly clear in my mind that if we would count that field as having reached its goal that kept its subscriptions paid up or at least enough subscribers to make up for any who may drop out—and that is always taking place—so that the quota would be credited if kept up, there would be no difficulty, is seems to me.

Now as to counting only what is renewed there are many on my list, sent me by the Committee, whose paper is paid for up to September, some in October, and even at conference; there is not much to inspire these and others on their charge being up unless they pay in advance, and as I understand your argument, they must pay up for this year before they can be credited. This many of my folks cannot do, for I have some who are just paying six months at a time because of the shortage of money.

At the end or towards the close of the year, it seems that interest dies down and there is not much said about the Herald; that is by the Committee, and then to those who pay up at the end of the year, or near that time there must be a doubling of their pay in order to get in anywhere at the first of the year.

I understand what the Editor is talking about, I think, for he can "elucidate" better than I can, and I am sure that he sees it, as he thinks is right. But the thing that I would like to see is a plan by which every charge would seem to be credited for what it is doing in such a way as to encourage rather than to discourage.

Now I am not a stickler for credits alone, for I think that one of the things that is hurting in the educational world of today is working for credits rather than an education; but I do think that when a charge has its quota of subscribers and over, and they are paid for, they should not be kept in the background because some of them are paid up to the last instead of the first of the year.

It may be that these charges that have all theirs up have all theirs to pay in at the same time. Well, I never could work that fast. Wish I could.

New seriously what I am after is the support of the paper. I am sure the Editor believes that, for that is the "Chorus" I sing all the year, unless I have all my folks taking it. I am about through this year, though, for I have actually gone outside to get some and have given the paper to some who are being counted on other charges, or at least they are not counted here.

Now this is not meant as a criticism at all, but to encourage, though I have been criticised by some of my folks to know why our charge were not credited when we had the number of paid up subscribers, why we were not credited as having our full quota. But I would like to see some plan worked out by the Committee as suggested. Wish I had an acceptable solution, but as yet it seems that I have not.

Yours with a desire to see the Herald in every Methodist Protestant home in North Carolina, and the full quota paid for.

N. G. BETHEA.

(The Editor knows that Brother Bethea is one of the best friends and most successful agents the Herald has. We appreciate the point he is making that the number of subscriptions paid for since conference is not an index of the whole number of subscribers now on a charge. We might give that information, too, if we could get it, but scores of subscriptions come in with no clue as to the pastoral charge. When subscriptions are taken late in the Conference year, they are not likely to be renewed until about the same time in the following year, but they will count in making up the year's account, if renewed in time.—Editor.)

ELEVENTH DISTRICT RALLY

The program for the eleventh district rally which was rendered at Pleasant Hill church last Sunday was very interesting and helpful. Large congregations attending the two sessions of the rally. Chairman Gerringer was present for the beginning of the program at 10:30. The devotional service was conducted by Rev. A. L. Hunter, pastor of the Pinnacle charge. Rev. C. H. Whitaker led the opening prayer.

Two addresses were delivered during the morning session. The first by Dr. S. W. Taylor, who discussed the subject: "What the Budgets Have to do With Religious Education." Following his address, Rev. N. M. Harrison, promotional secretary of High Point college, and secretary of the Conference Council of Religious Education was the other speaker. Just prior to his address, members of the orchestra of High Point college rendered a number of instrumental selections, one of the members of the orchestra singing a solo. Rev. Mr. Harrison spoke on the theme, "Religious Education, and High Point College." Both addresses were very interesting and helpful.

Dinner was spread on the long table in the church yard and enjoyed by the large number of people present for the morning session.

The afternoon session convened at 2 o'clock with Mrs. T. L. Speas, chairman of the women's work of the district, presiding. The devotional service was conducted by Mrs. L. W. Gerringer. The roll of auxiliaries was called by the secretary, Mrs. J. F. Hunter, and representatives were present from all the auxiliaries in the district. Reports were made by both the young people's societies and the auxiliaries. The orchestra rendered selections of music before departing, having to meet an engagement in the eastern part of the state Sunday night.

The principal address of the afternoon was made by Miss Mary Young, dean of women of High Point college. Her address was on the general subject of organizing and maintaining Women's auxiliaries and young people's societies, stressing the importance of activities of the women in the great program of missionary work in our denomination.

Mrs. S. W. Taylor, branch treasurer, made a brief talk, explaining the Missionary Budget and the method of sending money to the treasurer. A musical feature of the afternoon was a selection by the young people's chorus of Pleasant Hill church. Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, and Mrs. M. A. Bowers, of Winston-Salem, were not present to speak, on account of illness.

A brief memorial service was conducted by Mrs. Ira W. Baity in memory of Miss Bettie Cox, the only member of the auxiliary passing away since the 1930 district rally. This service consisted of a brief eulogy by Mrs. Baity, and a solo by Miss Martha Louise Speas.

The banner for the greatest number of points made in the efficiency charts was awarded to Maple Springs auxiliary. The election of officers for the district resulted in the re-election of Mrs. T. L. Speas as chairman, and Mrs. J. F. Hunter, as secretary. At a brief business session for the men, Brother C. G. Hunter was elected secretary of the district, with Rev. L. W. Gerringer as the chairman, appointed by the Annual Conference president.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard, pastor of First church, Winston-Salem, was introduced to the gathering, and spoke a few words, offering the closing prayer and pronouncing the benediction.

The day was a pleasant one from the standpoint of the weather, and the program rendered was very informing, inspiring and calculated to stimulate more interest in the benevolent enterprises of our denomination. C. B. WAY.

LET'S GET BEHIND THE HERALD CAMPAIGN

We want everybody to help, but we are especially anxious for the pastors to push it. Get out the list of subscribers which was sent you some weeks ago; check up on it; see those in arrears; canvass those whose names do not appear. Remember how you promised to stand behind the Committee at conference. We're counting on you. PUT IT OVER.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

RESOLUTIONS IN MEMORY OF CHARLIE R. KENNEDY

In the dealings of our Heavenly Father, He has seen best to remove from us, our friend and brother, Charlie Kennedy.

Brother Kennedy was of a quiet unassuming disposition, with a strong desire to fill a humble place in life. In this quiet way he was loyal to the church of his choice, of which he had been a member many years. Also much interested in the Men's Bible class and especially the S. S. From all these places he will be sorely missed, not perhaps, because of any outburst of effort, but because of his faithfulness and persistency in regular attendance.

Therefore be it resolved: First, that in the passing of Brother Kennedy he will be greatly missed by the members of the church, the S. S., the Brotherhood and the vicinity in which he lived. Second, that we bow in humble submission to the will of our Father in this dispensation. Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his bereaved family and a copy to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

B. E. KENNEDY,

B. E. PAYNE,

J. R. BEASLEY,

Committee.

Dorsett

It is with deepest sorrow that the Woman's Missionary society of the First Methodist Protestant church of Thomasville, N. C., records the death of one of its most loyal members, Miss Allie Juanita Dorsett, who answered God's summons February 28, 1931. She was ill only about ten days and she died at the age of 19 years, three months, and 22 days.

Juanita had been a faithful member of First Methodist Protestant church, Thomasville, since early childhood. At the time of her death she was secretary of Young People's Work in our Auxiliary, and church reporter. She always showed her willingness to work for her church. She went about her work with a smile and you never heard her complain, no matter what task she was asked to do and you could rest assured when Juanita was asked to do anything that she would accept the task gladly and do the work well.

May her sweet life in faithful service to the Master be an incentive to higher and nobler living to all who knew her. While we mourn her death we rejoice that we had the privilege of knowing her, for to know her was to love her and knowing the consecrated Christian life she lived, we do not mourn as those who have no hope.

Whereas, God, our Father, who doeth all things for our good, has taken from our midst into His safe-keeping, our friend and co-worker, who was so dear to us, and

Whereas, we feel that it has been hard to give her up and that we will greatly miss her cheerful presence and loyal service we realize that we still have the memory of a life lived for God. She has left wonderful influence that will live on and on.

Therefore, Be it resolved, that we must bow to God's will knowing that all things work together for good to them that love and trust Him.

Resolved: That we ever cherish the remembrance of her faithfulness and devotion, and may we be inspired to serve better than ever before the Master who was her Friend and Guide.

Resolved: That a copy of this tribute of love be recorded in the minutes of our Auxiliary, and that copies be sent to the bereaved family, the Missionary Record, the Methodist Protestant Herald and to the Thomasville News and Times.

Durham

Death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Durham and claimed their darling daughter, Blanch, on March 20, 1931. Blanch was five months and 13 days old. She had been sick with whooping cough for several weeks. Although she had struggled hard to live. Every thing that loving hands could do was done for her. Blanch was a sweet baby, and it seems hard to give her up. But the Lord knows best. He doeth all things well. Her place is vacant in the home, no one else can fill it. We miss her sweet and happy face as we go into the home, though it is sweet to know that little Blanch is now safe in the arms of Jesus.

The funeral was conducted at the home by their pastor, Rev. G. J. Whitehead, after which the little body was laid to rest in Salem cemetery among a mass of flowers.

Dearest Blanch, we give you up,

Though shed we many a tear,

Yet when we think God knows best

We try to dry our tears,

For we know if we are faithful,

We shall meet you by and by.

MRS. W. A. JOBE.

Ingram

Grady Henry Ingram departed this life Sunday morning, March 1, 1931, aged 41 years, five months and 26 days.

He was received into the membership of Lebanon church August 1921, during the pastorate of Rev. J. L. Trollinger.

On October 3, 1921 he was married by his pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, to Miss Maude Jordan. To this union were born two children, Minnie Caroline and Maple Rivers.

Brother Ingram had been sick something like three years or more, and during this time had the care of hospitals and good physicians, but notwithstanding all this, the hand of death claimed him.

In the passing of Brother Ingram the church has lost an appreciated member, the wife a faithful husband, the children a good father, and the community a good citizen.

On March 3rd at 3 p. m. in Lebanon church in the presence of a number of friends and relatives, his funeral service was conducted by the writer, after which the Woodmen, of which he was a member, held a short service and witnessed the grave in receiving his body, to await the day of great days, the morning of the resurrection.

Brother Ingram had five brothers and one sister.

May the Lord greatly bless all bereaved friends and relatives, and gently lead them, day by day, along the path of the just that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Hulin

John Haywood Hulin, small son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hulin, 1130 Adams Et., High Point, was born in October 1929, and departed this life March 7, 1931. His life on earth was short, but he lived here long enough to greatly endear himself not only to the devoted parents, but to others.

The church and the entire community join the grief stricken family in mourning for their loved one. May this dispensation draw us all closer to Him. The large crowd of friends and neighbors that assembled at the home as we left for Lovejoy church in Montgomery county, where the funeral and burial took place, was a striking evidence of sympathy and love for the grief-stricken family. May they be comforted in the thought that their dear one is safe in the arms of Him who dearly loved little children while He was on earth.

G. L. REYNOLDS.

Kennedy

Mr. Charlie Rolandus Kennedy aged 63 years 6 months and 11 days, departed this life March 11, 1931. Surviving are the widow, two daughters, Mrs. Charlie Wiseman, of Durham; Mrs. Rufus Griffin, of High Point; five sons, Roma, Hollie, Edgar, Thomas and Walker Kennedy. Two children preceded their father to the great beyond. A sister, Mrs. S. W. Yates, and one brother, Mr. Alvin Kennedy, of Thomasville, Route 2, and twenty-four grandchildren survive.

Brother Kennedy was a good neighbor and a friend to all and loved by all. He was a Christian, faithful to all of his duties to the church.

He was laid to rest in the Pleasant Grove cemetery. The large crowd that attended the funeral services, and the many floral designs was evidence of the high esteem in which he was held. He will be greatly missed in the church and community.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Payne

George T. Payne, aged 61, was born in Davidson county near High Point, but had been a resident of High Point the greater part of his life. Surviving are the widow, who before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Peace; one son, Willie L. Payne; one daughter, Mrs. Ava Hoover; two brothers, J. C. Payne of Trinity, and W. D. Payne, of High Point, Route 4; one sister, Miss Annie Payne, of High Point, Route 4, and three grandchildren.

Brother Payne departed this life February 20th, 1:10 a. m., after being confined to his bed for more than a week with influenza which developed into pneumonia. He was a charter member of English Street M. P. church and was very attentive to it, prayer meeting and Sunday school. He seldom missed a service. He was also a charter member of our church Brotherhood, and the only member at the time of his death with a perfect attendance and pay record. The church will greatly miss Brother Payne and joins the family in mourning his departure.

Funeral services were held in English St. church by the pastor, assisted by Rev. D. R. Williams, pastor of Pleasant Grove church. Following the services at the church his body was carried to the Pleasant Grove cemetery. Guilford council No. 23, Jr. O. U. A. M., of which Brother Payne was a member, had charge of the services at the grave.

May the Lord help the bereaved family to bow in submission to His divine will and may this event draw them closer to Him.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS, Pastor.

Moser

D. J. Moser was born in Surry county about 56 years ago. He came to High Point in 1907 where he has since made his home. At the time of his death, which occurred February 28, 1931, he was living with his sister, Mrs. Bertie Bowers, on Grimes street. Brother Moser had a stroke of paralysis some eight or ten days before his death, and it was this that caused him to die.

The deceased was a charter member of English Street church. When physically able he was a regular attendant at the church, and now, since he is gone, we miss him. While this is true we rejoice in the fact that he lived such a life as to cause the church to miss him. While the church and community miss him, the sister with whom he lived misses him most, and we extend to her and all his relatives the hand of sympathy. Brother is gone, but his memory lingers and his influence for good will still work for the "Master." "A good man in Israel has fallen."

"Servant of God, well done!

Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Ogburn

In the passing of J. B. Ogburn, Flat Rock church, and the community at large, lost a man of outstanding Christian virtues and convictions. Not only was he a true Christian, but also a true Methodist Protestant. Our Annual Conference often recognized the value of his services by placing him on important committees from time to time. His influence by deed and word; the strength and integrity of his character; and the loving service and spirit of charity that he showed toward all cannot be forgotten by a multitude of friends and neighbors. His place in our church, like Saul's armor will be hard to fill. But as long as the church can fashion such men, her glory will shine more and more unto the perfect day.

Brother Ogburn was born July 2, 1859, at the old home place at Ogburn's Crossroads near Summerfield. He was the son of the late John Lee Ogburn. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Laura Davidson Ogburn; a daughter, Mrs. R. R. Blackburn. An only son, Richard, was accidentally killed last October at the roller mill.

The funeral service was held at Flat Rock church by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg, assisted by Rev. J. R. Hutton of Greensboro, and Rev. R. I. Farmer of High Point. He was laid to rest in the church cemetery close to the church that he loved and to which he so largely gave himself.

May those that mourn find abiding consolation in Him that said, "Blessed are they that mourn."

J. P. PEGG.

Jones

Thomas Jiddie Jones departed this life February 27, 1931, aged 77 years, 11 months, and 7 days. In 1873 he was married to Miss Addie Lowe. He is survived by his wife and three daughters, Mrs. W. F. Boggs, of Davidson county; Mrs. T. L. Boles, and Miss Nancy Jones of High Point. Two daughters preceded him in death, 11 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren, and a host of friends and relatives mourn their loss. Six months ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis from which he never recovered. He was confined to his room all the time; he was cheerful at all times. Always glad to see his friends and neighbors, and greeted them with a smile and handshake. He bore his suffering without a murmur and said he was ready to go anytime the Lord called. He professed a hope in Christ at the age of 12 years when the old arbor stood here, and joined the M. P. church at Spring Hill where he was a faithful member until death. He loved his church, always there when health would permit him.

Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, at 11 o'clock in Spring Hill Methodist Protestant church after which his mortal remain were laid to rest in Spring Hill cemetery.

Noles

It is with sad hearts that we, the members of the Ladies' Aid of Stallings church, wish to express our regret in the loss of Mrs. Elizabeth Noles, who departed this life February 18, 1931, aged 62 years.

Her faithful life will be long in our memories. In her death we have lost a true Christian, who was always interested in all departments of the church.

We have resolved that our society hold in loving remembrance her inspiration, love, and Christian spirit.

MRS. I. L. JOYNER.

—L. A. Honeycutt and son, mine workers, lost their lives last Saturday night by a cave-in at Coal Glen, near Sanford.

—Brother Crowder of Calvary church is in Long's hospital following an operation for gallstone. His early recovery is hoped for.

—Masses of snow and earth, loosened by heavy rains, have caused landslides in Savoie, France, forcing people to flee for their homes.

—The governor of Kansas has vetoed three bills providing death as the extreme penalty for first-degree murder and for robbery with firearms.

—Rev. Ozora S. Davis, D. D., LL. D., president emeritus of the Chicago (Congregational) Theological Seminary and a former moderator of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States, died on March 16, at the age of sixty-four.

GOD GIVEN PLACE IN FARMERS' FEDERATION

God has been given a place in the Farmers' Federation, co-operative farmers' organization of western North Carolina.

The "Lord's acre" plan incorporated into the program of the federation whereby the farmers agree to cultivate one acre of their land for the support of a designated church, has proved a tremendous success. So successful has it been that six churches that participated in the project during 1930 have been joined by six others this year in asking that they be included in the federation's 1931 program.

Pastors and members alike are reported by Dumont Clarke, manager of the religious division of the federation, as highly enthusiastic over the plan.—Selected.

A GREAT SUPPER WITH DIRE CONSEQUENCES

"The best laid schemes of mice and men"
Quite often go entirely wrong;
And men are brought to groaning when
They hoped to sing a grand new song.

'Twas thus with men of Calvary church:
They sought to cheer the women up
And after very wide research
Invited all to come and sup.

Imagine if you can the thought
That sprang in women's fertile minds
When they the invitation got
And read those few astounding lines.

"Would it be safe?" one asked herself,
"Or would we have an appetite?"
She laid her scruples on the shelf
And ate the scrap with keen delight.

Another sent for paregorie,
To be prepared for very worst:
To her it was a night historic
And surely she'd be there or burst.

The women came with faces brave,
No matter what their inward qualms;
It seemed that they did truly crave,
Like people who receive your alms.

And in the end it came out clear
The guests were pleased with their new cooks;
And so the men were filled with cheer
And brighter grew in all their looks.

But O! Alas! Alas! Alas!
Short-lived indeed was all their joy;
For on the spot it came to pass
The women did strong words employ.

To those stout men they bravely said:
"We'll turn our kitchens o'er to you;
From this time on you'll make our bread,
You'll cook our meat, do dishes, too."

And now from kitchens come loud moans
In man-like voices full of grief,
Sometimes indeed come heavy groans:
"O will we never find relief!"

Our story has no fitting moral,
Beneath the top you need not look;
But this we urge: "With fate don't quarrel,
But make yourself a jolly cook."

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

OCTAGON COUPONS 200,000 By May First

That is a big host but not nearly so big as one of the other denominations is raising. They are asking for eight millions ($8,000,000) of Octagon coupons to cancel a debt on a building. They are not a large denomination so we can take courage.

I have set May the first as the date on which we hope to have this entire number in hand, because I believe that if we try for it we can do it. Everybody is helping so generously and so well that a big effort altogether will bring them in. About May the first it will be getting warm and we will very much need the refrigerator at the boys' building.

Then there are so many other needs to be met about that time or when school closes and we can have the help of the girls to do the spring house-cleaning.

Since I have several thousand in hand it will not be such a great task to finish out the 200,000.

You all love the home and the children here. It is not hard to work for those we love. The Octagon company is doing wonderful things for the Orphan homes. What we do through coupons costs us only some time, some work and a few cents postage. I am not going to even ask you if you will help. I know you will help to the limit.

Your in His service,

MARGARET K. DIXON.

Post-Easter Days

Victimized by fraud and hate,
Done to death by church and state.
Bearer of the greatest cross,
None e'er felt so heavy loss.

When they'd done their very worst,
Mingling pain with shame and thirst,
Nature came to His release,
Bringing Him profoundest peace.

But in death was no defeat!
E'en within His winding sheet
Life and power in silence wrought,
Passing man's transcendent thought!

Forth He came to higher life,
Freed from pain and toil and strife;
Victor over all that's ill,
Bringing joy our hearts to fill.

Lingering near the wicked city
That for Him had shown no pity,
Loving care does He display,
Hoping they will yet obey.

Loath to leave a world so dear,
Day by day He hovers near;
Here and there He shows His face,
Proving He's in every place.

"If I go, I'll come again,
Stay with you until the end."
Sinful world, He'll ne'er forget:
Thank your God He's with us yet!

Sign of the Prophet Jonas

"A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it but the sign of the prophet Jonas." Matt. 16:4. Thus spoke Jesus to a group of hypocritical Pharisees. What did He mean? His meaning is partly disclosed in a statement made previously to another group of dishonest inquisitors. He said to them: "As Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so the Son of man shall be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." We see a degree of analogy between the two cases: two persons had burials and remarkable deliverances after three days. But to whom was Jonah's remarkable deliverance a sign? Jesus refers to the penitence of the men of Nineveh under the preaching of the prophet. I think we may infer from this that Jonah told the people of Nineveh about his effort to run away from his appointment and the marvelous way in which God at last brought him to the performance of duty. That under-sea experience of the prophet thus became a convincing sign to the Ninevites and they repented.

But Jesus wrought many miracles and John regards them all as "signs." Why does Jesus speak of his resurrection as the only sign? The difference between this miracle and the others may be one of kind or it may be one of degree. Evidently in the thought of Jesus this miracle of the three days' and three nights' experience of his in the heart of the earth so far surpasses all the others as to deserve a place by itself. Lesser miracles would convince honest men: this great miracle would be sufficient to convince Scribes and Pharisees of a wicked generation. Jesus probably measured the magnitude of his miracles by the power it took to produce them. In his thought of the miracle of the three days and nights he had in mind not only the display of power in raising him to a new life, but also the display of love in going to the tomb by way of the cross. In other connections he speaks of the drawing power he shall acquire by being lifted up from the earth. Both Jonas and Jesus passed through suffering to triumph. Both suffered that they might gain power to help others. Jesus' words to the hypocritical Pharisees were not unfriendly, and must have helped some of them to discern the great sign when it came.

—Dr. Charles L. Goodell, secretary of the Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, has recently conducted a series of conferences on evangelism in the leading cities of the Pacific coast which have been the subject of much commendation. The Federal Council has received many spontaneous tributes to Dr. Goodell's service in these conferences. One of these, from Rev. George E. Burlingame of Los Angeles, it prints in the March issue of its Bulletin. Among other things Mr. Burlingame says:

He (Dr. Goodell) possesses the gentleness which makes men great before God. This veteran herald of the gospel, now in his seventy-seventh year, manifests the vigor and mental alertness and the spiritual passion of a well-kept man in the fifties. He impresses his audience by his graciousness, his warmth of heart, and his modesty. His force is not that of the imperious dogmatist or the efficient specialist, but that of a Christian gentleman matured by long experience with human souls, and made wise under the tutelage of the Holy Spirit.

SOME QUESTIONS

Some day before the bar of public opinion the wets will be required to demonstrate how the beverage liquor traffic promotes the general welfare and helps secure the blessings of liberty. The promotion of the general welfare and securing the blessings of liberty are two of the distinct purposes for which the constitution was adopted and for which our government is maintained. Here are some of the questions:

1. Why do the wets not show that the beverage liquor traffic increases the intelligence of the drinker?
2. Why do not the wets show that the beverage liquor traffic increases the moral character and self-control of the drinker?
3. Why do they not prove that the beverage liquor traffic makes the workman more efficient and the business man more capable?
4. Why do they not prove that the average man who drinks intoxicating beverages will live longer than he would if he abstained?
5. Why not prove by charitable organizations that the families of drinking men require less assistance than the families of total abstainers?
6. Why do they not get manufacturers to testify that it is an advantage to have liquor sold near their plants?
7. Why not prove by drinking men or employers that the habit of drink helps men obtain and hold their jobs?

Why Not?

8. Why not show that money spent for liquor is more wisely spent than if spent for food or clothes?
9. Why not prove that at least a moderate amount of liquor would help a locomotive engineer protect the lives and property entrusted to his care?
10. Why not demonstrate that liquor, when taken in moderate degree only, will enable the driver of an automobile to take less than the whole road and both banks, leaving to the passing sober driver nothing but the two ditches on either side?
11. Why do they not show that the use of liquor adds to the respectability of the drinker?
12. If liquor is beneficial to the public welfare, why do not the churches sell liquor to induce people to come to church and lead spiritual lives?
13. Why do they not show that the new liquor which they propose to sell will be less injurious to the drinker than the old liquor was?
14. Why do they not show just what part of the moral progress of the last two thousand years should be attributed to the beneficent effects of beverage liquor upon those who made and used it most?
15. Why do they not show that the cities and communities where liquor controls the government are the best governed cities and communities of the nation?
16. Why do they not show that their new system will be an affirmative and positive improvement over their old systems?
17. How, by legalizing an old and condemned source of crime and misery, do the wets propose to promote the general welfare and make sure of the blessings of liberty? What is there in any source of crime and misery that can promote the general welfare? When did men begin to gather grapes of thorns and figs of thistles? Where do the wets get power to do such things?—The American Issue.

THE MOST EFFECTIVE ASSISTANT PASTOR

A pastor cannot secure a more effective assistant than by extending the circulation of the church paper among his congregation. If in every family in his pastoral charge he can place the organ of his Annual Conference, he will thereby assure the most blessed results in the spiritual life of his people and in their material support of all Christian causes.

A careful investigation of the facts in any church will show that not less than seventy-five per cent. of the contributions made for its support come from members who subscribe to the church's paper. Nearly, if not quite, all of the regular attendants upon the prayer-meeting are constant readers of the Conference organ.

When for any cause there is a decline in the spiritual life of the people there is a proportionate decrease in the number of subscribers to the papers of the church.

In recent years our Conference organs have had to struggle for continued existence. This has been true not because they had declined in quality and in editorial force, but because there has been a wide-spread declension in the piety of our people.

A great revival of religion is sorely needed, and the increased circulation of our church papers would contribute very much to bring it to pass. Our people perish for lack of knowledge—for lack of just such knowledge as secular papers cannot give and which church publications alone can supply.—Bishop W. A. Candler, in St. Louis Christian Advocate, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

"TOO SUPERSTITIOUS"

A modern St. Paul, preaching on an American Mars Hill, might charge the American people with being "too superstitious," as did Paul the Athenian. According to a writer in Popular Science, we are now having a wave of superstition such as has not been seen since the Middle Ages. This mania takes the form of patronizing fortune-telling devices of all kinds. One hundred and twenty-five million dollars is the sum spent annually on such foolishness. That sensible people should patronize these frauds is one of the vagaries for which we have no explanation.—Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

—A thoughtful reader in Maryland writes in commendation of the position taken last week by Mr. C. A. Lewalline in the article, "A Grievous Error." He is inclined to believe that there is more danger that families be too small rather than too large. If any class needs the advice given by the Federal Council of Churches, it is made up of those who will not read, or if they read will not heed.

A STRANGE DREAM

A clergyman falling into a short sleep in his study on Christmas morning, dreamed of a world into which Jesus had never come. In his dream he found himself looking through his home, but there was no little stocking in the chimney corner, no Christmas bells or wreaths of holly, and no Christ to comfort, gladden and save. He walked out on the public street, but there was no church with its spire pointing to Heaven. He came back and sat down in his library, but every book about the Saviour and the Gospel had disappeared. A ring came to the door-bell and a messenger asked him to visit a poor dying mother. He hastened with her weeping child and as he reached the home he sat down and said, "I have something here that I am sure will comfort you." He opened his Bible to look for a familiar promise, but it ended at Malachi and there was no Gospel and no promise of hope and salvation, and he could only bow his head and weep with her in bitter despair. Two days afterwards he stood beside her coffin and conducted the funeral service, but there was no resurrection, no open Heaven, but only "dust to dust, ashes to ashes," and a long, eternal farewell. He realized at length that "He had not come," and burst into tears and bitter weeping in his sorrowful dream.

Suddenly he awoke with a start and a great shout of joy and praise burst from his lips as he heard his choir singing in the church close by:

"O! come all ye faithful,
Joyful and triumphant;
In Bethlehem's manger
Lies the King of Angels.
Oh! come let us adore Him
Christ the Lord."

—A. B. Simpson in When the Comforter Come.

DON'T WORRY

People, as well as seeds, get too crowded. One thing chokes out another in our lives, and too often it is the best that gets choked out. We are living so fast, we have so much to do, so many interests. As some one, feeling the disadvantage of this hurry said, "I am in danger of being jostled out of my spirituality." It is a real danger, and one that threatens us all in our rushing life. Cares, worries, distractions, seems to grow in our hearts as naturally as weeds in a garden.

Some people think worries quite harmless, but Christ spoke very strongly against them as most potent for evil in our lives, in the way of crowding out the goods. He warned us strongly against all anxiety. He said plainly that it can add nothing to our stature, possessions or success, but instead does us harm and grieves our Heavenly Father, who all the while is caring for us. There are two things at least, about which we should never worry. First, the things we can't help. If we can't help them, worrying is certainly most foolish and useless. Secondly, the things we can help. If we can help them, let us set about it, and not weaken our powers by worry. Pluck up the smallest roots of worry at their first appearance, or they will crowd out all beautiful things that ought to grow in our hearts.—Hallock.

MEETING OF WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL LEADERS

On May 15th the Board of Managers of the North American Section of the World's Sunday School association will hold their semi-annual meeting in the Riverside church, Riverside Drive and 122nd Street, New York City. Among those from outside North America who will be in attendance is Prof. Erasmo Braga, of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, who will reach New York City on May 11. Prof. Braga is one of the outstanding leaders in Christian education in Brazil. He is rendering exceptional service in helping in the preparations for the Eleventh Convention of the World's Sunday School association which will take place in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, July 25-31, 1932. Reports from the various world fields will be presented and plans made to render additional assistance to the various national Sunday School associations which are the units of the World's Sunday School association.

I WON'T LET GO

I want to let go, but I WON'T let go.
There are battles to fight
By day and by night for God and the right,
And I'll never let go.

I want to let go, but I WON'T let go.
I'm sick, 'tis true,
Worried and blue—worn through and through
But I won't let go.

I want to let go, but I WON'T let go.
I will NEVER yield! What?
Lie down on the field and surrender my shield?
No! I'll NEVER let go.

I want to let go, but I WON'T let go.
May this be my song against legions of wrong.
O God, keep me strong,
That I may NEVER let go.

—Author Unknown.

HOW TO KNOW GOD'S WILL

When I was crossing the Irish Channel one dark starless night, I stood on the deck by the captain and asked him, "How do you know Holyhead Harbor on so dark a night as this?" He said, "You see those three lights? Those three must line up behind each other as one, and when we see them so united we know the exact position of the harbor's mouth." When we want to know God's will there are three things which always concur—the inward impulse, the Word of God, and the trend of circumstances! God in the heart, impelling you forward. God in His Book, corroborating whatever He says in the heart; and God in circumstances, which are always indicative of His will. Never start until these three things agree.—F. B. Meyer.

Eleventh District Rally

This was held March 29—5th Sunday—at Pleasant Hill church, West Forsyth charge. It was to us both a privilege and a pleasure to be present, and to have some part in this program. The charges that compose this District are Winston First, South Winston, Forsyth, West Forsyth, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion. Only one charge, we believe, was not represented at the rally. Four pastors—Hunter, A. L., Way, Pritchard, Gerringer and their wives, were present; and one superannuated minister and his wife, Rev. C. H. Whitaker. The chairman of the district, Rev. W. L. Gerringer, presided at the morning hour. The opening worship was conducted by Rev. A. L. Hunter. The theme of the rally was "Religious Education." The Relation of the Budget to Religious Education was discussed by the writer. Rev. N. M. Harrison followed in an address on High Point College and Young People's Work, and showed how these are vitally related to Religious Education. He was attended by a group of musicians from the college. They made valuable and pleasing additions to the program of the day.

The afternoon was given over to the women for their district meeting, with Mrs. T. C. Speas, Auxiliary chairman of the district, presiding. Mrs. L. W. Gerringer led the opening devotions. In connection with this program, a memorial service was held in honor of Miss Bettie Cox, who for many years had been a beloved member of this district and a most faithful worker. This service was in charge of Mrs. Ira Baity. Miss Mary Young, Dean of Women of High Point College, addressed this meeting on "Religious Education Through the Auxiliary." The reports from the auxiliaries of the district showed encouraging interest and progress; and opportunities, also, for expanding the work. The efficiency banner was awarded to Maple Springs Auxiliary.

The entire day was full of interest, pleasure, and profit. The picnic dinner was quite adequate for all bodily needs, and the fellowships, the program, and the general spirit of the day were refreshing to mind and soul.

Rallies in other districts were held on this date. We hope to get good reports from them.

Winston

From the Rally, we came down to Winston-Salem, and kept an appointment with Brother Pritchard and his people for the night service. We were greeted by nearly a hundred people—ninety-nine, by actual count. Brother Pritchard has adopted the practice here of having the people counted morning and night. In this way he keeps an accurate record of the attendance. We understand that all previous records were broken at the Sunday School on this day, 278 being present. A contest between this church and Charlotte has aroused a great deal of interest. Winston was ahead on this date in Sunday School, but Charlotte seemed to be leading in church attendance. Brother Pritchard is putting a great deal of thought and enthusiasm into his work, and his people are responding with a like spirit. This was the first church to get the college allotment covered by cash and pledges, and the first also to secure the HERALD allotment. The goal now is to double HERALD quota. The work here is going well, and we expect a good year for this church. It was a pleasure to be with them on this visit, and to renew the fellowships that we so greatly enjoyed here in other days. We are grateful to Brother and Sister Pritchard for the pleasing hospitality of their home, and for transportation in their car to High Point Monday.

Easter Sunday

We are confident that many Easter programs could not be given Sunday on account of the rain and cold. The day was unusual in this particular for an Easter Sunday. But that's all right. God controls the weather, and His blessings are in the clouds and the rain, as well as in the sunshine. Since the program has been prepared, it is possible that some churches will give it next Sunday. Whether this is done or not, we urge that the offering yet be taken. It is very important that this be done, and we trust that no church will omit it.

The day with us was spent pleasantly with the family, and in worship with the congregation of the First M. P. Church, High Point. Owing to a minor illness that kept him in, Dr. P. S. Kennett asked us to meet his Sunday School class—Baracas. This we did, and enjoyed the study of the lesson with the class. The morning worship partook of the Easter spirit, both in sermon and song. Pastor Farmer spoke on the "Folly of Opposing God," the idea being taken from the effort of the enemies of Jesus to keep his body in the tomb. At this service several persons were received into the church. It was a joy to us to have our own son, S. W., Jr., among the number.

At night, an Easter Cantata, "The Resurrection Way," was pleasingly and effectively rendered, and the Easter offering taken. We enjoyed the day with this church, and also the Communion service on the previous Friday night.

Registration

The quota for each charge is given in last week's issue of the HERALD. We suggest that as registrations are received, they also be published. This will help, we think.

Our pastors are our sole dependence for handling this registration. We trust that they may have pleasure and success in presenting the matter to their people.

The following are the simple facts about the registration: Pastors, members, churches, may register.

Churches that register are entitled to name a representative to the Convention—pastor, or some member.

Any person who registers may attend the Convention.

The registration fee is $1.00 for individuals, and the same for churches.

The registration fee, with the names of churches and individuals that register, is to be sent to Dr. J. H. Straughn, 516 North Charles street, Baltimore, Md.

We shall be very grateful to our pastors if they will urge the importance of this matter, and secure a large number of registrations. It is our desire and our hope that many of our people will attend this Convention. The date is May 12-15.

Spring Time

Spring time is here now, and brighter and warmer days will soon begin to dawn. All nature about us is showing signs of awakening life. The robin and the blue bird are chirping their cheering notes, and the beautiful cardinal is tuning his voice to the merry music of spring. Already the air is sweet with the perfume of blooming flowers. In the earth and above the earth, life is responding to the touch of God. May it be so with his people. As we enter upon the brighter days that come with the spring season, may our souls be lifted up with a new sense of life and gladness, and may we lay hold upon our work with our purposes quickened for better service.

LIVING TRIUMPHANTLY

Edwin Markham, the dean of American poets, was expected to arrive on the afternoon train, and I had gone to the station to meet him. As the venerable old man with the flowing hair and the flashing eye stepped off the coach I reached for his baggage and said, "Well, Dr. Markham, how are you?"

The great man stopped, raising his hand to high heaven and almost shouted, "I am living triumphantly."

His journey had been long and wearisome. He had lost sleep, and fatigue was upon him, for he is now in his seventy-seventh year. The weather, most of the way, had been disagreeable. He had three heavy grips, and an extra package of books. A hard week's schedule of speaking engagements was behind him, and another, still harder, was ahead of him.

But he was living triumphantly.

Edwin Markham has found success and the secret of living. What to him are burned biscuits, stock market reports, falling thermometers, overcast skies, book agents, batting averages, mileage per gallon, or moving picture gossip and scandals? He is living triumphantly.

It was to teach all men to live triumphantly that Jesus came. He described it best by saying, "I am come that they might have it more abundantly."

Jesus did not come to make life a burden. He came to shift burdens. He did not write creeds which men must believe. He came shattering creeds and opening up the way so that men could live in triumph. He did not come to create dividing lines, but enlarge boundaries.

Religion that is a burden can never hope to survive. Only as it becomes a power to lift men can it hope to live. The church that needs to be saved is lost. The church that saves folks will always have plenty of saviours. The faith that enables men to rise above their troubles, conquer their fears, subdue their lusts, realize their highest aspirations and gives them a sense of serenity and peace will not depend upon logic, but upon life, for its surest defense. Humanity is very restless under restraints, but it is looking hungrily for help.

The worst defeat of life is to win success and then become enslaved to it; to work desperately for money and then find that it can not satisfy the deepest longings of life; to build machines and then work for them; to make a fortune and then have no capacity to enjoy the beauty and loveliness that it can provide.

One may own a small house, a second-hand car, no luxuries and few necessities, and still live triumphantly. Triumphant living is an attitude of heart, not a list of taxable property.

Most men must walk with their feet upon the ground, but he who lives triumphantly has his eyes among the stars, with his heart singing in the chorus of the skies.

To live triumphantly one must have a serene faith, a clear conscience, and a work worth while. Do not worry if you are not living in luxury. Live in triumph!—The P. C. Advocate.

REJOICE, YE RIGHTEOUS

Rejoice and gladden this new year!

Rejoice that God is ever near!

Rejoice that He will pardon sin!

Rejoice in perfect peace within!

Rejoice that He directs thy way!

Rejoice, He hears you as you pray!

Rejoice, tho' what seems ill betide!

Rejoice, God's best is ne'er denied!

Rejoice that Christ may soon return!

Rejoice, for 'tis for this we yearn!

Rejoice o'er wanderers lost but found!

Rejoice, ye saints, the world around!

—Gertrude Robinson Dugan in Moody B. I. Monthly.

—In a brief interview with Rev. N. M. Harrison yesterday he spoke hopefully of the future of High Point College. Of course he recognizes the fact that the college must have friends to make it go, but he says it has numerous friends among our people throughout the state. Some have been unfavorably affected by the gloomy fears of a few, but are coming to see that we can support a college of our own. Our people can certainly have a college if they choose. They can keep and maintain High Point college if they choose. Having put about three hundred thousand dollars into High Point College, shall they now abandon the institution? We give them credit for more sense than that. No, it must not be so. It is almost a crime to imagine the death of High Point College. Have a care what you say and do. It is a good deal easier to tear down than to build.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE MAN UNDERNEATH

Walter Rowley was dressed in his very best clothes for he was going down town shopping with his mother. If there was any one particular thing his mother desired to do, it was to keep Walter looking as though he always came out of a bandbox. Now it was all right to keep him neat and clean, but when she went so far as to continually picture him as the idol which others must worship, it did the lad a great injustice. It warped an otherwise good nature which left to itself might have given greater regard to others. As it was, self was the idol on the throne.

This perhaps gives us a faint idea of the boy who walked down the street ahead of his mother. His mother had a neighbor for companion which accounted for Walter walking ahead.

"Hello, Walter," yelled a friendly voice from across the street.

Walter turned to reply, but his mother checked him.

"Don't let me catch you speaking to such a looking boy," she ordered him. "I can't see for the life of me how some folks leave their children to run the streets looking like that."

Now Ned Brooks didn't look as bad as all that. He had on some old clothes, and a sweater which perhaps had been handed down to him, but he in no way resembled a bold, bad pirate. Walter would have returned the salute under different circumstances, but under present conditions he walked on with his head in the air. Ned understood the situation, but it didn't make him feel any better toward Walter for freezing him like that.

Nothing further happened until they were coming out of one of the stores. A boy, riding a bicycle through an alley, turned the corner near where Walter stood. The walk was slippery and muddy. Getting too near the edge of the walk the boy on the wheel lost control of it. With one hand carrying a large heavy basket of goods he was handicapped in his endeavor to guide the wheel. The next moment he was piled in the ditch, tangled up with the wheel and basket in such a way he could not rise.

"Help," he shouted, his eye catching a truck backing towards him, the driver of which did not see him.

Walter, starting in spite of his daily training, hesitated while he waited to see what his mother would say. As he waited, another figure dashed into the muddy ditch and began to assist the unlucky lad. Walter recognized the other lad instantly. It was Ned Brooks.

Walter thought of his good clothes, look at the thick black mud, and then forgot everything except a boy in trouble. That spirit which had been imprisoned by conventionalities refused to be bound any longer. The command of his mother to get out of that mud went unheeded, principally because Walter didn't hear it.

Ned glanced about momentarily as he felt other hands assisting him.

"Good stuff, Walt," he shouted. "Get hold of that wheel and I'll twist his leg out of it. That's it. Now I've got him. Get hold of him now and help him up. I guess his leg is hurt pretty badly."

In another moment they had the boy sitting on the curb. A man had stopped the truck-driver just as he reached the wheel. A large crowd had assembled about the three lads, praising Walter and Ned for the quick assistance they had given the unlucky boy.

Of course, Walter heard all about it on the way home. His mother was quite provoked that he had practically ruined his clothes in such a ridiculous manner. To her it was horrible the way he had wallowed in that mud.

"Mother," he said, "if I had fallen like that with a truck backing towards me, you would have been the first one to want some one to help me. I believe you would have plunged into that mud yourself. I thought I would do to others what I would want them to do for me."

And the more his mother thought of it, the more she decided he had done the right thing. And she also changed her mind regarding Ned.

"I'd rather have my boy play with Ned Brooks than any other boy in town," some one told her. "That boy is never happy unless he is doing something for some one else. He is always thinking of others first."

And thus through a lad whom Walter had been taught to despise, he learned the lesson of forgetting self for others, and through daily companionship he gradually adopted that spirit for himself.—Selected.

PERSECUTION

Some people have a silly notion that for a Christian worker to suffer opposition, particularly from those who are reputed to be Godly, indicates that there is something wrong in his life and that in some things, at least, he is out of the will of God.

Such an idea would be quickly dispelled by reading with an open heart the Bible account of the experiences of the Apostle Paul. It is true, he occasionally met opposition from the unbelievers; but the most fierce and bitter persecution was heaped upon him by the religious crowd. "Perils among false brethren" were included among the things which he suffered for the sake of his testimony; and after a most truthful ministry in Asia, he was compelled to testify with a broken heart of those who were the fruit of his labors, "All they which are in Asia be turned away from me" (II Cor. 11: 2; II Tim. 1: 15).

Rather than a badge of shame, persecution may be the seal of one's faithfulness to his God. How cheering, then, are the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake. Rejoice, and be exceedingly glad: for great is your reward in Heaven: for so persecuted they the Prophets which were before you (Matt. 5: 11, 12).—Grace and Truth.

To the Leader

The question of Christian unity is coming more and more to the foreground. The trend of the times is toward unity. We no longer consider it a long journey across the continent for now it only requires a short time to go around the world by air. Radios have made us feel the nearness of other nations. There is a growing sense or consciousness of a oneness.

We are being brought closer together through education. Attending colleges and universities where are students from all states and other nations is helping to break down differences. When we come to know the other fellow we find that after all he is not so desperately bad and we long to know him better and to work with him.

This trend has been felt in religion also. Old barriers of hatred are giving way and all peoples are coming closer to the gospel of Jesus Christ. In order for churches to work together they must first think together. For unity to be brought about in the churches the people must have in their hearts the Spirit of the Master. The greatest thing is Christian love.

To Be Discussed

1. Is organic unity of churches possible? Is it desirable?
2. Are there advantages to the denominational system of religion? What are the disadvantages?
3. What are the advantages of Christian unity?
4. What steps should be followed in working toward unity?
5. What trends toward unity of churches have you observed?
6. What do you think Jesus would do if He came to the ordinary village with its numerous churches?
7. What are the greatest hindrances to churches working together? How may these be overcome?

To keep ourselves within the will divine,
So that our several wills shall make but one.

And to our King, who makes our wills like His,
And His will is our peace."

WHAT DOES THE PRINTING PRESS HAVE AGAINST US?

Winston-Salem, N. C., April 4, 1931.

We folks up here at Winston-Salem are beginning to wonder if the elements are against us in the Charlotte-Winston Contest. Three Sunday mornings it snowed here when it did not snow in Charlotte, but the error in the Herald this week was the greatest blow of all. Last Sunday morning we had 132 people in church service. This number was based on a church membership of 267 gave us 49%. That morning Charlotte had 122 and this based on a membership of a little more than 200 gave them 60%. Imagine our surprise, humiliation, anger, discomfiture, vexation and chagrin when the Herald gave us the insignificant per cent of 19. Two weeks ago the figures got reversed in the Herald office and gave us a lower per cent. than we were entitled to. Now please set your printing press so that if it has to get the figures wrong they will still be about right or just a little above right.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

(The editor regrets an error that provoked so many emotions, some of them painful. He is glad that the error is of a kind that can be corrected and gladly gives space for the correction. It seems sometimes that the more careful we are to avoid errors, the more sure we are to make them. Pardon us this time also, Brother Pritchard, but we do not dare to promise never to do so again.—Editor.)

HIGH POINT COLLEGE NEWS

HISTORY OF DEBATING AND ORATORY AT HIGH POINT COLLEGE

There are schools much older than High Point college that have less desirable records in debating. High Point college had its first debating team in the spring of 1927 and during that season and since the college has done honor to the denomination that it represents.

In the fall of 1926 the North Carolina Intercollegiate Forensic association was organized. Dr. Paul C. Kennett, who is a member of the present faculty at the college and head of the history department, represented the college at this meeting. High Point college has the honor of being a charter member of the association.

Dr. Kennett has taken a lead in all of the speaking events that have been sponsored by the college. He has done wonderful work in coaching the debaters and much credit is due him as the pioneer in this field.

This first debating team that represented the college against the other schools in the state came out in the spring of 1927. Most of these debates took place in March. For the affirmative, the college was represented by Wm. Loy and G. W. Andrews. The negative side of the question was upheld by J. Elwood Carroll and O. C. Loy.

Wm. Loy is at the present time pastor of the M. P. church at Mebane and one of the college trustees. G. W. Andrew is a member of the faculty at Westminster, located at Tehuacana, Texas. Carroll is preaching on the Mount Hermon circuit and O. C. Loy is studying in the Seminary at Western Maryland college. Carroll is also taking work at Duke university.

During this debating season High Point had four debates and won all of these. The first two were with State college at Raleigh, a much larger school but nevertheless High Point won both. High Point next debated with Guilford and won that. Then the final that season was with Lenoir-Rhyne, located at Hickory, and this was won by High Point.

The next year, the spring of 1928, High Point college had three debating teams. Two of these were affirmative and one for the negative. G. W. Andrew and Elwood Carroll worked together on the affirmative side of the question, and the other affirmative debaters were T. G. Madison and T. J. Whitehead. The negative speakers were Milbourne Amos and Fred Pegg.

T. G. Madison is at the present time pastor of the First M. P. church of Thomasville. Whitehead has the Saxapahaw circuit, and is also doing graduate work at Duke university.

This year High Point had six debates and won two of them and lost four. This was somewhat of a setback after the splendid work done the year before. High Point defeated Wake Forest and Wofford, but were not successful against Guilford and Lenoir-Rhyne. And High Point lost two debates with Catawba. The two negative speakers are still students elsewhere. Amos is in school at State and doing fine work, while Pegg is studying medicine at Richmond Medical school.

In the spring of 1929 High Point had four debates. Of these won three and lost one. The affirmative speakers were David Plummer, and Fred Pegg, who are now attending the Medical College of Virginia. The negative team was composed of Milbourne Amos and Ralph Mulligan, who is now in the Medical school at Richmond.

High Point won the debates against Guilford, Wake Forest, and Furman university. Against Lenoir-Rhyne they were not so successful.

In the spring of 1930 High Point had a full schedule and the results were welcome. Of the eight debates High Point won all. The affirmative speakers, Fred Pegg and Clay Madison, did wonderful work and the negative speakers, David Plummer, Graham Madison, who is teaching now, and Ralph Mulligan alternated in their speaking and were very successful in each instance.

High Point won each debate as it came up, taking first Guilford, then Lenoir-Rhyne, Elon, Appalachian State Normal, Furman university, Northwestern University, and then won two from Wake Forest. This was one of the most fruitful years.

This year High Point has debated four schools and won all so far. John Morgan and Kenneth Lyons are affirmative speakers and Dwight Davidson with Clay Madison uphold the negative side of the question.

The local college has debated Emory and Henry, Guilford, Lenoir-Rhyne, and Birmingham Southern. Out of these debates High Point has received eleven votes and lost one in the decisions. Elon and Appalachian are yet to be debated.

High Point has made a record above the average in the oratorical contests that have been entered. The contest to be held yet this year will be the fourth that has been entered by this school.

The first year Keith Harrison, who is now studying law at Duke, won the oratorical contest for High Point. The second year High Point did not do so well, but the third contest entered was won by E. C. Glasgow, who is teaching at Allen Jay school located near High Point.

These oratorical contests are sponsored by the same association as the debates. The meeting to decide the best speaker to represent High Point was held last Monday evening and Kenneth Lyons will speak for High Point. The contests will be held here at High Point on the evening of April 10, at 8 o'clock.

The debating and oratory is managed here at the college by the Forensic Council, composed of three faculty members and four students. Dr. Kennett is executive secretary, and Louis Jennings is the president of the Council.

Some interesting incidents have taken place during the debating history. On one occasion only two judges came at the time for the debate, the debate went through with only the two judges and High Point got the vote of both. Another time the third judge notified the college that he could not be here about thirty minutes before the debate, on this occasion the college was able to get another.

The debating team was to make a trip to one of the neighboring schools and not long before time to leave one of the debaters received a summons to appear in court in Greensboro as witness. Dr. Kennett drove

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Charlotte, First Church.—We closed yesterday our revival. While the weather conditions for the most part were bad, the meetings were well attended and the interest was good; several professed faith. We all enjoyed having Dr. Williams with us and feel that his stay was highly beneficial to the church.

Yesterday closed our contest with Winston-Salem church and Sunday school. We believe the contest has been worth a great deal to us and hope that our friends over there received as much benefit from it. Our attendance increased from a few over one hundred to over two hundred in Sunday school. Yesterday was one of the most disagreeable days, rain, cold, slush, and yet our attendance registered 200. Our highest attendance for the contest was 213, our lowest which was 121 on the first day of this contest. The total number of points made was 7,450; i. e. we had 745 people in attendance over the 112, the basis for the beginning.

For church service, we counted all present and paired them with the number of members on church register. The percentage of attendance for the morning averaged 51 and 7 1-2 per cent.; for p. m., 46 and 6-11 per cent. That is to say we averaged one hundred and two people present at our morning service and 93 present at the evening during the period, which began January 18th.

We next Sunday enter the post-season of the contest to close with the last Sunday in May.
R. M. ANDREWS.

Winston-Salem, First Church.—Our Sunday school and church attendance contest closed yesterday and I am now ready to give a few facts about it, from our school. Starting with the December average of 119, the average for the twelve Sundays amounted to 185. This gave us 7,920 points, or a lead over Charlotte according to our count of 470 points. The lowest number of persons we had any one Sunday was 152 and the highest number was 278. Mr. F. D. Voss, our superintendent, and his workers are greatly pleased with the results.

In the church attendance contest our morning congregations averaged 105 persons, of an average of 40 per cent. of our membership. The evening congregations averaged 87 persons, or 33 per cent. of our membership.

While we do not have the exact figures from Charlotte yet we are willing to concede defeat by them in the church percentages.

Yesterday was a good day with us notwithstanding the weather. We had 200 in Sunday school, 94 in morning church services and 113 in evening service. The choir had a beautiful Easter anthem in the morning and the pastor preached an Easter sermon. At the morning service the pastor baptized Robert Herman, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith. At the evening hour we had the service by the church choir and the Sunday school. This service was under the direction of Mrs. J. A. Gwynn, Mrs. J. D. Sharpe and Mrs. C. B. Poindexter. They deserve the thanks of the entire church for their fine work. The service consisted of music, recitations and a pageant. The Resurrection Day.

Our second quarterly conference will be held Tuesday evening and our revival starts Wednesday evening. The pastor will carry on the meeting this week but on Monday of next week Rev. H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, will come to stay through Sunday. Services each evening will be at 8 o'clock and beginning with Tuesday of next week there will probably be a day service.

Mrs. H. O. Sapp is the new president of the Woman's auxiliary.

Clyde Tise, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Tise, is very ill at the Forsyth Sanatorium.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Mizpah, Haw River Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, is still on the job. His sermons should be compared as good, better, and best.

The service Sunday morning was especially good. The subject was: "Why I Believe In the Immortality of the Soul." Among the main points were, Soul reaching out after immortality, soul longs for it. God is a great economist, nothing God creates is lost. Man is a creature of two worlds. His soul is reaching out after another world. Bible teaches it. Promised by Christ.

Our pastor is the editor of a little paper he calls the Circuit Rider—unlike other magazines and papers there are no subscription rates. Contains lots of good reading and circuit news.

Our series of revival services will begin the second Sunday night in April. The pastor will preach the opening sermon from the subject: "What Kind of Revival We Need." Rev. C. E. Ridge will be the pulpit help. Two services at 10:30 and 7:30.

Considering many things our Sunday school is still alive.

Our men have contracted the "spring cleaning fever." On account of the weather conditions the job will be completed later. A number are going to beautify the cemetery with flowers and shrubbery.

REPORTER.

Littleton, N. C., Route 1.—The Leadership Training school committee of the first district met Wednesday afternoon, March 18, at the parsonage in Brinkleyville and decided upon a "Leadership Training School," to be conducted at the Aurelian Springs high school the first week in June. We urge you to begin making plans to attend this school.

ETHEL L. HARRISON, Chairman.

Draper.—We are still working. Our Sunday school has increased 39 since our new pastor, Rev. R. L. Vickery, came.

The spiritual condition of the church is good and we have had three conversions and also three additions to the church. We held our second quarterly conference March 25th and there were a good number present. We are also expecting Mrs. George R. Brown from Reidsville April 12th to organize the Women's Auxiliary.

We were all very glad to have Mr. S. L. Tesh and family with us from North Davidson charge, March 29th.

The First Baptist church and the First Methodist church met with us in a union service on the last fifth Sunday night and a good service was enjoyed by all, with Rev. R. L. Vickery conducting the service. His subject was "Justification by Faith."

We are expecting to have a revival early in May and we ask all the Christians to join in prayer for many conversions.

RUBY DARNELL, Reporter.

Whitakers.—Am sorry to report the death of one of our members, Miss Nina Wilma Neville, which occurred Sunday morning at her home here. She has been a great sufferer all her life and has not been able to worship with us very often. We miss her from our membership and our hearts ached in sympathy with the parents and brother in her loss.

We are also called upon to sympathize with some of our members in the loss by death of their father and grandfather.

Our Sunday school is holding up very well in attendance. We held our regular Auxiliary meetings; am sorry the attendance is not so good; do hope the interest will increase.

Our pastor and a few others attended the District Rally at Bethesda church, Halifax circuit, Sunday.

Best wishes to the Herald and all earnest workers in His Kingdom.

REPORTER.

Liberty Hall, Anderson Charge.—Sunday school yesterday was well attended despite the bad weather. The egg hunt was prevented Saturday so the eggs were given out to the children. Mrs. M. C. Waits and Mrs. G. L. Vaughn, friends of this church, gave the candy eggs. The Easter program last night was splendidly carried out, for the little time taken to get it up. We were sorry Mr. Henderson and family could not be with us. It was his regular preaching day at Fairview. Mr. Henderson has announced that he will preach for the old people next Sunday morning, and as the young are hoping to be old some day we are hoping to have a large congregation of all ages.

MRS. JEWELL HARRISON, Reporter.

First Church, Concord.—Sunday at the 11 o'clock service Communion was served by the pastor, Brother Milloway.

Our Easter program was presented Sunday evening at 7:30. Forty-two young people assisted in the program and the name of our pageant was "Sun Rise In the Garden." The rostrum was arranged as a flower garden. A young lady representing Christian, entered singing "In the Garden"; then she told us about the joy and peace which was hers since she had found the Christ.

A young man passing along heard her song and praises of the Master and entering the garden he tells of the grief, doubt, fear and sorrow that has filled his life, and after staying in the beautiful garden his troubles leave him and joy, faith, peace, hope and happiness comes into his life and he, too, becomes a follower of Jesus Christ.

The program was beautiful and proved to be a great blessing to all.

The work here is growing. We are especially proud of our Sunday school. We had 351 present Sunday. Our Baraca class is going over the top for Jesus. Their average attendance is something over 100 and they are surely working hard to win souls for the Master. The harvest is white and the laborers are few but we believe the Baracas have found their place in the harvest field and souls are going brought to Christ through their efforts. About three Sundays ago they had a number of conversions in the class room. They did not wait for a special revival to accept Christ, but they found Him ready and waiting for his children and so they were converted in their class room.

Mr. W. J. Widenhouse is the teacher of this fine class and like Moses of old he is doing his best to lead his men out of the wilderness of sin into the promised land. May God bless them and help them to go forward in a greater way than ever before.

Our Missionary and Ladies' Aid society are getting along nicely. Just lately they made a very beautiful quilt for which they received $10 and we are hoping to press forward to the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus our Lord.

We ask the prayers of God's people in behalf of our church and community.

REPORTER.

Asheboro.—Every one enjoyed the "birthday party in the social room of the church Friday evening, March 27. The Bulla quartet gave a number of selections, games, stunts and other amusements were heartily entered into and caused much laughter. Each present brought a penny for each year of his age, which amounted to a good sum.

Funeral services for Eli Jason Hamilton, one of our members, were conducted at our church Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. R. C. Stubbins. Mr. Hamilton had been in ill health for several months and died at the Duke hospital, Durham, after an operation. The church extends sympathy to his wife and children.

On Palm Sunday our pastor gave us a good sermon on "The Triumphal March," appropriate music was rendered by the choir.

Much interest was manifested in the circle meetings of the Auxiliary which were held Tuesday of this week in the various homes.

At the 11 o'clock service Easter morning the choir sang a beautiful anthem, "He Is Risen," and Mrs. Harriette Hammer Walker, director of the choir, gave a solo.

Rev. R. C. Stubbins' sermon subject was the "Reasonableness of the Resurrection." The scripture was from Acts 26:7-23, with the text from the 6th verse. "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" He said, "Nature tells of the story so simple." Even Paul, learned man as he was, doubted the possibility of the resurrection. Great scholars have been unable to prove after much investigation that there is no life after death. "Don't be afraid to investigate," he said.

A seed taken out after being put away for a long time and planted in the ground, which springs forth is another proof of new life after death. Spring in all its beauty after winter, is another proof of Christ's resurrection.

Human desire is one of the strongest proofs of life. Hunger and thirst are desires that are naturally satisfied. Justice cannot be dealt out in this world, everyone must stand before the eternal bar. We have Bible facts that are proofs of a life hereafter. Jesus' life tells the story—life has no end. No human could raise Jesus from the dead. Another proof of the resurrection is the empty tomb. The resurrection shows His great power, "Because He arose we all shall arise."

In the evening at 6:30 o'clock the choir, under the direction of Mrs. Walker with Mrs. N. M. Harrison, pianist, gave a cantata, "The Prince of Life." This was well rendered. The inclement weather kept many of our people at home.

Mr. R. R. Ross, who has been confined to his home with a severe cold, is improving. Mr. and Mrs. George Ross and children, of Raleigh, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ross and family, of Lillington, have been recent visitors in the Ross home.

LOLLIE JONES, Reporter.

Why Not.—On Saturday, April 11th, all day services will be held at Macedonia church at 11 a. m. Rev. J. W. Hulin will preach. At noon lunch will be served, and at 1 p. m. the second quarterly conference will assemble. All officials are urged to attend.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Fairview Church, Anderson Charge.—On Easter Sunday at 11 o'clock Rev. M. C. Henderson, the pastor, preached an impressive sermon, using the Resurrection as the topic. In the evening at 7:45 the children of the community under the leadership of Mrs. Estella Connelly, gave an Easter program, which was enjoyed by every one present.

Our Sunday school is continuing to grow, while the loyalty and enthusiasm is becoming more and more noticeable. One hundred and five were present April 5, the weather was bad.

It was decided that the collection taken every second Sunday will be sent to the Children's Home. The superintendent, Mrs. T. B. Nalley, is going to add to this amount next Sunday morning one cent for each one present at 10:15 o'clock which is the opening hour. Let every one make a special effort to be on time.

For several years we have not had a Ladies' Aid Society, but the need for one is great. After church services last Sunday plans for organizing again were discussed. Only two officers were elected and on next Sunday morning the women will meet and elect the others. There are already 15 members and every one feels sure that this number will be doubled in a short time.

West Forsyth.—Owing to the rain and muddy roads there was about one-half the regular attendance at the services at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday. After the service at Baltimore the pastor was invited to the home of Mrs. Ella Doub and Brother J. W. Doub, superintendent of the Sunday school. Here we enjoyed a splendid dinner and spent a short while. At Stony Knoll we found the "faithful ones" present for the service at 2:30 o'clock. The hour for this appointment will be at 3 o'clock beginning the next first Sunday.

The Easter program at Pleasant Hill church was postponed until next Sunday night, owing to the weather.

The second quarterly conference will be held on Saturday of next week at Union Hill church. Preaching at 11 o'clock and the business in the afternoon, with dinner at the church during the noon hour. Rev. J. O. Fry, pastor of a group of Methodist Episcopal churches in Yadkin county, will deliver the sermon. We are hoping there will be a full attendance of the official members of the charge and many others present. Nominees for delegates to the next annual conference will be selected, and other important business transacted.

Except for the unfavorable weather conditions the Easter season was a very happy one. This writer and family appreciate very much the kind remembrances from members of the different churches who sent Easter cards and greetings. We received cards and greetings from members at all of the six churches on the charge, and there were about sixty cards and greetings coming from members. We deeply appreciate these tokens of love and esteem from our people.

The people on West Forsyth charge have continued to remember the pastor and family with suitable gifts for our dining table. We appreciate gifts from the following: Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Sprinkle, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Long, Mrs. J. F. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Pearson Sprinkle.

The pastor and family had as their guests during the Easter-holidays Mr. and Mrs. Obra Thomas and attractive little son, of Burlington. Mr. Thomas is a brother of Mrs. Way.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Hunter, members of Pleasant Hill church, was made sad last week by the death of Miss Jane Long, aunt of Mrs. Hunter, who had made her home with that family for the past 28 years. The funeral was held at Pleasant Hill church Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by the writer and Rev. A. L. Hunter. An obituary will appear in the Herald.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Well, it's about time I was breaking into print again, so here goes:

The poems about Calvary's cooks which appeared in last week's Herald may have stirred up your curiosity, unless you read the account of the supper in the Greensboro News. It was a great event. Some of us decided that the men of Calvary church ought to show our appreciation of the splendid work the women of the church have done during the present branch year. We wanted to show it in a way out of the ordinary. What could be more so than a supper cooked and served by the men—with the women as our guests? The idea took like vaccination. I don't dare take the space to give the menu, nor to tell you who cooked the grub. But it was well done. The Calvary women have had a reputation for being good cooks, extraordinarily good cooks. We men have found out why. They have lived with us so long that they've learned the art from us.

Last Thursday night, "the night on which he was betrayed, and did institute this ordinance," we observed the Lord's Supper in the church. The pastor was assisted by Rev. W. F. Ashburn, with Brothers J. F. and T. F. McCulloch offering prayers. About 75 people were present and partook of the elements. It was the most impressive service I have ever held, I think.

Last Sunday was a good day with us in spite of the rain. In the morning four children were received into the church on confession of faith. (Others are expected to join later). At night the choir gave an Easter cantata. In the face of handicaps that would have discouraged many another group, they succeeded in giving a splendid recital, and have our sincere thanks for it.

On the fifth Sunday night in March, the Sunday school put on the pageant, "The Resurrection Way." It was well done, and a good-sized congregation enjoyed it. (The offering for missions this year is a bit larger than last year, I am glad to say.)

I should have said, in connection with the cantata, that the choir wore their vestments for the first time at this service. They added much to the impressiveness of the service, and will be used frequently, especially at the morning worship. The gowns are fashioned after the academic costume—black, with white collars. They make a good-looking choir look even better.

Three of the local florists presented Easter lilies, and other flowers, to the church, and these added much to the appearance of the auditorium. Other flowers were brought by the members of the church.

Twenty-three young people came out to a Sunrise Service held in the church, an Easter Sunrise Pageant being part of the service, with breakfast following.

Another $150 off of our $2,000, note! Now $350! We are making plans this week to get the balance between now and the third Sunday in May, so that, on the fourth Sunday, we can stick a match to the note. The smell of burning paper will be like incense in the nostrils of those who have given their time and money to getting rid of this part of our indebtedness. It will help us to concentrate our efforts on the main debt.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Bethel, Alamance.—We were glad indeed to have the circuit rally for Alamance charge held at Bethel the fifth Sunday. We had a very successful day. Special music was rendered for the occasion. The pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, had charge of the program. At the morning session the subject "Our Children's Home" was discussed by Miss Marcia Foust, and "Church Music" by Miss Bessie Holmes. Then a splendid paper on "Training for Leadership" prepared by Miss Lillie Mae Braxton of Center church, who could not be present on account of having part in another rally, was read by Mrs. Webb Lindley, of Center. The subject of "Evangelism" was ably discussed by Rev. G. W. Holmes.

In the afternoon session we were pleased to have Prof. C. R. Hinshaw give us a splendid address on "High Point College." Then Mrs. C. W. Bates gave us a most helpful discussion on "Woman's Auxiliary Work." The final speaker on the program was Mr. Joseph W. Holmes, who brought us a very interesting and inspiring message on "Worship Program of the Church."

All churches on the charge were represented, and visitors from other churches were present. We believe much benefit was derived from this program.

The Woman's Auxiliary is closing a very successful year's work. The apportionment has been raised in full. We were delighted to have Rev. J. Clyde Auman as speaker at our thank-offering meeting.

MARCIA FOUST, Reporter.

Kernersville.—And I say unto you again that our second quarterly conference will be held at Sandy Ridge on Saturday before the third Sunday in April. At 1:30 p. m. It ought not to be necessary to urge officials to attend quarterly conferences, as it is the Lord's work, and people who love the Lord love His work, and their faithfulness to attend is the measure of their love.

"Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom the Lord shall make ruler over his household?"

The C. E. Society at Pine Grove continues to grow. The attendance Friday night was 50, and the membership and interest continues to grow.

Misses Blanch Ingram and Bessie Cook are the leading spirits in the undertaking, with other loyal followers, whose determination can't fail of success.

W. D. REED.

First Church, High Point.—Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather, the Easter Sunday services were well attended. At the morning worship period J. D. Koonce, Jr., sang very beautifully "There Is a Green Hill," and the choir rendered two anthems. A beautiful feature of this Easter day service was the baptism of two bright and lovely babies, the year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Blackburn, who is christened Robert Russell, Jr., and the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Shaw, who will bear the name, Sara Priscilla. The dedication of pure and innocent children by their parents to the Father, who said "Suffer the little children to come unto me," is always a solemn and impressive service. We were delighted to receive into fellowship the following new members, of whom the first four were baptized and joined on profession of faith: Mr. Earl B. Bryant, 512 W. Ray street; Master S. W. Taylor, Jr., young son of President and Mrs. S. W. Taylor, 909 W. College Drive; Miss Sallie R. Pickett, 605 Denny street; Miss Helen Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Davis, 232 Woodrow avenue; Mrs. Emmett Pritchard, Sunset Drive, and Mr. John Armfield, 809 Magnolia Court. The minister's sermon was an eloquent one on the theme, "The Folly of Opposition," of which the outstanding features were stressed as follows: Great men and doctrines have always been compelled to fight for recognition, but when the conflict is with God, man is in the wrong. "Man proposes, but God disposes," is a true and trite axiom. After the crucifixion and burial of Jesus, the Jews, pretending that His friends would perpetrate some fraud, said that they desired that the tomb be sealed. Pilate reminded them of the Roman guard, and said, "Make it as sure as you can," which was done. Jesus' enemies did all in their power to prevent the resurrection, but what mortal force can stay the power of God? He burst the tomb and arose. It is folly to oppose God's will in the march of truth and righteousness. "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh" when men attempt to perpetuate ignorance, slavery, or intemperance. The resurrection is the ground of our hope, the source of our faith and consolation in this life. When we surrender to Christ, our doubts and misgivings flee away as the mists before the rising sun. It is folly to oppose the will of God, but wisdom to fall in line with it.

On Sunday evening at 8 o'clock the Young People's department of the Sabbath school presented the pageant, "The Resurrection Way." The young performed their parts in an admirable manner and with devout seriousness. This excellent rendition was presented under the splendid and capable direction of Mrs. Lester R. Peacock and her efficient committee, and many pronounced it one of the best entertainments ever given in the church.

The rarely beautiful array of flowers, which graced the pulpit on Easter Sunday, was placed there as a tender and loving memorial of their sainted young daughter, Evelyn, by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Penny, as has been their custom every year since she went home to her Father's house nine years ago. Very many of us remember her with love and fond affection this lovely, sweet-spirited girl, who was the only child of the devoted parents, and who was transplanted just "as she stood with reluctant feet, where the brook and the river meet." We can but feel that she would have developed and ripened into splendid gracious, Christian womanhood, but God needed her and took her to bloom in His eternal garden of light.

The mid-week prayer service will be held as usual on Wednesday evening, but there will be no supper. Mr. Farmer will discuss a timely and practical question, "Unwise Economy In Hard Times."

Miss Myrtle Davis was the leader at the regular weekly meeting of the Young People's C. E. society, Monday evening on the topic, "Easter Messages In Literature."

Our church people, as well as a large number of other denominations, were painfully grieved to hear of the passing of one of our most active and faithful members, Mr. J. D. Koonce, on Thursday evening last at his home, 802 Lindsay street, about 6 o'clock. The result of a sudden stroke of paralysis, the third suffered since last August, his death came as a distinct shock to relatives and friends. He had rallied remarkably well from the first two strokes, and had been able to attend church services. A native of Davidson county, Mr. Koonce moved to High Point in 1899, and soon united with the membership of First church, and assumed an active part in its service, teaching a Sabbath school class of adult men for many years. He was married three times, his last wife who survives having been Miss Luella Snider of Davidson county, they reared a family of splendid sons and daughters, all of whom are fine and loyal church workers, the five sons being Carl, Henry, Arnold, and Edwin of High Point, and R. L. Koonce, Washington, D. C., and two daughters, Mrs. Carey Davis, and Miss Mary Koonce of this city. Funeral services were conducted in First church on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the presence of a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends, and the ministers in charge were the present pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, Dr. George R. Brown of Reidsville, and Dr. A. G. Dixon of the Children's Home, the two last named being former pastors of Mr. Koonce. Pall bearers were the following neighbors and close friends: Messrs J. E. Perryman, M. P. Sechrest, David E. White, M. R. Green, J. A. Johnson, W. C. Koontz, V. L. Hunt, and John Atkins, and burial was made in Oakwood Memorial park.

Fletcher Cox of Tampa, Fla., a former resident of High Point, is the guest of relatives here.

Miss Esther Pritchard with a party of friends went to Washington city to spend Easter.

Many friends of Mrs. W. P. Pickett are much pleased to see her at home from a visit to Florida.

Graham.—In spite of the inclement weather the Easter program was carried out with but few exceptions. Miss Lovonia Black and her assistants are to be praised for their untiring zeal.

On Palm Sunday morning eight persons were received by letter, and Easter Sunday morning eight young people and one adult on the profession of faith, as members of our church.

Pre-Easter services were held jointly between the M. P. and M. E. churches with very pleasing result. These services were concluded Easter Sunday morning with a Sunrise service.

On Monday evening the 13th, the High Point college glee club, orchestra, and choir are to give a program at the graded school building. Let me use this opportunity to encourage all Methodist Protestants in reach of Graham to make it a point to be here at this time. A small admission fee is to be charged.

Recently Dr. G. I. Humphreys and Mrs. W. C. Hammer have been with us and delighted us with their inspiring and helpful messages.

Our hearts full of sympathy go out to Mrs. DeWitt Foust in the loss of her mother. This information came to me just as I was writing this report. Her funeral will be held at the M. E. church here tomorrow (Wednesday) at 3 o'clock.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Shiloh.—Easter has come and gone, and even though it rained much, it was a good Easter. Our pastor brought us an inspiring sermon on the text, "He Is Risen." Sunday night the C. E. society presented an Easter pageant, which was said to be one of the best ever given at Shiloh. It was seen only by a small crowd, but was greatly enjoyed. We are so sorry that many of our faithful ones were unable to attend church Sunday.

Mrs. Mittie Lanning attended S. S. and preaching services with her brother, R. B. Sink. She is spending a week with each of her brothers and sisters, and we are sure they will all enjoy her stay.

Mrs. Protus Koons was with us Sunday after several months' absence. We were so glad to have her and her baby girl with us once more, for Mrs. Koons is one of our most active members.

Miss Agnes Leonard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Leonard, was married on April 4 to Mr. Paul Walker of Lexington. Agnes is one of our most attractive girls, and Shiloh wishes for her a most happy life.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Liberty.—A very inspiring Easter program was given at the Sunday school hour Sunday morning. The Easter music was in charge of the junior classes. A very impressive reading of "Why We Have Easter" was rendered by Miss Cleo York. The smaller classes showed their excellent training under the leadership of the committees, Mrs. J. W. Curtis, Mrs. J. B. York and Dorothy Curtis, offering for this occasion was $8.73. We were glad to have Misses Frances Curtis, Margaret King and Mr. Frank Shepard with us at Sunday school Sunday.

On account of sickness and so many rainy Sundays, our Sunday school attendance has not been so good. Let us strive to do more for the Sunday school. I am sure our faithful superintendent will be very glad to see more interest shown in this work.

Circle No. 1 met Wednesday afternoon with

Mrs. J. A. Clapp as hostess. Circle No. 2 met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. J. E. Cox as hostess. Mrs. J. B. York was in charge of devotionals. Prayer by Rev. J. D. Williams, with Mrs. J. E. Cox program leader. Mrs. F. A. Shepard and Mrs. C. L. Highfill read interesting papers on missions. One visitor and seven members present, the hostess served refreshments at the close of the meeting.

First Church, Albemarle.—Last Sunday at six a. m. a very beautiful service was enjoyed at our church. A band under the direction of Mr. Carl Efrid began playing Easter hymns at five o'clock and continued playing until the congregation assembled at six. Regardless of the downpour of rain a large crowd attended the service.

At the eleven o'clock service Pastor Curry delivered a very inspiring sermon on "The First Easter Message." The choir furnished special music for the occasion.

Sunday evening the choir gave an Easter cantata, "The Resurrection Way." Several numbers were also given by the Children's department. There were many people in our city who attended all three of these services Sunday and expressed themselves by saying, "I have enjoyed this Easter more than words can express, and I know that I have been highly elevated by attending your services."

Mrs. George L. Curry who has been confined to her room for many months was with us again Sunday. We were all glad to have Mrs. Curry back with us again.

REPORTER.

Corinth, Littleton Charge.—Due to the extremely rainy weather yesterday our attendance was very small at the preaching service. Our pastor, Rev. P. E. Bingham, brought us a very fine message.

I think our pastor is doing good work here, his sermons are helpful and inspiring and he is always ready to do anything that he is asked to do. By co-operating with him we can make this one of the best years for our church.

We were glad to have worship with us yesterday Miss Louise Insko from Dawson, Virginia Insko, of N. C. C. W., Greensboro, and Mrs. B. M. Morris, Richmond, Va.

Rev. and Mrs. P. E. Bingham visited their sister at Crews, Va., a few days last week.

Mrs. J. D. Insko, one of our members, continues very sick. We hope she will soon be well and back at church.

At the preaching service yesterday a church letter was granted Mrs. Eleanor Williams, who wishes to join the M. E. church at Richmond, where she is living.

Our Sunday school has been at a standstill since Christmas, due to so much sickness in the community. But since it's spring now and most all folks are about well, we hope the Sunday school will wake up. Don't forget to be present next Sunday a. m. at 10 o'clock and bring some one with you.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Denton.—If you were not at Denton March 29 you missed a feast of good things. The program began at 10:45 a. m. The weather was ideal, the dinner was so abundant more room had to be added to the already spacious table to make room for several baskets to be emptied of their good things.

At the hour appointed an overflowing audience of musicians and music lovers was there. Words fail me when I attempt to describe the joy that thrilled my heart as I looked into the smiling faces of so many from Roberta church who had proved so true and labored with me so faithfully for the last four years. I was so glad to see them I was about to kiss some of the men. When they found it out they expressed themselves that they were mighty glad I didn't—so was I, in my more sober moments.

Ladies of Roberta you should have seen Mrs. Short when she put on that new dress you brought her and those pretty hose. You will excuse me for not using space here to tell you all but it would make interesting reading. You know it is silly for her to think she is ten years younger, and to be wondering if there it not some mistake about her birth record.

The singers that pleased and gladdened the hearts of the large attendance were, Roberta church choir of Concord, The Denton church choir, the Thomasville Male chorus, The Denton Quartet, Talbert quartet of Concord, The Sisk quartet of Gaffney, S. C., the Freeman quartet of Thomasville, Misses Lannings and Calhoun, duet, Denton, and last, but not least, the Chisim Sisters of Thomasville. The happy thrills of the day were many, but the one outstanding was when the Chisim Sisters rendered, "When I Go to the Home of My Childhood." I have never seen as many tears over one song. Aged and hardened sinners bowed their heads under the spell, while tears streamed over their furrowed cheeks. I am not by myself in saying, this was the best all around song service I have ever been in, of the kind. A deep spiritual and devotional atmosphere pervaded the day in an unusual manner, but how could it have been otherwise, with a hundred of Roberta church, her good pastor and wife, Rev. C. H. Hill, and so many of their prayer band with us? God bless you all and come again.

ROBERT SHORT

Chase City Charge, Friendship Church.—On April 5, 1931 we called together our Sunday school class at 10:30 o'clock, with a very small attendance. We all hope our Sunday school classes will grow larger every Sunday.

Then after the Sunday school we held our regular monthly service (which we have every first Sunday) at 11 o'clock.

A sermon conducted by Rev. C. W. Saunders that we all enjoyed so much.

REPORTER.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—Our church is looking forward to a great day next Sunday, April 12, when we dedicate our new hut. A long-looked for dream has come true. The class met in the hut two weeks ago for the first time with 90 young men present, and next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the dedication service will be held.

Next Sunday at the 11 o'clock service the revival meeting will start with Rev. C. B. Isely of South Lexington charge as our pulpit help. We ask your prayers that we may have a great revival; we feel the need of one.

Easter services were held last Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour. Our pastor did not preach in the morning as this time was given for the Easter service. The children were well-trained.

Mrs. J. I. Walker and Miss Flossie Jones had charge of this service.

Two new members were taken into our church last Sunday.

The Royal Blue class of married ladies held their class meeting with Mrs. R. C. Lineberry this time, had a large crowd out at this meeting. Mrs. Lineberry made and gave twelve apions to the class to be sold for 50 cents each and the money was to go in our class treasury. After a real good time of singing and playing games the hostess served ice cream and cake.

We were glad to have Mrs. Maggie Tate of Burlington with us Sunday. We have missed Mrs. Tate since she moved away. She was once a regular attendant and is the mother of Mrs. J. L. Craven of our church.

MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

English Street.—The object of this article is to give in general the condition of affairs at English Street church, and the causes leading up to this condition.

Our church was purchased in 1921 from the "Reform Church" at a cost of $4,000, which amount has been paid in full. In 1924, they decided to buy a parsonage which was done at a cost of $4,000. At that time the membership of the church consisted of some financially strong members which made it easy to borrow money. Instead of paying any money of their own on the parsonage, they borrowed the full amount, from a local bank giving the bank their note and taking a mortgage on the parsonage. We have been unable to find any record showing that the proper notice for the vote to do so had been given, but attorneys say this makes no difference since the church accepted it. The membership of the church thought the church was safe because they did not mortgage the church property. Now they wake up to the fact that when the mortgage on the parsonage is foreclosed, if it fails to bring enough to pay off the mortgage, they can get judgment against the church and then foreclose this judgment. This done we will have no place to hold our Sunday school and church services, because if sold at auction at this time it will doubtless bring but little more than the amount needed to pay off the debts and the cost of sale. We have been told that Brother Sink and perhaps one or two others paid $150.00 on the note, which leaves $3,850 which will be due the 25th day of April.

Sometime after the purchase of this parsonage property, the pastor had some trouble in the community and resigned. About that time some of the strongest members financially, withdrew, and others have since died, which, has left the entire debt on the shoulders of a membership willing but not able to pay. Then, too, a few years ago there developed some trouble with an outside element who bought a $500 piano without consulting the church and later managed to get it off on the church. Last year, Brother J. A. Robbins, our S. S. superintendent took charge of this debt, collected what he could and paid the balance of the $300; and that debt is now paid in full. Following this transaction the church got behind with pastor's salary, and some suggested that they borrow $500 and pay him up. Instead of getting out and collecting it, they go to the bank and borrow this amount, giving their note. The Annual Conference soon met and they still owed the the bank the full amount. When the present pastor was sent here he found about $350 of this old salary note overdue at the bank. Not only this but a $50.00 debt on light fixtures and unpaid insurance bills. To pay off these bank notes has occupied the attention of our best paying members for the last three years. These old debts came first and the pastor has had to come in as second. So we have been laboring here with our hands tied for two and one-half years, not receiving enough on salary for actual living expenses. Since conference, we have given them the parsonage rents of $25 per month to pay interest on note, and have received on salary $20.78 per month. That is we have given them $4.22 per month for the privilege of preaching and doing their pastoral work. This condition prevails to some extent because many of our folks have been out of work and could not pay. We feel that some of these are doing the best they can, and we are not complaining, but just stating facts. We have some good folks here and I enjoy preaching for them.

The local bank has been unusually kind to the church. They have been carrying this note since 1924 and of course they have a right to want their money. If they had closed down on the church two or three years after the note had been given, the church could have handled it without embarrassment, but at this time they can not. Rents from the parsonage will more than pay the interest on the debt and the church is willing to give first mortgage on all the property which is safe security beyond all question. The great trouble seems to be—it is church property, and financing companies do not care to handle it.

If any one who reads this can offer any suggestion as to how this matter can be handled so as to save the church we will appreciate that suggestion. Conservative business men tell us our property is worth approximately $15,000 in normal times, but now we can not find a buyer. It is unthinkable that the church in general or the conference should allow this property and opportunity to go from us as a denomination. Yet it will do so unless something is done. It will take several thousand dollars and several years to develop any new point to the extent this is now developed, unless the church or Board of Church extension can save this property and opportunity. We see no reason for trying to develop new fields. If we can only hold it until property gets back to normalcy, we can sell to an advantage, re-locate and build a new and more commodious church. If the bank will continue to carry the note until that time, we can go on, otherwise we see no way out.

The pastor and local church appreciate fully the interest Dr. Taylor has shown in his efforts to help find a way out of the distressing condition.

GEORGE L. REYNOLDS, Pastor.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mr. Newton M. Coe, for the Onandago conference, a nice lot of young cherry trees for planting.

Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, Mebane, 1 coat and 1 coat suit.

Mrs. T. L. Speas, of Winston-Salem, chairman of the house committee, is kindly working up a "shower" for the Home, for the branch meeting. The first drops of that shower came upon us from the Gibsonville ladies.

Mrs. D. M. Davidson sent for the Gibsonville Auxiliary, a nice lot of outing flannels, towels, pillow slips, and 5 dozen pair of hose.

Mrs. J. C. Causey and her children sent 60 cans of tomatoes to Greensboro for us. We expect to get them soon.

We are thankful for these gifts of money and substance. And we are especially thankful to Asheboro for setting a goal and living up to that goal in hard times as well as in good times. By their regular monthly offering and their Thanksgiving offering Asheboro is supporting two children in the Home for this year at $18.00 per child.

The Baraca class of First church, High Point is now supporting one child at $18.00 per month, and we are asking the other departments in this Sunday school to support one. Other churches and Sunday schools and C. E. societies are doing equally well. But there are churches and Sunday schools which have ceased to send anything because of the "hard times," and many of the offerings are cut by half. This has been an exceedingly long winter and our expenses have gone on regardless of the "hard times," though we are trying to cut expenses to a minimum.

Burlington Baraca Class

One day last week the Burlington Baraca class sent a committee to select a boy to support. Their committee said, "Give us a boy who has nobody to look to and we will take care of him." We assigned them just such a boy and will soon receive their first check.

That little boy has a brother and a sister here. At Christmas and at Easter when other children are getting letters and cards and little gifts these three children have no one to mail them things, and there are others. Burlington has taken one. You may have one.

Easter Sunday

Is it news to you to say, Easter was a rainy Sunday. For many of the churches and Sunday schools the First Sunday is offering day

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Crater

Jesse H. Crater, born November 18, 1858, departed this life March 20, 1931. He joined Old Shady Grove church early in life, and when Vickory Methodist Protestant church was organized he moved his membership to this church. He had been a member of the board of church trustees for a number of years. It seemed to be a pleasure for him to contribute to the support of the church, and to be a good neighbor. He endeavored to put his house in order to receive the Master on his second coming, for it was his request that the 14th chapter of John's Gospel be read at his funeral, also he requested that the song entitled "Over There" be sung by the choir. He leaves behind two half brothers, Charles C. Crater of Chicago; George B. Crater of California, and a host of friends.

The funeral services were conducted by Dr. A. G. Dixon and the writer Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, March 21, at Vickory Methodist Protestant church. The body was laid to rest in Fairfield church cemetery.

The large crowd that attended the funeral and the many floral designs proved the love in which his memory is held.

E. O. PEELER, Pastor.

Gill

On Sunday, March 8th Kathleen, the daughter of Mrs. T. A. Gill, departed this life at the age of 16 years. She was of a bright, lovable disposition and a great favorite among her class mates at Erland high school and was so esteemed by her class mates at Sunday school.

Kathleen joined Hebron Methodist Protestant church when quite young and was always active and interested in the affairs of her church. We would say to the mother and two sisters that to be able to make the above statement is more valuable in so far as our relation to the next world, and our influence in this is concerned, than any tribute might be paid the worldly-minded of high estate. We realize it is very sad to part with one so young and promising, but we also realize that there is something more precious than life—something that is not measured by the span as we reckon human existence—Christian character—that untarnished possession which was hers. A life so fine though taken young, was not lived in vain, for many young people who were associated with her will carry through life to the memory of her loyalty to the right her unselfish attitude toward those with whom she came in contact, and we are also reminded that influence is something that never dies.

May the Lord bless and comfort the sorrowing ones and help them to catch a gleam of brightness and hope, and joy, in their bereavement.

M. F.

Payne, Moser

We, the members of English Street church brotherhood, realize that in the deaths of Brother G. W. Payne and Brother D. J. Moser we have lost two of our most loyal members. We miss them not only in our brotherhood meetings but in all our church services. Be it resolved, therefore,

First, That we meekly bow in submission to His divine will and say, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

Second, That we extend to the bereaved families our tenderest sympathies, praying that the Holy Spirit may comfort them in this sad hour of affliction.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our brotherhood, also a copy sent to each family and to our church paper for publication.

J. A. BOWERS, Chairman.

J. A. LEE, Secretary.

Long

Elvina Jane Long was born November 20, 1845, and departed this life April 1, 1931. Her age was 85 years, 4 months and 11 days. She was the daughter of Jesse and Lucinda Long, who passed to their reward many years ago. She grew up in a family of ten children, and was the oldest of the surviving members of that family.

She was dedicated to the church by her parents in infant baptism and remained devoted to the church throughout her long life. "Aunt Jane," as she was affectionately known, was loved by all who knew her. The testimony of those who knew her best was that she was a good woman. She displayed very beautifully a lovable disposition, and exhibited in her life a characteristic of Christ in her love for children. She was a friend to the children and they were objects of her love and affection.

During her last illness "Aunt Jane" bore her affliction with patience and without complaining. Now her suffering has ended and pain has been forever banished from her. For many years she has not been able to attend church services, being almost an invalid, but when her health permitted it, she was seen in her place at the church. Her life was devoted to her loved ones and friends and her hope was anchored in the truth and righteousness of God. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

For the past 28 years "Aunt Jane" had made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Cicero G. Hunter, Mrs. Hunter being her niece. She will be missed most by these relatives who have tenderly cared for her during her declining years on earth. She is survived by two brothers, Julius M. Long, of East Bend, N. C., and L. Gaston Long, of Tolaceville, Route 1, N. C., and a large number of nieces, nephews and other relatives.

Funeral services were held at Pleasant Hill Methodist Protestant church Thursday afternoon, April 2, 1931, at 2 o'clock, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. A. L. Hunter, of Pinnacle. The body was laid to rest in Pleasant Hill cemetery to await the Resurrection Morning.

THE SEMINARY CROSS

The Cross on Seminary Hill,
The Sign before our eyes,
All students searching for Thy Truth
Look upward to the skies.

The Cross on which our Saviour died,
Was made of rough hewn wood.
The Cross which each of us must bear,
Is rarely understood.

O Cross! when shining in the night,
Westminster's hope proclaims.
May all who see it worship Thee,
In Thy Son's holy name.

O Cross, the Symbol of Thy Love!
Inspire our student life;
Send us to do Thy holy will Where'er there's Sin and Strife.

To India, China, and Japan,
In homeland or abroad,
Thy sacred Truth and Symbol dear,
Assist us in Thy Cause!

The Faculty and students all,
O may we ever keep
Thy Truth, O Cross, before our eyes,
And never know defeat!

GENERAL SUPERANNUATE FUND

In the general conference of 1920, the president appointed a board of managers, seven in number, to form and organize a body corporate to plan for aid for superannuated ministers and their widows of the several conferences. A corporation was formed in 1922 under the laws of the State of Maryland.

The board of managers met and elected the following officers: President, R. H. Brooks; G. C. Sheppard, vice-president; R. E. Games, secretary; and Thomas A. Murray, treasurer. The board of managers decided no funds should be distributed or given out until the funds in hand had reached $30,000; this was deemed necessary to place the fund on a sound working basis, which will insure its continuance and growth.

The success of this most worthy cause depends on the ministers of all the conferences, and on the entire membership of the Methodist Protestant church.

There are a few of our conferences that are small and are not provided for a "rainy day." So the general conference is hoping to be able to aid such conferences.

DR. J. H. GLASCOCK,

Sec. of Benevolences.

Greensboro, N. C.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Presidents of Auxiliaries:

March 31st closed the second year of our Mission Work under the new and unified program. We can now take an inventory of what we have done and begin making plans for our new year. The program for the Annual Branch meeting which will be held in High Point, April 22-23, has been arranged and will benefit not only those who have been working under the Home and Foreign Missionary Auxiliaries, Aid societies and the Woman's Auxiliary, and all Methodist Protestant women who will attend. High Point is centrally located and with automobiles and good highways many can come even if they return at night and come the following day. This plan, however, is not best. The local committee urges a large attendance and will provide homes for all who will come.

Reports have, in all probability, been sent to Mrs. George R. Brown, corresponding secretary, Reidsville.

For the benefit of the various secretaries a list of officers follows:

Officers and Secretaries

President, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro. Corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. R. Brown, Reidsville.

Treasurer, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, High Point. District chairman, Mrs. C. W. Bates, Greensboro.

Departmental Secretaries

Missionary Education and Christian Education, Mrs. H. W. Maier, Thomasville; Scholarships and Workers, Mrs. H. G. Paschall, Winston-Salem; Spiritual Life, Mrs. J. M. Stone, Greensboro; Thank Offering, Mrs. D. S. Coltrane, Greensboro; Literature, Miss Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro; Young People's Work, Miss Mary Young, High Point; Temperance, Miss Velna McCulloch, Greensboro; Benevolences, Dr. Harris Glascock, Greensboro; Life, Memorial and Perpetual Members, Mrs. S. R. Harris, Henderson; High Point College Student Loan Fund, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, High Point; Bethel Home, Mrs. F. W. Paschall, Asheville; Children's Home, Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, Mebane.

In addition to the regular program special emphasis will be placed upon Young People's Work.

Plan for the Branch meeting in High Point, April 22-23, and the Denominational Convention in Washington, May 12-15.

MRS. WM. C. HAMMER,

Pres. N. C. Branch, Women's Work.

for the Home. Then, too, on Easter Sunday Home Missions had right of way. If for any reason you left us out on Easter Sunday, please take the offering. Yet our bills are pressing. Please do not let the offerings drop down this spring and summer. We are doing our best here. Do your best to help us up to our best.

Octagon Coupons

Remember "Mother Dixon" request for 200,000 Octagon coupons by May 1st. She has already put in one large refrigerator and 16 new beds with the coupons you sent her. We must have another refrigerator for the Boys' dormitory on or about May 1st. We thank you for the Octagon coupons which are coming, and we thank you for your interest in every way.

May God bless and prosper all of you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

APRIL RAINS

April rains have come to play,
To wash the grime and smoke away;
To give to dear old Mother earth,
Of grain and flowers another birth.
To fill the air with melody
Of pattering drops of rhapsody.
April rains a while will stay,
Bestow a blessing, and then steal away.
—Grenville Kleiser.

to Greensboro and the court was delayed while he explained to the judge and solicitor the embarrassment that this would cause the college, the result was that the trial was postponed. The debater made the trip and assisted his associate in winning.

If any one will consider the number of students at many of the colleges and universities that High Point has debated he can easily see that the local institution has done quite well.

Although the young ladies have not done any intercollegiate debating they are active on the campus. The inter-society debates wax warm at times and are of much interest. The senior orations are exceedingly good. There is an opportunity for boys or girls to test their oratorical powers at High Point college and the college has some of the best coaching possible.

Love's Labor Not Lost

Three pictures drew the Master Artist.
And each of them to nature true:
To show the ways of love on earth,
The thing that love is sure to do.

A shepherd lost a sheep he loved;
The stupid creature went astray:
The loser on the mountain sought,
And bore that poor lost sheep away.

A woman lost a coin she prized,
A symbol of her plighted troth;
She swept and searched until she found,
And thus she kept her sacred oath.

A father lost his younger son,
Beloved boy, almost adored:
In deep distress he prayed and hoped,
And saw his son at last restored.

If human love thus seeks and finds
The objects of its tender care,
Much more will Heaven's boundless love
Be moved to save; do not despair.

St. Paul's Recent Expansion

Some year sago I planted some figtree cuttings on the southside of my barn where only rank weeds grew. Several years I had battled against these weeds with mattock and hoe, but the weeds only laughed at me and came back the next year in greater numbers and vigor. After the figs were planted I turned over to them the battle with the weeds. The warfare continued for several years and for a time the issue seemed in doubt. But at length the figs completely won! The weeds no longer appeared and the fig bushes each year bore luscious fruit. The fittest survived and triumphed; life was overcome by better life.

This is a parable of the career of St. Paul's church. The seeds of this church were planted over 25 years ago. There was prolonged search for a suitable place. At last a site was secured between the two mill villages, Proximity and White Oak, with Revolution mill village near by. Somehow means were found and a church was built and named St. Paul's. But would it live, or would the weeds choke or crowd it out? There are weeds that botanists have never named, and some of them grew rank in this vicinity. There is Indifference, Laziness, Worldliness, Lust for Pleasure, and the dreadful Sunday Sickness. Which would prevail in the end, the Gospel Plant or the weeds! Time is revealing. There has been a prolonged struggle, but the Plant is winning out. Three times has it added to its original building, and last Sunday it dedicated the latest addition, a hut for the young men's Bible class, with nearly a hundred on roll. This building is 30x46, with a small room cut off at one end for a kitchen. The large room will be for class use on Sunday and may be used for midweek services of the church, for social or business meetings. The house is well built of good lumber at a cost of $800, half of which was contributed by the mill company, which is pleased to foster religious enterprises among its employees.

The pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, presided in the interesting dedicatory service last Sunday afternoon. Two former pastors (Millaway and Ashburn), Rev. T. F. McCulloch and the editor of the HERALD took brief parts. The present teacher of the class, Brother Edell Oakes, made an appropriate address. Six young men sang. Brother Yates presented the building for dedication and the pastor followed the ritual of the church in the devotion.

St. Paul's is to be congratulated on its good progress. With the improved equipment its progress may be expected to be more rapid. May it be so.

Quite a number of visitors honored the occasion with their presence.

Modern Necromancy

In Deuteronomy 18-11 we read that necromancers were not to be tolerated in Palestine when the Israelites came into possession. Necromancers were those who pretended to tell future events by communicating with the dead. That is what Spiritualists of our time profess to do; they are therefore the modern necromancers. There are few of them in North Carolina. They are much more numerous in other parts of our country. I found them active in Michigan and Massachusetts. I heard of them in Illinois. When Dr. C. E. Wilbur and wife went to Illinois to visit some friends, on entering the house they noticed two picture frames swaying on the wall (probably the result of a draft of air caused by opening the door). They framed the pictures of two daughters who had died. The mother at once said: "The girls are glad you have come; that's the reason their pictures are moving." People who believe in Spiritualism can see many signs of the presence of spirits that would be very differently interpreted by other people. I personally made a number of investigations, sitting with the believers in their seances, but never saw or heard anything that could not be rationally explained without regard to departed spirits. A medium told me that she could see a number of spirits around me, one of

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

The Methodist Protestant Children's Home was started 20 years ago when the North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Home Missionary society at the suggestion of its president, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, began orphanage work August, 1910, with less than $50.00 in the treasury, but great faith in God and love for homeless children.

This is an institution in which the whole church has become interested, and we are justly proud of its success. It is one of the greatest enterprises of our denomination. It had a very humble beginning when these good women of the Missionary society had a vision of making a home for our homeless orphan children, but they had the faith to undertake it.

Orphanage work was begun at Denton, N. C., in an old school house. Those in charge of it were Miss Mabel Williams and Miss Etta Auman. Soon the building was crowded with children and it became necessary to consider expanding. Interest increased so rapidly that the General Conference in 1912 recognized the work and appointed a committee to purchase a farm on which to erect modern buildings. A farm of 38 acres was bought just outside of High Point and a modern building erected.

Twelve children were moved from Denton to the High Point home when it was opened in June, 1913. Later a boys' dormitory was built. Messrs. Geo. T. and J. C. Penny gave half the cost of the building. A laundry was added, and now a cottage for the superintendent and wife.

Since the beginning more land has been bought until now there are 132 acres. The farm is cultivated by the boys and the assistant superintendent. They grow their own vegetables and farm crops, and raise hogs, cows and poultry. They try to make all that they can to run the family. Their needs are many because their family is large, but they need just the same things that any family does to live on, except in larger quantities.

As they have 105 children to feed, clothe, and educate and no funds with which to face the future, it is urgent that they have the financial help of our people each month in order to take care of these children. May they have the prayers, interest and co-operation of all our people.

The children are given the advantage of spiritual and educational training, and taught to work. The boys do the farm work and the girls do house work and sewing. Their home life is much like that of a private family.

They formerly had their school conducted in the Home, but now they go to school at Jamestown, two miles away on busses every day. High Point college is right near the Children's Home and offers educational opportunities. The Scholarship Loan Fund of the Missionary Work is especially beneficial to these young people who have no one to finance their college expenses.

The entire family attends the First Church in High Point. They make the trip in the busses and the cars belonging to the workers in the Home. All the children of the age of accountability are members of the church. They hold Christian Endeavor at the Home every Sunday night. Thus a foundation is being laid for some strong Christian workers in our church. A number of them have reached the age of 18 and gone out and entered different occupations, every one of whom is making good in his chosen field and reflecting credit upon the institution in which they were reared and trained.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Garrett took charge of the Home when it was moved to High Point and did a wonderful work toward making a success of this work. After eleven years of faithful service Mr. and Mrs. Garrett resigned on account of Mrs. Garrett's health. Then Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk had charge of the work two years, and Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Allman one year. Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon whom we all know are now at the head of this great work and are rendering splendid service.

As the superintendent and children visit our churches and render their recitals we are made to feel that those engaged in this noble work are doing something worthwhile in trying to train these young lives and build character for future citizenship. Superintendent Dixon is appealing for more generous and more regular support of this worthy and necessary work. This institution, the only one of the kind in the entire denomination, is worthy of the whole-hearted support of its membership as it attempts to supply the love and privileges of a real home and fond parents for these unfortunate children.

It is a cause for thanksgiving that our Children's Home has been able to care for them and give them Christian training that they may become useful, honorable citizens who will reflect credit upon the church and state. May we continue to put forth our best efforts for the orphan and the upbuilding of the church.

MARCIA FOUST.

ASTONISHING AND SIGNIFICANT

The report of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment to the Clerk of the House of Representatives, covering the months of January and February, disclosed expenditures of $103,281 in the drive against the prohibition movement. Expenditures were not quite so large as receipts.

Patriotic American citizens may contemplate with grave concern the fact that these receipts included $110,000 contributed by ten millionaires. Mr. Raskob, who has been fighting to make the Democratic party wet despite the dry proclivities of its majority, gave $5,000; the three DuPont brothers of Delaware contributed $55,000; R. T. Crane, Jr. and Stanley Field of Chicago, $15,000 and $2,500 respectively; E. S. Harkness $5,000 and Arthur C. James $12,000, both of New York; Thomas W. Phillips of Butler, Pa., $5,000; and Charles Sabin of New York, $10,000.

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is the anti-prohibition movement in the United States.

It fights skillfully and persistently to detach states from support of the federal government in its enforcement of the prohibition law.

It encourages the use of party machinery to defeat the will of the rank and file of the electorate.

It systematically incites the poorly informed to resentment against the United States government because of its efforts to enforce the prohibition law.

It inspires ridicule and denunciation of the United States Constitution.

And it is financed by a few millionaires residing in four states, which are dominated by great cities having large segregated colonies of bewildered immigrants, cities notorious throughout the world for corruption in the administration of municipal affairs!

It is a clear issue of money against manhood. The maintenance of democracy demands determined defense of the United States Constitution. They shall not pass!—Clipsheet.

N. C. S. S. ASSOCIATION

Rev. Shuford Peeler, D. D., of Salisbury, N. C., has been elected general secretary of the North Carolina Sunday School association. Rev. Mr. Peeler will head the work of the Sunday School forces of the state of North Carolina.

He takes the place made vacant by the resignation of Mr. W. W. Sims, who gave up the work two years ago to engage in similar work, in the state of Kentucky. Since the departure of Mr. Sims the work has been carried forward by Miss Flora Davis, general superintendent, and others. At a meeting of the state executive committee held in High Point, March 9, Mr. Peeler was elected to this position. Formal acceptance by Mr. Peeler was given to the executive committee which was in session in Salisbury on April 6.

For a number of years, headquarters for the State Sunday School association have been located in the city of Raleigh, but now under the new administration, the office will be located in rooms 101-102 Arcade building, 114 W. Ennes St., Salisbury, N. C. Miss Evelyn Sanders, who has been with the association for five years in the capacity of office secretary will act in the same capacity in the office in Salisbury.

The North Carolina Sunday School association is an interdenominational organization whose object is the promotion and development of Sunday School work throughout the state in every Protestant denomination. It stands for more and better Sunday Schools. It hopes to see every man, woman, and child brought under the influence of some church and Sunday School. It is affiliated with the International Council of Religious Education. Its work is to foster and conduct township conventions and county conventions in each of the 100 counties in the state of North Carolina, each of which has been organized and is now functioning to some extent. It conducts young people's conferences, city-wide institutes, and leadership training schools.

Rev. Mr. Peeler has served pastorates in the city of Greensboro and Charlotte and during the last five years was a member of the faculty of Catawba college acting as dean of men, and business manager of that college, and instructor in religious education.

The association wants to be useful and helpful to every church and Sunday School throughout the state and if any teacher or superintendent or any other Sunday School worker wishes information in the way of solving Sunday School problems, please write to the headquarters in Salisbury and such help as we are able to give will be sent. There is in the office a library of more than 700 books on methods in Sunday School work. A catalog which will give information as to the books owned by the association will be sent upon request. This library is a free circulating library and any one wishing a book may have it by making the request known to the North Carolina Sunday School association in Salisbury.

RAILROADING A CENTURY AGO

On Christmas Day, 1830, the first American built locomotive to perform actual service, the "Best Friend of Charleston," began regular operation over six miles of the South Carolina railroad, on which occasion the following announcement was made by the board of directors:

"The public are respectively informed that the Railroad Company have purchased from Mr. E. L. Miller his locomotive steam engine and that it will hereafter be continually employed in the transportation of passengers. The times of leaving the stations in Line Street (Charleston) will be 9 o'clock, at 10 a. m. and at one and at half past 3 o'clock p. m. Parties may be accommodated in the intermediate hours by agreeing with the engineer. Great punctuality will be observed in the time of starting. The board of directors have taken all due precautions to ascertain that the engine is well adapted to the purpose of the railroad and gentlemen of distinguished knowledge in machinery have certified that "the manner in which it is executed; the various combinations and mechanism of the engine is not surpassed in skill and neatness of finish by any high pressure engine of American manufacture known in this state." This engine is of six horse power, its weight of 3 tons and 3-4 exclusive of the wood and water for keeping it in continued action. It is said to have moved on some occasions at the rate of 30 miles per hour, but when drawing a train of loaded cars which weighs three times as much as itself it moved with great ease from 10 to 15 1-2, being an average of 12 miles per hour. When drawing two cars with 41 passengers it went at an average rate of nearly 16 and where the road was straight at 20 93-100 miles per hour. The steam in the engine is not worked as high as is usual in the stationary high pressure engines in this state."

GENERAL ORDERS OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

"The Commander-in-Chief directs that divine service be performed every Sunday at 11 o'clock in each brigade which has a chaplain. Those brigades which have none will attend the place of worship nearest to them. It is expected that officers of all ranks will, by their attendance, set an example to their men. While we are duly performing the duty of good soldiers we certainly ought not to be inattentive to the highest duties of religion. To the distinguished characteristics of a patriot it should be our highest glory to add the more distinguished characteristics of a Christian."

—The Sunday School lessons have been unusually interesting of late. What a privilege to have such a textbook as the Bible. And the amazing stupidity of men who are so uninterested in spiritual things that they never read the Bible and pay little attention when they hear it read.

EVANGELISM

"Thy Kingdom Come"

Sympathy

Rev. J. L. Trollinger has just lost a brother by death; also Sister J. Clyde Auman. Brother and Sister Chas. Lindley are passing through days of great anxiety because of the illness of their child. We learned of this only last Sunday while in the Saxapahaw community. Sister George L. Curry has also been sick for some time. We are glad to learn that her health is improving. All of these about whom the shadows have fallen have our sympathy and our prayers. It is comforting to know that the sun still shines, though clouds for a little while may veil the light.

(Since writing the above, we learn through our daily paper of the passing of the Lindley child. We extend our tender sympathy to the stricken parents, and assurances of our prayers).

Painful Accident

We were distressed to find Mrs. Taylor with a broken arm, on our return home Sunday afternoon from Saxapahaw charge. The break is in her right wrist, and is the result of a fall. It was promptly set, and she is getting on all right, though the pain at this stage is very acute. We are hopeful that she may be more comfortable in a few days.

Registrations

First Church, High Point, leads, with 16. On Saxapahaw charge, the pastor and the four churches have registered. Randolph has one registration. Total reported to date: pastors, 3; others, 17; churches, 4. If others have registered, we trust that the information may be given us, so they may be included in our report next week. High Point went six over their allotment. By oversight, Randolph was omitted in the published quotas. The number given to that charge is 5. Now that we have our registrations going, let us push them for the remaining four weeks until we get our full 500. OUR PASTORS ARE OUR MAIN DEPENDENCE FOR DOING THIS.

This is the simple registration plan: (a) all pastors registering; (b) all churches registering; (c) as many members as possible registering. Churches registering are entitled to name a person, pastor or member, to represent them at the convention. The registration fee for individuals and churches is $1.00. Send it, with names of all who register, to Dr. J. H. Straughn, Baltimore, Md., 516 North Charles street.

That Black Mark

An intelligent and influential member of one of our rural churches said a few days ago, "That black mark is not going up fast." He feels that we are not giving to Dr. McCulloch and the HERALD the support they merit. This brother has been a reader of the HERALD for many years. I believe that he has been a subscriber from the beginning—and his judgment and interest are greatly appreciated. The HERALD is indispensable to conference information; information is indispensable to conference interest; interest is indispensable to conference success. Moral: SUBSCRIBE TO THE HERALD.

Children's Day

Perhaps we are anticipating slightly. But time is on the wing, and before we know it, June will be here. That's Children's Day month, you know. We expect, of course, that many of our churches will observe this day. That's our custom. We hope to see the number increased this year. The programs will no doubt be out soon, and we urge that every superintendent and every pastor definitely decide now to get the program early, and plan well for the observance of this day.

Saxapahaw Charge

Saturday and Sunday, April 11-12, were given to this work. The second quarterly conference was held at Salem church on Saturday, with thirteen officials present. Orange Chapel and Saxapahaw church were not represented. Reports showed that Concord church observed the Easter program. Salem church prepared the program but could not give it because of the rain and cold on Easter day. The school at Orange Chapel has been started again, after being closed for the winter months. Concord, Salem, and Saxapahaw all report good schools. Saxapahaw seem to be considerably in the lead in enrollment. This is a union church, composed of M. E.'s, M. P.'s, and Presbyterians. We understand that more Sunday School housing is contemplated here. Salem church added another room last year. Two schools, Salem and Concord, give monthly to the Home. Salem school has just provided the church with 50 Cokesbury Hymnals. There is one C. E. Society on the charge. The pastor hopes to have more soon. The charge has three Auxiliaries, with Concord leading in activities. The budget of this Auxiliary has been paid in full. The pastor will stress this phase of the work. The financial report showed that pastors had received $248 on salary; the A. C. B. has received $13.55, and N. C. S. $8; college maintenance, $10. Saxapahaw church is expected to pay balance of $16 on college maintenance soon. A good spirit prevailed in the conference and the general conditions on the charge are pleasing and hopeful.

Saturday night, we attended a Young People's program at the Saxapahaw church. Brothers J. B. Braxton, and F. W. Paschall were the speakers. A male quartet from Duke University pleased and edified in a number of selections. We enjoyed the program.

On Sunday we were with Salem church in an all-day rally program. The Lord's Supper was observed in the morning service. We regretted the absence of Brother Auman. He was to have spoken in the afternoon, but was kept away on account of the death of his wife's brother. The attendance during the day was very good, though not large. We believe that every church on the charge was represented. It was our privilege in the afternoon to speak in the interest of our conference and denominational work. We believe the day will be promotive of good results. We were glad to have Pastor Carroll in the afternoon service. Brother Whitehead is giving thoughtful and zealous attention to his work, and is loyally supported by the charge. It was a pleasure to spend this time with him and his people, and are indebted to him and to them for kindnesses shown us while on the work.

College Maintenance

We are now in the last lap of the college year, and Dr. Humphreys is greatly in need of money with which to meet the expenses of this closing quarter. Last year $4,500 had been received for this purpose up to this time, against a very small amount received this year. We trust that this may be pressed on every charge. It is true, of course, that money is tight; but this is not true of every one. Some have money that they can spare for this purpose. Let us get them to pay now; others will bring up the balance later. We trust that treasurers that have money in hand for this purpose will send it in at once, and not wait for balances to be collected.

A letter today from Brother Paschall informs us that Burlington paid their total allotment for college maintenance—$285—two weeks ago. We congratulate this good church and their good pastor, and gladly make recognition of this timely and generous aid. Brother Cranford told us today that two of his churches—Lincolnton and Fairfield—had raised their totals. And we understand, also, that First Church, High Point, is making arrangements to pay in full right away. This is pleasing and encouraging. Let the good work grow. Everybody together, now, for College Maintenance!

April

According to conference order, this is Stewardship and Pay-up month. We trust that pastors will emphasize this. There is great need of keeping our minds imbued with the fact that we are not our own, and that what we control of material substance is not ours. "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; and they that dwell therein." We must be taught to recognize this fact, and adjust ourselves to it. We suggest, therefore, that our pastors preach on stewardship and enlist tithers. We suggest, also, that pay-up goals be set for the month. If it is not possible to bring everything up to date, then let us do what is possible. Set some Pay-up goal, and try hard to realize it during the month.

Modern Necromancy

whom she judged to be my mother's spirit. She did not know that my mother was still living in the flesh a thousand miles away. A party of traveling spiritualists gave an exhibit with entrance fee in Blissfield, Mich. They pretended to show the materialized form of spirits. By previous agreement two college professors rushed upon the stage and seized one of the "spirits": they found they had in hands a woman clothed in very substantial flesh.

While I never saw any inexplicable wonders wrought by the mediums, I have talked with intelligent men who believed that there is in some of the phenomena exhibited some supernatural force. One minister, Rev. Mr. Hastings, of Ohio, entertained the view that demons were the agents. He of course believed that Spiritualism is a thing to be severely let alone. I had a young German friend in Michigan whose wife had died. He sought communication with her through a medium. The result was not satisfactory and he took his own life; he might, however, have done that any way.

The papers tell that the medium who made a spiritualist of Sir Conan Doyle has recently confessed that the whole thing is a matter of jugglery and deception and that he has become disgusted with it. Houdini, the great juggler, defied the mediums to do anything he could not do.

As the case now stands, the most plausible view is that Spiritualism is an imposition on the credulous.

—"Success is a child of two very plain parents, punctuality and accuracy."—Dr. Marden.

HE SPOKE WISELY

Honorable Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the national House of Representatives and who died in Aiken, S. C., April 9th, in adjourning a recent session of Congress, is quoted by the Washington Post of April 11th as using the following closing words:

"My colleagues, I need not say that I am profoundly grateful for this demonstration of your affection. Perhaps this is the last time that I will address you from this rostrum (laughter and applause). I do not mean to insinuate that I regard it as a probability, but I must admit it is a possibility. The decision lies with none of us here. It is a decision that lies with an all-wise Providence. With whatever Providence may decree, I am abundantly satisfied."

The Post, in commenting, says that Speaker Longworth used the remarks as an ironical allusion to the uncertainty of politics. Politics are uncertain, and so is life. Very often that which is said in jest comes true in earnest. The speaker's words were fraught with more meaning than at the time he could have anticipated, since he was to breathe his last in a few, brief weeks, and so was in the hands of Providence, and went out to meet face to face the one in whose hands all of us are and who controls the destinies of mankind. No man knoweth what a day, much less a month or a year, will bring forth. "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."—J. O. A. in Christian Sun.

A GODLY HINT

A story is told of a certain pastor who mourned over a member of his congregation once a regular attendant at the prayer service, who for months had not been seen in the "upper room." Unable to stand it longer, at the close of one of the meetings, in which the voice, formerly accustomed to lead in prayer, was sorely missed, the minister went straight to the man's home and found him sitting before the open fire. The absentee, somewhat startled by the intrusion, hastily placed another chair for the visitor and then waited for the expected words of rebuke. Had the rebuke been spoken no one knows what the reply might have been, or what mistaken yet lasting anger might have been kindled. But not a word did the minister say. Taking his seat before the fire, he silently took the tongs and lifting a glowing coal from the midst of its fellows, laid it by itself upon the hearthstone. Remaining painfully silent, he watched the blaze die out. Then the other opened his lips to say: "You need not say a single word, sir. I'll be there next Wednesday night."—Publisher Unknown.

WHAT GLADSTONE DID

Where certain lines in the face of Gladstone came from, we learn from such incidents as that related by Sir Francis Crossley, to whom it was told by the vicar of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. The vicar had recently been to see a crossing-sweeper in his parish, who was ill.

"Has any one been to see you," he asked.

"Yes, Mr. Gladstone."

"But how came he to visit you?" inquired the vicar, who could not understand why the chancellor of the exchequer, although then living in the parish, should call upon a sick crossing-tender.

"Well," answered the crossing-sweeper, "he always had a nice word for me when he passed my crossing, and when I was not there he missed me. He asked my mate, who had taken my place, where I was, and when he heard that I was ill he asked for my address, and put it down on paper. So he called to see me."

"And what did he do?" asked the vicar.

"Why, he read from the Bible and prayed," was the reply.

To be loyal to the interests of every man, how characteristic was this of the magnanimous Gladstone! Indeed, how Christ-like was such a service!—O. S. Marden.

HAVE YOU COUNTED THE COST?

Two young soldiers were talking about the service of Christ. One of them said:

"I cannot tell you all that the Lord Jesus is to me, or what He has done for me. I do wish you would enlist in His army."

"I am thinking about it," answered the other young man, "but it means giving up several things—in fact, I am counting the cost."

A Christian officer just passing heard the last remark, and, laying his hand on the shoulder of the young soldier, said:

"Young man, you talk of counting the cost of following Christ, but have you ever counted the cost of not following Him?"

For days that question exercised the mind of that young man, and he found no rest till he trusted the Lord Jesus Christ, the Saviour of sinners, whose faithful soldier he has been for twenty-seven years.—T., in "Scattered Seed."

PRIDE AND HUMILITY

I never yet found pride in a noble nature, nor humility in an unworthy mind. Of all trees, I observe that God has chosen the vine, a low plant that creeps upon the helpful wall; of all beasts, the soft and patient lamb; of all fowls, the mild and guileless dove. When God appeared to Moses, it was not in the lofty cedar, nor the spreading palm; but a bush—as if He would, by these selections, check the conceited arrogance of man. Nothing produceth love like humility; nothing hate, like pride.—Selected.

—Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the League of Nations for the past eleven years, has been awarded the 1931 Watelet Peace Prize of $10,000 for his "valuable services in the cause of the organization of the community of nations." Sir Eric accepted the award, but did not deem it proper in view of his office to accept a money prize and requested that the $10,000 be used to further the League ideal of international co-operation and preservation of peace. The money has been given to the International Federation of League of Nations Associations in Brussels.

"IF YOU DON'T KNOW THAT YOU ARE ON THE WAY TO HEAVEN—"

"If you don't know that you are on the way to Heaven, I can tell you that you are on the way to hell." Such are the words that sounded in the ears of William Adams, as they fell from the lips of an earnest preacher. If he did not "know" that he was on the way to Heaven, he was on the way to hell! He had no such "assurance." Hitherto he had considered it "presumption" in anyone to "go the length" of saying that he was sure of being in Heaven. Most of the people of that district declared that "no one could tell" until he was about to die whether he would spend eternity in Heaven or hell. "If you don't know that you are on the way to Heaven, I can tell you you are on the way to hell," again and again came before William whilst engaged at his work in the quarry. He became alarmed about his soul, and could find no rest or peace until some time after he was brought to know Jesus as his Saviour.

That a man can be saved and not know it, is a doctrine that is strongly advocated by those who have never been saved themselves.

Such teaching has done and is doing incalculable mischief. Those spoken of as Christians, in the New Testament, knew that they were saved (II Cor. 5:1; I John 2:12; Rom. 5:1; I John 3:14; Eph. 2:8,9). It proves nothing by saying that So-and-so, "one of the best Christians" you ever met did not know that his sins were forgiven. If he did not know that he was a Christian, what right have you to say that he was? Surely he ought to know best.

Let me ask in all love and earnestness, do you know that you are going to Heaven? Have you ever been converted to and by God? Can such a mighty change as conversion to God take place without a man knowing it? One born blind having his eyes opened, and not know it? A deaf man's ears unstopped, and be ignorant of it? A starving beggar eating a loaf of bread, and not be sure of it? A thirsty traveler partaking of the cooling draught, and be unaware of it? Away with such a thought! Are we not told that, "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new"? (II Cor. 5:17).

"If any man be in Christ he is a new creature"! (Can this take place without his knowledge? "Old things are passed away! behold all things are become new"! When a soul is converted to God he has a new life implanted within him, with new desires, new hopes, new feelings, and new aspirations. Desires for secret prayer, meditation on the Scriptures, speaking to the perishing, are begotten within him. Love for the children of God characterizes those who are Christ's. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren" (I John 3:14).

Be honest with your precious soul. Get to the bottom, and see where you are building. Find out if you have really experienced this great change, without which no one can enter Heaven (John 3:3-7). When the great event takes place in your soul's history, you will know it, and so will others.

If you discover that you are a poor, Christless sinner, without God and without hope in the world, don't rest satisfied until you know that your sins are all washed away in the precious Blood of the Lord Jesus.

If unsaved, there is no reason why you should continue in the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, desire to save you. On account of what the Lord Jesus has done and suffered, you are now welcome to receive, as a free gift from the outstretched hand of the Lord Jesus, a pardon for all your numberless transgressions (I John 5:10, 11; John 3:14-16). "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."—Church of Christ Advocate.

"IMMORTALITY"

Christ gave us proof of immortality, and yet it would hardly seem necessary that one should rise from the dead to convince us that the grave is not the end.

To every created thing, God has given a tongue that proclaims a resurrection. If the Father designs to touch with Divine power the cold and pulseless heart of the buried acorn and to make it to burst forth from its prison wall, will He leave neglected in the earth the soul of man made in the image of his Creator? If He stoops to give to the rose-bush, whose withered blossoms float upon the autumn breeze, the sweet assurance of another springtime, will He refuse the words of hope to the sons of men, when the frosts of winter come? If matter mute and inanimate, though changed by forces of nature into a multitude of forms, can never die, will the spirit of man suffer annihilation when it has paid a brief visit like a royal guest to this tenement of clay? No! I am as sure that there is another life as I am that I live today.

There is in the grain of wheat an invisible something, which has power to discard the body that we see, and from earth and air fashion a new body so much like the old one that we can not tell the one from the other; and if this invisible germ of life in the grain of wheat can thus pass unimpaired through three thousand resurrections, I shall not doubt that my soul has power to clothe itself with a new body suited to its new existence when this earthly frame has crumbled into dust.—William Jennings Bryan.

THE FATALITY OF SIN

"A professor in Scotland was lecturing to a class of students. While dissecting the body of a snake, he spoke of the fatality and suddenness of death as a consequence of its bite, and added, 'Gentlemen, I have made a small hurt in my hand, and such is the deadliness and quickness of the poison that should I neglect or fail from any cause to cauterize the wound—' While he stood holding his finger tightly to prevent the circulation, and still talking to the class, in rushed a messenger announcing a dangerous accident to one of the members of his household; whereupon, he, forgetting to cauterize his wounded finger, rushed from the room to his home. Within less than an hour he was dead. Sin may not always be so quick in its action; but it is fatal as blood poisoning, and equally certain to produce death to the soul."—Publisher Unknown.

—Dead is the religion which does not aim at these two things, personal purity and active charity.—Thomas Guthrie.

OUR STORY PAGE

TWO FRIENDS

Edward loved to visit the park. He carried bread and cookies to feed the swans and nuts for the squirrels. He did not care much for the monkeys—they were too noisy—and he was a little afraid of the elephants. There were three of them and the children fed them peanuts.

Edward brought peanuts for them, too, but sometimes he held his breath when he was near the great animals with their little eyes and long moving trunks.

Daddy had told him they were tame and harmless, and mother had taken a big book from the shelf of the bookcase in the living room and showed him pictures of them in their native jungles, and she read him stories about them, so bit by bit he ceased to be at all afraid of them.

One day at the park he had given all his peanuts to two of them, when the keeper led the third and largest one of all out of the elephant house.

He came up to Edward and put out his trunk for peanuts, but not a peanut was left; all he could find was a paper bag with three chocolate creams in it. He offered one to the elephant, whose name was Senior. He ate it and stretched out his trunk for more, so Edward gave him the rest.

After that Edward saved his pennies and bought Senior candy, which he fed to him every Saturday morning when he came to the park.

One Saturday a teasing boy came into the park among the children. He pulled the little girls' hair, snatched off the boys' caps as he passed, and knocked several little children down.

At last he came to where Edward was feeding Senior candy. He brushed against him, snatched off his cap, and knocked the candy in his hand to the ground, laughing as he did so.

All at once his laughter changed to screams of terror, for old Senior reached out his long trunk and wrapped it around him and he felt himself being slowly but steadily lifted off the ground and held about four feet in the air.

The park attendants came running when they heard the screams, and among them Senior's keeper, who sternly bade him put the frightened boy down on the ground again, and soon the sobbing boy was on his feet uninjured.

"Let this be a lesson to you," he said to him sternly. "Senior happened to be good natured when you teased Edward and knocked the candy out of his hand. If he had become angry no one could have saved you, for before any one could have stopped him he would have dashed you to the ground and broken all your bones."

The boy hurried away and Edward felt Senior's trunk gently caressing him. He picked up the candy from the ground and fed him, then ran away home.

But after that Senior and Edward were firmer friends than ever, and whenever the keeper led Senior out of the elephant house on Saturday mornings, Edward was always there by the fence waiting for him with some special treat.—

THE LOST SHIP

A small boy, living at a seaside town, once found a piece of wood which he used to make a beautiful little model ship. It gave him many hours of pleasure to sail it by the seashore.

One day the tide carried his little boat away, and he went home feeling very sad to think that he would never see it again.

"And I made it with my own hands," he thought to himself.

Some weeks after, he was out with his father in the market. They strolled around, stopping now and again to look at the stalls. They came to one on which were all sorts of odd things. And there what do you think the boy saw? A small ship. Could it possibly be his—the one he had made? Was he dreaming or did his eyes deceive him? No, true enough, it was his own.

Eagerly he asked how much it was.

"Three pence," said the man gruffly.

Feverishly he felt in his pocket for his spending money. He had brought all he had—three whole pennies—the price of his precious boat.

When he reached home with his father the ship soon had another test of its sea-worthiness—in the bath!

Not once would the boy allow the ship to go out of his sight that day. Even when bedtime came round he asked his mother to allow him the privilege of taking it into his bedroom, where he could leave it on a chair.

Having said his prayers by his bedside—as all good boys do—he jumped into bed. Then mother tucked him in and gave him his goodnight kiss.

When she reached the foot of the stairs she heard the boy talking and, thinking this somewhat unusual, listened quietly for a moment. Then she heard him say:

"Ah, little ship, I'm glad you've come back. I thought I had lost you altogether, and I loved you so much. Do you know, little ship, you are mine twice? First you are mine because I made you, and second you are mine because I bought you."

The mother's heart was stirred as she heard these words, for her mind was directed to the great Maker and Redeemer, Jesus, who has the same twofold claim upon us as the boy had upon his ship. We are His because He has made us in His own image—we are the work of His hands. We are His because He has bought us with His own Blood, paying the price of our redemption on Calvary.—Publisher Unknown.

A STREAK OF SUNSHINE

"Well, grandma," said a little boy, resting his elbows on the old lady's stuffed arm chair, "what have you been doing here at the window all day by yourself?"

"All I could," answered grandma, cheerily; "I have read a little and prayed a good deal, and then looked out at the people. There's one little girl, Arthur, that I have learned to watch for. She has sunny brown hair, her brown eyes have the same sunny look in them, and I wonder every day what makes her look so bright. Oh, here she comes now!"

"That girl with the brown apron on?" he cried. "Why I know that girl. That's Susie Moore, and she has a dreadful hard time, grandma."

"Has she?" said grandma. "O little boy, wouldn't you give anything to know where she gets all that brightness from, then?"

"I'll ask her," said Arthur, promptly, and to grandma's surprise, he raised the window and called:

"Susie, O Susie, come up here a minute; grandma wants to see you!"

The brown eyes opened wide in surprise, but the little maid turned at once and came in.

"Grandma wants to know, Susie Moore," exclaimed the boy, "what makes you look so bright all the time?"

"Why, I have to," said Susie; "you see papa's been sick a long while, and mamma is tired out with nursing, and baby's cross with her teeth, and if I didn't be bright who would be?"

"Yes, yes, I see," said dear old grandma, putting her arms around this little streak of sunshine. "That's God's reason for things; they are because somebody needs them. Shine on, little sun; there couldn't be a better reason than because it is dark at home."—The Sunbeam.

WHY LEO WAS CALLED HOME

Leo filled the woodbox and did the few other chores that fell to the share of the second boy in the family; then he hurriedly dressed for school. He did not wait for his brother and sisters that morning, for he wanted a game of ball before 9 o'clock. He was in full enjoyment of his sport when Charles came directly to him and said: "Mother wishes you to come home at once."

The ball was in Leo's hands. He stared blankly at his brother.

"Wh—what is the matter?" he stammered.

"Nothing."

"Anybody sick?"

"No."

"No."

"But why does mother want me?"

"I don't know," Charles answered; "she merely gave me that message for you."

The Leo children were trained to obedience. Leo had no thought of doing otherwise than his mother bade him. He dropped the ball, relinquished the game with a sigh, and with a word of explanation to his comrades was off.

Home was a half-mile away; slowly he traversed the road over which he had sped a few minutes before. It had never seemed so long. As he drew near the house he saw his mother standing by the big table stirring gingerbread. She looked up with a smile, a kind, cheery smile, that had nothing in it to put a boy who was on the verge of crossness still more out of humor.

"Oh, yes," she said, gently; "you left your coat on the floor of your room, and I thought it would be better for you to come home and hang it up."

It was said so quietly as if it were a most natural thing to ask him to take a mile to put his coat in its proper place.

Leo sped upstairs. His room was in perfect order except that the coat was lying just where he had thrown it.

This was not the first offense of a like nature. Oh, no, many were the reprimands he had received for tossing aside his garments and leaving them where they chanced to fall. He had always pleaded, "I didn't think!" or "I forgot!" Then it would slip his mind until he was caught in a similar error. Now he hung his coat in the closet and then he went slowly downstairs.

"Yes," she said pleasantly, "that is all." He turned to go.

"Wait a minute," she called. "Here is a hot ginger-cake for you. It will taste good on your way back."—Publisher Unknown.

HOW JOHN AND JULIA HELPED

John and Julia were hurrying along under the old umbrella to get to Sunday School, but they were not as happy as usual. They loved the school and dear Miss Eleanor, their nice teacher, but today was to be the gift day for the school, and they had nothing to give. Other children had been talking about money and outgrowing clothes, and toys and books for the poor family that needed help so much since their house had burned down, but at home John and Julia could find nothing to take, because their mother was poor and had to work very hard to take care of her little ones.

"Let's sit back in a corner so nobody will know we didn't have anything to give," said Julia.

"Let's" said John. "Maybe nobody will know we are there."

"Mother cried because she had nothing to give us, but she said maybe we'd help by going," said Julia.

John was having a struggle with the old umbrella, and could not answer until the gust of wind had gone sweeping up the street. "I don't see how it would help by just being there," he panted. "That won't get the poor family anything to eat or to wear."

"I don't either, but mother knows lots of things that we don't. Let's hurry or we'll be late."

And what do you think happened? Mr. Brown who seldom came to Sunday School, saw the children going past in the rain, and he said to Mrs. Brown that if two children could go through a windstorm he could go too, so he put on his big rain coat and started out at once. When he got to the Sunday School and heard about the poor family he took a new ten dollar bill from his pocket book and put it with the other gifts.

"This is really not a gift," he said, as he put it on the plate. "I knew nothing about the poor family and their need, as I have been out of town for several weeks. I had not intended to come to church this morning, but when I saw John and Julia Moore going bravely through the storm I got ready at once. A good example like that counts, and this is really their gift."

Everybody looked at John and Julia, and the little girl whispered to her brother: "Mother did know! It helped to come even if we had nothing to bring."—Sunshine for Little People.

April 26: THE UNMET NEEDS OF THE WORLD

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Need of Christ. Romans 1:14-16.

Tuesday—Need of Missionaries. Matthew 9:35-38.

Wednesday—Need of Wisdom. Proverbs
1:7-9, 20-23.

Thursday—Need of Healing. Luke 9:10, 11.

Friday—Need of Power. 2 Pet. 1:1-7.

Saturday—Need of Vision. Acts 2:14-18.

Suggestion for the Leader

For the blackboard:

N-ever did the world need Christ more.

Everywhere there is spiritual poverty.

Everybody is bored by materialism.

Do something for somebody today.

It is easy to wash from dishes the particles which defile them but it is not so easy to cleanse the life which has been soiled. The process is a never-ending one. A cabinet maker may finish an article of furniture and set it aside with great satisfaction but the builder of a life will never find his work finished or ended. Day by day he is building character.

The pioneer for Christ always has new fields to conquer. His task is never finished. Jesus set an ideal so high that the world will ever be striving toward it. He declared through His experience that it was the duty of every one to realize his place in leading others onward toward this goal. His gospel is based on the necessity of having a need so high that it can never be completely fulfilled in this life.

For Discussion

1. What are some of the needs of our society?

2. What are some of the needs of our town, community in social welfare, politics, business and religion?

3. What can we do as a society to help supply these needs?

4. Does the world still need missionaries? Why has there been a decrease in the giving for missionary work in the last few years? Is the need gone?

5. The natives of many lands are telling us that they need the Christ, but they do not need Western culture, civilization, economic theory and religion. What do they mean? What is their need?

6. What is the chief need of every life and how may it be supplied?

"The need of today is the challenge of Joaquin Miller's 'Columbus':"

What shall I say, Brave Admiral, say,

If we sight naught but seas at dawn?

Why you shall say at the break of day,

Sail on! Sail on! Sail on! and on!

HIGH POINT COLLEGE NEWS

The undefeated High Point college debaters are in Atlanta this week to try for the All-South honors. The two teams of the college have won every debate this year, and are therefore the champions of North Carolina, and stand a fine chance of winning in Atlanta.

The debating season just closed makes the fifth for this college. In these five years her representatives have participated in twenty-seven debates, and have lost only five.

The oratorical contestant was not as successful this year as the debaters. We lost the contest this year, but we take consolation in the fact that we have won more of the contests in the last five years than any other college in the association. High Point has won two of the five contests.

The choir, glee club, and orchestra gave an evening's program at the Graham high school, last Monday evening, under the sponsorship of the Parent-Teachers association of that school. It was said by those who accompanied these young artists that this was the best recital they have given this year. There was a fine display of real musical talent in the group, and wonderful training. The audience of Graham was very appreciative and complimentary in their remarks.

The college choir will provide the music at the services one day of the Denominational Convention in Washington in May. The other two days the music will be provided by the students of Western Maryland and Adrian colleges.

High Point college is putting on a half-hour program each Monday noon from 12:00 to 12:30 over radio station WBIG, Greensboro. This period is known as the High Point college half-hour. Each every other program is musical. The other programs have some music, but some of the time is given to an address by one of the college professors. Last Monday Professor McCannless gave an address on astronomy, which proved to be a most interesting discussion, judging from the comments which have come to the college since. We appreciate comments, of whatever nature, from those who hear these programs.

ORANGE CHARGE ANNOUNCEMENTS

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Glen Raven.—Even though Easter Sunday was a very disagreeable day, with cold rain, three enjoyable services were held at our church.

Beginning at 5:30 o'clock Sunday morning, inspiring and beautiful hymns were played on the piano by Miss Frances Pritchett, and the congregation singing. This created an atmosphere of the Easter spirit. Near 6 o'clock a pageant, which was very suitable for the occasion, was given by members of the Christian Endeavor society.

The 11 o'clock sermon, preached by our splendid pastor, Rev. Mr. Shelton, on "The Cross," was very fitting for an Easter service and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

At 6:30 o'clock another interesting program was given by Christian Endeavor society, subject "Easter," with Miss Frances Pritchett, of High Point college, presiding.

The Ladies' Aid and auxiliary may be small but they are like "Busy Bees," always working and doing their part. Two weeks ago they gave a very successful supper at the church and will use the proceeds for a good cause.

REPORTER

Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—Rev. C. G. Isley filled his appointment Sunday morning, bringing to us a wonderful message on, "The Christian and His Service."

Despite the bad weather yesterday, we had an increase of two over our last year's attendance.

The work on the new church is progressing nicely. We were able to go to our Sunday school rooms the fifth Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Isley will be unable to be with us the third Sunday afternoon, as he will be engaged in a revival at Greensboro. Mr. Whitlow, a ministerial student will fill the appointment. Dr. A. E. Braunock of Lexington will also be with us and teach the adult class. We urge that all our members come out and hear their splendid messages.

The friends of Miss Robena Waitmon will be sorry to learn that she has entered the Presbyterian hospital at Charlotte, N. C., for treatment.

ZULA FRITTS, Reporter.

Spring Church Charge.—The second quarterly conference will meet at Spring church on Friday, April 24, at 3:30 p. m.

A full quarterly conference is much needed to do the work. Our Master would have us all to be faithful in doing to extend His Kingdom. So come, and take part in a good cause.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Spring Church, Spring Church Charge.—Yesterday being time for our Communion Service, Brother Lowdermilk preached from the 26th chapter, 26 to 28 verses of St. Matthew. He gave us several reasons why we should partake of the Lord's Supper. If there was any one present who was not in the habit of communing they would commune after listening to this sermon, I think.

We were very glad to have Mrs. Lowdermilk worship with us yesterday, also to have her visit in our homes last week. We are very sorry duty is calling her elsewhere, for we feel that we are missing lots by not having her with us all the time. Hope she can come again soon.

Our parsonage is being repaired and we are planning to get it painted before fall. Our ladies are busy trying to raise money for this purpose. The Ladies' Aid will meet Thursday of this week with Mrs. H. E. Vassar.

Notwithstanding the bad weather, we had a good crowd out to our Easter services. The children did well and we realized a good offering, which will go toward our G. C. B. We are grateful to Mr. Temana Hart, of Pleasant Hill, for a violin solo.

We are glad that Mr. Leon Tucker decided to bring with him a new member for our Sunday school. Should all our boys do this our school would grow fast. Mrs. Tucker will help us lots in our singing, as she sings well.

We are very sorry that Mrs. Rosa Crewe of Pleasant Hill is ill, hope she will soon be well.

We will have a meeting at Spring church on Monday afternoon, April 20th at 3:30 o'clock, for the purpose of making out a program which will be on the fifth Sunday in May.

REPORTER.

Moriah.—Our Sunday school attendance is very good for the bad weather.

Sunday morning, April 5, the Easter program was given; the children carried out their parts wonderfully. We had a good attendance; several visitors were present.

The C. E. has opened up with a new enthusiasm. Our pastor has put on a drive that will last about six weeks. This has created much interest among the young people, also the older ones. We are very thankful to him.

The Missionary society met with Mrs. E. P. Sharpe last Thursday afternoon with a good attendance.

We were very glad to have Mrs. Aubrey Ransour with us in the meeting.

REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—Easter services have been held at three of the churches, Eland, Hebron, and Chestnut Ridge. These services were helpful and instructive. We thank all who had any part in these services.

On Sunday, April 5th, funeral services were conducted for the three and one-half months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Fawcette. These services conducted by the writer at Chestnut Ridge church.

Our prayers and sympathy are with these parents and relatives in their sorrow.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Fairview Church, Anderson Charge.—A large number was on time for Sunday school April 12. Mr. T. B. Nalley had promised to put into the collection one cent for each one present at 10:15. One hundred and seven were present, therefore the collection which was sent to the Children's Home, was very good.

The Christian Endeavor had its first regular meeting last Sunday evening. A large crowd was present and a good program was carried out. The young people are interested and it is hoped that much good may be accomplished through this organization. The officers are as follows: President, Miss Montez Henderson; vice-president, Miss Helen Connelly; secretary, Miss Luich Freeman; corresponding secretary, Miss Mildred Nalley, and treasurer, Mr. Tommie Nalley.

At 8 o'clock, April 19, at Fairview church there will be a union service for the churches of the community. The topic for discussion is "How Can Churches Work Together?"

The Ladies' Aid society will meet at the home of Mrs. J. C. Henderson next Friday afternoon, April 17, at three o'clock. All members are urged to be present since some important business is to be attended to.

REPORTER.

Sandy Ridge, Kernersville Charge.—We are still trying to carry the good work along. Our pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, was with us Sunday and preached a very inspiring sermon on the Resurrection of Christ. Those who did not come out to hear him missed a lot. We were thankful that Mrs. Reed was able to come with him.

Our second quarterly conference will be held at Sandy Ridge next Saturday, April 19. We hope all that can will be present.

Our Sunday school is doing fine. We have averaged about 70 all through the winter months, and now that spring has arrived we hope that we will have 100 or more every Sunday.

The Ladies' Aid society met with Mrs. J. G. Pegg last Saturday. The society is getting up a name quilt. Those that had their square-done brought them. We received $8.60 on it. After the meeting Mrs. Pegg served refreshments. The Ladies' Aid is planning to make some improvements in the church—build a large rostrum for one thing, and we sure do need a larger one.

MRS. FRANCES HOLT, Reporter.

Gray's Chapel, Randolph Circuit.—Our pastor, Brother Suits, was with us again Sunday bringing another of his good and helpful sermons. His subject was, "Spiritual Citizenship."

Our Sunday school was glad to have with us Sunday Mr. D. M. Weatherly of Franklinville. He gave a very interesting talk on the Sunday school lesson, "The Prodigal Son."

On account of the weather we failed to give the Easter pageant which we had planned for Easter night.

On the first Sunday morning in May the baccalaureate sermon of Gray's Chapel school will be preached in the school auditorium by Rev. O. I. Hinson, pastor of Calvary church, Durham, N. C.

Mrs. John Walker, one of our faithful members, is seriously ill. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

On the fourth Sunday in May our annual memorial services will be held. Also we are planning on celebrating the one-hundredth anniversary of the church and we invite every one and especially the former pastors and members to be present.

The Providence township Sunday school convention will be held at this church the fifth Sunday in May.

EDITH LINEBERRY, Reporter.

Cleveland Charge.—One of the most helpful rallies held in the 12th district for some time was held at Hebron church on the fifth Sunday in March. Prof. Paul S. Kennett spoke in the interest of High Point college. Mrs. Frank Glenn spoke in the interest of the Leadership Training school that we hope to have at Fallston this year. Mrs. Edna Dellinger Houser spoke in the interest of the Woman's auxiliary. Rev. J. D. Morris spoke in the interest of developing church leadership. Rev. J. M. Morgan spoke in the interest of Evangelism. It was a pleasure to have Rev. E. A. Bingham and family with us for this occasion. Brother Bingham participated in the program.

The sermons delivered during the session by Revs. L. S. Helm and J. D. Cranford were helpful and well received. Another feature of the program that was of special interest to all was the Christian Endeavor program which was rendered so effectively Sunday evening at 6:30 by Friendship C. E. society.

We should not forget to mention the good singing which was a special feature throughout the session. The Simmons quartet of Hickory, and the Hebron quartet sang a number of special selections.

Easter

Easter was observed at Oak Grove on Sunday night with a short service by the Sunday school. Owing to the rain the congregation was small. Easter offering was taken at all the churches on the charge. Our second quarterly conference will be held on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in April. Our people here on this charge keep up the custom of having a sermon at 11 o'clock. Dinner in picnic style and the business of the quarterly conference in the afternoon. I think this is fine. We have good congregations too. Bro. John P. Lucas, an aged citizen of Oak Grove community, was buried at Oak Grove church on Saturday, April 4th, at 3 p. m. He was a member of Palm Tree M. E. church. His age was 82 years and six months. The service was held by his pastor, Rev. E. E. Snow, assisted by the writer. While he was not a member of our church he was a regular attendant for a number of years.

C. E. RIDGE.

Davidson Charge.—We have not reported in so long that we hardly know where to begin. During the month of February and the first Sunday in March we were glad to have with us one Sunday each Professors Angel, Lane, and Miss Hanner. These are all graduates of High Point college and teaching in our Denton high school. They told our people about High Point college in a way that did credit to themselves and to our college. We people responded with some cash and others promised to pay later. We thank these High Point graduates for coming and helping us out. We also thank those who paid and hope many others will do likewise.

Pleasant Grove church gave an Easter exercise Saturday night before Easter. They used the program gotten out by our board. The program was well rendered and we believe enjoyed by all present. It rained so much Sunday night on Easter day, that Lineberry church decided to put off their Easter play until the following Tuesday night. All the characters in the play did their parts well. It was an impressive service. We thank each one who helped to make this service possible.

The second quarterly conference of Davidson charge was held at Pleasant Grove church on Saturday afternoon April 11. B. K. Taylor, and Grady Surratt were nominated for delegate to the next annual conference. The conference voted to give Lineberry and Pleasant Grove each a night preaching appointment. They also gave the pastor the authority to have a cellar dug under the parsonage. We thank these good people for their helpfulness and fine co-operation.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Thomasville.—We have been holding our regular services as usual. We cannot help being glad because of our large increase in attendance, and we continue to tell about it. The contest ended on Easter Sunday with the Men's Bible class a few miles ahead of the Young Men's class. Although the weather was rough the contestants worked hard and gained about seventy new members. The total attendance was 378. Now that contest is over our purpose is to keep those interested in the church and get many more. I, the reporter, have heard comments that if we could once get the people to come to church and to stay for the preaching service, they would enjoy the pastor's message and be glad to come again.

At our service on Easter morning we were glad to have six new members unite with our church. An invitation was also given for those who wanted to become Christian or to renew their stand for Christ; although there were none who took this stand, we were all caused to think more seriously about our spiritual condition. At 7:30 p. m. the Easter exercises were given very successfully and enjoyed by all present. The offering for missions amounted to $15.00.

Last Sunday pictures were taken of the two large classes which took part in the contest. In addition to this, pictures were taken of the Sunday school as a whole. But some left before the pictures were taken.

We are looking forward to next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock when we are expecting to hear the Rev. G. I. Humphreys, president of High Point college preach. We feel sure that we have have a treat in store for us and we trust that we may have a large crowd to hear him.

On account of our pastor's fine work and messages we are looking forward to a bright future for our church.

ISMAEL DORSETT, Reporter.

Shady Grove Church.—We, the members of Shady Grove church, wish to extend our sympathy to our former pastor, Rev. Taft White, and parents in the death of their brother and son, Gilmer White.

Many times we do not understand just why things are so. But we must remember God does all things for the best.

REPORTER.

South Winston.—Sunday morning our attendance was much better than usual. It has been off some during the winter season, but it is coming back to the average fast. We are trying to get our attendance higher than ever before.

Rev. R. S. Troxler delivered an inspiring sermon to us Sunday night, his subject being: "Covetousness." It was greatly enjoyed by all.

The monthly meeting of the Young People's class met Tuesday night, April 7. Splendid reports were given by the various committees, this best report being given by the sick committee. It was decided that we would try to raise as much money as possible for the building of the new church. The progress has been very slow as the funds have gotten rather low, but we are not quitting, we intend to fight on, and by keeping faith in Christ, by the faithful work of our pastor, and by the co-operation of all we are going to reach our goal.

MABEL BOWERS, Reporter.

English Street Church.—We were very much pleased with the increase in our Sunday school attendance the past Sunday, and also the preaching service. A duet was rendered by Miss Ruth Bonkemeyer and Mr. Francis Gibbs.

The C. E. society held its regular business meeting and social at the home of the Misses Caudle on Monday evening, April 13. A record attendance was shown with twenty-eight present, including visitors.

The Ladies' Aid and Brotherhood held a joint meeting on Tuesday night, April 14, with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lee at their home on Carr St. At this time members of the C. E. entertained those present with a negro dialogue which proved to be a great success.

We are expecting Mr. Taylor to be with us on Wednesday night at the prayer service.

Midway, Haw River.—Owing to the rain and muddy roads Easter Sunday night the church was only about half full. The Easter program including the pageant, "The Resurrection Way," was given. It was well done, much credit is due to Mrs. John Bartee and Mrs. Tom Butler, being assisted by the teachers of Midway school. Collection was $15.75.

The rainy Sunday in March hurt our average attendance at S. S., though some are faithful and did not miss a Sunday. Our pastor filled his appointments yesterday afternoon with a good sermon. A good congregation was present. We were glad to welcome quite a number of visitors.

C. E. was conducted last night by Miss Margaret Bartee.

Our revival services will begin the third Sunday night in June. The pastor will do the preaching. Pray for us.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Mount Lebanon, Randleman.—Easter Sunday was a busy day at Mount Lebanon.

The Easter sunrise prayer meeting was well attended, despite the downpour of rain. A splendid service was held. Attendance at Sunday school was 105 with a collection of something over $10.00.

At the 11 o'clock hour the children were presented in a program of songs and recitations. Each child did remarkably well.

At the last quarterly conference which was held at Mount Lebanon, Mr. E. L. Hayes of New Salem and Mount Lebanon, Randleman, and Mr. Fred Allred of Worthville, were nominated for delegates to the annual conference.

On last Sunday morning, Miss Esther Ross of Asheboro, brought us information about the Standard Leadership Training school which will be held in the M. P. church in Asheboro, commencing April 23 and continuing for five nights.

To my knowledge, last year was the first year we have had an opportunity like this presented to us. No one attended from our church. This year we should not pass it up so lightly. I believe that we should take advantage, if possible, of every opportunity to better prepare ourselves for the work that we are trying to do. And then, all of us, after a time, are inclined to stay in a rut. All of us become discouraged when we fail to see the desired results of our efforts. We need inspiration, we need to be filled with a keen desire to press onward and upward, to do bigger and better things in a bigger and better way.

I know of nothing that will help to accomplish all this more than this very school of which I am trying to tell you. I believe that it will not only teach us how to do things, but that it will fill us with zeal and inspiration to do them.

I hope that our pastor and every Sunday school official and all others who possibly can, will arrange to attend this school.

REPORTER.

Tabernacle Church.—Sunday services were very good indeed. The attendance of both Sunday school and church was fair. Mr. Isley gave us a wonderful sermon. Daniel 6:10 "Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house, and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day and prayed, and gave thanks before God, as he did aforetime."

The fifth Sunday in March Brother Fillmore McCulloch preached for us.

Next Sunday at 3 o'clock Miss Elizabeth Hanner of Julian will speak to us on the subject "High Point College." We hope to have a large crowd present to hear Miss Hanner.

April was set aside as college month. Last Sunday cards were passed around and pledges to the amount of $42.50 were subscribed. Next Sunday we hope to raise the full amount.

On the fourth Sunday Mr. Isley will preach especially to the older members of our church and community.

We are having quite a lot of sickness. Mr. Arthur Causey's two youngest sons have pneumonia. Mrs. Bell Hackett, mother of Mrs. Bill Layton has had a stroke of paralysis.

Miss Violet Hanner who has been working in Raleigh was called home on account of the illness of her mother, Mrs. Chas. Hanner.

Mrs. Vance Garrett has pneumonia at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dock Neese.

We are wishing for all of the sick members a speedy recovery.

Wedding bells have been ringing, two of our Tabernacle girls having married, Miss Flossie Sizemore and Miss Gladys Fields.

Miss Arleen and Louise Hanner of Asheville, N. C., who are in school at the North Carolina college, were the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coble.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. J. P. SHORE, Reporter.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—Rev. P. E. Bingham brought before us Sunday morning a wonderful message. "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that I will seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in His temple."

Before this a song was sung, "We Need Thee Every Hour." Wonder if we think of this enough, we need Thee every hour more than we think.

Our Sunday school is getting along as well as usual.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—As yesterday was such a good day for us, I would like to write a few lines again this week. Our Sunday school attendance yesterday was the largest we can find on record of ever being at this church. And we are to have a singing here the fourth Sunday night of this month. Everybody is invited.

Some in the community are sick; we ask the prayers of the Christian people for them.

MRS. JEWELL HARRISON, Reporter.

pair teddies. 319 Polk street, Asheboro, name not given 2 little dresses.

We are thankful for so good a report this week.

The check from the Woman's auxiliary and the check from the Duke Endowment together with your offerings enabled us to pay good amounts on outstanding bills. We had great joy last Thursday in presenting checks to people who have trusted us so long. Our joy would have been more complete had we been able to pay all bills completely.

We received $775.00 more from the Duke Endowment this time than at any previous time. One of their men came and spent a day with us in February going over our books and asking many questions about our work. He seemed well pleased with the work as is reflected in the check. He asked this question, "Does the annual contribution from the Duke Endowment encourage your people to give more for the support of orphan children, or do they have a tendency to contribute less because of this gift?" How would you have answered him?

A Series of Institutes

Through the Tri-State Orphanage association, the Duke Endowment is sponsoring a series of institutes for orphanage workers through North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. They are asking all orphanage workers who possibly can to attend. The one for this section is to be held in Greensboro April 20 to 30, giving 6 hours of work each day except Saturday and Sunday.

An Easter Egg Hunt

Dr. S. S. Coe and Mrs. E. L. Douglas came out last Thursday as representatives of the Civitan club of High Point and gave our children a very delightful egg hunt, and gave several prizes to those children finding the largest number of eggs. They were rained out on Easter Monday so came the first day they could thereafter. We thank them for this happy evening.

And we thank everybody who is helping to make it possible for us to carry on in the interests of these dear children.

May God bless you every one.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Wilson

Hugh P. Wilson, well-known farmer of the Drewery community, and a faithful member of New Hope church, was called to his reward Saturday, January 31, 1931. Mr. Wilson died after an attack of influenza which went into pneumonia. His death, after only one week of illness, came as a shock to the family and his many friends.

In his passing we have lost a true friend, a faithful church worker and a loving husband. He was one of New Hope's most faithful members and he will be greatly missed as we meet to worship in that church.

Mr. Wilson is survived by his widow, Mrs. Addie Wilson, Drewery; three sisters, Mrs. W. W. Wilson, Mrs. Addie Buchanan, Drewery; and Mrs. Dora Smith, Knoxville, Tenn.; two brothers, Lee Wilson of Williamsboro, and Buddie Wilson of Henderson and a number of nieces and nephews and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held at the church at 2:30 Monday, February 2, in charge of his pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter of the Henderson M. P. church; Rev. P. D. Woodall, pastor of Middleburg M. E. churches, and Rev. J. W. Kennison, pastor of a group of rural Presbyterian churches, and Rev. E. R. Nelson, pastor of a group of Baptist churches near Henderson. Interment was in the church cemetery.

Hight

On Saturday, March 14th, about midnight, at the Duke hospital in Durham, Brother W. C. Hight suddenly and quietly passed from labor to reward. He had gone to the hospital for treatment, and although he had been in declining health for some time, his sudden going came as a distinct shock to his family and friends.

Brother Hight would have been 55 years old on the eighth day of next May. He was born and reared in Vance county and came to Henderson some 30 years ago. He was one of Henderson's largest merchants and leading citizens. He transferred his membership from Antioch Methodist Protestant church to First church, Henderson several years ago and was a faithful member and regular attendant as long as health permitted. At the time of his death he was a member of the Board of Trustees.

The deceased is survived by his widow and nine children, five sons and four daughters as follows: W. B., H. C., H. W., Milton and Allison (Hight); Mrs. Edward F. Loughlin, Misses Helen, Elizabeth, and Frances Hight, all of Henderson. One brother, J. E. Hight, of Henderson and two sisters, Miss Etta Hight, Henderson, and Mrs. J. P. Woodlief of High Point, also survive.

The funeral was conducted from the home Monday afternoon, March 16th, by the writer and Rev. I. W. Hughes, Rector of Holy Innocents Episcopal church. The masons assisted in the service at the grave in Elmwood cemetery. The largest number of people the writer has ever seen gather for a home funeral was present at the service. The flowers were numerous and beautiful.

Brother Hight will be very greatly missed not only by his family and church but by the community at large. He had numerous friends throughout this section of the state, by whom he was held in high esteem.

May God richly bless his family and all who so deeply feel the loss of his going.

R. A. HUNTER, Pastor.

Nuckles

W. T. Nuckles was born January 25, 1883, and departed this life April 7, 1931. His age was 48 years, two months and 12 days. He was the son of Mrs. J. T. Nuckles, his father having died in 1915. He was raised near Dabney where he grew into manhood. In 1906 he was happily married to Miss Lessie Harris, to this union were born three children, two having died in infancy.

In later years he bought a little farm where he settled down to begin real work of his own. In 1919, he moved to Henderson where he found work with the Ladis Grocery Co., where he remained until about four years ago, when he found employment with the furniture company, where he worked until the end.

He is survived by his wife and one son, Alvin H. Nuckles. He also leaves his mother, two brothers, C. H. Nuckles, and G. E. Nuckles all of Dabney, and one sister, Mrs. Sam Hicks, of Cokesbury.

Funeral services were held at his home Wednesday afternoon, April 8, 1931, at 3:00 o'clock, conducted by his pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter, assisted by Rev. J. W. Braxton of Durham. The body was laid to rest in Harris Chapel cemetery under a beautiful mound of flowers to await the Resurrection morning.

Some day the silver cord will break,

Some day our journey will end.

But we will meet them face to face,

Our loved ones, Saviour, and friend.

MRS. G. E. NUCKLES.

Holt

As the first rays of dawn were spreading over the eastern horizon on March 11, 1931, the Lord gently whispered, "It is enough," and ended the long suffering of Mrs. Ellen Holt as He bore her soul away to that realm where there is no suffering.

She was born September 15, 1845. In early life she joined Rock Creek Methodist Protestant church and remained a faithful member until the end. Seldom did she miss service while able to attend.

In 1867 she and Oliver D. Holt, who preceded her in death about twenty years, were joined in Holy wedlock, and into their keeping given ten children, six of whom survive, also twenty grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

About three years ago her health failed and since she has been confined to her bed, but through all the pain, suffering and discomfort, that must be borne by one thus afflicted, she was always cheerful and uncomplaining.

No amount of eulogizing can portray the beautiful Christian character of this loving wife, mother and grandmother, as did her daily walk in life to those who knew and loved her.

Although we wish her stay among us might have been prolonged, yet God knows best and we would not recall her to her pain and sickness for she has now attained the goal for which she strived so long and well.

Grandmother, we shall miss you

As o'er life's path we tread,
Your face on earth we'll see no more
Your soul to heaven has fled.

Faithful in life you bore the cross,

Patiently endured the pain,
Why should we weep? For sure our loss
Is your eternal gain.

A Granddaughter.

Butts

There was a great dark cloud of sorrow swept the community, when a death angel visited in the home and took Mrs. Rachel Green Butts, near Hawkin's Chapel, March 3, 1931. She was born February 26, 1897.

In April, 1917, she was united in marriage to Mr. Bert Butts who departed this life 1919, leaving her with an infant son, Bert Jr., which she reared to be 12 years old, a real attractive little boy.

She was ever ready to lend a helping hand when sickness and sorrow abounded.

She was a member of Quankie Baptist church.

The funeral was held Thursday, March 5, at Hawkin's Chapel church. The services were conducted by Rev. J. E. Kirk, of Rosemary Baptist church, assisted by Rev. P. E. Bingham of Hawkin's Chapel.

She leaves a heartbroken mother and sisters and brother. Rachel leaves also to mourn her going a host of relatives and friends far and near.

The body was laid to rest in the Green's cemetery close to the body of her father, under a mound of beautiful flowers.

MRS. C. H. HAWKINS.

Hood

(In memory of our dear husband and daddy, J. W. Hood, who died February 11, 1930.)

Someone may have forgotten you as on earth
you are no more,

But in memory you are with us as you always were before.

Our husband and daddy, the Savior called you home.

And placed you with His angel band to sing to Him around His throne.

Keep him, Jesus, in Thy keeping until we read the heavenly sign.

Then O Master let us have him as we did before.

Our darling is sleeping; no care is on his brow.

Oh! blame us not for grieving for we do not have you now.

We are very lonesome without you, Oh! the days seem weary and long.

But we are praying to meet you and join in singing the heavenly song.

His Devoted Wife and Daughter.

HERE AND THERE

SIN

(Inspired by one of J. D. Williams' sermons)

If it had been a crimson rose—
Or e'en a flower of pink
I should have looked and passed it by,
Nor rued the look, I think.

Today the room is with me yet
Embalmed in memory.
For Sin preserves her evils well,
To slave the souls born free.

There were the trinkets on the desk,
Pencils and crayons, too;
I did not think of stealing these—
As some bad children do.

For stealing was to me a crime,
A rogue I did detest.
I was content with what was mine,
Nor coveted the rest!

Until I saw those pure white flowers
On teacher's desk, that day;
Hyacinths that tantalized my breath
And made my child heart sway.

There were no flowers out of doors—
Just wintry snow and rain,
And I was weak with beauty-crave
For touch of flowers again.

And they were just the loveliest flowers,
So white, perhaps the blame
(O still the weakling, human I Would some excuses frame).

I looked upon the flowers all morn.
And when our recess came
I slipped right back into the room,
Another did the same.

I did not see the other girl
Hiding the desk behind—
With pure, white hyacinths all intent,
My eyes to else were blind.

A tip-toe standing, first I looked,
Then drank their fragrance in;
To touch the sicken cups of white
So gently seemed no sin.

"O for one little fragrant cup,
One cup as white as snow!"
Sighed I. And then Sin entered in,
"Take one! No one will know!"

I looked; I coveted; I took;
So little seemed the Sin.
The bars of my child-heart fell down
And all of Hell trooped in.

The flower was plucked; the other child
Saw it. So did my Lord.
I bribed her with a fairy-book,
She never said a word.

But O the days of hellish fear,
Suspense and grief and pain.
God's punishment to one we child
Lest it should sin again.

And strange to say, the flower once plucked—
The flower I like to blame,

Did never look, nor ever feel,
Nor even smell the same.
—Nila Garnette Amick.

HE KNOWS IT ALL

He will not learn
A single thing—
He knows it all.
The best advice
That you can bring—
He knows it all.
He still pursues
His stubborn way,
Heedless of
What others say;
(Going more
And more astray—
He knows it all.

Not a single hint
He'll take—
He knows it all.
No impression
Can you make—
He knows it all.
Try to show him
He is wrong,
He will argue
Loud and long.
Self-conceit in him
Is strong—
He knows it all.

Speak of travel
Books or snobs—
He knows it all.
Money, politics,
Or probs—
He knows it all.
Cogent reasons
You may bring,
To fixed habits
He will cling,
You can't teach him
One new thing—

HE KNOWS IT ALL!
—Grenville Kleiser.

BACK AGAIN

To go back to a place again is no sin,
If you have been invited by the best of men.
Here we went, we big three,
All set for the Haw River spree.
And we rode with the pastor of Glen-Haw,
For he likes oysters, even though they're raw.
Yet Bethea and the other big wag,
Better keep quiet, for they can't brag.

Again we arrived in Haw River.
In A. D.'s big old "shiver."
This time it was a fish supper
With Tom Coble as the chief butler;
But to this job he was sent
By Williamson, the president.

Well, the boys gave us a rounder,
For our supper they served us flounder.
And for one got my bait,
Even though the feed was late.
Now, you can take this for a joke,
For I was there just half broke.

Listen! on the way the driver did say
He hoped to make a man of me and Bethea.
Now if this is the way he is to begin,
He has caused us both to commit a great sin.
Anyway it was worth the trip
For it was a fine fellowship.

And the S. S. Baracas did work very hard
To entertain the Phils, the Thomps, and the Bullards.

This was a great occasion for the trio-set,
And if they collect bills we are in debt,
With talk, and prayer, this was the conclusion
With much to eat and talk in profusion.
Now what say, am I not some poet,
Even though I don't show it.

So here is a hip, hip! hurrah!
For the folks who live on the Haw.

This was Easter Monday night,
An hour before candle light.

—J. C. A.

VALOR

God of men who fail
And face the foe of fear,
Help every man of us
Bravely to persevere.
God of men who trust
When gloomy clouds obscure,
Help every man of us
Bravely to endure.

—Grenville Kleiser.

ANOTHER CALIFORNIAN

Stranger "Is this a healthful town?"

Western Ranger—"Sure is. When I come here I couldn't say a word; didn't have a hair on my head; didn't have enough strength in my legs to walk across the floor. Why, I had to be lifted from my bed."

Stranger—"That's remarkable. How long have you been here?"

Ranger—"Oh, I was born here, stranger."

—Brother J. W. Bobbitt has moved back to Cove City for the sake of his health. We trust he will realize his expected improvement.

—It was announced yesterday that Spain has become a republic, King Alfonso abdicating.

—Mrs. J. W. Teague whose illness we noted last week lingered on to Sunday night when she quietly passed into the sleep of death.
Her sons had come, Oscar from South Carolina,
Samuel from Florida, her daughter, Bessie
Reed and her grandson, Julian Underwood from Maryland. She was in the home of her son Ernest in the suburbs of Greensboro.
The funeral was held on Monday afternoon by Rev. R. J. Tamblin and Rev. R. C. Stubbs, and was attended by a large number of friends. Mrs. Teague had reached the age of 83 years. She was the daughter of John P. Coe and a descendant of the Rev. Mr. Coe who took a leading part in the reform movement which resulted in the establishment of the Methodist Protestant church. Rev. S. W.
Coe of the Maryland Conference is her brother. The burial was at Asheboro where her husband was interred and where she spent many years of her life. She was a devoted mother and children will bless her memory.

—Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of President Roosevelt, and Speaker of the House of Representatives, died of pneumonia last week in Aiken, S. C., and was taken to Cincinnati for burial.

WESTERN PASTOR'S FEDERATION

About thirteen of the pastors from the Western Federation met in First M. P. church, Charlotte, N. C., on April 13. We were pleased to have with us Dr. Humphreys, president of High Point college, who brought us an inspirational address at the morning hour. This address was followed by a general discussion on the need of a deeper consecration to meet the needs of the present age. We were glad to have with us Rev. and Mrs. N. G. Bethen, and Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Gerringer from the central district. These two brethren made some helpful remarks that closed the morning session.

The ladies of the church served a very appetizing lunch in the dining room of the parsonage. We thank them very much.

Dr. Humphreys conducted half an hour devotional service at the beginning of the afternoon session. The president, G. H. Hendry, then called for the report of the nominating committee which recommended that R. M. Andrews be elected president and E. A. Bingham secretary. The report was adopted. After a general discussion on the Washington Conference and the High Point college, the conference closed to meet again in July at the place chosen by the president. We were sorry to hear that Mrs. Taylor fell and broke her arm and that Dr. S. W. Taylor could not be with us in the meeting. We pray for her speedy recovery.

E. A. BINGHAM, Secretary.

Three Jewish women in Berlin, formerly wealthy, were unable to meet their financial obligations. They shut themselves up in a room, and turned on the gas. A very poor way of satisfying their creditors.

NUMBER 26

Mothers' Day

A sacred day is Mothers' Day!
How can we truly keep it holy?
We must review with gratitude
That life of love so meek and lowly.

A new appraisalment must we make
Of sacrifice and service free,
All rendered by our noble mothers
To make life blest for you and me.

Praise God Who gave us loving mothers,
Revealers of His greater love:
In them we see as through a glass
Bright angels sent from God above.

The Case of Zaccheus

Luke's story of Zaccheus is very brief. We would gladly know more. We would like to know what effect upon the character of Zaccheus was produced by his contact with Jesus. Did Jesus leave him a changed man in the deepest meaning of the word? Zaccheus' joyful reception of Jesus into his home has been taken as proof that he received Jesus into his heart. But that is straining a conclusion. The joyful reception can be accounted for on other grounds. Many a man would gladly entertain Jesus for a night in his home who would be far from taking Jesus as Lord of his life. Zaccheus was aware that he was despised and hated by his fellow-citizens because of his occupation. It was a great triumph over his neighbors when he was chosen before them as entertainer for the night. The great Prophet of Galilee would bring prestige and confer honor and dignity. It was easy for Zaccheus to rejoice in the high privilege unexpectedly brought to him. The joyful reception does not necessarily imply personal devotion. It does not warrant the conclusion that Zaccheus was already in or not far from the Kingdom of Heaven.

The brief speech of Zaccheus quoted by Luke has been taken as conclusive evidence of a profound stirring in the heart of Zaccheus by his hours of association with Jesus. Zaccheus stood and said to Jesus, "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have wrongfully exacted aught of any man, I restore four-fold." Some have taken this as a new resolution springing out of a changed and purified heart. But is it so? Is not Zaccheus describing the course he is already pursuing rather than a new course he now intends to pursue? Note the tense of the verbs: "I give," "I restore." It seems that Zaccheus is trying to impress on the mind of Jesus what a good fellow he is and has been all the time. He is trying to counteract the effect of the charges that he knows have been preferred against him by his fellow citizens. He is trying to justify himself in the eyes of Jesus. It is true he calls Jesus Lord, but that does not necessarily imply any profound respect. The joyful reception and the speech of Zaccheus taken together do not make a Christian out of him.

But surely, says some one, the plain words of Jesus indicate that Zaccheus was a saved man: Jesus said to him, "Today is salvation come to this house." But did Jesus mean the experience of salvation or simply the offer of salvation? The reason given by Jesus—because he is a son of Abraham—would rather indicate the latter. Jesus said He was not sent save to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Because Zaccheus was one of these he might receive from Jesus announcement of the new Kingdom, proclamation of the way of salvation. We would be greatly surprised if Jesus should say to any man, You are saved because you are a descendant of Abraham. It is not surprising at all to hear him say to some Jew, Because you are a descendant of Abraham salvation is offered you.

However, strong may be our desire to know more of Zaccheus, it seems that we must admit that he passed off the stage without showing evidence that his contact with Jesus made him a Christian. Jesus could not Christianize men in any magical way. He was conditioned by the laws of man's spiritual nature. He doubtless did for Zaccheus what he could. Luke failed to tell more of Zaccheus perhaps because he did not know more. But we must remember that Luke's main purpose was to enable us to know more about Jesus. Zaccheus was mentioned because his story reveals the spirit of Jesus. Luke could not allow sidelights to take the place of the main central light. He does not satisfy us as to the finality of Zaccheus, but he keeps Jesus in view through the changing scenes of His busy life and tragic death, takes up the thread of the story in His resurrection and notes the flashing lights of His earthly presence until He ascends to Heaven to take place at the right hand of God.

Had Zaccheus been a genuine convert to Christianity, we would expect a more hearty expression of approval from Jesus. But Jesus was tactful as well as truthful and made a statement that implied much without giving offense. It may be that he interrupted the man's parade of his own righteousness to say to him by implication—You are not saved, but today the opportunity to be saved comes to you and your family. Doubtless Jesus' words would impress him after Jesus had passed out of sight. And we like to believe that Jesus' visit in the house of Zaccheus ultimately accomplished its purpose.

Luke's story of Zaccheus strongly reveals Jesus as the Friend of sinners, my Friend, your Friend.

AFTER DEATH—WHAT AND WHERE?

By REV. B. F. VAUGHAN, D.D.

This has been the puzzling question of man through the ages. Where are those loved ones who once sat by our side or walked with us by the way? Is that unseen realm in some far-away clime; some distant heavenly body where the light and life of its inhabitants are radiant with "the light that never was on sea or land?" Nay, methinks the vision of the Revelator was more nearly correct, when he described the celestial city as having "no need of the light of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb was the light thereof."

The celebrated Christian philosopher and astronomer, Dr. Thomas Dick, advanced the theory many years ago that the center of the universe, around which suns, worlds, and systems of worlds revolve, was the "abode of the blessed," the home of God's people.

The Nazarene Teacher, in His last discourse with His disciples, said, "In my Father's house are many mansions," or "dwelling-places," or "abodes." The more we try to locate the heavenly home, and think about it as being bounded and defined as a place, the greater does our bewilderment become. Especially is this true when we think in terms of modern science as relates to this wonderful universe in which we live. Our own world, wonderful as it is, with vast continents and great rolling, waving seas, is only a mere speck as compared with the immense heavenly bodies which are found throughout all space.

And when we think of God as Spirit, filling all the great cosmos with His presence, and dwelling in every part of it as the light and life and energizing power of each atom and form of life, as well as the Spirit that uplifts, evolves, purifies, glorifies, and saves, it is a continual revelation to us of the spiritual character of His kingdom. It is spirit that survives after all the agencies which injure, kill, and destroy this mortal life. It rises above and out of all this wreckage of material things and dwells serene and secure in the Father's house. He will gather His own unto Himself. They are His, and "none will ever be able to pluck them out of His hands." Unto the Master who trod earth's stony paths with His disciples, and who can be "touched with a feeling of our infirmities," unto Him is given the power to overcome all things, and He becomes the "Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." And so, "Blessed are they that do His commandments, who are given a right to the tree of life, and an entrance into the city of life."

When death shall set free the spirit that dwelt within this tenement of clay, it rises into the spirit life, time and space can no longer hold it, or place a limit upon it. The laws governing spirit growth and development are then the forces which give it power and freedom, and neither "things present nor things to come" can hinder its upward progress. It is as free as mind to travel to the uttermost star or the most distant parts of the universe, quick as thought; or minister sweetly to some needy and weaker spirit the life-giving power of love, tender sympathy, and helpfulness. It may take to itself an ether body as well, or even far better, adapted to its growth and the fulfillment of its power, as this body has been to accomplish more wonderful work and attainment in this life. Such are the possibilities of the soul's attainments in its unlimited growth throughout the ages that no limit can be placed upon its outreaches toward the infinite One.

The whole universe becomes the home of the spirit set free. It may take its flight into the darkness and cold of space, and yet without fear. With courage it mounts upward, and behold, light shines out of the darkness and all is made radiant with the light of his face as the soul is welcomed into the "house not made with hands," and it enters into "that rest which remaineth to the people of God."

If the great Life Builder can draw the "spark out of the clod," and start it on an upward course that brings it at last into the companionship of saints and sages, the tried and true, the great and good of all the ages, then may we not safely trust that One who is "able to subdue all things unto Himself," and say:

"I know not where His islands lift

Their fronded palms in air;

I only know I cannot drift

Beyond His love and care."

WHAT SORT OF MINISTER DO YOU WANT?

By REV. LUTHER K. LONG

Recently I picked up a book in a library, because the title was suggestive. The book itself was interesting enough; but what seemed to me to be the best part of the volume was the short dedication. This dedication was to a minister who had been helpful to the author. Here are some of its significant sentences:

"He joined men in the fields, and sat down by their workbenches to talk with them about life as it is. He went to bed-sides of pain and to homes where death had brought sorrow, taking with him the hope and the understanding that imparted a benediction of peace.

"He stirred the ambition of youth toward greater usefulness. He opened the way for many to go to college and stimulated many more to seek out their own self-education. The author of this book acknowledges his own deepest gratitude to this soldier of God, this man among men. His eyesight failed him in his last days, but the light of his soul burned brightly. He grew with his faith to the end."

In a religious paper published in Boston, I came across an article by a woman in which she calls attention to the needs of their rural church which is now seeking a pastor. There are various opinions, she says, as to the kind of man they want:

"Mr. A. says, 'We want this time a Fundamentalist.'

"Mr. B. says, 'We want a pastor, not necessarily a great preacher.'

"Mr. C. holds up his hands and says emphatically, 'No more students. We want a man who will come and settle down in our nice parsonage and be one of us.'

"Mrs. D. rejoins, 'But, then, the trouble is we'll get an old man, and, perhaps, we'll want to get rid of him and can't'."

Then this evidently intelligent Laywoman gives expression to some of her own sensible views as to the kind of minister they need in their church:

"As for my choice. It is always hard for me to decide," she says. "I am inclined to like them all and to see their good points. This doubtless comes from the fact that being a minister's daughter, my sympathy goes out to the nervous candidate, no matter how stammering he may be. If only there is sincerity. That to me is the great test of any preacher."

"And so, when we rural folks are struggling for a community school to take the place of our wretched little one-room buildings, I want a minister who will work with us instead of standing aloof and giving his time to preparing stirring sermons on the textile industrial conditions in Lowell and Marion. They no doubt need righting. But what can we on our hill do? We own no textile stock, but the community school conditions are at our very door."

"I long for one who will not only see the social evil in Chicago, but our own gambling joint, within a mile of the church. One, who will strive to interest the foreigners of our outlying farms, as well as urge our help for foreigners across the sea. One, whose sleeve the children pull just to see the good man's smile and whose touch heals by love."

When I am asked to tell what sort of a minister would be best for this or that church, I am inclined to describe him under two captions:

I. The Man Himself.

1. He should be genuine, honest, sincere, deeply religious, and intensely devoted to Jesus Christ.

2. He should have an open, enquiring, seeking mind. As a public speaker and leader of men, and as a representative of God, he deals with thoughts, and problems, and truths—and he should be endowed with those native gifts without which no one may hope to think constructively or to speak with force and conviction.

3. He should be intensely human, easily making helpful contacts with little children and all sorts of people. This quality will lead him into homes where sickness, sin, trouble, and all sorts of problems abound. He will thus become a good shepherd of souls.

4. He should be a good listener and an interesting speaker. Only by listening, reading, receiving, can he have fullness of information and feeling. Only by skill and facility in speaking—this may be cultivated and developed, but the native gift is important—can he give out enrichment to others.

II. The Preparation of the Man

As a rule, the man should have a thorough training in college and theological seminary. I say this, knowing full well that men have gone through both college and seminary, and have become very inferior ministers of the gospel. And men have become good ministers of Jesus Christ without ever going to either college or seminary. This means that there are other ways of being educated than by school attendance. But the minister must be educated, and, in these days, it is better to devote the early years of manhood to study under the direction of competent instructors than to inflict one's self on poor little churches while one gains necessary knowledge and experience.

The serious problem of financial support for pastors of rural churches has always inclined the authorities of all the churches to be lenient in the matter of preparation required of candidates for the ministry.

I am glad that there is a considerable movement toward such equalizing of ministerial salaries as to make it unnecessary for a man to seek the large and richer churches in order to find adequate support for his family. This should largely take away the reproach connected with serving rural or small churches. It should also make necessary the greater equalization of ministerial preparation. For denominations would not for long content themselves to provide the same support for the large men that they do for men who have had adequate preparation.

These lines from Henry Van Dyke are a good prayer to be offered by every minister—and they are a prayer in which all Christians may well join:

Grant us the knowledge that we need
To solve the questions of the mind;
Light Thou our candle while we read,
And keep our hearts from going blind;
Enlarge our vision to behold
The wonders Thou hast wrought of old;
Reveal thyself in every law,
And gild the towers of truth with holy awe.

O God, make of us what Thou wilt;
Gild Thou the labor of our hand;
Let all our work be surely built
As Thou, the architect, hast planned;
But whatso'er Thy power shalt make
Of these frail lives, do not forsake
Thy dwelling. Let Thy presence rest
Forever in the temple of our breast.

WHEN CHOICE CANNOT BE FREE

I recently heard an intelligent woman protesting against the prohibition of the liquor traffic on the ground that the legal prohibition was opposed to the true method of dealing with such evils, namely, reliance upon the processes of education. This woman was herself a distinguishing teacher, a foe of the use of alcoholic beverages. Her question was one of method merely.

First of all she declared that education is the development of the power to make right choices, that if we take from growing lives the opportunity to make such choices we thwart their full moral maturing. We can see at once that the argument would not seem very attractive to a liquor dealer, for it in effect says that liquor is sold and offered for sale in the hope that nobody will buy it. We get into all manner of confusion when we try to think this reasoning through. If we take it earnestly we have to grant that the liquor dealer is a public servant. It is his business to make the seductiveness of liquor drinking as complete as possible so that the youth will gain all the greater merit in his resistance to temptation.

All this absurdity to one side, the objection to granting opportunities of drinking alcohol as moral tests is that the results of the tests are too devastating. In teaching the growing generation to exercise their developing freedom we grant them opportunity to make mistakes, but we are careful not to allow the choices full play in too dangerous realms. A burnt child dreads the fire, but we do not hold open before children chances to burn themselves for the sake of learning the painful consequences of a wrong choice. Electric currents, poisons, loaded guns will kill, but we do not encourage experiment for the sake of learning the killing possibilities. If one is seeking for development in freedom, alcoholic beverages, especially of that kind we know today, are not ideal instruments.

Education a Social Function

The educational process in any intelligent community is under social control.

The social control of the educational processes aims at making possible the best use of educational opportunities by getting all unnecessary and artificial obstacles out of the way. We insist upon schoolrooms being properly ventilated, and adequately lighted. Good air and full light cannot of themselves give either instruction or training, but they can remove hindrances to good instruction and training. Sound educational method today calls in the service of opticians, physicians, dietitians, dentists. These do not directly train the growing minds, but they give those minds their best chance.

A great many talkers about the liquor traffic seem to assume that the traffic is in its infancy, and that we do not know much about it. We do know about it. It has been writing its own history all through its long career. If any intelligent citizen can be sure of anything about the liquor business it is that the business is directly aimed at the overthrow of everything for which the public school stands.

Kill the Snakes

The woman of whom I have been speaking seemed to think that information of the right sort is itself the best guard against evil. She reminded me that an ignorant child might put his hand on a rattlesnake, whereas the informed child would keep out of the snake's way. Her illustration was not altogether happy, for the only recognized expedient in dealing with rattlesnakes is to kill them. There has not yet been discovered any use for rattlesnakes, outside of museums; and we do not encourage their breeding and preservation for the sake of giving children the opportunity to develop freedom by deciding not to touch them. Rattlesnakes are hard to control, they cannot be domesticated, they make poor pets.

The modern liquor traffic is most happily characterized by my friend's reference to the rattlesnakes, though, as I have said, the analogy is not altogether happy for her particular purpose.

The leaders of the liquor traffic always have known that their business is socially destructive. They have known that there is little use in recourse to argument. There is no argument for the liquor traffic, under actual conditions of present-day community life, that can be stated without seeming humorous to anyone with a sense for reality at all. The liquor men themselves know this better than their advocates seem to, hence they do not resort to argument. They utilize every possible other force to make their cause socially irresistible. They combine in close organization with all possible business interests. They acquire an uncanny skill in political realms. They seek—and often successfully—to set social standards. It is not the mark of sound educational judgment, then, to speak of leaving the youth free to make decisions face to face with the liquor traffic.—Bishop Francis J. McConnell, in the Church School Journal, March, 1931.

"YOU HAVE A LOT TO LEARN, MISTER"

Two boys about ten years old, members of a Sunday School class of fifteen, were making the rounds of a Nebraska County courthouse, selling angel-food cakes. One of a group of men approached by the boys said he did not care to buy. The boys said they were raising money for missions and that he ought to help others. He replied that he was not interested in missions. Then one of the boys spoke up: "Well, Mister, all I can say is, you have a lot to learn." Two others immediately bought, and the work, into which the boys put their hearts, went merrily on.

Back of the boy's remark was a definite interest. Back of the interest is the story of the class, which has regular training in missions. Every class in this Sunday School has a responsibility toward the missionary quota accepted by the school, ranging from $2.00 for beginners to $20.00 for older classes. Back of this financing is, of course, a plan of education in world-wide Christianity. Missionary stories are told once a month in every class, and gifts are brought to be forwarded to Ellis Island, New Mexico, etc. No teacher is allowed to teach who does not believe in missions. This Sunday School won the silver loving cup six years out of seven for most gain and best methods in the second division of Congregational State schools. Interest in missions seems to be no handicap. All seem happy in this program of teaching, doing and giving. From the Church comes the word: "Woe unto the soul who dares rise up and suggest cutting off or cutting down missions!"—H. D. D., in Congregationalist.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PATH IN THIS WORLD

What is it? He is to follow his Master—to imitate Him in all things. Did He assert His rights? Did He go to law? Did He try to regulate the world? Did He meddle with municipal or political matters? Was He a politician? Did He wield the sword? Did He consent to be a judge or a divider, even when appealed to, as we say, to arbitrate about property? Was not His whole life one of complete self-surrender, from first to last? Was He not continually giving up until, at the Cross, He gave up His precious life as a ransom for many?—Scattered Seed.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

"Thy Kingdom Come"

May 3, Sunday.—We had no appointment on this date, and spent the day with the family. In the morning, we worshiped with the First church, High Point, in a helpful communion service. At 2:30 in the afternoon, we assisted in the funeral service of Brother D. B. Eldridge at Welch church. Brother Eldridge died of pneumonia, and was ill only a few days. His passing removes a good citizen from the community, and a useful and devoted member from Welch church. The surviving widow and son, and other relatives, have our deepest sympathy. At night it was our privilege to worship, attended by a part of the family, with the English Street congregation. We found several present, and among them, quite a number of earnest young people. Pastor Reynolds preached a sermon appropriate to the approaching revival. The meeting is to begin the third Sunday in May. The pastor will be assisted by Rev. J. M. Morgan. We shall hope and pray for a good meeting.

A Last Pre-Convention Word

Rev. R. A. Hunter: "We have sent in $7.00 for Henderson church—our quota." In addition, the church is paying his way to the Convention. Hurrah for Henderson! Dr. Brown reports the Reidsville church registered, and two individuals from that church. Brother Hendry reports the same for State Street. Brother Stubbins reports Asheboro church registered, and four individuals. Two or more are expected to attend from this church. Brother Paschall reports five individuals registered in the Burlington church, and five will attend the convention. First Church, High Point, leads with TWENTY registrations. Several are expected to attend from this church. Pastor Farmer and Judge Teague are Convention speakers. We express the final hope that many of our people may find it possible to attend this Convention. It is our opinion that very important and far-reaching results will come from it.

NOTE THIS: One and one-half fare will be given by the railroads, on the CERTIFICATE PLAN. We are asking Dr. McCulloch to publish terms in HERALD this week.

Pastors' Reports

We are now at the end of the second quarter of this conference year. Six months of the year are gone. Report blanks were mailed out last week, and already we are receiving returns. All are due by the sixth. We shall be very grateful to pastors if there are no "ten o'clock scholars." As is our custom, we will publish a synopsis of these reports when they are all in.

Sick

Sister Roy I. Farmer has been confined to her bed with a painful illness for several days. She will have the sympathy and the prayers of the brethren, and our hope for an early restoration to health.

Interest

Nothing in church work is so sure a guarantee of success as INTEREST. In fact, this is a controlling factor in all the affairs of life. We give ourselves readily and earnestly to whatever we are interested in. Nearly every day now there is a baseball game on the college campus immediately in front of the parsonage. In addition to the college students, the field is used by the teams of some of the city mills. I have watched these men as they come to the field for their game, after their day's work. There is "snap" in their movement that is significant. They are INTERESTED. That explains it. Though they have done their day's work, and are tired, they still have strength and energy for a game. Enough INTEREST will move us to do anything. No undertaking is too hard for us if our interest is sufficiently strong. Nehemiah and his workers built the wall in fifty-two days because they were interested. They had a "heart to work." It is noteworthy that Nehemiah did not attempt to coerce the people in this project; he simply aroused their INTEREST, and they said, "Let us rise up and build."

No Letter

Our weekly letter will be omitted next week, owing to the fact that we expect to be at the Convention, and so fully engaged with the many things of interest that we expect to find there, that we shall not have time to write.

Appointments

May 10.—Randleman charge.
May 12-13.—Washington Convention.
May 24.—Mt. Pleasant Church, North Davidson charge.
May 31.—High Point College Commencement.
June 31.—Orange Chapel, in Memorial Service.
July 5.—Julian church, Tabernacle charge. Hour, 7:30 P. M.

"Grace be with you all. Amen."

Fraternally yours,

S. W. TAYLOR.

QUIETLY WAIT

There is a limit to affliction. God sends it, and removes it. Do you sigh, and say, "When will the end be?" Let us quietly wait and patiently endure the will of the Lord till He cometh. Our Father takes away the rod when His design in using it is fully served. If the affliction is sent for testing us, that our graces may glorify God, it will end when the Lord has made us bear witness to His praise. We would not wish the affliction to depart until God has gotten out of us all the honor which we can possibly yield Him.

There may be today "a great calm." Who knows how soon those raging billows will give place to a sea of glass, and the sea-birds sit on the gentle waves? After long tribulation, the flail is hung up, and the wheat rests in the garner. We may, before many hours are past, be just as happy as now we are sorrowful. Let us be of good cheer. It is better farther on. Let us sing hallelujah by anticipation.—Spurgeon.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR'S 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Fifty years of Christian Endeavor service and growth will be celebrated July 11 to 16 in the Golden Jubilee International Christian Endeavor convention in San Francisco, California.

Careful preparations are being being made by International Christian Endeavor officers and by a group of California leaders for the reception and entertainment of thousands of young people from all parts of North America.

Other continents will also be represented in the program and in the delegations attending. Hawaiian young people will present native music in some of the convention sessions.

Exposition auditorium, seating 14,000 persons, has been secured for the main sessions of the 50th convention. In the same building there are fourteen other halls in which meetings will be held. A series of special programs on all phases of young people's religious activities and interests has been planned. Many fellowship banquets and recreational features will be provided. All delegates will join in a parade in the principal streets of downtown San Francisco.

Noted Speakers Invited

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, will give the keynote address of the convention on Sunday evening, July 11, the opening session. Dr. Poling will be heard each night in a radio conference, such as he conducts over a national wire network on Sunday afternoons. Few speakers in the world have completely delighted and satisfied young people.

Mrs. Francis E. Clark, who with the late Dr. Clark founded the first Christian Endeavor society, fifty years ago at Portland, Maine, will be a guest and speaker in the San Francisco convention. She will speak at main sessions and also in the junior convention, which will bring together large numbers of children under thirteen. Mrs. Clark is probably the most widely traveled woman of her generation, having accompanied Dr. Clark on several journeys to the missionary countries and around the world.

Dr. William Hiram Hodges, of Newark, New Jersey, leader of American Presbyterians, who is vice-president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, will speak at San Francisco convention. Dr. Hodges is widely known as minister, speaker, and writer, and has a large following among the youth of North America.

The music of the convention will be in charge of Homer Rodeheaver and Percy S. Foster, America's foremost leaders of song. A chorus of 800 voices is now being trained.

President Hoover May Attend

President Hoover, who assisted in organizing a Christian Endeavor society in Oregon many years ago, has been much interested in the plans for the Golden Jubilee anniversary, and recently took much advantage of an invitation to visit. The President would be particularly happy to welcome visiting Endeavorers to his home state of California, provided his official responsibilities make possible the trip west, which he has been planning.

Unusual Travel Opportunities

Many special tours have been planned for young people from all parts of the country who attend the San Francisco convention of International Christian Endeavor. The railroads are offering exceptionally favorable rates and travel schedules, so that it will be possible for many thousands of Endeavorers and their friends to see the west, share in the fine fellowship of the tours, and have the inspiration of the convention week, July 11-16, at nominal cost. The Canadian Rockies, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, the redwood forests, the Columbia River, and other scenic wonders of North America will be visited in the official tours.

Carlton M. Sherwood, extension secretary of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, who is in general charge of the convention program, announces that many prominent speakers and conference leaders have been invited, and a number of new and unique features are in preparation. Everything will be done to make the Golden Jubilee program momentous and significant.

The city's welcome to its visitors will be hearty. Fifty hotels will house the delegations of young people. Economical rates have been arranged at some of the best known hotels along the Pacific Coast.

San Francisco's plans are in charge of Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific railroad, and Fred D. Parr, president of the Parr Terminals, assisted by leading ministers, business and professional men, and young people. William Unmack has been chosen as executive director of the arrangements.

The convention will represent a North American constituency of 3,000,000 young people who are members of Christian Endeavor societies, and in addition the youth of the churches at large, whose plans and activities have frequently been guided by the objectives adopted by Christian Endeavor. The other continents have a total membership of more than 1,000,000 young people, making this the largest young people's organization of any type. It is significant that this youth movement for training and service is evangelically Christian.

WHEN SLEEP IS BETTER

"It was my custom in my youth," said a famous Persian, "to rise from my slumber to watch, pray, and read the Koran. One night as I was thus engaged, my father, a man of practical virtue, awoke. Behold, said I to him, 'thy other children are lost in irreligious slumbers while I alone wake to praise God.' 'Son of my soul, said he, it is better to sleep than to wake to remark the faults of thy brethren.'"

An American humorist has said, "Fault-finding is the favorite indoor and outdoor sport of the average citizen." I have found that there is much truth in his statement. The sad thing about much of our fault-finding is that it is seldom intended to be really constructive or helpful. With many people it is regarded as a convenient channel through which to express their dislikes and prejudices and to get even with others for real or fanciful injuries.—Forward.

OUR STORY PAGE

SMILES

"O Mother," cried Beth skipping into the skitchen where her mother was making cookies. "I peeked through the garden fence to Mr. Jones. He was digging potatoes and looked so cross. His face was all wrinkled up but I said, 'Good morning, Mr. Jones,' and smiled, and he wasn't cross—not a bit."

"Didn't he even look cross?" asked mother.

"No, not a wee bit. I think he tried to smile."

This old man, Mr. Jones, lived all alone in a tiny tumble-down old house. Anyone of the neighbors would have bought it and torn it down to make place for a new one, but Mr. Jones would not sell so what could be done? The old man had a bad reputation too of being "cross." Little children kept a long way from him.

This special morning Beth said, "Come mother and see him." Mrs. Bell followed Beth, snatching up something in a paper bag. "O Mr. Jones," said Beth, "this is my mother. She's just lovely." The old man raised his head at sound of the kind voice and Mrs. Bell said, "Won't you have some of our fresh beans? Please help us to eat them" and that old man smiled that time, reaching his hand over the fence for the long green pods.

"I haven't tasted a green bean in five years, not since Sarah died—no seed to plant and no money to buy. Thank you."

After this little visit through the fence, Mrs. Bell shared peas, carrots, melons, and parsnips, as well as other vegetables with Mr. Jones and he grew friendly. She told Betty to keep on smiling, and to wish him a bright good morning whatever the weather was.

One day Betty ran to mother crying, "He smiled to me. He did. And he looks real nice when he smiles." Mrs. Bell slipped many a loaf of home-made bread and cake through the fence entirely winning the old man. She learned that he was very poor, very lonely, for no one went to see him. Was it strange that he looked sad—"cross," the children called it? "It must be he does not know Jesus," said Beth, "Jesus' children are always smiley, aren't they, mother?" "Yes, dear, always, because their hearts are bubbling over with love for everybody—and smiles are made of love."

One morning in late September Mr. Jones did not appear. His old pet rooster hung about the step, waiting, watching for some cool water from the well. "I can get bugs and grass in the yard but somebody must bring me water." Betty watched through the fence but Mr. Jones did not appear. What had happened?

Mrs. Bell ran over and found him sick. She called a nurse to care for him. She said he was very sick—could not live the day out.

Mrs. Bell learned that he did not know Jesus. She told Beth to run home and pray every minute. She herself talked to him and the dear old man opened his heart to Jesus, and asked to be forgiven for all his sins. He was very happy at the last and said Jesus was his Saviour.

When Mrs. Bell went home she found Beth by the couch, fast asleep where she had been praying for Mr. Jones.

"Beth, aren't you glad you smiled through the garden fence to Mr. Jones and won his confidence so he was willing to talk and let mother tell him of Jesus? Think too, how much you helped by praying beside the couch. He said, 'Tell the little girl good-bye and thanks for her smiles when nobody else smiled to an old man'." This made Betty happy, and she is trying now to do something for Jesus every day.—Selected.

WHAT JENNIE MISSED

"Jennie, do not stay over two hours," said Mrs. Cline to her ten-year-old daughter, as the latter skipped down the steps of her home early one morning to visit a friend.

"All right, mamma," answered the child. The morning was beautiful, and Jennie saw many things to attract her. The chipmunks were gathering food, the birds sang in the trees, or, twittering gayly, picked seeds from the ground, while the goldenrod nodded to her as she passed.

Jennie's friend, Anna Moorhouse, welcomed her gladly, and took her to the back of the house, where the apple orchard was showing its wealth of fruit; they ate of the big red-cheeked beauties. Then they went to the barn to look at the Jersey calf, and Anna showed her friend the four black-and-white kittens hidden in a barrel.

After playing awhile and hunting eggs, Mrs. Moorhouse was heard calling them, and the girls found it was dinner time.

"I ought to go," said Jennie. "Mamma only gave me two hours, and it is long past that now."

"Oh! she didn't really mean it. Mothers think they must say things like that; mine always does," replied Anna, "and when I do not come, she never notices it. So you just come in to dinner, and then we will have a swing."

Jennie was persuaded, and she lingered until late afternoon. When at last she was on her way home, a little voice we call "Conscience" troubled Jennie, and her steps lagged as she approached home and mother.

"What detained you, daughter?" asked Mrs. Cline.

"I was having such a good time, mamma."

"But you knew you were disobeying me."

"Anna says mothers don't mean all they say, so I thought you would not care."

"Have I ever failed in my duty to you, or given you reasons to think I do not mean what I say to you?"

"No, mamma."

"We always suffer for wrong-doing, Jennie, and this time there is a disappointment for you."

"What is it, mamma?" asked the little girl wonderingly.

"Your Uncle James came for you to go home with him today; he cannot come again. Your Cousin Ella is to have a birthday gathering, and wished you to be there. If you had obeyed me, you would have had plenty of time, but your uncle was obliged to take the 12:30 train."

Before her mother finished, Jennie was crying. Above all pleasures she loved to visit her uncle's beautiful home and the sights of the city where he lived.

"Oh, dear, I am so sorry!" she wailed. "I'll never do it again."

"I hope, dear," replied Mrs. Cline, "that you are sorry for your disobedience. See the suitcase there—I had your clothes all ready, and it grieved me that your uncle should know my disappointment in you when you failed to be here at the time I expected you."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"THE PEOPLE AND THE QUICK DIVORCE LAW"

Under the above caption the Arkansas Gazette, our great morning daily, which according to the Arkansas Methodist always takes the side of right on moral issues, expresses the real sentiment of the people of Arkansas. The following is the Gazette editorial:

"The measure that would put Arkansas in competition for quick divorce business received the necessary majority in both houses of the legislature, but it is not approved by public opinion. This 90-day divorce law is not the first measure to be put through a legislature by the organized efforts of groups working intensively in their own selfish interest. The meeting held at Little Rock on Sunday, at which arrangements were made to submit the divorce law to a referendum, represents the reaction of the people of this state. This action and not the action of the legislature speaks for public sentiment. The Home Protective Association, organized with the Rev. A. C. Miller as president, will have charge of the work of circulating petitions and obtaining the signatures of the required number of voters. Arkansas received a great volume of unfortunate publicity as a result of the enactment of the 90-day divorce law. The success of the referendum movement would show the country that the people of this state desire to base their divorce legislation on social considerations and not on commercial considerations."—N. C. Christian Advocate.

A TIRED WOMAN'S REFUGE

"By all means use sometimes to be alone." If George Herbert meant his wise sayings for both men and women, he could not have known how difficult a thing it is for a woman ever to be alone. A man who had many cares and much anxious thoughts for an invalid at home said: "When I get to my office, I sit down in the big chair and put my feet up and take my paper and draw a long breath and feel how good it is to be quiet." True, he may be interrupted, but the chances are that a quiet hour may be his at the beginning of the day.

In the home it is different. The mother goes to her room and closes the door. Someone knocks. "The man is here with the eggs." The door bell rings—another tap at the door, "Mrs. M. is down stairs and would like to see you a minute." The minute proves to be more than an hour and for nothing, except that the good lady who came wanted to talk to somebody. That was well enough, but sometimes one needs to be alone with the restfulness of being sure that no one can disturb for the next five minutes, or fifteen, or more. It would mean more than nerve tonics and sage advice from the doctor, but how is one to get it? It cannot be found in a long free walk over the mountain or through the woods, for there one must not go alone.

"My corner" has solved the problem for me. Its greatest charm is that it is mine, and when I am there I am not to be found any more than if I had gone out of town for the day. It is not in the house, but near enough to be quickly reached. It is shut in by three high walls of a building of stone, with red, sloping roofs. Just a bit of blue sky can be seen overhead and the clouds appear and disappear. It is for the time a little world by itself. The birds come and sit on the ridgepole and talk to each other. A tiny tree grows close by my seat, which is only a narrow step by an unused door—a seat of stone, hard and very narrow, but I would not have it different. It is high, too, so that I can reach it only by the help of an old box.

Every leaf and twig and blade of grass in my corner has something to say to me. It was my refuge in the scarlet fever time, when duty to others took the father away to some uninfected home, and in the hours for rest I found friends in the birds and the sky and my tree in the corner. Sometimes on the way home from market, when the amount of money to be spent and the number of household needs have not been in accord, my corner has been a refuge, and in the light of the blue sky above, the perplexing questions have vanished and the right proportion of things has been found. Better than any rest cure has been my restful corner. Would it were possible for every busy and tired woman to find one!—Mrs. A. H. Bradford, in Congregationalist.

—How much will be accomplished for the Methodist Protestant Church by the convention in Washington next week depends upon the earnestness with which its members address themselves to the task before them. If they are able to sit still and think, so that they may see clearly and visualize things in relative proportions, they may be able to point out the way to true progress. But Washington City has many attractions for those visiting it for the first time, and its sights may seriously interfere with sitting and thinking. But we hope for good results though we thus speak. We cannot say, see Washington and die, but we can say, If you have a good opportunity see Washington before you die.

—In order that evangelistic meetings may be successful there must be earnest and persistent prayer on the part of church members. They must realize the need of God's help; yes, the indispensable character of God's help. No soul can be saved or even revived without the divine help. Realizing this and yearning for souls, men and women will pray. And to prayer must be added work, personal work and the most sincere and earnest evangelistic effort. It is most serious business and both pulpit and pew should enter most heartily into the true purpose of it. Saving a soul from sin is a wonderful achievement.

MAY 17: WAR, THE ENEMY OF CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION

Scripture Text—Matt. 5:30-48

Daily Bible Readings

Monday, 11: Enemy of Christian Ideals, Matt. 5:9.

Tuesday, 12: Enemy of Brotherhood, Num. 20:14-21.

Wednesday, 13: Enemy of Prosperity, Jer. 5:15-17.

Thursday, 14: Enemy of Independence, Judge 6:1-6.

Friday, 15: Enemy of Generosity, Jas. 4:1,2.

Saturday, 16: Enemy of Mercy, 1 Chron. 20:1-3.

To the Leader

War, most of us know what the world means, even though only a few of us ever fought in a war. We know what an enemy it was to our homes, carrying away our fathers and brothers and never letting many of them some home again. Our generation and for many generations to come feels and will feel the great expense of the deadliest conflict that the world has ever known. More than twelve million lives were lost. The total cost exceeded $250,000,000,000. An amount which it is impossible to comprehend.

There is no doubt that war is an enemy to Christianity, brotherhood, prosperity, independence, generosity and mercy and as shall be pointed out in the discussion of different topics.

To Be Discussed

1. Is war ever justifiable?
2. What are some of the substitutes for war?
3. How can we develop public opinion against war?
4. How is war an enemy to brotherhood?
5. How is war an enemy to prosperity?

Poetry IN HIS NAME

Quit you like men, be strong!

There's a burden to bear and a grief to share;

There's a heart that breaks neath a load of care;

There's a battle to fight and a wrong to right;
There's a God who blesses the good with might -

So fare ye forth with a song.

Quit you like men, be strong!

There's a work to do and a world to make new;

There's a call for men who are brave and true;

There's a year of grace and a God to face
There's another heat in the world's great race—

Speed! speed with a song!

Special Offering

A friend of the Home recently deposited $300 in one of the savings banks in High Point to be spent for a car over against that day when a new one can be bought to take the place of an old one that cannot run many more trips. We appreciate this thoughtfulness.

Young Trees and Shrubbery

We have begged and bought a few, and went to the woods for ash, redbud and dogwood trees until we were able to plant more than 300 young trees and shrubs on the grounds here with very little cost to the Home. Among the plantings are 12 maples, 20 pecans and 20 cherry trees. The cherry trees are the gift of the Onondaga Conference.

We certainly appreciate the response made by our people to our request for things to plant.

Our High School Graduates

We have one boy, Hubert Garmon, and one girl, Mary Louise Crickmore, who are graduating from the Jamestown High School on May 14th. They are worthy young people. If there are those who read this who will in any way remember these with a graduating present, or to get their outfit, please let us hear from you at once. Thank you.

Away to Washington

In response to the call of our church we will take 14 of our children to the Convention in Washington, D. C., next week. It will be a happy trip for the children, but a strenuous one for some of the rest of us.

The Farm

The farm work goes on apace these days, and our gardens are beginning to look well. Our farmer force is working faithfully, hoping to produce a good crop.

Thanks for the Octagon coupons. They keep coming and they keep helping.

God bless and keep each of you.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE NEWS

THE BUILDINGS

High Point being a young institution, her buildings are new and modern, and are the colonial type architecture. The permanent buildings are red burnt brick, slate roof, hollow-tile partitions, and concrete floors overlaid with hardwood, which makes them fireproof.

Roberts Hall is the hub of the group, and in addition to the administrative offices, it houses the class rooms, laboratories and studios, library, chapel, kitchen and dining room.

Woman's Hall provides dormitory rooms each with connecting bath, the dean of women's office, club rooms and social parlors.

McCulloch Hall, dormitory for young men, is arranged in nine sections, eight rooms to the section. In each section are two bath rooms, equipped with shower baths.

All buildings are equipped with steam heat, electric lights, hot and cold water. Dormitory furniture is of steel mahogany.

The store at rear of Roberts Hall, for convenience of students, sells books, stationery, etc.

A gymnasium is to be constructed before the opening of the fall term.

DISTINCTIONS

High Point College has the distinction of being located in one of the most beautiful, healthful, and progressive sections of North Carolina. The thriving, bustling, and rapidly expanding city gives her an added charm, while the spacious and beautiful campus lends a spirit of retreat, which is conducive to study and meditation.

Another distinction is that she is a young institution, unhampered by inherited customs and traditions of a less progressive age, while her faculty and officers are of such maturity and experience as to keep her within the path of wisdom.

Lastly, the spirit of determination which characterized her builders seems also to be the spirit of her student body. Whether in the class room or athletic field, forensic contest or religious organization, there is evident a determination to succeed.

ORGANIZATIONS

The organizations of High Point College are of four kinds—literary, religious, musical and social.

The literary societies are the Artemesian and Nikanthan for women and Thalean and Akrothian for men. The debating and oratorical contests, in which the college has been very successful, are directed by the Forensic Council. Several departmental clubs add interest to the work of the departments.

The Christian Endeavor society, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. are active religious groups, as are also the student volunteers and ministerial association.

The college choir glee club, choir, orchestra and band have been heard in concert and by radio in many parts of the state.

No national fraternities are represented, but there are several social clubs whose affairs are regulated by a Pan-Hellenic Council.

RELIGIOUS LIFE

Religious development is considered a vital part of one's education at High Point college. Since its very beginning the institution has maintained a strong department of Religious Education; in addition regular chapel services for worship are conducted at stated periods through the week. Students find spiritual expression in such organizations as the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Christian Endeavor society, Ministerial Association and the Volunteer Band. Thus a wholesome sentiment is built up for the higher values of life and a general influence for good is felt throughout the entire institution.

April is Stewardship and Pay-up month. It may be ambitious but let's try it. If you would know how near you are to the goal, run your eyes down the following list and pick out YOUR rating. IF you have passed the 40 per cent mark, you may get there. IF you are "slating" over 70 per cent, hardly anything can stop you:

- 0%—I won't.
- 10%—I can't.
- 20%—I don't know how.
- 30%—I doubt it.
- 40%—I wish I could.
- 50%—I think I might.
- 60%—I might do it.
- 70%—I think I can.
- 80%—I know I can.
- 90%—I will do it.
- 100%—I did it. Hurrah!

CONVENTION, WASHINGTON, MAY 12-15, 1931

Mr. C. W. Bates, Secretary,
Gen. Con. Methodist Protestant Church,
Dear Sir:

In reply to yours 24th, beg to advise that reduced rates in the Certificate Plan have been authorized for this occasion from points in the Southeast, including North Carolina, under which delegates will purchase going tickets to Washington at regular fares, obtaining certificate receipts from ticket agents at time of purchase of such tickets, the selling dates authorized being May 8-14, inclusive. These certificate receipts, when properly signed at the convention by Rev. G. W. Haddaway, executive secretary, and validated by railroad special agent, will entitle the holders to purchase return tickets at one-half fare on any date up to and including May 19th. The reduction on the return trip is contingent upon there being 150 certificates presented from all territories from which the reduced rates will apply.

Very respectfully,

C. B. RHODES,
Chairman.

Note: Children of 5 and under 12 years of age when accompanied by parent or guardian will, under like conditions, be charged one-half of the fares for adults. Be sure that when purchasing going ticket you request a CERTIFICATE. Do not make the mistake of asking for a "Receipt." Present yourself at the railroad station for tickets and Certificates at least 30 minutes before departure of train on which you will begin your journey. Immediately on your arrival at the meeting present your Certificate to the endorsing officer, Rev. G. W. Haddaway.

HUNDRETH ANNIVERSARY

The hundredth anniversary of Spring church will be celebrated on fifth Sunday in May. Those expecting to be entertained at night please notify entertainment committee. Dinner will be served on the church ground. The people of Spring Church charge are urged to bring dinner and serve together.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO PASTORS OF THE 14TH DISTRICT

Chairman C. E. Ridge of the 12th district and I have agreed to hold a joint meeting of our conferences at Fallston church, May 30th and 31st. Please to put this date on your engagement book so that it may be remembered and be sure to attend. We believe that under the circumstances a better conference can be held this year jointly than alone. A program will appear in the Herald in due time.

R. M. ANDREWS.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

ATTENTION, SECRETARIES OF LITERATURE

At the recent branch meeting in High Point Miss Pearle McCulloch resigned as secretary of literature, and this work was assigned to me.

In the local organizations probably the secretary of literature has been changed. If this has taken place please let me know at once so that the proper one may receive the literature that is here to mailed to your auxiliary free. We do want it to go into the proper hands, and then be sure that it is used.

One year ago at the branch meeting the secretary of literature was made agent for the Record—this applies in the local auxiliary as well. Please, I urge you to insist upon four members subscribing, for a well informed society is a well working society. Be sure to state whether the subscription is a new (N) one or a renewal (R). I will mail blanks to be used, for this purpose upon request. Get this paper, as well as the Herald in the hands of four members.

Upon request, all literature will be sent promptly. Please do not hesitate to ask for what you want.

Send the name of the present secretary of literature to me. Ask for literature as needed, and go to work at once for subscriptions to the Missionary Record. Be sure to state whether they are new or renewals.

Here's hoping we'll have the best informed membership we have ever had, and that means the best year for the society.

MRS. D. S. COLETRANE,

Secretary of Literature.

SUMMARY OF ACTIVITIES AS GIVEN BY THE BRANCH CORRESPONDING SECRETARY

Many of our auxiliaries are quite busy, in season and out of season, and their activities cover a wide range. Some have expended much effort in raising money for the missionary and local budget, and others have also placed emphasis on the educational phase of our work, especially in Sunday school, Christian Endeavor societies, and Young People's organizations; and through study books, and so forth. One auxiliary reported having read 1,330 chapters in the Bible, observing the World Day of Prayer, and otherwise emphasizing the spiritual side of our work.

Several have contributed time and money to the Herald campaign, and some secretaries of literature have put their churches on the honor roll. Thousands of coupons have been sent to Mrs. Dixon at the Children's Home, and a number of boxes of clothing were sent to Pine Ridge.

Much social service work was done, such as visiting the sick and sorrowing; carrying trays, flowers and fruits; visiting hospitals; and helping the needy. A number of auxiliaries reported having sent gifts and cards to our missionaries, especially to the Minnises.

It is very interesting to read such reports. They give a small idea of the scope of our women's work when carried out according to the spirit of our constitution. We do well to develop the spiritual side more by having Bible study at home, or in groups; and reporting results to the auxiliary; and by other means suggested by the spiritual life secretary.

We have made progress during the past year. Reports show that a larger percentage of our women are active, and that some have been reached through the auxiliaries who could not have been interested in any other way. In the auxiliary there is a phase of work for each woman no matter what her talent may be or how few or many she may possess.

The corresponding secretary hopes that she may be able to establish such friendly relationship with each auxiliary in the branch, that it will be a pleasure to fill out and return report blanks, knowing the joy that it will bring to the leaders.

The branch meeting was notable in that the various auxiliaries in the different sections of the conference were represented more largely than usual. Some were missed who are always present. And many new faces were in evidence. In every way the branch meeting was a great success.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

AUXILIARY APPORTIONMENTS

The finance committee makes the following recommendations:

1. That the New Century Service budget for 1931 and '32 will be $9,000.

2. That the North Carolina budget for 1931 and '32 be $3,500, apportioned as follows: 50 per cent for Children's Home; 20 per cent for Bethel Home; 20 per cent to Student Loan Fund for High Point College; 10 per cent, Branch Contingent Fund.

3. That $1,000 be added to the North Carolina Budget for High Point College.

4. That we continue to urge the payment of Mr. Minnis' salary through auxiliaries, Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies.

—Dr. R. M. Andrews is assisting Rev. R. A. Hunter in a meeting at Henderson this week. The attendance and interest are fine.

—Heinrich Sahn, recently elected mayor of Berlin to succeed the unhappy Gustav Boess, is said to be the tallest man in public office on the continent of Europe. The new mayor of the German capital is seven feet and one inch tall in his stockings. He was at one time president of the Free State of Danzig.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Ht. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our faithful pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, on April 19, delivered a very interesting sermon. Attendance was very good considering the rainy weather.

Quarterly conference will be held at Pilot church about 1:30 o'clock, Saturday evening, May 16, 1931.

We are sorry to report that Mr. Wesley Lane is seriously ill; hope he will soon recover.

Last Sunday night President S. W. Taylor delivered a splendid sermon from John 6:5-6. We were very glad to have President Taylor with us.

Our Sunday school is doing fine. Attendance is very good.

Lineberry, Handy.—Rev. E. A. Bingham preaches at Lineberry first Sunday at 11 o'clock; he also preaches every third Sunday night. He always preaches inspiring sermons.

The death angel has taken away two of our neighbors, Mr. L. F. Reid, and Mr. Leach Lanier; we feel the loss very deeply; the community certainly has lost two good men.

Mr. L. F. Reid died April 13, and was laid to rest at Lineberry cemetery. He professed faith in Christ when a young man, and joined the Baptist church. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Smith of High Point. Rev. Mr. Trogdon, Rev. Robert Short, and Rev. E. A. Bingham.

Mr. Leach Lanier, or "Uncle Leach," as he was known, died April 22; he leaves a wife, one son, and a daughter to mourn their loss. He had been in declining health for nearly three years. He was so cheerful, and always had a smile for every one. He was buried at Chapel Hill.

Rev. E. A. Bingham and Rev. Robert Short conducted the burial services. He was a faithful member of Pine Hill church.

To both families we would say:

Why should we mourn departed friends,

Or shrink at death's alarms?

"Tis but a voice that Jesus sends

To call us to His arms.

The Ladies' Aid last met with Mrs. Frank Lanier. Scripture reading by Mrs. Van Lanier. Prayer, Mrs. J. P. Elliott. Talks were given by Mrs. Hall, Mrs. W. A. Frank, Mrs. Whit Wood, Mrs. Van Wood, and Mrs. Reid. Mrs. Whit Wood was appointed to get out the program for next meeting. After the general business the social committee took charge.

Every one spent a most delightful afternoon. We were invited into the dining room where delicious refreshments consisting of cake, pickles, cream and peaches, and hot coffee were served. Our next meeting will be with Mrs. J. P. Elliott.

Mrs. James Surratt has been taken to High Point hospital; we hope for her a speedy recovery.

Fairview Church, Anderson Circuit.—May 3 was a red letter day for Fairview. For a number of years the first Sunday in May has been observed as Home-Coming Day, and since this date was only one week before the national Mothers' Day it was decided to have Home-Coming and Mother's at the same time this year. A splendid program had been arranged and at 10:30 the church was filled to its capacity. Dr. Sikes, president of Clemson College, delivered the principal address of the morning. He was at his best and gave many thoughts that will not be forgotten in a short time. The Central College Quartet furnished lovely and appropriate music. At 12 a table at the rear of the building was loaded with delicious food and every one was cordially invited to have a dinner. At 1:30 the afternoon program began. Rev. M. C. Henderson gave a good talk on Mother and the remainder of the time was spent in singing. We were indeed glad to have so many of our friends with us, and sincerely hope they may be with us again soon.

Rev. N. M. Harrison, of High Point College, gave an impressive address at the evening service. The majority of the congregation being young people, he spoke especially to them and they were held spell-bound throughout his talk. In fact, every one was deeply impressed and henceforth, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost" will have a deeper meaning for each one present. He told a few things about the college and what it is doing which made us proud of it and more anxious than ever to have more of our boys and girls matriculate there this fall. REPORTER.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—We are still striving onward to our goal. Sunday school attendance has not been as large as we would like, due to rainy weather. It seems that each class is trying to manifest more interest in their lessons.

Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, filled his appointment yesterday afternoon; a small but attentive congregation. Those absent missed a truthful and inspiring sermon.

Brother Ferree is still suffering from an auto accident. Another misfortune befell him: his oldest daughter, Agnes, fell and broke her arm while playing and was carried to a hospital at Statesville Sunday.

Forsyth Charge.—Two revival meetings have recently been conducted on the Forsyth Charge. The first one was at Union Ridge church. This meeting began the second Sunday evening in April at 7:30 with Brother N. G. Bethea preaching. The meeting continued until Friday night. There was good attendance and something like a dozen professions. Most of these, however, went to the local Baptist church. So far we have received only one as a result of the meeting. Several gave their names for the Baptist church. Brother Bethea was at his best. His preaching was most interesting, Biblical, practical, helpful. The pastor and his wife were delighted to have Brother and Sister Bethea as their guests in the parsonage at Maple Springs during the week.

The second meeting was at Mt. Carmel church and began the third Sunday in April. Brother G. E. Brewer, a lay preacher of the Moravian church, did the preaching. The church had invited him. Large congregations were present for all the services. The services closed the fourth Sunday night with a congregation of more than 350 present. During the meeting something like 15 professed faith in Christ. Five were received into membership at the service last evening. A Mr. Snyder, also of the Moravian church, led the choir and congregational singing. There were several special musical selections during the week by Mr. Pedicord and his two daughters of Winston-Salem, the Friedburg male quartet, and by Mr. Snyder. Mr. Brewer is a most earnest preacher of the Gospel. This was the fourth meeting that he has conducted. He seems to get great joy out of rendering this kind of service. The pastor was glad to work with him in this meeting.

Both of these churches were greatly benefited by these meetings, and we think will be better able to stand the summer slump as a result of the spiritual uplift that has come to them.

The work is making fair progress at all of the churches. Brother C. B. Way has our thanks for filling appointment at Hickory Ridge church the fourth Sunday night.

We were delighted to have Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Mrs. Pritchard and Miss Blanche Hardee as our dinner guests last Thursday. We have also been pleased to have as callers at the parsonage recently Mesdames J. E. Moore, Edwin Moore, Reid Maynard, Prof. and Mrs. C. C. Lindley, Miss Alen Haywood, and Misses Mary and Elizabeth Miller, of Burlington, Mrs. Anglin, of Graham, Mrs. Haywood, of Fayetteville, and Dr. and Mrs. P. E. Lindley, of High Point College, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cox, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Garrett, of Greensboro. The "latchstring is on the outside" for our friends at the Maple Springs parsonage.

L. W. GERRINGER.

Concord.—Our second quarterly conference convened Tuesday night, April 28. The usual business was transacted. Bros. J. M. Blackwelder and S. C. Cass were elected nominees for delegate to next Annual Conference. Finances about as last year, perhaps a little better than last year. We are not discouraged but we are walking by faith.

G. F. MILLAWAY.

Concord.—Communion was served at the 11 o'clock service by Pastor Millaway and a very helpful message was delivered. The subject, "I Have Seen the King." These words were spoken by the prophet, Isaiah, a wonderful man of God.

Our pastor told us that just to eat the bread and drink the wine was not communing with Christ but we must look beyond these things and see Him. In other words, just gathering around the Lord's table is not enough, but we must serve and love Him if we want to commune with Him. The Scripture says if we eat and drink unworthily we are eating and drinking damnation to our own souls.

Our Missionary Society is doing nicely now. We had a meeting a short while ago and divided our society into three circles. We have two circles that meet in the afternoon, so the mothers who can not leave home at night can have a part in the missionary work. We are planning to meet this following week and I hope our meetings will be a great success and I hope we shall have a greater vision of our duty than ever before.

Just a word about our Sunday school. We had 619 present Sunday, the Baracas having 269 of these. The Cradle Roll Department had 22 and the Beginners 42.

We desire your prayers for our church and community.

REPORTER.

Chase City Charge, Friendship Church.—On the first Sunday in May we had a very good Sunday school. Our Sunday schools seems to be growing. We had about 79 present.

Our pastor, Rev. C. W. Saunders, preached to us from John 6:35: "I am the bread of life." After preaching we had our second quarterly conference.

Sunday night Bro. Saunders preached to us again. His subject was "Prayer," we are just like a thirsty man when he gets to a good, cool drink of water. We surely did drink it in. We enjoy his sermons very much.

We have changed our Bible class to the first Saturday night. Pray for us success.

REPORTER.

Gillburg, Vance Circuit.—We have been saddened by the death of our beloved member, James H. Blanks, who died last week and was buried at Gillburg church the past Friday. A very large crowd of friends paid their last farewell on earth to him. May God inspire and guide the bereaved ones to live so as to meet him on the other side.

Our Sunday school is doing fine. We are planning for a short Mother's Day program. After it will be a short memorial service to our deceased mothers. We are looking for a very large attendance at these programs, Sunday, May 10, beginning at 2 p. m.

We ask the prayers of all Christians for our Sunday school and church.

S. A. SATTERWHITE.

West Forsyth.—We had the largest congregation present at Baltimore church last Sunday morning during the present conference year. There were about 150 persons present. Many visitors were in the congregation, coming from other churches and as far as from Winston-Salem. The large congregation reminded us of the beginning of a revival meeting when so many are in attendance. No special effort had been made to increase the attendance. The people were very responsive to the sermon by the pastor, giving excellent attention. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed, and a large number of the members participated in the service.

We were at Stony Knoll at 3 p. m. and met a larger congregation than usual. There was a splendid spirit of harmony in the service. The Lord's Supper was administered by the pastor, with a large number of people responding. Just as the pastor was calling for a closing song, Bro. Lewis Flynn, a member from Stony Knoll, who resides in Winston-Salem, asked permission to make a statement to the congregation. It was a confession of his going astray, and asking the forgiveness of the church. The church members present stood, recognizing the request for forgiveness, and gladly forgave the brother, who then offered prayer of dismissal at the close of the song, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds Our Hearts in Christian Love."

The pastor and family had the pleasure of visiting in the home of Bro. J. F. Phillips and family at Baltimore church last Sunday after the service, and enjoying a good dinner with these people. Their son, Jasper Phillips, is one of the graduates of the Lewisville high school in Forsyth County this month, and is planning to attend college next year.

Owing to the commencement sermon at Old Richmond high school next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, the appointment at Tabernacle church has been changed from Sunday morning to Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. J. E. Pritchard, pastor of the First Methodist Protestant church, Winston-Salem, will deliver the sermon at the school commencement event. We will meet our appointment at Union Hill next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Albemarle Tidings.—The Training School conducted at Albemarle is going on in fine fashion. We have fine instructors and the work is being done well. The attendance is good. Just about 50 have registered and quite a number are attending the classes that have not registered. This is the first school of the kind we have ever had and the people are greatly pleased that it is in our midst. The people of Friendship charge deserve their part of the credit for the success of the school. Bro. Williams and his good people are attending in goodly numbers.

Yesterday being the first Sunday of the month was our regular communion service. Some of our people were out of town and attendance was a little smaller than usual, but the same number came to the altar for communion. It is, to say the least, rather singular that for the last three first Sunday communion services we have had exactly the same number of communicants, which number was 72, and at the April service which was on Thursday night before Easter there was just one-half that number. There was of course no effort to cause this coincidence and it seems a bit unusual. As this was the first of the kind with us we did not expect the Easter service to be larger than it was. At the close of the service on yesterday morning two of our fine boys came forward and laid their lives on the altar and applied for church membership. They were taken into the church at the night service.

Special prayer meetings are being planned to be conducted by the ladies each week in preparation for our spring revival which is to begin June 3. Rev. R. S. Troxler is to be our pulpit help. The prayers of our people are asked that we might have a great revival.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Bethesda.—We had a very interesting lesson in our Sabbath school May 3rd; also a nice lecture on the lesson by a visitor, Bro. Parks. We are expecting a nice Mother's Day program May 10th. Everybody invited.

We are hoping for a great year in 1931. We have a nice Sabbath school, enrollment of 63, and hoping for more as the weather improves. We have a nice church out in the country on a sand hill that we are proud of. I have been told there has been a church there for over 100 years. I can remember lots of good old fathers and mothers that the Lord has taken out of our midst. But we hope to meet them again to part no more in the glory land.

I notice in our last week's letter there was a little mistake in our preaching service. We only have preaching every fourth Sunday.

May God's blessings be added to the reading of this broken letter is my prayer in the service of our Lord.

JNO. GULLEDGE.

Spring Church, Spring Church Charge.—At our last preaching service Bro. Lowdermilk brought us the best message he has yet. I heard lots of the congregation remark about it being such a good sermon, especially the visitors. His subject was "Prayer," and his text was: "Thy kingdom come."

I wish to remind the readers again of our celebration of our one hundredth anniversary which will take place on the fifth Sunday in this month. We are looking forward with much pleasure to seeing a large crowd, especially our former pastor and their families. Hope you can be with us.

Think our program will be ready for print in a few days.

Our Ladies' Aid will meet in the home of Mrs. W. L. Mitchell on Wednesday.

REPORTER.

Mizpah, Haw River.—Our pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, was with us again Sunday morning. His sermon for the morning was intensely interesting, the main thought being "Evidence of Salvation." There were eight to unite with the church. Prospects of more later.

We have had one of the best meetings to close recently. We enjoyed having Rev. C. E. Ridge with us and in our homes. He brought us a wonderful sermon at each service. I'm sure every one has a sweeter realization of what a Christian life means. He will always find a welcome awaiting him in Mizpah church.

J. D. McCollum, one of our former members, is still a loyal supporter of our church, is still sick. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

We also miss Mrs. H. G. Jones from our midst. We hope for her a regaining of her health so she can be with us again.

The quarterly conference will convene at our church on the afternoon of May 29th at 2:30 o'clock.

REPORTER.

First Church, High Point.—A delightful communion service was observed Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, in which the members of the Junior church united. The minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, was assisted in this impressive Lord's Sacrament by Dr. S. W. Taylor and Dr. A. G. Dixon. Practically every person present, young, middle-aged, and elderly, joined in this sweet and sacred privilege, which is dear to the heart of every true and humble follower of Christ Jesus. Our Quaker friends and neighbors, some of whom were visitors in the audience, believe in communion of the spirit, which is just as dear a rite to them as our partaking of the visible elements is to us, and the administering of the bread dipped in the wine by the officiating clergyman is to our brothers of the Episcopal faith.

At this morning service we were greatly pleased to receive four new members into our church family: Mrs. James E. Perryman, Jr., who came by transfer from Stokebury M. E. church, Mount Airy District; Miss Annie Car-ington, a nurse in Guilford General Hospital, who was on duty and could not be present; two young girls, Misses Frances May and Millicent Gertrude Rich, were baptized. The minister made the announcement that 153 persons have stood at the altar and united with this church since he began his ministry here.

At the Sunday evening service the subject of the minister's discourse was "Unusual Ways of Reaching Christ," and the choir rendered two beautiful anthems, "Softly Now the Light of Day" and "More Love to Thee."

On Monday afternoon the executive committee of the Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly session with the new president, Mrs. Paul S. Kennett, in the chair. Newly elected officers besides Mrs. Kennett are the following: Mrs. L. R. Peacock, first vice-president; Mrs. S. S. Coe, second vice-president; Mrs. R. W. Riggins, recording secretary, and Mrs. J. S. Pickett, treasurer. Plans for the work of the new missionary year were discussed. Two circles will sell salted peanuts again.

The C. E. meeting on Monday evening was led by Mrs. W. L. Albertson on the topic, "What Jesus Teaches About Work."

Following the usual mid-week prayer service on Wednesday evening, the second quarterly conference will be held at 8:15 o'clock. One-half of the Conference year is finished.

High Point will be well represented at the Washington Convention next week. Already 20 registrations from First church have been enrolled. A number of our local people will appear on the program. On Thursday morning Dr. G. I. Humphreys, president of High Point College, will deliver an address on "Our Educational Outlook," which will deal with problems of religious education confronting the present-day church. In the afternoon of Thursday Rev. R. I. Farmer will lead a discussion on "The Modern Task of Organizing the Church." On Friday Judge Lewis E. Teague, of the Municipal Court, will speak on "The Lay Idea in the Methodist Protestant Church." On Friday afternoon Dr. P. E. Lindley, dean of High Point College, will address a young people's rally on the subject, "Building From Age to Age," and Rev. Nat M. Harrison, promotional secretary of the college, will speak on "Building a Conference Program of Religious Education." President S. W. Taylor will talk Thursday morning on "What About Our Ministry?" The college choir will sing on three different occasions, and a number of children from the Home under the direction of Dr. A. G. Dixon will appear on the program Friday morning and afternoon.

A May Day fete of rare beauty was held on the lawn of High Point College Monday afternoon at 6 o'clock by the Nikanthian Literary Society. It was an English May festival centered at Christ Church in Oxford, England. The opening scene portrayed Queen Elizabeth in the person of Miss Adelaide Crowell and her subjects, Sir Walter Raleigh, personated by Miss Lucille Brown being knighted for his courtly act of spreading his scarlet coat in a mud hole for Queen Elizabeth to walk on without soiling her shoes. Miss Mary Beth Warlick was crowned Queen of May by Miss Pauline Hicks, maid of honor. Music was furnished by Misses Adelaide Crowell and Nancy Pritchard, and Misses Vera Smith and Virginia Beam sang old English songs. Students of the college presented a May pole dance, which was colorful in beauty, a Spring dance, Morris dance, and Stollenger's dance. A charming feature of the festival was the appearance of little Nell Marie, lovely young daughter of President and Mrs. Humphreys, as crown-bearer, and the beautiful flower-girls, little Misses Pauline Kennett and Garnet Hinshaw. Stanwood Kennett and George Humphreys were train-bearers, while Agnes Ingram and Earl Andrews acted as buglers. The court jester was Miss Louise Carter.

In the city election today (Tuesday) our church is represented by Mr. W. A. Davis, Republican candidate for mayor, and Mr. John S. Pickett, Democratic candidate for councilman from the second ward. Enthusiasm runs high, and great interest is being shown, since more than 10,000 voters have registered.

We are much gratified to note an improvement in the condition of Mrs. R. I. Farmer, popular wife of our minister, who has been quite ill for a week or more.

Announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage of a very popular young couple is made by parents of the bride-to-be, Rev. and Mrs. Geo. L. Reynolds. Mr. Ralph H. Vance, son of the late Mr. C. W. Vance and Mrs. Vance, will wed Miss Inez Reynolds the latter part of this month. These are two of our most splendid young people, and this announcement will be quite interesting to a large number of their friends here and in various parts of the state, both being graduates of High Point College.

Mangum Harrell, student at State College, Raleigh, spent the past week-end with his mother, Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, and other relatives.

On Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Farmer took occasion to urge all our members to subscribe or renew for the denominational organs, Methodist Protestant Herald, Greensboro, and Methodist Protestant-Recorder, Baltimore. It seems impossible for a man or woman to be an earnest, loyal church man without reading one or both of the papers sent out by the denomination. We hope to see a substantial gain in the number of subscribers from First church at an early date.

Pleasant Hill, Cleveland Circuit.—Our Sunday school has started up again after being closed for the winter months. We don't have a very good attendance but are hoping it will be better.

We had our regular monthly service last Sunday. Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, was called away, but Mr. Seth Ivester took his place. He preached a very interesting sermon.

Memorial services will be held, as usual, on our regular preaching day, May 17. We are expecting a large crowd.

Miss Sarah Willis died Wednesday, April 29, and was buried Friday, May 1. A large crowd of relatives and friends paid a lost tribute to the good woman. The grave was covered with beautiful flowers.

REPORTER.

Bethel, Alamance Charge.—Recently Bethel church has been called upon to give up two more of its aged members. Mr. William J. Albright, having reached the ripe age of 77 years, 5 months and 19 days, and being a member of Bethel from early childhood, has been called to his heavenly home. He leaves no family with us. One brother mourns his loss. He is now a member of that great and ever-growing family of God over on the other side.

Next, Mrs. Sarah Catherine Foust, mother of L. M. Foust, of Greensboro, J. D. Foust, of Graham, W. R. Foust, of Graham, and Miss Elizabeth Foust, of Graham, has been called home. She, too, had attained the ripe age of 77 years, 11 months and 29 days. She had been a member of Bethel for over 30 years. She was greatly loved by her church and community. Her life on earth was beautiful. Her state now is most blessed. All her children and 10 grandchildren survive her. Her former pastor, Rev. G. W. Holmes, assisted in the funeral service and spoke most appreciatively of her life in her home.

J. A. BURGESS.

Gibsonville Church.—Last Sunday was a beautiful day and we had a very good congregation for both preaching and Sunday school hours. Mr. Bethea delivered a splendid sermon on "The Gospel of the Second Mile," using as a text Matt. 5:41: "And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain."

We were glad to have a number of visitors worship with us at the preaching hour.

The quarterly conference will meet on Thursday of this week. All officials are urged to be present.

The Young Ladies' Bible class will meet on Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock of this week at the home of Miss Hazel Woodard. All members are requested to be present.

On next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Rev. Mr. Morgan, of Salisbury, will preach the baccalaureate sermon in the high school auditorium.

We were glad to have Mr. Bethea conduct our chapel program on Thursday morning of last week.

Rev. N. M. Harrison and Rev. N. G. Bethea were visitors to the Gibsonville High School on Thursday morning of last week.

REPORTER.

Graham.—At the second quarterly conference Dr. W. R. Goley and Mr. J. L. Amick were elected to be the nominees for the next Annual Conference. I think it is fitting here to remark that Brother Don S. Holt, the new treasurer, gave a very intelligible financial report of the church. Every one is pleased with the businesslike way in which he is handling the finances of the church.

Miss Gladys Amick has been made president of the Christian Endeavor Society, and her zeal for a strong Christian Endeavor Society is already bearing fruit.

The following persons will represent the Graham church at the Washington Convention next week: Misses Gladys Amick, Thelma Clapp, Lovonia Black, Mrs. Bertha Bradshaw, and the writer.

Last Sunday morning Captain McDonald, of the American Prison Reform Association, spoke at the 11 o'clock hour. His address was well taken.

Recently Brother DeWitt and Miss Lizabeth Foust have lost their mother by death. We greatly sympathize with them in their great grief.

Our work is moving on very nicely here and the people are very responsive to our efforts.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—"Christian Fellowship" was the subject of our pastor's sermon yesterday, at which time he delivered a wonderful message to a large audience. At this time we received Mrs. R. O. Fritts, a new member, into the church.

The Sunday school is growing and interest is good. The attendance yesterday, May 3, was 99, with four giving their names as new members.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met just after service to elect their new officers for the ensuing year. Mrs. H. G. Swiegood was re-elected as president, with Miss Beatus Waitman, assistant. The writer was again elected as secretary and treasurer. Mrs. H. V. Swiegood, Mrs. Earlie Hedrick and Miss Robena Waitman, flower committee. It was decided to put on a box supper combined with other refreshments Saturday night, May 16. The public is invited.

ZULA FRITTS, Reporter.

Harmony, Yarbrough Charge.—Our pastor, the fourth Sunday, rendered two helpful and inspiring sermons. On account of bad weather during the winter months, he has been filling only one appointment each month. But beginning the second Sunday in May, there will be two services each month.

The Ladies' auxiliary met the fourth Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Cornelia Taylor. Almost all the members were present.

Quite a number of improvements have been made around our church. The Home Demonstration club met and planted shrubbery around the church and cemetery. A new road has been built through the yard, helping also to beautify the grounds.

Our Sunday school is doing very well. In spite of the bad weather we have had for the past few Sundays; attendance has been as large as usual.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Koonce

J. D. Koonce, Sr., was born in Davidson county, North Carolina, in August, 1870, and left this earthly life April 2, 1931, in his sixty-first year. He had suffered a stroke of paralysis after having been afflicted for nearly a year.

Brother Koonce moved to High Point in 1899 from which time he had been active in civic, fraternal, and church circles. On July 11, 1901, he united with the First Methodist Protestant church in High Point under the pastorate of Rev. C. L. Whitaker. Until his decease he was interested in the church of his choice and as long as health permitted he was active in its work. For years he sang in the choir and taught a Sunday school class of men.

He was married three times—to Miss Maggie Michael, of Lexington, and Miss Mattie Milton, of Lexington, who preceded him to the beyond and to Miss Luella Snider, of Davidson county, who sorrowing survives him. He leaves also to mourn the loss of a loving father, five sons—Carl, Henry, Edwin and Arnold, of High Point, and R. L. of Washington, D. C.; and two daughters, Miss Mary and Mrs. Carey Davis, both of High Point. Surviving him also are three sisters—Mrs. D. H. Raker and Mrs. R. F. Honeycutt, of Lexington, and Mrs. G. H. Trogdon, of Greensboro, and two brothers—H. C. Koonce, of Lexington, and B. W. Koonce, of Leaksville.

A large number of friends and relatives were present at the memorial service in First church conducted by the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer. Assisting him were two former pastors, Dr. A. G. Dixon and Dr. G. R. Brown, both of whom spoke feelingly of their association with Brother Koonce in his active church life. He will be missed but our loss is his eternal gain.

R. I. FARMER.

Lindley

On April 13 the death angel visited our membership and claimed as his own Jeanette Downing Lindley. Jeanette was the nineteen months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Lindley. Five weeks prior to her death she was scalded and following that accident she developed measles, erysipelas, and pneumonia.

Jeanette was enrolled in our church as a precious jewel, also she has been christened and her sweet life dedicated to the Lord. With the utmost confidence we may know that she is now a precious jewel in the Kingdom of our Lord and His Christ. We may also rest assured that she lives forever in the presence of Him, Who while on earth, took little children in His arms, put His hands upon them and blessed them as He said, "Suffer the little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of God."

May the God of all comfort and grace abundantly bless the mother and father. May His strong arm be their daily support. May His rich blessing and His unfailing comfort be theirs always.

The funeral was held from the First Methodist Protestant church in Burlington. The service was conducted by the pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. J. Clyde Auman of Graham. Interment was made in the city cemetery.

FRED W. PASCHALL.

Gallimore

Mrs. W. E. Gallimore, aged 86 years, was called to her reward April 4, 1931. She leaves three step children: Mrs. A. Ridge of Lexington, Mrs. J. B. Gallimore of Ellerbe, and Mr. J. M. Gallimore, of Denton, N. C., and a host of friends. We all loved her and we believe she loved us and the grandchildren — she thought a lot of them. Why did she love us? Because she was a good woman. We feel satisfied she is at rest with loved ones gone on before.

May the good Lord help us to look forward with a hope of meeting her again in the home beyond, where loved ones are basking in the sunlight of heaven, and singing praises to their Redeemer.

May this dispensation of providence serve to draw all the loved ones nearer the cross.

While we know she can never come back to us we can go to her.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Robert Short and Rev. E. A. Bingham; the remains were laid to rest in the Canaan M. P. cemetery to await the Resurrection.

May the good Lord bless us all.

MRS. A. RIDGE,

Green

Georgie L. Green departed this life April 24, 1931, aged 53 years six months, and 7 days.

He had been suffering for about nine months with a cancer in his jawbone, but he took it very patiently.

Our community has lost a great friend. And our church a wonderful sexton, which he had been for several years. He did not do it because he was appointed, but seems as if he really enjoyed it. He was always ready to do any one a favor, with a willing heart. He was a member of Hawkins' Chapel church.

Brother Green leaves to mourn his going a wife, three children, Mr. Lonnie Green, Miss Eunice Green, and Mrs. Georgie Thompson, all of Thelma, N. C.; five sisters, one brother, Mr. Baldy Green, Mrs. Andrew Pittard, Mrs. Jonnie Hale, Mrs. B. S. Hawkins, all of Thelma, N. C., Mrs. Georgie Pearson, Mrs. Martha Snipes, of Rosemary, N. C., relatives and many friends.

Sunday, April 26, a large crowd paid their last tribute of love to him.

Funeral services were held in Hawkins Chapel church, conducted by his pastor, Rev. P. E. Bingham.

The floral offering was large and beautiful.

His body was placed in the Green's cemetery with his father and mother.

May the dear Lord lead his loved ones in the path of faith and peace until they meet again.

MRS. C. H. HAWKINS.

—Rev. J. R. Hutton received over 600 votes for membership in Greensboro's city council; not enough to elect him, but yet a complimentary vote. The plain people do not think a minister should concern himself much with governmental affairs. They think he has something more important to do.

ACCREDITED TEACHERS NEEDED

Since our denomination has gone to so much expense to organize and maintain a department of Religious Education, it occurs to the writer that the board should not engage teachers to teach in any of our training schools who have not been properly accredited. Even the young people who are taking the "preparatory course" deserve and should have the best teachers to be obtained, teachers who have been accredited by the proper authorities.

The person who lays the foundation upon which our young people are to build their religious education ought to be an expert in this particular line of work. These young people deserve to be started right, and just any one selected from the ranks of the church is not capable of doing this.

It seems to me that we ought to profit by the experience of those who manage our public schools. No one is permitted to teach the primary grades in these schools until he has been accredited, and not then unless he is especially adapted to this kind of work. Some such rule as this ought to be adopted by our Board of Religious Education and strictly enforced.

PHILOMATH.

A satisfactory range is one of the essentials in profitable poultry production and poultry raisers should anticipate these needs and provide a proper range through a planting of green crops.

—There are 4,539,500 apple trees planted in the commercial and home orchards of North Carolina according to an estimate made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This estimate is based on reports from 1,115 apple growers and takes in all trees planted up to January 1, 1928.

—Three hundred and fifty hogs were sold last week by Edgecombe county farmers. The hogs weighed 68,084 pounds and brought the growers a total of $4,801.26 in cash at the ear door.

—Only three applications for government loans have been filed by farmers in Orange county. The majority of the farmers have credit to finance the operations and are planting an increased acreage to food and feed crops.

—Thirty farmers in Wilkes county have formed a corn club and each of them will grow one acre of corn under the supervision of County Agent A. G. Hendren. The latest methods of cultivation and fertilization will be followed, says Mr. Hendren.

Two Offerings

Cain and Abel brought their offerings.
Choosing each from what he had:
Abel's faith won God's acceptance.
Unbelief made Cain's fruit bad.

Baal's priests and God's great prophet
Built their altars, called for fire:
Honored highly was Elijah,
Baal's priests were slain in ire.

Two men stood and prayed in temple.
Saying truly what they thought:
Praising self, one hoped for favor;
God chose him who mercy sought.

Drawing near to God in worship,
Do not make a great mistake:
God cannot be won by flattery.
Bribed, or fooled by sham or fake.

Russian Communism

Our national House of Representatives appointed a special committee to investigate the spread of communism in the United States. Hon. Hamilton Fish, Jr., was chairman of the committee. We have a copy of the report this committee submitted to Congress. The information it gives is surprising and often shocking. We are surprised to learn that there is so much communistic activity in the United States with the object of overthrowing our government and substituting for it international communism with headquarters in Russia. During the World War the German emperor was charged with having an ambition to conquer the world and rule over it. That may not have been true, but there can be little ground to doubt that the present rulers of Russia are seriously trying to extend their rule throughout the civilized world. In fact, they admit it and try to justify it.

It is shocking to us to learn the kind of culture they are aiming at and the means they advocate to make their theory of life prevail. They would destroy the institutions of religion and suppress religious thought and emotion. They speak of religion as an "opiate," deadening the sensibilities of men to evils they ought not to endure. Their real thought is that if people were not restrained by religious sentiments they would be more ready tools for the wicked work the communists would have them do. And what is this wicked work? It is simply robbery and murder, taking property from those that have it and killing them if they refuse to give it up.

And what compensation do they offer for giving up the consolation and inspiration of religion, giving up the privilege of self-government, giving up the possession of private property, giving up the joy and happiness of family life? Why, they offer to people the high honor and rare pleasure of being slaves to those in the lead, working all the time for such food and raiment as may be dealt out to them. Great benefactors of mankind, are they not? What a bright future they hold out to the world! "Every one will have enough to eat," they say. But that may be said of a drove of hogs penned up to be fattened and slaughtered. Men are not brutes and can not be satisfied with the provision for mere animals.

But the specious reasoning of the communists is winning thousands of the unthinking and if their plans work out they are going to make vast trouble for the world, including our own country. In 1927 the Russians began what they call a five-year program to make ready for the conquest of the world with their infernal ideas. They think in terms of physical force. It was said in 1915 when the World War was on that food will win the war. The communists think that food will win their war, will bring all nations into subjection to their regime. They are mistaken, but they can do great mischief in the effort to carry out their diabolical schemes. Russia is a great country with immense natural resources and with a population untrained in the art of self-government and adventurers have seized the reins of power and are moving in a way to disturb the peace of the most enlightened and best governed nations. They are stirring up race animosities and class hatreds as a means of bringing about universal harmony! They are Satan garbed in robes of light. Our government has done well to investigate and reveal their plans. It is a most serious matter and the light should be turned on and kept burning until all the peoples of the world see the real character of the proposal the Russian communists are making.

Our own state of North Carolina is one of the states in which emissaries have been working in the interest of Russian communism. The trouble in Gastonia in 1929 was a result of the action of communists as is now well known. Much of their work is done in secret. They work on the dissatisfied elements of the population, on the young, and even on the children. We should keep our eyes open as to what they are doing and to what they are trying to do.

—We congratulate our Lincolnton people on the building of so splendid a house of worship. See cut in another column.

—Some good revival meetings are reported this week. The news of new-born souls is the greatest news.

THREE LITTLE STORIES OF COURTING

A Parable

By REV. LUTHER K. LONG

Out on M55, where the smooth highway makes a long graceful curve, it dips into a little valley and crosses a purling brook. On this side of said brook lives a prosperous widow, and on the other side dwells a thrifty bachelor.

In adjoining pastures grazed her trim and fine Guernsey cows which supported her well with their high quality milk, and his large smooth short-horns which supported him by the sale of their excellent flesh. Both herds drank from the waters of the same brook, and their owners frequently met at the watering-place.

Right you are. The very thing happened that you are thinking about. They fell in love, or, at least, they thought they did. He got to planning. Eventually he would sell the Guernseys, but some more Short-horns, and have the finest herd for miles and miles along the pike. Moreover, he brought his mending and darning for her to do.

Yes, it is all off now. The Guernseys and the Short-horns still graze in adjoining pastures and drink of the cool, sweet waters of the purling brook, but their owners no longer meet at the watering-place.

Out on M72, to avoid a steep grade, the road has to wind about a hill. It finally reaches a ridge from which are seen many hills and valleys and grassy slopes. On this ridge at the left of the road lives a prosperous widower, and at the right of the road lives a thrifty lady in waiting. He has a large flock of sheep from which he makes a good living, and then some, by selling the increase of the flock for mutton. She has a large flock of another breed of sheep from which she makes a good living, and then more, by selling the clip of wool.

He invited her to ride to town with him in his new super-six, and she accepted the invitation gladly. She rode to church with him the following Sunday. Matters were going well. And the neighbors prophesied that soon other bells would be ringing than those worn by the sheep.

But she got to planning. Eventually, she planned, his mutton-sheep would be disposed of, and her flock would be increased, and she would become known as the greatest fine-wool sheep-woman in all the hills and valleys of that region of fine hills and valleys. Moreover, she would then take great week-end drives in the super-six. She even began suggesting trips here and there.

Yes, it is all off now. There are still two flocks of sheep—pretty good flocks. But the owners no longer ride in the same car.

Beyond the marsh the old-fashioned country road toils up a long grade to the high table-land. About half-way up the slope overlooking a beautiful valley, lived Florinda on a small farm, with her widowed mother. She had a beautiful garden with flowers and fruits and vegetables. Her cash income was derived almost exclusively from a large flock of fine Brahma chickens.

On a nearby small farm lived Orlando, recently returned from the World War—caring for his aged father. He kept a garden, a cow, and a pair of good horses. The principal part of his cash income was derived from a large flock of White Leghorn hens.

Florinda and Orlando became more than casually interested in each other's work. They exchanged products, and they were often together.

Yes, you have guessed it again. They became lovers, and they talked of combining operations. And they were real co-operators.

"I shouldn't want you to sell your Leghorns," said Florinda to her neighbor, "for, though they are small they are great layers, and I do enjoying gathering and selling eggs."

"And I do hope you will never think of selling your Brahmas," enthusiastically rejoined Orlando, "for, though they do not lay so many eggs as do the Leghorns, they grow into such large and stately birds and make such fine roosters that I have always been proud of them."

Yes, Orlando and Florinda got married. They kept both kinds of fowls. They did more. By cross-breeding and selection they now have a new and improved variety. The bodies of these birds are almost as large as the Brahmas and the flesh is even better. They have the same beautiful markings, but without the unsightly feathers on their shanks. Best of all, they lay full as many eggs as the Leghorns.

Florinda and Orlando are as happy as children. They drive to town in their new-type flivver, carrying both fresh eggs and choice dressed poultry.

You are so good at guessing that, without doubt, you are already sure of everything else I want to say. But I am setting it down here as a matter of record.

When two churches are courting each other with a view to union they should not be seeking selfish advantage. Rather, they should be given to admiring each other and to appreciating the value of the contribution each can make to the enrichment of their common life and their combined ability to serve. No church wants to be taken over and swallowed up in another, no matter how large and important that other may be. Each church, no matter how small, has in it something distinctive that may be used to advantage in combination with others for the work of the Kingdom. That element deserves recognition.

A Community church, because made up of many and varied elements, can become an exceedingly live and effective organization—if inspired by the spirit of the Master.

The consummation of the union of two denominations—like the Congregational and the Christian—promises well. The fact that the elements are somewhat diverse in history and location should enlarge the minds and hearts of the two peoples and prepare them for still more extensive and inclusive combinations.

A GOOD PLANK IN ANY POLITICAL PLATFORM

We the national—party of the United States of America pledge our party to stand by and defend the constitution of the United States as amended and the full and complete enforcement of all laws, National, State, and Municipal, enacted by Municipal, State, and National legislation.

Why name Prohibition to satisfy the dry? I am the driest of the drys. The above would satisfy me. Why mention a repeal or offer a referendum to give comfort to the wet ungodly foreign underworld people of a great nation? All I want or expect of any political party is loyalty to respect and defend the Constitution and to enforce all laws enacted by our State and National legislation.

Prohibition or the 18th amendment was once referred to the people and by an overwhelming vote of the best people of this nation the 18th amendment was carried and ratified by 46 of the 48 states, including the State of New York, before it was declared a national law. It was done by the good citizenship, Republicans and Democrats who had seen for centuries the slimy trail of these infernal diabolical criminal, murderous, immoral vultures fattening on the life's blood of the victims of strong drink, making widows and paupers, taking bread out of the mouths of hungry, ragged women and children. They howled then for their liquor, they are howling yet for their liquor, and still they have little enough sense to tell you that there is more liquor than when the bar room was in full blast. Poor little lying diabolical apes of hell. Who has little enough sense to believe them? No one, it seems to me, who has brains enough to rattle in a mustard seed hull and if the 18th amendment is a part of the constitution, it does not belong to be made a party issue. It was settled by a vote of the people and ratified by State and National legislators and will stay in the constitution. We do not need to make prohibition an issue. It has been settled and the political party that makes it an issue will die the death of the wicked and be consigned to the devil.

We do need a political party in these days of crime, debauch and graft loyal to the constitution and that will enforce laws enacted to the hilt whether it involves rich or poor. Such men as Raskob, Currin and their organization against the 18th amendment of the constitution of these United States of America should be arrested and imprisoned. We did it in war times, why not now? The only way to suppress crime is to punish it and punish it severely. We are giving too much respectability to crime and too much criticism of law and order. We go to the expense to run down criminals, hold courts and get convictions, then a few of these corrupt politicians get busy, secretly undermining justice. The next thing you see is the Governor's statement in the newspapers. A bootlegger, a murderer, a rapist has been paroled and sent back home for our boys to associate with and to learn from them the ways of the underworld gang.

The object of law is to protect the good and innocent and to restrain and punish the wicked, but we use it to tax the good to keep up a corrupt political court house gang who protect criminals to breed crime, to feed lawyers.

HOW THE VOLSTEAD LAW SHOULD BE AMENDED

(An address given before the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, at Washington, D. C., by Rev. O. R. Miller of Albany, N. Y., President of the National Civic League and State Superintendent of the New York Civic League.)

MR. CHAIRMAN AND MEMBERS OF THE COMMISSION:

The organization which I represent has long been active in Law enforcement work, having spent more than $100,000 in such work during the last ten years, mostly in helping the Federal Government in the enforcement of the National Prohibition Act. Therefore, I speak to you not from theory, but from large experience in such work.

Many of those opposed to Prohibition are saying that the 18th Amendment is not being enforced. We admit that in many places Prohibition is not being well enforced, and there are various reasons why this is the case. I wish to emphasize one reason which has not received the attention its importance deserves, that is, the incompetent and ineffective Federal laws enacted for the enforcement of Prohibition.

All friends of Prohibition who have had any actual experience in trying to enforce the National Prohibition Act, ordinarily called the "Volstead Law," have come to see the impossibility of ever satisfactorily enforcing that law in its present shape, and they are insisting that Congress shall pass some urgently needed amendments to strengthen that law, making it more workable, more effective and easier to enforce.

After a 50-year long war for National Prohibition between the wets and the drys, ending in the great battle for ratification of the 18th Amendment, the wets were overwhelmingly defeated. But when they came to draw up the terms of capitulation for the defeated enemy—the enactment of the Volstead law—the wets out-generated the drys and in defeat accomplished to a considerable degree by their legislative strategy in Congress what they had failed to accomplish previously on the field of battle.

When the 18th Amendment was adopted, having been ratified by 46 of the 48 States, everybody assumed that Congress would pass a strong Prohibition enforcement bill, one which would be 100 per cent effective, no matter how drastic it might seem to the wets; but after several months of wrangling, bickering and bartering, the Volstead Law was finally enacted—a law utterly unworthy of the great moral principle and high ideal contained in the 18th Amendment.

The drys all over the country who had helped put through the 18th Amendment were assured while the Volstead bill was pending in Congress, that when passed it would contain all the most effective provisions of the best State Prohibition laws. Of course the wets did not want an honest and effective Prohibition law enacted, and so they raised such a mighty howl against the "drastic" provisions of the Volstead bill that various vicious amendments were made even to the poor original Volstead bill, until finally, when passed by both Houses of Congress, most of the best provisions of the best State Prohibition laws were either omitted or shamefully mutilated and weakened.

This explains why we have had such great difficulties and even tragedies in trying to enforce the Volstead Law. An effective Prohibition law is one making it as easy as possible to enforce and as hard as possible to evade, which is not true of the Volstead law.

The weaknesses and ineffectiveness of the present Volstead Law can be seen by comparing some of its provisions with similar provisions of the best State Prohibition laws.

FIRST. The Volstead Law should be amended providing that when an illicit liquor manufacturer or dealer is convicted of violating that law he should be permanently enjoined from ever again violating the law, either in the place where he was convicted of making, selling or possessing liquor, or anywhere else in the United States.

Twenty-nine State Prohibition laws require the courts to enjoin the keeper of a liquor nuisance from ever again continuing the nuisance there or at any other place in the State, or Judicial district, or County.

Often under the Volstead Law, if a liquor man's place is padlocked he starts up next door, or near by, and continues his business there until the padlock term expires on his old place, which at longest cannot be more than twelve months, and oftentimes is only six months, three months, or even one month, when he moves back to his old stand!

Under the Volstead Law, when a person is convicted of violating that law he is usually let off with an insignificant fine, for a first offense, or first conviction—and he is seldom charged with any other than a first offense, regardless of the number of times he may have previously been convicted—which is shown by the report for 1930 of the Prohibition Bureau to average but $123.48 for all fines for conviction and pleas of guilty.

Such men should not be dealt with so lightly as many courts now deal with them. Even first offenders, or rather those convicted for the first time, should receive a severe sentence. These law violators are not innocent children. They have not violated the law by accident, by misunderstanding or ignorance. They have been well counseled by able lawyers, and by care, cunning and trickery they have studiously violated the law in such ways as to put the Government, in many cases, to great expense to get sufficient evidence to convict them.

After the Government has spent hundreds and in some cases thousands of dollars to finally convict a smart, well advised liquor manufacturer or dealer the first time, why should he be let off with simply a fine and that often a small one? Of course a liquor man's first conviction in court is not for his first offense in violating the Volstead Law. In nearly every case he has violated the law hundreds or even thousands of times before he was actually caught and finally convicted for the first time by the Government.

Therefore, when a liquor manufacturer or dealer is convicted, even for the first time, it should be mandatory upon the court not only to fine and imprison him, but also to issue an injunction against him ever again engaging in the liquor business; and if he violates the injunction it should be mandatory upon the court, upon presentation of proof thereof, to sentence him to prison for several months for contempt of court. That would help tremendously in enforcing the Volstead Law.

SECOND. The Volstead Law should be amended providing that when it is proven a place has been maintained for the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes, that such place shall be declared a nuisance, and it made mandatory upon the court to abate the same, ordering it padlocked for a year and issuing a permanent injunction against the place ever again being used for such purposes, by any person whosoever.

Thirty-one State laws make the issuance of an injunction mandatory on the court when the evidence establishes the existence of the nuisance. Twenty-eight State laws require the courts to abate the nuisance by seizing and confiscating all the liquors, implements, furniture and fixtures therein and padlocking the place for one year.

THIRD. The Volstead Law should provide a MINIMUM PENALTY as well as a maximum penalty for FIRST CONVICTION for violating those Constitutional prohibitions of the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation and exportation of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes.

Thirty-nine States provide both a minimum and a maximum penalty for such violations of their State Prohibition laws. The Volstead Law should provide a minimum penalty to be imposed by the court upon a liquor dealer for first conviction for violating either of the five prohibitions of the 18th Amendment. The Volstead Law provides no minimum penalty for first conviction for making, selling, transporting, importing, exporting liquor, but provides $1,000 maximum penalty therefor. It should also provide a minimum penalty and one severe enough to deter would be law violators. The Jones-Stalker law increased the maximum fine to $10,000, and the Stobbs bill reduced it to $500.

FOURTH. The Volstead Law should be amended providing for the issuance of search warrants for any place upon the affidavit of a person that he "has reason to believe and does believe" that the law has been recently or now is being violated therein. Eighteen State Prohibition laws thus provide for the issuance of search warrants, but the Volstead Law provides that no search warrant shall be issued for a dwelling unless there is affidavit of SALE of liquor therein.

Many foreigners use their home, or the cellar or basement under their home, for the manufacture of liquor, which they sneak out at night and deliver to bootleggers. They never, or very seldom ever, sell it to a stranger in their homes where they make it. They take no chance. They have been carefully advised legally and understand that if they make a single sale to a stranger he may be a Government Prohibition agent.

The Constitution of the United States prohibits the manufacture as much as it prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes, and yet under the Volstead Law the illicit liquor manufacturer can make hundreds of barrels of liquor in his home or his cellar, and he may even be seen through the basement windows operating his still, and everybody in the neighborhood can smell it and know what it is, and the local police authorities and even the Federal Prohibition agents may know of it, yet the Volstead Law provides that unless you can prove an actual SALE of liquor in the home, you cannot get a search warrant and raid the place!!

This utterly unconstitutional provision of the Volstead Law must be stricken out. Instead of requiring that the Government must prove a sale in such homes, it should substitute the words, that 18 different State Prohibition laws use, that a search warrant may be issued upon the affidavit of a person that he "has reason to believe and does believe" that the law is being violated in a certain named place, even in a home.

If any person should swear that he has reason to believe that liquor is being made, sold or kept illegally in a certain home, and the evidence reveals that there were no grounds whatever for such an affidavit, as there had been no such violations, then, under the Revised Statutes of the United States, the affiant can be prosecuted for perjury, and also perhaps sued for damages by the person whose home was raided upon the warrant based upon his affidavit.
